Excursion to Buffalo.

Excursion tickets to Buffalo for the Pan-American Exposition via Pennsylvania Lines go on sale May 5th. Tickets may be obtained daily from that date until September 30th at special fares, good returning until October 31st. A special ticket good returning fifteen days including date of sale may also be obtained via Pennsylvania Lines any day after May 5th. All tickets to Buffalo via Pennsylvania Lines will be good for stop-overs at Lakewood and Jamestown (Chautauqua Lake). For information about fares, through time and train service apply to nearest ticket agent of the Pennsylvania Lines who will furnish time cards, maps and official information about the Exposition free of charge.—may 28

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

To Illinois brethren in special and all brethren in general:

Recently the Building Committee of the Illinois State Conference made a call through these columns for aid in raising a fund to build a suitable Conference building—not to use as a place of worship—but a building in which delegates may be entertained while in attendance at the Conference. The church in Oregon is large enough for all the meetings, having a seating capacity of about two hundred. Many generously answered this first call and the committee desires in this general way to thank all who have subscribed not only their money but also their words of encouragement. To them this second call is not directed, for we believe you have done well your part. We have now about $275.00 on hand. We need yet, at the very lowest estimate, $75.00. To put up a suitable building with lumber at its present price, we should have $400.00. This item is written to invite any who have not yet subscribed to do so in any amount, however small. Send remittance to the chairman of the committee who will promptly receipt for the same. Time and space forbid discussion as to the merits of locating the Conference permanently. Suffice it to say that we believe that when the plan is once in working order, all will be pleased with it. Building Committee consists: S. J. Lindsay, Chairman, Oregon, Ill.; J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Ill.; E. F. Gesin, Forreston, Ill.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

F. L. AUSTIN.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 288 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

The Indian and the Northwest.

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 115 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half-tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battleground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1600. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library. Price, 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. B. Kuiskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.—May 25.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Many women have been reproached for living for the sole object of entertaining. No one doubts that such an aim is petty and narrowing, but it is equally certain that it is a woman's duty to understand The Art of Entertaining, and this forms the subject of an attractive and useful article by Lady Jeune in The Cosmopolitan for May.

Will any brother living in or near Denver, Col. please send me their address? I wish to address them concerning parties living near Denver, who are anxious to obey the gospel by putting on Christ in the ordinance of baptism.

Adrian, Mich. L. C. CHASE.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM. an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted postage 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 15, 1901. NUMBER 19.

Walter Theological Seminary
Chicago, Ill.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

How to Do It?

The fields are all white
And the reapers are few;
We children are asking,
But what can we do
To work for our Lord in his harvest?

Our hands are so small,
And our work must be weak,
We're not much at best,
How can we do work
To work for our Lord in his harvest?

We'll work by our prayers,
By the parable we know,
By a child-like trust
The least little thing
May work for our Lord in his harvest.

Until, by and by,
As the years pass at length,
We, too, may be reapers,
And go forth in strength
To work for our Lord in his harvest.

Selected.

Zionism.

Zionism is the only tangible solution of the Jewish Question. It has had an existence under various names, throughout the entire globe, ever since the Dispersion.

Zionism is the expression of a united endeavor to kindle among the Jews the love of kin, the unity of purpose, which other people and nationalities have sought and obtained. Scattered as we have been for many centuries, all over the civilized world, we differ widely in many respects, yet, as regards foundation principles of Judaism, we are, in spite of many seeming contradictions, still a unit. And this unity will be made apparent to all, when each individual lays aside his own caprice and self-conceit, and seeks with his whole heart and soul for its attainment.

However, there are among our ranks many timid souls who question the propriety of our daring so strongly to emphasize our national importance. Let these doubters ever bear in mind this fact: No nation in the world has a greater right to this assertion than the Jews. When night, the night of ignorance, yet covered the earth, and gross darkness the nations, even then the effulgent light of knowledge, culture and civilization shone upon our people, and its beams enlightened the nations. This light which declared the knowledge of the true God of integrity and morality, Israel enjoyed beyond all the nations of the earth. Israel is the only classical nation which has preserved its entirety from time immemorial.

Zionism is our strength and power, our vitality, our bond of existence. The individuality and personality of our people have enabled them to resist shocks and blows which would have utterly destroyed any other.

When the whole known world was in a chaotic state, Israel alone was "the everlasting nation." Where are the renowned nations of the ancient time? Lost and scattered. Israel alone has remained unmoved. When we carefully review our past history we can gladly exclaim: "Thou hast exalted us above all peoples and hast given us thy Thora." Truly, it is precisely that peculiarity, that exclusiveness, that separation which Israel has ever rigidly maintained, which prompted the antagonistic spirit against us now known as Anti-Semitism, among the old Greeks and Romans.

This separation we must continue to observe. Truth is ever the word of the world, and truth we possess. What help have we if the world will not understand and acknowledge this truth? So long as this condition remains the Jews will be hated and despised.

Notwithstanding this separateness, Israel has desired to retain nothing solely for himself. He has wished that the whole world would share in all the blessed and exalted good which has been allotted to him. He has divided his knowledge of God and his commandments with all the nations. He has enlarged the domestic and intellectual life and aimed to increase the spiritual life of mankind. He has, more especially, wherever it has been permitted aided in spreading love and pleasure, ruth and justice, order and system. He has been, in his mission of suffering like the boy who was beaten for the King's children's misdoing, by the tutor. His hopes of redemption he cherishes not alone for himself, but for all mankind.

All our expectations of deliverance are cemented together in this one word, Zionism. All our desires and expectations for a happier future for ourselves and all others are condensed in this word, Zionism. Our people have ever devoted their strength and intelligence to the service of mankind; have labored and striven for the welfare of the world, and openly and secretly been among the ranks of its best factors. This is their mighty and exalted mission, which no one of our antagonists will admit, but which, nevertheless, stands firm as the foundation of the earth.

What is this Zionism? It is Judaism. Certainly, not Judaism in its legality, morality and religion; but Judaism in its people's consciousness, in its national disposition, in its hopes and fears. That is Zionism—our Zionism.

Let us now seek to answer the question, "What will Zionism accomplish?" Zionism will elevate the national self-esteem, the national intelligence; it will force the Jew from his dazzling, world-renowned, God-blessed prison, out from his past history full of the blood and courage of martyrs; it will transfuse new, fresh, healthy blood into dying Judaism; it will renew through better nourishment, its withered and corrupted sap; the whole body, which, as the prophet said, "from the crown of the head to the soul of the foot, is sick," he will seek to renew.

Zionism will lift up and strengthen his self-esteem, and the Jew shall no more be held in light esteem, for he shall learn how to value himself; he shall not forget his glorious origin, nor imitate the ways and manners of the Gentiles.

Zionism, above all, will provide for that confederation of people a safe retreat and ambush, wherein the depressed national feeling and the vanished courage of their faith shall have a resurrection. These are pre-eminently connected with all modern culture of our people, with the academicians and the youthful students. Already the best and strongest supports of our nation seem about to be lost utterly. The weak tie which binds them to Judaism can be rent asunder in a moment. Their connection with Judaism consists only in the accident of their birth, in the fact that they belong to no other religious organization. They desire to live in blissful ignorance of their own people and of their ancestral religion. Zionism is the banner beneath which all these various forces may be collected, united and joined, and which, in its awakening strength, shall win and gain our youth, especially our intelligent youth. I think that would be pleasing to us, for these the yoke of the Gauls endures, and it oppresses them even more severely than the others—and who has youth has hope.

These foregoing conclusions enable us to perceive in Zionism a valuable preparation for the realization of our hoped-for redemption. All the signs of the Messiah, all the tokens of redemption will become realized in it. Whether this redemption is near at hand; whether it yet remains in the distant future; whether it is to be consummated in this or that manner; whether this or that faction has the correct idea, is for the moment of no consequence. Let it suffice that a beginning has been effected. It now remains for us to earnestly and courageously work and strive to bring the matter to completion. "I shall behold it, but not nigh; there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a sceptre shall arise out of Israel, and the great work of redemption shall be completed. One thing I confidently expect from Zionism which is to me of utmost importance. It will assuredly cement together all the proscribed Jewish energies, hearts and souls, from all lands and portions of the globe. This confederation of the Jews shall act as a preparation for the assistance of the weak and oppressed, for the deliverance of the tortured and imprisoned, for the protection of the poor and helpless, for the sheltering of those who have neither civil rights nor homes that Zionism will provide an open, reputable and secure home for the united Jewish people in the land of our fathers.—A Zionist in The Peoples' Land and The Book.

Education. No. 8.

[The following article is one of a series of ten written by Bro. J. F. Gellety, of Williston, Md., on various educational subjects, and are calculated to expose many of the theories of supposedly "advanced teachers." Though differing somewhat from our usual style of topics, yet we trust they will be helpful to our readers, especially the younger classes of students. They were originally written for and published in the Denton Journal, and necessarily have some expressions that refer to local surroundings.—ED.]

THE CREATION OF MAN.

"And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness, and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle and over all the earth."—Genesis.

The "scientific" theorists who have carefully eliminted from their teachings, in regard to the manifestation in nature, all recognition of direct action of creative intelligence and design, usually account for all the differentiation in plant and animal structure by telling us that, as such and such an organ of the body becomes useless, because the function thereof is no longer required, gradually, in the course of years or centuries, said organ ceases to be reproduced; and, furthermore, they say that even now the human race is continually changing in bodily structure and dropping off useless appendages that the present conditions of our existence no longer require. As most of these useless inheritances happen to be in the intestines, however, where few of us have, or care to have, the privilege of exploring, there we must leave the anatomists to fight it out by themselves. It would be well, however, to note in passing, in view of what will be said afterwards, that it is only a little more than half a century that they have been making these intestinal notes, and it is really wonderful how they swagger out their conclusions on such short notice, and embolden by the silence of the public, which is taken to mean consent, they are sometimes rash enough to come out in the light, where we can see them, and then is the chance to pin them to the wall.

Thus an article has been going the rounds of the press recently, extracted from the Atlanta Journal Record of Medicine, the writer of which claims to have made the wonderful "scientific" discovery that mankind is in immediate danger of losing his little toe. He says, "the little toe is degenerate and must die," and "that as the hairy coat of our ancestors has disappeared in the march of progress, our feet also have undergone and are undergoing change with abridgement of function;" that "the feet of the horse, the cow, and other odd-toed animals, have undergone great alteration," and applying the argument to the "pedal evolution of man" in these later days of tight shoes the man of the future will be a three or four-toed animal, and that at present the little toe is rapidly decreasing, becoming "degenerate, and must die." Now, when I was a boy I had the privilege of studying drawing in one of the best equipped schools in Britain. As it belonged to the government the two large halls where we studied—one of which was a public museum—were furnished with a selection of copies of the best things in antique sculpture in existence. On entering, round the spacious staircase could be seen part of the famous "frieze of the Parthenon," allowed by art critics to be one of the most perfect specimens of bas-relief. On it are figures male and female, with horses and cattle in all kinds of positions—all kinds of feet. This carving was [illegible] about 450 years before the Christ[illegible]ers, over 23 centuries ago. [illegible]ain hall was the "Discobolus Thrower," the Laocoon," Venus, Apollo, [illegible]gures) old Demosthenes was dr[illegible]t his toes stuck out beneath [illegible]. There was the "Dying Gl[illegible]" that Byron writes about [illegible]ired to make a Roman holiday [illegible] Michael Angelo's "Da[illegible]," [illegible] of other masterpieces in ancient, mediæval and modern art,—all the feet and toes in plain sight, yet none of us boys ever noticed that these feet and toes differed in shape from our own, and boys are terrors to notice. If any of us had had any particularly kinked toes, bunions, or even corn, it would have been difficult to hide it even with a shoe, and moreover, we were to notice and to copy. Some of us were always at work on feet, yet the instructor never called attention to this wonderful "scientific differentiation." Neither have I ever heard of any artist that ever made such a discovery, and all sculptors and painters study both from the antique and from life. In other words, here we have a record of human figures, and human feet, and little toes kept, by artists whose skill has never been excelled, for a period of over two thousand years and, if we include the work of the Egyptian and Assyrian sculptors, who were not so careful to be true to life, we may extend the record to about four thousand yet not the slightest change is visible. The foot of Hebe, of the Venus Milo, Apollo or Achilles is the proper type for a handsome foot today, even to the last turn in the little toe and, moreover, through all the range of that long record the "hairy coat of our ancestors" is not visible.

There is much more behind this question than shows at first glance. It is not the mere question as to the proper human shape, or as to whether there is such a thing, that has to be decided, though that has its importance; there is beyond all that a deep moral and spiritual question that remains to be settled before we can decide what is the truth to be taught to the rising generation. Are we a race of beings created by the fiat of Omnipotence to be his representative to all the other creatures of the earth, as well as the masters of the very elements of nature, or are we but the accidental products of fortuitous circumstances through the herding of brutes? Are we, as the Bible represents us, the last, the supreme effort, the climax of creative energy and skill, the race royal, with all things put under our feet, having the badge of authority stamped upon our forms, or have we only usurped the position we hold at present on the planet by force and fraud toward the other inhabitants which are weaker or less cunning than we are? Are we degenerate monkeys, the tailings and sack-shakings of a moribund universe, burning itself out and running itself out and running itself down, or are we the most glorious specimens of the handiwork of the living God?

There is also the doctrine of noblesse oblige to be inculcated, which can't be done on a degenerate, and with it the attendant question of responsibility. With authority comes responsibility. Monkeys have no authority or responsibility. Alone the Bible account of creation gives us the great doctrine of accountability and responsibility, the divine civil service examination to decide as to the capacity to hold office. The incapables turned down. The "survival of the fittest," the fittest to rule, judged intelligently. Which of these ideas concerning human origin must the educators decide on? They are as wide apart as the east is from the west. They have nothing in common.

In Russia, which is one-sixth part of the whole world, there are 128 different languages spoken, and into some of these languages the Word of God has not been translated. There are in that empire no fewer than 140,000,000 people.

A sister writes making special request for light on the marriage question. In answering these questions my appeal will be to the Word of God. I have but little regard for men's opinions on questions of right and wrong.

The occasion which has called forth the questions relates to a sister who was divorced from her husband, on the ground of adultery on the part of the husband. Since which time she has lived in hardship, trying to support her children. She now has an offer of marriage from a man who does not profess Christianity of any kind, and wishes to know her duty in the matter, she desires to know and do what is right. In substance she asks the following questions:

1. If a wife or her husband should leave each other on the ground of fornication, BEFORE coming to a knowledge and obedience of the faith, are they bound to the marriage contract AFTER obeying the gospel of the kingdom?

In answer I would say, such a relationship in no case invalidates the marriage contract, either legally, or in a moral sense.

The Scripture on the marriage relationship are so plain that there is no room for two opinions. See 1 Cor. vii. 10, 11: "And unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord, Let not the wife depart from her husband: But and if she depart, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband: and let not the husband put away his wife."

The time when Paul's marriage directions were written was at a period of time which we might call the transition state between Judaism and Christianity, and hence it often occurred in families that a division was made between husband and wife, one being a believer, and the other not; but this did not set aside God's marriage ordinance. With regard to these troubles between husband and wife, Paul was permitted to give directions. He says on this point, "But to the rest speak I, not the Lord," that is to say, there was no existing commandment covering such cases, and in the absence of a written commandment he had "permission" to speak, and give directions. One who speaks "by permission," (verse 6) must first get his permit to speak from the one who is authorized to grant the permit. Having received the permit, he speaks with the authority of the one granting the permit.

Referring to verse 12, Clarke says: "These words do not intimate that the Apostle was not now under the influence of the Divine Spirit; but that there was nothing in the Sacred Writings which bore directly on this point." Hence Paul was authorized "by permission" to speak as follows: "If any brother hath a wife that believeth not, and she be pleased to dwell with him, let him not put her away. And the woman which hath an husband that believeth not, and if he be pleased to dwell with her, let her not leave him. For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband: else were your children unclean; but now are they holy. But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or a sister is not under bondage in such cases; but God hath called us to peace. For what knowest thou, O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband? or how knowest thou, O man, whether thou shalt save thy wife?"

Verse 15 says, "If the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or a sister is not under bondage in such cases; but God hath called us to peace." "Not under bondage" or, in other words, not bound to live together under such circumstances, is the reason that "God hath called us to peace," and not the bondage of domestic discord.

2. With regard to marrying a believer of an apostate faith, or of no faith at all, it is not Scriptural. See 1 Cor. vii. 39: "The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; only in the Lord." The wife is bound to her husband as long as he lives, (although she may not live with him) in the sense that she cannot marry another, and be without sin. After his death, "she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; ONLY IN THE LORD."

Both in the Old Testament and also in the New, marriages with those not in the bond of the covenant were discouraged. When Israel went up to possess the promised land they were forbidden to make marriage contracts with any of the seven nations occupying the land. God says: "Neither shalt thou make marriages with them: thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son. For they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: so will the anger of the Lord be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly."

Notice the reason given: "For they will turn away thy son from following me." It is even so today. Let a believer marry one of an apostate faith, or one of no faith at all, and something will have to give, that is if each one contends earnestly for their respective faiths, or else domestic discord will be sure to follow. Many cases could be cited of departure from the faith, etc. Paul's direction is quite to the point: "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." 2 Cor. iv. 14. What yoke is more binding than the marriage yoke? Can "righteousness" and "unrighteousness" work together under the same yoke? Will "light" and "darkness" harmonize under the same yoke? Can "Christ" and "Belial" be companions under the same yoke? Neither can "he that believeth with an infidel." "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

The "unequal yoke," I apprehend, will apply to being yoked together in the fellowship with churches not of the faith, as well as yoked in marriage with unbelievers.

Listen to what Jesus says in Mark x. 6-12: "But from the beginning of creation, God made them male and female. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife; And they twain shall be one flesh; so then they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore, God hath joined together, let not man put asunder. And in the house his disciples asked him again of the same matter. And he saith unto them, Whoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery against her. And if a woman put away her husband, and be married to another, she committeth adultery." And furthermore Jesus says it is "adultery" to marry a divorced person, and certainly an adulterer cannot claim the promised blessings. I would say to the sister it would be much better to claim the promise and Fatherhood of God, than trust an unbelieving husband.

W. H. WILSON.

Speaking of the much-talked-of Franco-Russian alliance, an exchange well says: "France has been very useful to Russia, always ready to back her up, always ready to lend her money, and apparently ready to fight for her in any quarrel, good or bad. What advantage has France had from the much-boasted Russian alliance?—Absolutely none, and now she is getting so sick of her humiliating position that even in the interchange of international compliments, the treasured word 'alliance' is dropped on both sides, and the neutral word 'friendship,' which means nothing, is substituted. The truth is that, for Russia, France is a squeezed orange. She can do no more for Russia; there is now no conceivable occasion on which the alliance of France would be of indispensable use to Russia; and there is absolutely none in which Russia would not laugh at the idea of fighting for France. So another curious comedy of international delusion is fast passing to an end."

"THERE is a perennial nobleness and even sacredness in work. In idleness alone is perpetual despair. Labor is life. Work is worship."

"TAKE all sorrow out of life and you take away all richness, and depth and tenderness. Sorrow is the furnace that melts hearts together in love."

"THE aim for which we give our best strength is everything; the visible success is as nothing. True faith may be the greatest goodness and fidelity at the highest, when visible success is at the least."

"EXTREME old age is growing as long as it is ripening fruit, working off the earthly acidity and sharpness, daily perfecting its peace, and now beyond the accidents of blight or storm, soaring sweeter and mellower in faith, hope and love."

SOME insects reach maturity within thirty minutes after birth, says the Chicago News, and adds that some specimens of the human race do not mature in thirty years.

SOME one else says, "Humanity is unequally divided between those who can't stand prosperity and those who can't get any to stand. And occasionally we meet a man who despises the people who flatter him, and hates those who do not flatter him at all. And then again, no matter what you give some people, they think they are entitled to a little more."

WITHIN certain limits, we can control our surroundings, and to a much greater degree we can control ourselves. We can limit our desires within reasonable bounds,—we can measure our abilities and put them to their proper uses, we can cherish our friends and not expect from them the impossible. Above all, we can nourish within us that love for others which will melt away the anxieties and agitations of selfishness.

Bible Illustrations.

Speaking at one time of Bible illustrations, Ruskin said:—"You are not philosophers of the kind who suppose that the Bible is a superannuated book; neither are you of those who think the Bible is dishonored by being referred to for judgment in small matters. The very divinity of the Book seems to me to justify us in referring every thing to it, with respect to which any conclusion can be gathered from its pages. Assuming that the Bible is neither superannuated now, nor ever likely to be so, it will follow that the illustrations which the Bible employs are likely to be clear and intelligent illustrations to the end of time, but that the things which the Bible uses for illustration of eternal truths are likely to remain eternally intelligible illustrations." And we take the liberty to add there is no danger that human achievements will throw the Book of God into the shade. The profoundest thinkers and searchers cannot prove the Book of God at fault.

Growing.

"The principle of life is a principle of growth. With any living thing, animal, vegetable, or spiritual, when it ceases to grow it begins to die; and the peculiarity of the spiritual is in this, that with it there is no necessity of decay,—of ceasing to grow and beginning to perish." This should set us to thinking whether we are growing spiritually, or not. Being commanded of God to grow in God's favor, it is not difficult to tell the reason why, if we are not. In nature if it requires suitable food, and plenty of it, to produce growth; and besides this, healthy growth requires exercise and pure air, and other conditions which are well understood. But the fact that this same law pervades the spiritual realm is too often overlooked. No one can grow spiritually without plenty of spiritual food and exercise. Every one knows for himself or herself, how much spiritual food and exercise have been taken. A very little, at the most, can only sustain life for a time. No growth can take place and decay is sure to set in. It is a serious matter not to grow in God's favor,—because in that case it means a growing out of his favor, and the time will come when he will have no pleasure in us. Time is on the wing, it will not be long before it will be said of him that is filthy,—let him be filthy still. Let us heed the note of warning from the Lord himself and "Be watchful, and strengthen the things that remain, that are ready to die; for I have not found thy works perfect before God.....and hold fast and repent."

"Worship of Mary, etc."

O. Barlow, in Glad Tidings in replying to a Catholic writer, says,—"Mary the Mother of Jesus is first mentioned as being worshipped in the 4th century, when she was worshipped as a goddess," says Mosheim, the celebrated Ecclesiastical historian. In the 5th century, 428 A. D. Anastasius opposed the use of the term "Mother of God!" which was now more frequently applied to the Mother of Christ in discussions with the Arians, than formerly. We may therefore infer that from that time to the present the Romanists have used the term, "Mother of God," although it was not used by early Christians until the 4th century, and was therefore unknown to the apostles and their immediate followers. Respecting the 'Sacrifice of the Mass,' Mosheim says:—In the 4th century was administered at the sepulchres of the martys and at funerals, whence arose afterwards the masses in honor of the saints and the dead. The bread and wine were now everywhere elevated before distribution, so that they might be seen by the people, and be viewed with reverence: and hence arose not long afterwards, the adoration of the symbols." Respecting the

'SACRIFICE OF THE EUCHARIST,'

we need only say that it was not until the year 1215 that Pope Innocent III. settled this controversy of the Catholics by declaring that the Body and Blood of Christ were present in the Eucharist, and he it was who applied to it the hitherto unknown term "transubstantiation." Neither this nor the other doctrines mentioned were taught till several centuries after revelations had ceased, and the Word was declared able to make men wise unto salvation. A word to the wise is sufficient.

British Army and Navy Estimates.

"The Scotsman" says:—"The Army Estimates for the coming year is £20,635,000. It is only two years since Europe was in council at the Hague on a proposal by the Emperor of Russia, for a restriction, if not an actual reduction of armaments. Who could have foreseen that in the short space of two years the British Government would be proposing a great increase of its military strength,—the turning of its defensive army into an army for offence, and an annual war budget of thirty millions? Is this how the millennial dream is going to be realized?

The navy estimate is £30,875,500. As in the case of the army vote, that asked for the navy is unprecedented. The country has not been unprepared for an increase. In view of the continuous striving of rival powers to strengthen themselves on the sea, it is recognized on all hands that our first line of defence must be maintained in a force and in a condition equal to our responsibilities. In ten years the navy vote has more than doubled, and the normal has almost doubled in the same time. The cost of the two services to the country now exceeds sixty millions. That is an enormous total, and would make the old economists and reformers turn in their graves."

"The government's army scheme provides for six army corps, three of which are to be in readiness for foreign service. There is a proposed addition of 120,000 men."

"The above extracts are very weighty; the writer looks from the natural point of view. But those enormous preparations are just what students of prophecy have been proclaiming must be. They will increase until the storm bursts over all the world. It is an unpleasant out-look, but beyond the storm will come the day of universal blessings," says the Editor of Glad Tidings.

When Do Believers Become Immortal?

This is a singular question to come from a man who has long gone in and out with the brotherhood, as if firmly fixed on the rock of truth. But singular as it is, it is before us, and will treat it as best we can.

There is but one kind of men now on earth,—and that kind is designated as mortal, in 2 Chron. xiv. 11, "Let not mortal man (margin) prevail against;" and in Job iv. 7, "Shall mortal man be more just than God?" And in Rom. vi. 12, "Let not sin reign in your mortal body;" and in Rom. viii. 11, "Shall also quicken your mortal bodies;" and in 1 Cor. xv. 53, 54: "This mortal must put on immortality;" and in 2 Cor. iv. 11, "Life of Jesus be manifested in our mortal flesh."

A mortal man is subject to death. As in means not; an *im*mortal man is not subject to death,—is deathless. In Rom. ii. 7 we are told that those only who seek for it, will attain to this deathless state. The way it is to be sought is by beginning, and patiently continuing in well doing, during the probationary period; which teaches, in other words, what is said in Rev. ii. 10, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life;" and that, we see from 1 Peter i. 4, fadeth not away.

As yet we have not come to the when, exactly. But we have positive testimony that probation for it lasts to the end of mortal life. And to this we can add the testimony of Paul in 2 Tim. iv. 6-8, that after fighting a good fight and finishing his course a crown of righteousness would be laid up for him, and for all who love the appearing of the Lord, the righteous Judge. That, almost, if not quite, tells us when. But we won't strain a point; we have abundance of evidence. In Col. iii. 3, 4, the Apostle says to the Colossians, "Your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." This Scripture explains both what the crown of glory Peter speaks of, is, and when it will be given.

In addition to this we are told in 1 Thes. iv. 16, 17, that the dead in Christ rise first, and then the left-over remnant shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye (1 Cor. xv. 52) And he who declared that he was "the resurrection and the life," says John v. 28, 29, that those who have done good shall come forth out of their graves to life. And the 11th of Hebrews emphatically teaches that the whole family of the redeemed ones will be perfected in nature at one time. But enough in this direction.

Our correspondent above has gotten it into his head that believers,—those who have been begotten by the incorruptible Word, which liveth and abideth ever, become, in some unexplainable way, immortal, on the principle that like begets like; and also because John says, "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life;" as if in possession of it; and again, in his first epistle says, "he that hath the Son, hath life." We submit that the evidence adduced above forbids this construction; and therefore there must be another way to explain the apparent conflict. Paul, from the time he arose and washed away his sin was "in hope of eternal life;" and that by a resurrection, like Christ's. Phil. iii. 8-11.

2. He shows that it is this mortal body that puts on immortality; that when once put on it can never be put off; can die no more; the victory over death is complete. 1 Cor. xv. 53, 54, 55.

It is clear that the incorruptible word does not change the mortal body, but renews or changes the mind; and this brings about a change of conduct or character; it is not the character that becomes immortal, but it entitles the organism that developed it, in obedience to the truth, to the truth, to be immortalized.

It is claimed that God gives the believer his Spirit, 1 John iv. 14, and as God is Spirit therefore the believer becomes immortal. We think not. The word Spirit in this connection does not refer to an incorruptible state of existence, but divine disposition, or state of mind, in contrast with that of the world, or unchanged persons.

We know it says he that hath the Son hath life. How so? Does he possess the life of Jesus? If so, has he two different existences? If so, why can he not see God and live? If he has not the life of Jesus what do these words mean? They mean that the life of Jesus is his legally, but as it requires a mortal organism in which to manifest mortal life, so immortal life can only be manifested in an immortal organism. Let it be noted that while the Apostle admits the ownership, he denies the possession. Christ is the great depository of life for all the redeemed. It is hid with Christ for the time being, as seen above. It is in safe keeping,—thank God.

Suppose for a moment one has a spark of immortality after believing,—is that the responsible man? Is it a spark of the Divine nature of existence, seeing God only hath immortality? Has it been imparted to him because of acceptance and compliance with the gospel and its conditions? If so, has it made any part of the original corrupt organism incorruptible? If so, what part: and if so, we ask again, will the incorruptible part be separated from the corruptible when the breath leaves the organism, or will it go into the ground with it? If so, will it have a conscious existence under ground until the resurrection? If not, what will become of it? We are asking T. N. to teach us if he can,—one good turn deserves another,—and we have done the best we could for him; because we felt that he had well-nigh gotten back to the old theological rut he so rejoiced to get out of, long ago. Over-much study seems to have confused him and gotten him beyond his depth; we beg him to halt a moment, and find out if he has not been forgetting that God who sees the end from the beginning speaks of things that are not, (as yet) as though they had already come to pass, as instanced by Paul in Rom. iv. 17, where he says God told him he had made him a father of many nations, when in fact, he was as yet childless; as also by the language of Psa. cx. 4 in reference to Christ a thousand years before he was born: "THOU ART a priest for ever, after the order of Melchizedec," which is not even yet an accomplished fact? He is expecting the fulfilment of this promise still, although nearly three thousand years have passed. Are not these utterances quite as explicit as the words: "He that hath the Son hath life?

We would kindly say to our enquirer, that we do not see how the glory of God, or the up-building of his church can result from the agitation of this matter. Indeed we are knowing to instances where down-pulling and scattering of the flock have taken place on account of it. I would counsel him to heed the warnings of the Spirit in Heb. xii. 15. Look diligently lest any root of bitterness spring up.

"Take Heed."

Jesus says:—"Take heed what ye hear;" Mark iv. 24; and his Apostle Paul says to his son Timothy, "As I besought thee to abide still at Ephesus, when I went into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge some that they teach no other doctrine,—neither give heed to fables," etc.

The words of Jesus show that they would hear perverse things,—things intended to tone down his plain utterance that "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be condemned,"—things that cater to the fleshly mind and license them to take liberties with the law of pardon and justication by faith. The Apostle not only clinches the Lord's strong nail,—but condemns those who teach thus by prohibiting it. This, again, holds up the Spirit's mirror to those who chafe and fret when they cannot teach anything and everything they deem proper, whether Paul taught it or not.

Even where there is no ecclesial authority, it cannot be denied that the law of the Spirit is in force. And we are informed by the Word that the law is for the lawless and disobedient; (1 Tim. i. 9) and these always expose themselves when restraint is placed upon them, by squirming; others have no need to squirm. Knowing how prone the flesh is to err, it behooves all who essay to teach, to make sure they speak as do the holy oracles,—if they give expression to an idea that is out of harmony with them, it is certain to be accepted by some, and the wrong thus done can never be righted.

It is painfully evident that many think the liberty wherewith Christ makes men free, allows them to teach what they please in the Church of God. We venture to kindly say to such; they greatly err,—and will be held to account if they teach for truth what has no thus saith the Lord for it. Those who cause God's little ones to stumble will not go unpunished. Paul declared the whole counsel of God, and kept back nothing that was profitable (Acts xx. 20, 28) and it is the bounden duty of the brotherhood to put this test to all who advance what appears to be forbidden doctrine, by asking where Paul so taught?

A letter before us from one who is trying to scatter the seed of the kingdom, says he has found many who have gone far beyond Pauline theology, so far, indeed, that much of what that noble defender of the faith has said respecting justification by faith, atonement, etc., is discounted all through one article by one man. If they would heed the injunction of the Apostle, to "preach the Word," and not stretch that commission, the Church would again be a unit. Perhaps this is too much to expect. "It must needs be that offences come," says Jesus, "but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh."

Short Sermons. No. 18.

A prophet without honor. Why is it? Jesus, the greatest and best Prophet of prophets, has said that a prophet is not without honor, save in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house. Matt. xiii. 57; Mark vi. 4. This was a mystery to me for a long time, I could not see why a good man and a good prophet or teacher was not appreciated at home. But with more mature reflection and observation it dawned on our mind that the cause of this was that a true prophet could not vary from the truth to please the people, who as a rule do not, nor never did relish the plain simple truth. If it comes in the shape of a prediction and a warning there is a cause for it, and somebody is hit and hurt over it, and does not feel like speaking a good word for such a prophet. This was the case with God's old prophets in time of old. Even King Balak was selfish and wanted his way about it, and much displeased with the prophet and his parables, and would not honor him for telling the truth. And it is noteworthy that the old prophet could not, and would not deviate from the line of truth, no not for a house full of silver and gold. And thus his integrity caused him to miss great honors. What a useful lesson this would and should be for all modern prophets and teachers. Next is the plaintive cry of Elijah, the prophet, "Lord, they have digged down thine altars, and killed thy prophets, and I am left alone, and they seek my life." This prophet was without honor, and very lonely indeed. The same is true of the Master, that great prophet. His true and plain testimony to the people stirred up their ignorant ire, and thus he missed their favor and their honor. This he must do or miss the favor of God. And Paul says, If I seek to please men I should not be the servant of God. A teacher is watched more closely at home, and his defects are more readily seen, and often magnified, and thus he often misses that honor due him. While away from home these little things are not so readily noticed, and he may receive all the respect due him. Then again a teacher may be as true as steel, and as straight as a string, or a straight edge, and teach the truth of the Bible just as the Master and the Apostles taught it, and the people as a rule not knowing but little about the Bible, and clinging fast to their traditions are most sure to misjudge and condemn the wrong man. This is the way they treated the Master and his Apostles and this was the cause. And can we expect and look for better treatment now, if so why? Woe unto you when all men speak well of you, for so did they unto the false prophets. Then it is not so very strange after all, if a true teacher meets with disappointment, and the cold shoulder, and is turned down nowadays by his neighbors and those of his own house also, as they are just as liable to be mistaken as others. Our Master's kindred did not appreciate him. It was not his fault but theirs.

Please say to the scattered pilgrims and to all who may be interested in the evangelizing, that the winter is over, and I thank God that I am well again, and that I will be at or near Bosworth, Mo., May 25th and 26th, to hold meetings at Brown school house. All are invited to come. And also say that I am now ready to go and fill calls where ever there will be a way opened for me to do so, with the help of the good Lord and the good brethren. We cannot all preach but we can help them that can preach, both with our means and also our presence at church and our prayers and encouragement. Address Parsons, Kan. JOHN FOORE.

All the sin that has darkened human life and saddened human history began in believing a falsehood; all power of Christianity to make men holy is associated with believing the truth.

Obituary.

Eliza Jane Eastwood was born Dec. 7th, 1839 in the State of Pennsylvania. She removed with her parents to the south part of the State of Indiana about the year 1860. In the year 1866 she removed to Kosciusko Co.; was married to Ebenezer Helms in the year 1888, with whom she lived happily until her death which occurred May 2, 1901, her age being 61 years, 5 months and 25 days. She was converted when 13 years of age, and through many changing scenes of life found consolation in Christ and a strong support in death. She leaves an affectionate husband to mourn a wife's love, and three children, the fruits of former marriages, and a number of grandchildren to grieve. The peace of God which passeth understanding was filling her soul in her last conscious moments.

A wife's dear form no more appears,
A mother's voice has fled,
Until the close of fleeting years,
When Christ shall raise the dead.

And then within the Shepherd's fold,
Amid the white robed throng,
With voice attuned to harps of gold,
She sings the glad new song.

WILLIS LOGAN.

Died at his home in the Ozaro, Mar. 22, 1901, of typhoid fever, Willard S. C. Daggett, eldest son of S. S. and N. G. Daggett; age 28 years, 6 mo. and 29 days. Willard was born in the town of Rushford where most of his life was spent except about two years spent in the vicinity of Jamesville, Wis., where he became acquainted with and was married to Miss Isabelle Stockman, Jan. 8, 1890. As a result of this union there are two lovely little children, a girl of four years and a little boy 17 months left to mourn the loss of a kind, loving father, he leaves a young wife to mourn the loss of a husband whom she dearly loved and will greatly miss, also a father and mother, three brothers and three sisters and a large circle of friends who respected him for the truthful, honest life which he lived, so free from the evils into which young men are led. Early in life he made a profession of religion, open confession of Christ before the world, and after his marriage desired to be baptized, so together with his wife, one brother and one sister and several others repaired to the Fox River, and were immersed by Elder Coffeen, July 4, 1897. Mother having explained to them the nature of baptism by the aid of the Bible, also read to them an article on the subject from THE RESTITUTION, which has for many years been a weekly visitor at father's home, during his last sickness, which was long and painful, all that love and money could do for the dear one was done. Father, mother and one brother came to his home and together with his wife labored faithfully for him, hoping to the last that his life might be spared, but the fever never turned and death at last claimed his victim, and on a dark stormy day when all nature seemed in accord with the sorrow and gloom upon our hearts we laid him to rest till he comes who has said, "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me though he were dead, yet shall he live." Words of comfort were spoken by Elder Zoerb, a Methodist minister. Beautiful hymns were sung by a choir of neighbors and friends, so comforting because sung by those of whose sympathy we were so sure. Our hearts are full of gratitude to the many friends who aided us in so many ways during our trouble.

Your brother and sister in hope of the Master's return.

Poetry.

Seeds.

We are sowing, daily sowing,
Countless seeds of good and ill,
Scattered on the level lowland,
Cast upon the windy hill;
Seeds that sink in rich, brown furrows,
Soft with heaven's gracious rain,
Seeds that rest upon the surface
Of the dry, unyielding plain.

Seeds that fall amid the stillness
Of the lonely mountain glen;
Seeds cast out in crowded places,
Trodden under foot of men;
Seeds by idle hearts forgotten,
Flung at random in the air;
Seeds by faithful souls remembered,
Sown in tears and love and prayer.

Seeds that lie unchanged, unquickened,
Lifeless on the teeming mould;
Seeds that live and grow and flourish
When the sower's hand is cold;
By a whisper sow we blessings,
By a breath we scatter strife;
In our words and looks and actions
Lie the seeds of death and life.

Thou who knowest all our weakness,
Leave us not to sow alone!
Bid thine angels guard the furrows
Where the precious grain is sown,
Till the fields are crowned with glory,
Filled with mellow, ripened ears,
Filled with fruit of life eternal
From the seeds we now in tears.

Check the forward thoughts and passions,
Stay the hasty, heedless hands;
Lest the germs of sin and sorrow
Mar our fair and pleasant lands.
Father, help each weak endeavor,
Make each faithful effort blest,
Till thine harvest shall be garnered,
And we enter into rest.

Sheol and Consciousness.

Rev. Sir:

In your religious journal of May 8, you say that "Jesus descended into hell or hades, the abode of all departed spirits bad and good directly at its departure from the body."

Now, I have no objection to offer at the statement that "Jesus descended into hades." This is plainly taught in the original Greek, and the term is the Greek equivalent of the more ancient "sheol." This is the term used in Ps. xvi., from which Peter makes his citation on the day of Pentecost and says, it refers to "the resurrection of Christ." The inquiry then is in order, What is this sheol, or hades, or hell? You say it is "the abode of all departed spirits," etc. But where does the Bible say this? Sheol occurs 62 times in the Old Testament; 35 times as "hell," and 33 times as "grave" and "pit." Hades is found 10 times in the New Testament. Is sheol or hades, as we have it in the Bible, a place of consciousness as you imply? I do not know, neither do you, except as we are taught by the Word. I want the truth in this matter, as in every other, and I presume you have the same desire. I say sheol is not a place of consciousness; you imply that it is. Which view is right? One or the other must be wrong; they cannot both be right. I will give you my reasons for saying that sheol is not a place of consciousness. I turn to Eccl. ix. 10 and read, "……there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in SHEOL whither thou goest."

Now, I ask, Is that proposition true? Does man in death go to sheol? "All go to one place; all are of the dust, all turn to dust again." Eccl. iii. 20. To dust, then, man goes in death. And this brings us to another inquiry, Where is sheol? According to Num. xvi. 30 33, it is in "the earth." Our translators have here given us sheol by "pit," but Luther gave it by "Hoelle" (hell).

The next question is, Where was Christ in his death? Matt. xii. 40 we read that "as Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly: so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." Paul, peaking of the same fact, says, "Now, that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth." Eph. iv. 9. And again he says, that "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures." 1 Cor. xv. 3, 4. This was truly "according to the Scriptures," for they had foretold concerning him long before that "he made his grave with the wicked, and (was) with the rich in his death." Isa. liii. 9.

Now, let me lay down a few plain truths. It is true that "the dead know not anything." Eccl. ix. 5. Christ "was dead;" (Rev. i. 18) therefore in his death he was unconscious. The Bible further says that in sheol there is "no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom." Christ was in sheol (or its Greek analogue, hades); therefore he was unconscious while dead and in the grave.

In 1 Cor. xv. 55 hades is translated grave, the only time in the New Testament where it is so rendered. The Bible does not say that man retains consciousness when dead, but quite unmistakably affirms the opposite, and therefore any conclusion to the contrary is based upon inference, and is against the plainest statements. If man is conscious while dead (what an anomaly), and it is of such importance that we should hold to this view why does the Bible maintain such painful silence, and even state the contrary?

To live is to be in that state in which the organs of the body are capable of performing their functions; and to be dead is not to be in that condition. This makes the resurrection both necessary and reasonable.

Editor Restitution:

I send you an account of a small thing that happened as I was visiting my son in Iowa some ten years ago, at Cincinnati, Iowa, which shows what kind of preaching some who profess to know the Book and profess to understand the original language from which it was translated into the English language and who had ought to know the word church came from the Greek ecclesia, and means a congregation assembled for worship while kingdom comes from the word basileus a country governed by one man, a king, and are not the same in any sense whatever in meaning. The church is a place to prepare a people for the kingdom of heaven or kingdom of God. I went to hear Prof. Carpenter of the Christian church (so-called) preach, he was Prof. of theology in Des Moines, Iowa, college, a very noted man. He took for his text "The Kingdom of Heaven," and he used up all his time striving to establish beyond a shadow of a doubt that the kingdom of heaven was set up at the Pentecost, and that the church and kingdom of heaven was the same thing, and before he closed he (a large portly man) straightened himself up at full length and said in a very self-important kind of a way, I am a greater man than John the Baptist, I am in the kingdom of heaven and John the Baptist was not, and quoted the text in Matt. xi. 11, "There hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist but the least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he." After the meeting closed I stopped the congregation from going out, and asked the old Professor if he had got acquainted with old Abraham, Isaac and Jacob since he got into the kingdom of heaven, for Christ said they were going to be there, and I would like to hear from the old folks if he had got acquainted with them.

O. C. DENSLOW.

Dear brethren and sisters of like precious faith:

Having become endeared to you all by the connecting link of love for the truth's sake, and having all been begotten by the same Word of truth, which binds us together as one family of dear children, all standing on the promise made of God to the fathers, now let us all take heed to the sure Word of prophecy as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, least any of us come short of the glory of God, in these perilous times, by becoming entangled with the ordinances of men, which are all to perish with the using. The Apostle Paul said he was persuaded that the church in his day could not be separated from the love of Christ by principalities, nor powers, nor heights, nor depths, nor things present, nor things to come, nor any other creature, for if we be dead with Christ from the rudiments of the world, why as though living in the world are we subject to ordinances? Let us stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free, for if we have come out from the world, and have buried the old man with his deeds, how can we go back again into the world, without serving two masters? And this our Lord said, we can not do, for he said we would hate the one and love the other, and this is not to be wondered at, for the pure principles set forth by the prince of the power of the air, that worked in the children of disobedience in Paul's day are too different for any one to serve them both at once; therefore, if the truth make us free, we are free indeed. Then let us yield ourselves as instruments of righteousness unto holiness, that the end be everlasting life, having been planted in the likeness of our Savior's death, and arose to walk in newness of life. Let us present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable, which is our reasonable service, for we are bought with a price by the blood of Christ, and if we be Christ's, then are Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. Then let us put on the armor of God, that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the wicked one, for we wrestle not against the flesh and blood, but against the principalities and powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness of this world in high places, wherefore, let us all be workers together for good, redeeming the time, because the days are evil. Let us have on the breastplate of righteousness, and our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, and be ever ready to give a reason for the hope that is within us, and contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints, not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together. No, let us meet and be willing workers in the Master's vineyard, there is room for all and work for all. Then let each of us fill our places, if it is only by our presence; the time is short for us to work, and every member in the body should grow in grace, and in a knowledge of the truth, and thereby have oil in their vessels, so they can shun the dangers of the false teaching of our times. Some think there is nothing for them to do; and that the preacher must do all, but I do not so understand it. Paul said in writing to the church in his day, "From you has sounded out the Word of life, and he exhorted them to be a city upon a hill, and not to put our light under a bushel, and each and every one of us are exhorted to let our light so shine before men, that they may be constrained to glorify our Father who art in heaven. Then if we are all willing workers in the Master's vineyard, we can join in singing the following lines, which I have composed;

GO WORK IN MY VINEYARD.

We are workers in the vineyard,
In the vineyard of the Lord,
We must labor for the penny,
And receive the great reward.
We must do the Master's biding,
We must go at his command,
We must listen to our Teacher,
For he died for every man.

Now this vineyard needs its pruning,
And its soil must all be tilled,
Lest the vines will all grow weaker,
And its fruit it will not yield,
We must not forget the stranger,
We must not forget the poor,
We must not forget the heathen,
We can find them at the door.

When we go to trim this vineyard,
Use the pruning knife with care,
Lest we wound some tender feeling,
And they turn back in despair,
Let us point them to their errors,
Point them to the better way,
Let our love so twine around them,
Guide them to eternal day.

We who bear the heat and burden,
In the vineyard of the Lord,
Don't forget the younger children,
Feed them with the precious Word,
See that every plant is watered,
Water them with precious care,
So we all can get the penny,
Then a crown of life we'll wear.

SARAH F. MORGAN.

Dear Friend:

I have been reading THE RESTITUTION this afternoon. As one of your subscribers I would suggest that leading articles by some of your principal contributors should not be so conflicting as certain articles, which, if true, will put the Boxers of China on an equality with the most enlightened Christians of this age. Although Scripture says that it will be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah, yet I cannot reconcile that with the restoration of the Sodomites and the "Gift of God." In the same issue there is another article in the opposite direction, denying the resurrection of all who die out of Christ. St. Paul says that there will be a resurrection of the just and the unjust. And in Revelations it is said. "Blessed and holy are they who have part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power." I always understood the teaching of Scripture to be a resurrection of all who died in the first Adam, and that the physical death was the result of one sin, and that by the death of one the result of the sin of the first Adam was removed by the death and resurrection of our Lord. "Behold the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world." Not the sins of the world. But by faith in him he takes away the sins of those who believe and obey the truth. As in Adam all die, even so in Christ are all made alive. Universalists believe that the quotation "in Christ all are made alive" means salvation for all. I have understood that the first resurrection as well as those included in the second to be a restoration to a mortal state, and that the judgment decided who was to receive eternal life. I am not writing for publication and am quoting Scripture from memory and may not be strictly correct. My object is to call your attention to the conflicting doctrines held by your contributors, which to my mind is confusing, which, to my mind also is condemned by St. Paul 1 Cor. xii., xiii., xiv. "For if the trumpet give an uncertain voice who shall prepare himself for war." I would respectfully suggest that your leading contributors confer on important doctrines and that only such as meet the approval of your ablest theologians be published. Excuse me for suggesting the uniformity of doctrine necessary for your paper. I know that it is necessary to allow a certain class liberty to express their views, but when such views disturb pre-accepted doctrines I think it is very important that such articles should be reviewed editorially. I have long since discarded immortal soulism. But Universalism, future probation, and such like views are unscriptural as far as I can understand my reading of Scripture.

J. MORRISON.

We publish this rather private letter because it will enable us to say "Amen." "Our sentiments exactly." Bro. Woodward used to say that if the politicians had any differences they went behind closed doors and settled them, and then came out with a united front to combat the other party. He also said that Christian people were not so wise in this respect as the politicians. Seems to us that Bro. Woodward had given thought to the subject, and had arrived at a correct conclusion. Now brethren, the facts are that there is no quarrel when it comes to practical duties. What Christians should do. Some try to "excuse" a little social dancing or card-playing, but the fact that they endeavor to excuse it is enough. Regarding what the gospel was that Christ taught, and that the apostles were commissioned to teach, there are no differences among us. The good news about the kingdom of God, and the things concerning the name of the Lord Jesus the Christ—"the gospel"—that is the power of God unto salvation to "them that believe" is all plain and clear to each of us. Our whole duty consists in endeavoring to get people who are not now, into the class of "them that believe." This duty, faithfully performed, will leave no time for so much of a contradictory nature to be written or preached. Can we realize fully what our times demand—what our present day duty is? Then can we leave the other matters that will come up for settlement by and by just go till that time? If we can the readers will like us better, we will like ourselves and each other better, and there will be no danger of displeasing God.

Editor Restitution:

It gives me the greatest of pleasure to renew for my paper. I am very much pleased with the articles of Bro. Wilson also those of our other learned brothers. They are very instructive and profitable. I firmly believe that THE RESTITUTION gives a person more real value for his money than any other paper I know of. I would like to ask Bro. Wilson if he would kindly write an article or series of articles on the "Living Creatures" and wheels as brought to view in Ezekiel. I feel myself in the position of the Eunuch who was reading from the prophets, and Phillip asked him if he understood what he was reading. He replied, How can I except some man guide me. I have read it and studied it and must confess that I do not understand it, and I need a guide to guide me. I am here alone in Troy, N. Y., as regards the truth and I find it very uphill work to study out some of the truths that are hidden in the good Book. I have tried to give to others the truths as far as I see them, but they cast them and me from them, they see no beauty in them. The God of this world has blinded their eyes and they appear to be pleased to have it so. They are blind people being led on by blind guides and will fall into the ditch together. I wish to express my thanks to the brothers and sisters who by their writings have made the paper and brought it up to the high standing it is at the present. The love-feast has given words of exhortation and comfort from the brothers and sisters scattered over God's footstool and give us encouragement to go on our way rejoicing. God bless them, also the preaching brothers who are laboring hard to preach the truth in the midst of a crooked and perverse people. I realize how discouraging it is for them to see such small results from their labors. Brothers go on sowing the seed faithfully, water it occasionally, watch over it while growing to see that the enemy does not pluck it up and leave the rest with God. It is he who gives the increase. If you do your work faithfully God will do his.

Humility.

Some one has given this beautiful answer to this word: humility is perpetual quietness of heart; it is to have no trouble: it is never to be fretted or vexed or irritated or sore or disappointed; it is to expect nothing, to wonder at nothing that is done to me, to feel nothing done against me; it is to be at rest when nobody praises me, and when I am blamed and despised it is to have a blessed home in myself where I can go in and shut the door and kneel to my Father in secret and at peace as in a deep sea of calmness when all around and above is trouble and storms." Who of us have reached this blessed condition, and still it is where God would like to have us; then we would truly be living in him, loving him better than self or world or friend. When we reach this condition we can pray from the heart, "Father, forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." Remembering Christ's wounds wrung from him the piteous words, "Father, forgive them they know not what they do." O to reach that condition, and we must if we would be the children of our heavenly Father.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will be held (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent Co., Michigan, commencing Thursday evening, May 30th, 1901, and continue over the following Sunday, (May 31st, June 1st and 2nd). It is the desire of all who have been in the habit of attending these gatherings, that all the churches send delegates with report of their conditions to the meeting. Also that isolated brethren attend or send letter. Now friends, please attend to this little matter, and if you cannot possibly come, send a letter to the secretary at Grand Rapids, Michigan, R. R., No. 1, Burton Ave., and it will be presented to the Conference. If you have some good news of what the Lord has done for you, tell us of it—it will cheer us on our way. Let none remain away through fear of being a burden to those that entertain the Conference, as arrangements will be made to accommodate all that come. All will receive a hearty welcome. Dutton is situated on the Michigan Central R. R., ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids. Jesus is coming, will the Annual Meeting of 1901 be the last? Come, work while the day lasts.

Yours in the hope of the soon coming King,

H. C. HAMMOND, Pres.
EMMA JACKMAN, Sec.

Dear Sisters:

The yearly Conference is almost here and with it comes the annual meeting of the Ladies' Tithing Society. Have we forgotten our Lord's portion this last year and spent it all for our own uses (not needs)? O there are so many ways for the Lord's money to be used, it seems more this year than ever. Will we sacrifice a little for the good of humanity and cause of truth? Make an effort, dear ones, to be present at this meeting; would you go on some pleasure trip, come to the Conference instead. We will have to give an account of how we use his money, may we have a good record to look at. While we wait for the Master let us work.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

The Nickel Plate Road has just issued its annual booklet entitled "Summer Outings" which tells all about the resorts and points of interest along its line. Space is also given to a graphic description of the Pan-American Exposition held at Buffalo May 1st to Nov. 1st. You should not fail to secure a copy of this valuable booklet. Call on or address nearest Agent, or B. F. Horner, G. P. A., Cleveland, O. —May 30.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Excursion to Buffalo.

Excursion tickets to Buffalo for the Pan-American Exposition via Pennsylvania Lines go on sale May 5th. Tickets may be obtained daily from that date until September 30th at special fares, good returning until October 31st. A special ticket good returning fifteen days including date of sale may also be obtained via Pennsylvania Lines any day after May 5th. Another excursion ticket at special low fare will be on sale May 7th, 14th, 21st and 28th. The latter ticket will be limited for return trip within five days. All tickets to Buffalo via Pennsylvania Lines will be good for stop-overs at Lakewood and Jamestown (Chautauqua Lake). For information about fares, through time and train service apply to nearest ticket agent of the Pennsylvania Lines who will furnish time cards, maps and official information about the Exposition free of charge.—may 28

The Chicago & North Western and Union Pacific have given notice of the sale of excursion tickets to Colorado and Utah during the coming summer on the following basis of rates:

From July 1st to 9th inclusive, and September 1st to 10th inclusive, tickets will be sold from Chicago to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo and return at rate of $25.00; Glenwood Springs and return $35.00; Ogden and Salt Lake City and return $40.00; tickets to Colorado points to be limited to October 31st, and to Utah points 90 days not to exceed October 31st.

From June 18 to 30 inclusive, and from July 10th to August 31st inclusive, tickets will be sold from Chicago to Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo and return at rate of $31.50; Glenwood Springs and return $43.50; Ogden, Salt Lake City and return $44.-50. Tickets at these rates limited to 90 days, except that on tickets sold on June 18th, 25th, July 16th, 25d and 30th, August 6th, 18th, 20th and 27th, limit will be October 31st, on Colorado tickets, and on Utah tickets 90 days, but in no case to exceed October 31st.

Stop overs to be given on Colorado tickets on going trip only at Colorado common points within final limit.

Stop-overs to be given on Utah tickets limited to 90 days not to exceed October 31st east and west of Colorado common points in both directions within 30 days going and return transit limit.

Stop-overs on Utah 30 day tickets in both directions at and west of Colorado common points within final limit.

The "Chicago Special"—One night to Denver—leaves Chicago 10:00 A. M. every morning and arrives at Denver 2:00 P. M. the next afternoon. The "Pacific Express" leaves Chicago 10.30 P. M. every night and arrives at Denver early the second morning. The "Overland Limited" leaves Chicago 6:30 P. M. daily, only two days to Utah.

The Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo opens May 1st, 1901, and don't forget that the Nickel Plate Road is the shortest and most expedient route to Buffalo and will land you directly at the Exposition Gates. Rates are in effect April 30th, 1901, and good going or returning on any of our Trio of Daily Express trains. Write, wire, 'phone, or call on nearest agent, C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—June 1.

Oregon, Washington and Idaho

Are the states to which a large immigration is now directed. You should take advantage of the opportunities, and the greatly reduced rates. This wonderful country fully and accurately described and illustrated in a new booklet with a large map, which will be mailed to any address upon receipt of six cents in postage by W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago. —June 22.

To Illinois brethren in special and all brethren in general:

Recently the Building Committee of the Illinois State Conference made a call through these columns for aid in raising a fund to build a suitable Conference building—not to use as a place of worship—but a building in which delegates may be entertained while in attendance at the Conference. The church in Oregon is large enough for all the meetings, having a seating capacity of about two hundred. Many generously answered this first call and the committee desires in this general way to thank all who have subscribed not only their money but also their words of encouragement. To them this second call is not directed, for we believe you have done well your part. We have now about $275.00 on hand. We need yet, at the very lowest estimate, $75.00. To put up a suitable building with lumber at its present price, we should have $400.00. This item is written to invite any who have not yet subscribed to do so in any amount, however small. Send remittances to the chairman of the committee who will promptly receipt for the same. Time and space forbid discussion as to the merits of locating the Conference permanently. Suffice it to say that we believe that when the plan is once in working order, all will be pleased with it. Building Committee consists: S. J. Lindsay, Chairman, Oregon, Ill.; J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Ill.; E. F. Gesin, Forreston, Ill.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

F. L. AUSTIN.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 288 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

The Indian and the Northwest.

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 115 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half-tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battleground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1600. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library. Price, 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. [illegible] Eskens, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, [illegible] May 25.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 280 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Will any brother living in or near Denver, Col. please send me their address? I wish to address them concerning parties living near Denver, who are anxious to obey the gospel by putting on Christ in the ordinance of baptism.

Adrian, Mich. L. C. CHASE.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

Poetry.

Judge Not.

What matter if your brother man
Does not the thing he ought to do.
Or that you think he ought? He may
Be thinking just the same of you.
Judge not.

What if a friend has fallen low
Beneath a load of sin and shame;
Should you the sinner's crime proclaim,
[illegible]
Judge not.

You cannot read your brother's mind;
You cannot know the why and where;
But there is one that knoweth all,
So leave it to his love and care.
Judge not.

Judge not, my friend, the time will come,
For God is just and always true,
As you have meted out to them
You'll find it meted back to you.
Judge not.

Communicated.

The Times of Restitution.

"And he shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Acts iii. 20, 21.

The meaning of the word restitution is to restore. In common usage a person that has been wronged or injured, has a right of restitution from the one that inflicted the injury, and the law of the land names the fold, degree or amount of restitution to be made. But in a Biblical sense, God through his love and compassion, has promised to restore to man that which was lost through his own transgression, and not that of another. For we learn from the historical as well as from the prophetical books of the Bible, that every good and perfect gift that God has bestowed upon the human race had conditions involved, and those gifts were forfeited by man, because he failed to live up to the conditions. It is not reasonable to suppose that God lightly esteemed his material handiwork, or that he would fail to formulate a plan by which it would not sink into oblivion, but that it should be perpetually established.

But as sin had come into the world, and as a curse had been pronounced upon it on account of sin, it is evident that he saw the necessity of redemption through a sinless object. Therefore he sent into the world his Word to be manifest in the flesh, in the person of the lowly Nazarene, born of the Virgin Mary, and to empower him to associate with himself a people like himself (Spiritual) to aid him in earth's restitution; for he (Jesus) says "I am come into the world that they might have it more abundantly." Jno. x. 10. The life alluded to was immortal or spiritual for they already had the Adamic life; but before they were permitted to share in the glories of the restitution age in official capacity, they were to be proved by trials and tribulations, made white in the blood of the Lamb. The phrase "all things" may be briefly comprehended in man's condition before the fall, earth's Edenic state, and the kingdom of God. These may be considered as major elements, while minor questions will follow as natural results.

While we are considering the "things of restitution," we should be careful to rightly understand what is to be restored, so as not to be confused by wrong conclusions. That man is to receive eternal or immortal life, cannot be any part of restitution, for as yet, none but the crucified Son of God has been blessed with spiritual life, and it is a future gift to be bestowed upon those who put their trust in him who has been triumphant over death. The Mosaical law that obtained before, during and after the kingdom of God, will not be restored, for it completed its mission and was fulfilled at the cross of Calvary. But there will be a law, as yet not written, that shall go forth from Zion for the government of the kingdom, a perfect law, for it will be the Word of the Lord.

The Apostle in making use of the words "times of restitution" was obviously guided by the thought of harmony of the teachings of our Savior and the writings of the prophets, before and at his time, or day, in regard to the space of time required in the restitution age. The plural word times evidently refers to different periods of time in relation to the consummation of different events occurring during the reign of Christ in subduing all things unto himself. If Christ and the saints reign 1000 years, and the terms restitution age, age to come, millennial reign of Christ are synonymous, it is easy to determine the length of time to elapse, by the use of the word times. It should be borne in mind, that in the restoration of the kingdom of God, as it was overturned on account of sin, if we consider it in a literal sense, it should be in the abstract, rather than in the concrete, for we would hardly suppose that God in his wisdom would re-instate a condition that in times past resulted in our own destruction. Keeping this thought in view, in connection with the mighty events to take place, compared with the ages that have passed since man's creation, we are filled with wonder that so much can be performed in the short space of time allotted to it.

Again, we are admonished to "rightly divide the Word of truth." With a casual reading it may be difficult to do this; perhaps the Apostle in giving this admonition meant something more than appears on the surface. It is possible that he looked forward with the eye of inspiration, and foresaw that men in the translation, punctuation and division into chapters and paragraphs of the inspired Word, would fail to keep the subject matter in close relation, but would have the same paragraph refer to different subjects, having wide spaces of time to elapse between different events as we find it.

After long meditation of this subject, or admonition, I am fully persuaded that this is the correct view, when in 2 Thes. i. 7, 8, 9, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power. Also see 2 Peter iii. 10; Matt. xxv. 41. Take the above quotations and references, together with Rev. xix. 15, and continue to read until the end of this 19th of Rev. and see where you come out. Away back in the dim and misty past when God declared that he was God and there was none other, he also declared that "vengeance is mine, I will repay." Deut. xxxii. 35.

It is difficult for us to associate vengeance with the coming of the meek and forgiving Jesus. During his ministry upon earth, he ever taught the lessons of love, of charity, of forgiveness, of mercy, who is even now at the right hand of the Father, as our Mediator, pleading as when suffering the agony of the cross, the loving words, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do," fell from his quivering lips. True it is said he comes as the Lion of the tribe of Judad, signifying fierceness, and that he will rule the nations with a rod of iron, representing strength, and that all power is given to him in heaven and earth. But in harmony with his previous acts and teachings we may safely look for that power to be used in some manner, and not with the vindictive spirit that prevails in depraved humanity. At the opening of the restitution age, he comes to give eternal life to all those who in past times have been found worthy to attain unto a resurrection from the dead, to change the living saints to immortal life, to be glorified in them, and to make them kings and priests to reign with him during the period of earth's purification. If we can rightly divide the Word of truth, by placing the quotation given above at or near the close, rather than at the beginning of the restitution age, together with the fact that with the close of Christ's priesthood and mediatorship, also will close the opportunity of making our calling and election sure to an official capacity in God's glorious kingdom, with its concomitant of spiritual life, we shall have taken a long step, not only towards a harmonious teaching of the Bible but will eliminate a question that has caused much bitterness among our own people, but has without question been a stumbling block in the way of successfully teaching a dying world what they must do to be saved.

To bear me out in this position, allow me to call your attention to one of the references above given for a comparison. St. Matt. xxv. 41, which reads as follows: "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." This is the sentence pronounced upon the ungodly, after standing before God in judgment. These were they that were not found in the Book of life. Rev. xx. 15. But notice, this fire is prepared for the devil and his angels, and are cast in (first casting in recorded) where the beast and the false prophet are. This casting in is in the time of the little season, and is at the close of the restitution age. As there is but one preparation we can in like manner look for but one casting in. We do not recall a passage of Scripture pointing to a sentence of physical death by fire upon any one at the coming of Christ or beginning of his reign that can be rightly separated from the final day. Compare Matt. xiii. 42; xxv. 41, and others of the same analogy, with Dan. xii. 2: Mal. iv. 1; Rev. xx. 10; xxi. 8, etc.

When the Apostle uttered the words quoted at the head of this article, he undoubtedly had reference to the same condition of life that was possessed by our first parents. That condition of life was such, that Adam could have lived for an indefinite time if he had been obedient; but he forfeited the conditions and entailed upon his posterity the same sentence that was pronounced upon himself on account of his sin. Adam was accountable for his own sin; and as that condition will be restored, we are led to believe that the nations over whom Christ and the saints will reign will be responsible for their own misdemeanors, and not any thing entailed upon them on account of Adam's sin. See Jer. xxxi. 29, 30; Ezek. xviii. 2, 3.

Opening of the Seals.

"And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see. And I beheld, and lo, a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand." Rev. vi. 5.

The symbols of this seal evidently apply to the Papacy; and here I would call attention to a fact, generally overlooked, that God in his over-ruling providence has so controlled the recording of history, so that it bears ample testimony to the truth of the predictions of his Word as given by his servants, the Prophets; and that in language so similar that the student of prophecy and of history will not have any great difficulty in making the application of the prophecy to events of history; and in this connection I would call attention to the fact that from the fifth to the eleventh century are in history called the Dark Ages. And now I ask what symbol could more aptly, and truthfully represent that period than a black horse?

The Roman bishop or pontiff was called Pater, or Papa, father (whence English Pope.) The name pontiff is derived from the Pontifex maximus, the chief officer of the old pagan religion of Rome. Outlines of The World's History by Swinton, p. 248. As we have seen by the fulfilment of the first and second seals, the color of the horse indicates the spirit of the heavens during the period of a seal. See Zech. vi. 4-6. That black is in the Bible used to represent ignorance and superstition. See the following quotations. "Have respect unto the covenant: for the dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty." Psa. lxxiv. 20. "I have not spoken in secret, in a dark place of the earth." Isa. xlv. 19. "Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart." Eph. iv. 18. "Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us for the kingdom of his dear Son." Col. i. 13. "This is your hour, and the power of darkness." Lu. xxii. 53. "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Eph. vi. 12. These conditions indicated by the passages here such as did exist during the Papacy, or during the dark ages. So that the application of the symbol of the black horse to this period is natural and easy.

The Papacy arose at the right time to fulfill the symbols of the third seal, that is after the period of the second seal; and further evidence will be seen when we examine the period of the seals that follow, that is the fourth, fifth and sixth seals. It arose at the right time to fulfill the testimony of Paul in 2 Thes. ii. After the pagan power that hindered, or let, was taken out of the way. Ver. 7.

The Christians having become the ruling party in the empire, are now the subject of the prophecy. The rider on the black horse has "a pair of balances in his hand." The word rendered (a pair of balances) properly means a yoke serving to couple any thing together as a yoke of cattle. Hence it is used to denote the beam of a pair of scales." Barnes notes on the Revelation, p. 180. In Acts xv. 10, the same word is rendered a yoke. "Now, therefore, why tempt ye God, to put a yoke on the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear." In Deut. xxviii. 48, we read, "And he that put a yoke of iron upon thy neck." This prophecy is understood to foretell the tyranny of the Romans over Israel. "At the commencement of the sixteenth century Europe reposed in the deep sleep of spiritual death, under the iron yoke of the papacy." Cunninghame. But in applying this symbol to the papacy, it is not necessary to insist that the word should be rendered a yoke. It can be allowed to remain as given in our Bibles, (a pair of balances) and will apply equally as well to the papacy. "Thou most upright, dost weigh the path of the just." Isa. xxvi. 7. Therefore it is written concerning Belshazar. "Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting." Dan. v. 27. The proper party to weigh or use the balances is God; but the one who sits in the temple, having usurped the prerogative of the Deity, does not hesitate to weigh with his false balances, which is an abomination in the sight of the Lord, and on this account he is called a blasphemer. And we could not expect justice from one riding a black horse. "And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny; and hurt thou not the oil and the wine." Rev. vi. 6. This voice is evidently addressed to the rider on the horse, and is prophetic as to the price that would be charged for that symbolized by the wheat and the barley, but mandatory, not to hurt the oil and the wine. The source of this voice is worthy of careful notice. It is unlike any of the former in that it proceeds from the midst of the four beasts; and as we learn from chap. iv. 6, that they are in the midst, and round about the throne; the conclusion is that it proceeds from the throne, and is the fiat of the Almighty. The language here is highly symbolical, the wheat and barley representing what the apostacy deals out to her followers at a price in money. Thus with feigned words making merchandise of the people. We read in Jer. xxiii. 28, "And he that hath my Word, let him speak my Word faithfully, What is the chaff to the wheat? Saith the Lord." The rider on the black horse professes to deal out the Word of God, and that he alone has the truth. And is commissioned by heaven to bind and loose men from their sins at his pleasure, but we know that his wares are but chaff, and not the true bread. It remains yet to notice the command "Hurt thou not the oil and the wine." Albert Barnes in his notes on this passage, says, "There has been proposed a great variety of interpretations of this passage, and it is by no means easy to determine the true sense." His conclusion is that the order is not directed to the one on the black horse; but that it is given by the Roman government to its citizens, that they should not mutilate their fruit trees, in order to evade the taxes imposed by the government. It is wresting the language from its obvious meaning to say that it is not directed to the rider on the horse. And again, no one not in desperate straits would represent a voice coming from the throne of God to aid the Roman government in the collection of its taxes. The true sense is that the oil and the wine are symbols of the Spirit, and its precious fruits. "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek;.....to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord that he might be glorified." Isa. lxi. 1-4. "I have found David my servant: with my holy oil have I anointed him..... The enemy shall not exact upon him; nor the son of wickedness afflict him." Psa. lxxxix. 20-22. "Touch not mine Anointed, and do my prophets no harm." Psa. cv. 15. The Samaritan poured oil and wine into the wounds of the man that fell among thieves. Lu. x. 34. And again it is written, "How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Spirit and with power." Acts x. 38. The foolish virgins, because they had no oil in their vessels were debarred from an entrance to the marriage. Corn and wine denote temporal good things, and were types of spiritual blessings." Gen. xxvii. 28-37. Wine represents gospel provisions. Isa. xxv. 6, and for consolations, Prov. xxxi. 6, and for the blood of Christ. Mark xiv. 25. Now, if we put aside the literal, and substitute for it, that which it symbolizes we can readily understand the true meaning of the voice from the throne. "Hurt thou not the oil and the wine." In Dan. vii. 25, we learn that the saints were given into the hand of this anti-christian power; but this voice from the throne, from the midst of the four living creatures, R. V., that are symbols of God's providential government, should teach us that he watches to guard from harm those that are anointed by his Holy Spirit, the symbol of which is the holy anointing oil. And although anti-christ has killed the body of thousands of his saints, he cannot destroy the life that is to come.

Obituary.

Mrs. Mary Broadstreet died in Oregon, Illinois, May 10th, 1901, aged 67 years and 8 months. Deceased was a daughter of Jesse and Nancy Conaway. She was born in Morgan Co., Ohio in 1833. She moved with her parents to Illinois when about fourteen years of age. On November 6th, 1853, she was united in marriage to Wesley Broadstreet and has resided in Oregon most of her life. To them were born seven children, four of which, with her husband, have preceded her to the tomb. Three sons are left to mourn the loss of a most loving mother. They are Jesse, who resides in Byron, Ill., Harvey, of St. Charles, Ill., and Daniel of Oregon, with whom the mother has made her home since the death of her husband in 1889. Deceased was baptized into the faith of the Second Advent church about 35 years ago. Since that time she has striven to lead a consistent Christian life. Her joy was in the hope of the coming of Jesus and the time of restitution. She loved to sing the songs of Zion, especially those relating to the coming and kingdom of her Lord and Savior. She had been in very feeble health for a number of years. She is now at rest in Jesus. The funeral was held May 13 at the home of her son Daniel, in Oregon, conducted by Bro. S. J. Lindsay.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Things to Forget.

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your neighbor's faults. Forget the slander you have heard. Forget the temptations. Forget the fault-finding and give a little thought to the cause which provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points which make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels or histories you may have heard by accident, and which if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they are. Blot out as far as possible all the disagreeables of life; they will come, but they will grow larger when you remember them, and the constant thought of the acts of meanness, or, worse still, malice, will only tend to make you more familiar with them. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday; start out with a clean sheet for to-day, and write upon it for sweet memory's sake only those things which are lovely and lovable.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will be held (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent Co., Michigan, commencing Thursday evening, May 30th, 1901, and continue over the following Sunday, (May 31st, June 1st and 2nd). It is the desire of all who have been in the habit of attending these gatherings, that all the churches send delegates with report of their conditions to the meeting. Also that isolated brethren attend or send letter. Now friends, please attend to this little matter, and if you cannot possibly come, send a letter to the secretary at Grand Rapids, Michigan, R. R., No. 1, Burton Ave., and it will be presented to the Conference. If you have some good news of what the Lord has done for you, tell us of it—it will cheer us on our way. Let none remain away through fear of being a burden to those that entertain the Conference, as arrangements will be made to accommodate all that come. All will receive a hearty welcome. Dutton is situated on the Michigan Central R. R., ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids. Jesus is coming, will the Annual Meeting of 1901 be the last? Come, work while the day lasts.

Yours in the hope of the soon coming King,

H. C. HAMMOND, Pres.
EMMA JACKMAN, Sec.

Dear Sisters:

The yearly Conference is almost here and with it comes the annual meeting of the Ladies' Tithing Society. Have we forgotten our Lord's portion this last year and spent it all for our own uses (not needs)? O there are so many ways for the Lord's money to be used, it seems more this year than ever. Will we sacrifice a little for the good of humanity and cause of truth? Make an effort, dear ones, to be present at this meeting; would you go on some pleasure trip, come to the Conference instead. We will have to give an account of how we use his money, may we have a good record to look at. While we wait for the Master let us work.

M. A. WOODWARD, Sec.

Antioch Conference.

The Annual June Meeting and Conference will be held (D. V.) at old Antioch, Marshall Co., Ind., commencing Friday June 7th at 10 o'clock A. M. and continue over Sunday. The churches of this Conference are requested to send delegates. Will meet for Conference business Saturday at 9 o'clock A. M. The meeting will be conducted on the same plan as heretofore. Good speakers are expected to be present, and an enjoyable and profitable meeting is anticipated.

D. T. HALSTEAD, Pres.
E. K. BARNHILL, Sec'y.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 22, 1901.

FRANCE and Portugal are having trouble, the French Ambassador has gone home, and the recall of the Portuguese minister will come soon if matters are not fixed up.

THE apology made by the Sultan of Morocco does not satisfy France yet, and she has sent a messenger to treat direct with him. France did not want such an apology, but the chance to take the country.

THE Church five miles north of this place known as North Salem was struck by lightning a few days since, and damaged somewhat, but not burned. We are informed it will soon be repaired and made fit for meetings again.

BROTHER J. L. Wince preached two very excellent discourses last Sunday in this city. Sister Wince is improving slowly from the effects of the sprain she received last fall. Her Aunt, Mrs. Royse, aged 88 years who is visiting at their home in Pierceton was stricken with paralysis on last Friday, and will not likely live many days, so their home is having its share of trouble that is incident to humanity.

NOTICE the call for Indiana Conference in this paper. It is to be held at old Antioch again. We learn that the house has been repaired and will be ready for the gathering. Some word has been circulated that the building was unfit to be occupied this year, but this is a mistake, as Brother Taber informs us it will be all ready in ample time. Let all the churches send delegates as called for, and all attend and have a good meeting once more.

AGAIN is John Alexander Dowie being advertised by the Chicago papers. The cases that have called for the trouble is a woman who died in the agonies of maternity; her husband, the elders and then Dowie himself offering prayer, but denying any medical care. Another a woman who was badly burned when her home was destroyed. She suffered for ten days with nothing but the prayers to aid her and then died. A number of the "Doctors," elders and other followers have recently deserted him, and now he is defying the coroner, States attorney, Health Board, grand jury and all. There is a lack of any definite law to reach him with, but he may be got at by "public sentiment," as he was in London last year.

The True Foundation.

No structure can be of lasting duration unless it shall rest upon a solid foundation; it is even so with the Temple of Truth, it must rest upon solid basic principles, both of a practical and also of a doctrinal character, nothing else can endure the ravages of time, or the storm's withering blast. 1 Cor. xiii. reveals the only sure base which can last through time and eternity.

We there learn that although the finest and most attractive oratory known to man, or the sweetest notes of angels may be used to make attractive the sublime truths of the gospel, unless the same shall be energized, infused and inspired by love to God, and love to man, even a love which can drop a sympathizing tear with the afflicted, and extend a helping hand to lift up the fallen, and point sinners to the balm for all their woes, such oratory will indeed please for the moment, but pass away like the sweet notes of a trumpet, or the gentle tinkle of a cymbol, and end in "nothing."

Should we possess the power of prophetic insight, and have the ability to penetrate even the deepest things of Holy Scripture, and have an accurate knowledge thereof, together with a faith that may remove mountains of obstacles, unless the same shall be enlivened by love, "nothing" is written under it all as a final result.

We may even dispose of and distribute all our goods to feed the poor, and self-glory and praise of men be the motive which inspired the charity in place of deep-seated love, it also will profit us "nothing" at all.

It is even possible to suffer as a martyr at the stake for proclaiming God's truth, and be inspired to endure the same by some other kind of spirit than the spirit of love. Such martyrdom will culminate in "nothing."

"Longsuffering" is a predominant feature of Scriptural love. It will suffer much without unkind resentment. It is also a sure cure for selfishness because it "seeks not its own." It will not devise schemes, or enter into compacts to seek elevation of self at the expense of another, because Christian love is kind, and because "love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up," such love will most surely take all the puff and swell of the flesh, and of the one so possessed.

True Bible love reaches out further than all this. It roots evil out of all our thoughts. "Thinketh no evil." People who do not think evil, can do no evil, thought must always precede action. There is one more precious stone we must lay in the foundation of the Temple of Truth, which will make it complete, and absolutely indestructible, it is this: love "rejoiceth in the truth." If it "rejoiceth in the truth," it can never rejoice in error, or ever condescend to compromise "the truth" with error. It was love in the first place which projected the plan of salvation, and centered the power of God in the gospel, that people may have the opportunity to apply that power to their eternal well being. A love that rejoices in "the truth," will be an ample safe-guard against either its perversion, or its compromise.

When the Church of God was originally founded, it was expected to be a "pillar," as well as the "ground" or foundation of the Temple of Truth. See 1 Tim. iii. 15: "That thou mayest know how to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the pillar and ground of the truth." This is truly the distinguishing feature between the true Church of God, and the false. The moment a church of God compromises "the truth" with persons or churches whose foundation is tradition, in place of "the truth," that moment it commences to weaken, and loose its love for, and the rejoicing in the truth. It is no longer "a pillar and ground of the truth." The result is, that individual members of such a church, who still retain their love and rejoicing of the truth, cannot find a congenial home in such a church, and are obliged to seek some other home, or stand alone.

As before intimated, the phrase "pillar and ground of the truth," signifies its foundation and support. The phrase "the truth," is otherwise spoken of as "the word of truth," "the Word of the truth of the gospel." Hence, this phrase, "the truth," is not truth in the abstract, but the specific truth contained in the gospel, which the church is expected to be the ground and support of.

It seems difficult for some people to learn this specific truth. The Apostle speaks of some who were "ever learning and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth." They may learn many truths, but this specific truth their mind does not seem able to grasp, comprehend and embrace. We have them today, and they may be found in the membership and fellowship of compromise churches.

The Apostle also speaks of those who "resist the truth, men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith." If they had submitted to the truth, in place of "resisting the truth," they would have lost their corruptness of mind, and would have loved that which they resisted.

Now, under the law none were ever purified unless they first conformed to the law of purification. So under the gospel, the way of purification is no less marked. See 1 Pet. i. 22: "Seeing ye have purified your souls (yourselves) in obeying the truth, unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently."

Purity comes to us in the first place in obeying the truth, in that specific act, the cleansing from sin is assured, but all these who fail to thus obey the truth are still unclean and unpurified. When the mind really perceives "the truth," and that the load of sin is really gone, and gone forever, the tendency is to lift the mind into a higher atmosphere which begets both love to the brethren, who are of like precious faith, and inspires an unyielding fidelity to that truth called "the truth," through which such a happy deliverance has come. It is no wonder such believers become a "pillar and ground of the truth," and find their affinity only with those who have obeyed the same truth. Compromise is only possible when the love of "the truth" begins to weaken.

The sacredness of "the truth," is sought to be preserved in its purity by very strict injunctions against giving any countenance to men who would undermine, compromise or otherwise corrupt "the truth." Modern compromisers are quite flippant with the specious cry, "Have charity," which is quite the reverse to the instructions which come to us in Holy Scriptures, which says: "If any man come unto you and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your houses, nor bid him Godspeed." "I beseech you brethren mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine, and avoid them." "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof, from such turn away." Withdraw from every brother who walks out of order, and not according to instruction which received from us." "What communion hath light with darkness?" "Come out from among them and be ye separate." Those who desire to be in harmony with God's purposes must pass the line of demarkation between Old Babylon and the called out ones.

The spirit of love so beautifully set forth in 1 Cor. xiii., is in perfect accord with the above citations of Holy Scripture, which demands that a sharp line of distinction should be maintained between those who have obeyed "the truth," and those who have not. Now, why should we rejoice in "the truth?" because, it is "the truth" which makes us free, and delivers us from the guilt and bondage of sin. This being the case, love would desire that the truth should be preserved in its purity, that others, besides ourselves might enjoy the blessing of emancipation from the bondage of sin. The tendency of compromise is to obscure truth and to gradually drift away from foundation principles, and the truth becomes hid under modern charity rubbish.

God in his almighty wisdom and love has conceived of, and revealed to man a plan, or system of truth, to save them from the dreadful consequences of sin, and will never submit to have that system of truth revised, or in any way changed to suit the thinkings and desires of fleshly man.

It is not out of harmony with the spirit of love to rebuke sharply those who even in a small degree should attempt to compromise or change the message of life. That message is perfect in all its parts, and needs no Doctors of Divinity to perform any surgical operations thereon.

W. H. WILSON.

Question No. 4.

"Was he ever acknowledged to be the Son in reality until after he was raised from the dead?"

Yes. At his baptism God declared him to be his Son, again on the mount of transfiguration in the hearing of Peter, James and John. Can it be possible that any intelligent man or woman who reads the Scriptures to overlook or fail to be impressed with the direct, emphatic and even miraculous manner in which Jesus is declared to be the Son of God, not after but before his resurrection? Jesus himself was careful to make manifest his sonship. He said to the Jews, whose Son is the Messiah? They replied David's. How then did David in Spirit call him Lord? It is certainly evident that his conversation on this occasion was for the purpose of showing that he was not only Son of David, but also Son of God. The fact that he was Jehovah's Son made him David's Lord. Why ask the question, whose Son is he, if not for the purpose of preparing the way for making known something they did not apprehend, or believe. They, the scribes, once pharisees, knew that the Messiah was to be of the Seed of David, but that he was also to be the Son of God, was an element of the truth they overlooked, notwithstanding the fact it was stated in the covenant made with David.

Peter's good confession brings the whole truth to light, "Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God." The pharisees affirmed the truth in part, while the Apostle declared the whole. Messiahship and Sonship are inseparable, they stand or fall together. If Jesus was not the Son of God in a sense peculiar to him alone, then he was not the Messiah. Joseph, the husband of Mary, was of the house of David, but he was neither the Christ nor the Son of God, as contemplated in the confession of Peter. "Upon this rock," that is the truth concerning Jesus, as Peter declared, "will I build my church and the gates of hades shall not prevail against it." Here then we discover the foundation of eternal life, the rock that defies death, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." If we desire safety let us stand upon this rock, unmoved by the winds of doctrine and the vain speculations of men who halt and hesitate to believe the whole truth. Jesus was in reality the Son of God before his resurrection. He was the Son of God before he entered the death state, also while in hades he was God's holy one, and he was the same after he awoke from the slumber of death. His three days of sleep and unconsciousness did not change his relationship to the Father, and his resurrection followed as a necessary result or fruit of that relationship.

There is no lack of testimony to prove all that is affirmed in the foregoing statements, I can hardly conceive it necessary to refer to all the various Scripture texts, as they will naturally suggest themselves to the reader's mind. Two or three are sufficient, and these will be introduced. In Heb. i. 1-3, "God who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, and on account of whom he made the ages." Jesus was a prophet, but also more than a prophet. The fathers in times past were taught by the prophets, but in the last days of Judah's commonwealth, God spake to them through a Son. Jesus taught this lesson in a parable, in which the nation of Israel is represented as God's vineyard. He sent his servants, the prophets, to receive the fruit of his vineyard, but as they mistreated the prophets, he last of all sent the heir, his Son, thinking that they would surely honor the heir, but instead thereof they cast him out, and killed him. The reader may with profit ask himself on what ground could Jesus say he was the heir of the vineyard? It is not difficult to see that sonship is the basis of heirship. He was the heir because he was the son, and the Son abideth in the house forever. His being of the seed of David did not constitute him the heir, because David at best was only a tenant, not the owner. As the son of David he could inherit only what David through divine favor possessed, but as the Son of God, the vineyard was his. Their killing the heir did not thwart the purpose of the Deity, for death as I have said did not change his relationship. He was the heir before he was crucified, and he was the same when raised from the dead. Inasmuch therefore as he was the heir in reality, he was the Son in reality.

Again in Rom. viii. 3, the Apostle writes, "What the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sin's flesh and for sin condemned sin in the flesh." It is possible that the author of the question at the head of this article entertains the idea that Jesus could not be the Son of God until glorified with immortality, that is become spirit in nature, incorruptible, deathless. Be this as it may it is only necessary to call attention to the fact that the Apostle declares Jesus to be the Son in reality in the days of his flesh, before he was crucified and raised from the dead. There was something the law could not do, and this something, Jesus, "God's own Son" did, when he came in the likeness of sinful flesh. He condemned sin in the flesh by righteousness, which had not been done under the Mosaic law. Moses as a servant was faithful in all his house, but Jesus, the Son, came as the "heir over his own house, whose house are we." But then one will say we believe that Jesus was the Son of God "morally and legally," but what do they mean by the words "morally and legally"? It can hardly be regarded as more than a verbal conclusion that conceals the real truth. An explanation is needed, which I have not been able to find in the papers and pamphlets that have come to hand.

In conclusion permit me to ask you to consider:

1. That Adam was the son of God by creation out of dust, and he was of the earth—a corruptible body.

2. Jesus was the Son of God by creation, out of flesh and blood, or as Paul writes, made of a woman, a little lower than the angels, in the likeness of sinful flesh.

3. In the first instance the woman was out of the man, "flesh of his flesh, and bone of his bone," but in the second instance the order is reversed. The second Adam is made out of the substance of a woman, and was emphatically the Seed of the woman, who will destroy the serpent's work.

I cannot say how Deity created the first Adam,—details have not been revealed—secret things belong to God, but things revealed belong to us and our children. It is written he "garnished the heavens by his Spirit," and that life is sustained by his free spirit. By his Spirit he can create living organizations out of dust. If therefore, Adam was the Son of God in reality, as we are compelled to believe, then there is no necessity of stumbling at Jesus as the Son of God in the days of his flesh.

The remaining questions are in line with those already noticed, and these articles will be concluded with a few reflections on the subject as a whole.

Editor Restitution:

We have again a little news to write you of the whereabouts and work of Bro. D. M. Hudler. He is still practicing magnetic healing in Vancouver, with considerable success, occasionally preaching at Lake Shore, four miles north of Vancouver, where there is a prosperous organization of the Church of God. Two recent sermons I will make especial mention of. On Sunday April 14th, Bro. Hudler preached at Lake Shore on "Daniel's interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream." Dan. ii. The subject was ably handled to the satisfaction of all. Then May 5th Bro. Hudler again preached to our class, taking for his subject "A study in Bible chronology," showing that we lack only 17 years until we have completed 6,000 years from the creation, reckoning in his dates the 46 years, during the deliverance out of Egypt, which justly belongs with the period of the Judges. Mr. Hudler considers the inserting of the 46 years, which terminates the 6,000 years in 1872, as entirely a mistake. He then showed by Dan viii. 14, that we are 66 years from the cleansing of the sanctuary, judging that the sanctuary must be built and preparations made before the cleansing. We with Bro. Hudler feel convinced that from this fact and the drawing to a close of the 6,000 years, we are within 30 years of the coming of Messiah. Our church sends greeting to the other churches that we feel we know in faith though not in person, and hoping to hear from you all through the columns of THE RESTITUTION, I remain your sister in Christ,

EDNA MILLS, Sec'y of Lake Shore Class.

Rocking Horse Christians.

There is no such thing as stationary state in human experience. We must advance or recede. Everything upon the earth moves, everything is under an impulse, and if the impulse is not always upward it must be downward. There may be continual motion that is not progress. Rowland Hill, entering the house of one of his congregation, saw a child on a rocking-horse. "Dear me!" he exclaimed, "how wonderfully like some Christians. There is motion but no progress." The rocking-horse type of spiritual life is still characteristic of too many church members of the present day.—The Pulpit.

Some people are greatly bothered about evolution. They cannot understand it. Well, it is very simple. It is this way: Way back in the beginning, a few particles of something began rolling, and they rolled and rolled until they got life into them. Then those particles became a tadpole; then the tadpole became a bullfrog; at last the bullfrog became a monkey; finally the monkey evoluted into an infidel—and the infidel is continually boasting of his ancestry! That is evolution in a nutshell.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. C. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and post-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

"Our Lord teaches us as to very little things in order that we may know and feel that nothing is too little to be ordered by our Father, nothing too little in which to see his hand, nothing which touches our souls too little to be done for him. Each day adds some line, making thee more or less like him, more or less capable of his love, fitter for greater or less glory, to be nearer him, or to be less near, or to be away from him for ever."

"The truths of the Bible are like gold in the soil. Whole generations walk over it, and know not what treasures are hidden beneath. So centuries of men pass over the Scriptures, and know not what riches lie under the feet of their interpretation. Sometimes, when they discover them, they call them new truths. One might as well call gold, newly dug, new gold."

Poetry.

The Spring Awakening.

The little gray squirrel is rubbing his eyes,
For his sleep was long and sound,
And the woodchuck peeps at the glowing skies
From his chamber underground.
Old Brain is shambling from out his den
With a dazed and stupid air,
And song-birds are flying back again,
A message of spring to bear.
The butterfly crawls from its chrysalis,
The beetles rouse from their nap,
And blossoms awake at the south wind's kiss
And the rain-drops gentle tap.
From their icy fetters the streamlets leap,
The woodlands with music ring
All things are awak'ning from winter sleep,
To welcome the merry spring.

The Ceremonies of the Bible.

Paul says: "The law was a shadow of good things to come."

The only system of perfect living, both for time and eternity, with just claim to Divine origin is that intrusted to the Hebrew nation. God's chosen people. The high physical, mental and moral superiority of the race attest the fitness of the system to best meet the needs of this life.

The Jew, as an example in prophecy fulfilled, points with unerring testimony forward to the glories yet to be revealed.

All the resources of nature and human associations are brought into requisition to furnish types, symbols and figurative illustrations for the purest idealism which lies embedded in the Jewish religion.

From behind the most exacting form of ritualism shines forth the highest and most exalted spiritual possibilities. All ceremonies carry a two-fold interpretation; the first of the earth earthy, the second looking forward to the life beyond.

In our imperfect study of the oft time hidden meaning of the Ceremonial Law, it seems a barren, lifeless routine of washings, cleansings and bloodshed. But when we consider that, "The law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ," that all the rites, customs and habits of home and national life had their counterpart in the new dispensation, each shadowing forth some beautiful thought, some spiritual grace or loveliness, or more often some grand truth in the far-reaching redemptive plan, then for us as with Israel the Shekinah of glory overshadows the altar, God speaks out of the burning bush, the tables of stone are imbued with life; as Moses and Elias on the Mount of Transfiguration, the mighty voice speaks out of the whirlwind, angels of God descend the ladder whispering comforting messages to the faithful, flowers of beauty bloom on the chosen rod and living waters gush from the smitten rock.

The whole structure of the Jewish Religion is based upon the one vital principle, man's absolute and ever present dependence upon an over-ruling Providence, sure to reward faithfulness and swift to take vengeance on disobedience.

The ceremonies kept this principle constantly in mind. It was made the more impressive because God talked face to face with them through his messengers. There are sufficient hints thoughout the Bible to warrant the statement that priestly offices were in existence from the beginning, even before the calling of Abraham and the law given to Moses. Cain and Abel offered a sacrifice. Melchizedek was a priest of Salem, a type of Christ, without beginning of days.

So far back toward the dawn of history do the rites and ceremonies of the Hebrews extend that research and comparison lead to the conclusion that all the ritualism of oriental nations both ancient and modern are corrupted forms of the Hebrew ceremonies. Idolatries, sacrifices and rites from which the living presence is lost and the unanswering gods having eyes see not, and having ears hear not the cry of their ignorant worshipers.

Through contact with these perverted forms the Israelites in turn became corrupted and we find them unable themselves to distinguish between the outward form and the inner beauty of their service. Their whole history is the record of continual struggle between idolatry and the worship of the "Living God," in other words between ritualism and spiritualism, of substituting the form for the substance, the sacrifice for that which it represents, the symbol and type for that which they foreshadowed.

The superiority of the Hebrew system is especially noticeable in the domestic relations.

After his duty to God as shown in the first four commandments, duty to family is placed second. The relations of man's intercourse with man comprise the remainder of the decalogue but are placed third in position. Family ties are superior to national.

The beauty of the home life of the Hebrews is in strong contrast with that of other ancient nations.

In Greece and Rome the worship of many gods led to the most debasing forms of idolatry and consequently immorality.

In Greece home life was unknown, the men going elsewhere for agreeable society, the ignorance of the wives making them unfit mental companions for their husbands.

In Rome outside relations absorbed the attention. Home ties were swallowed up in duty to state.

Two types of women prevailed. Cornelia, hard, stern and noble—Olivia, shrewd, intriguing and ignoble. No place for Rachel refusing to be comforted for the loss of her children.

Among the Hebrews women were ever held in highest respect, family life the all of earthly pleasure. This principle observed has been the one great factor in enabling them to remain through all the centuries of bondage and oppression, the marvel of the world, a distinct and separate people among the nations in the midst of whom they dwell but with whom they do not commingle.

The few glimpses we are getting today behind the curtain of darkness that obscures the early home life of the Egyptians, Babylonians and Assyrians convince us that their domestic relations were very degraded. Some of their practices only to be mentioned in general terms.

Out of all the chaos of confusion, of immorality and degrading ceremonial rites, arises the beautiful typical and inspiring ceremonies of Israel carrying with them the seal of approval in the immediate answer to their prayers, when in accord with the prescribed form and in harmony with the Divine will.

From the rising of the sun until the evening shadows enveloped the earth God was in their midst. Every act of the day in some way reminded them of his presence and their obligation to him in purity of thought and character. Thoughts of God must be interwoven with every phase of private or public life.

In order to keep this uppermost the cleansings for ceremonial uncleanness were instituted, which would necessitate at least a formal remembrance of spiritual obligation. The losing of caste, the humiliating obloquy sure to follow on any remissness was a constant spur to the memory. That Israel wandered away and was lost and that Judah divided and went astray was not the fault of the system, but the failure of the Hebrews to adhere to it.

Articles of food were unclean, utensils were unclean, touching the carcass of an unclean animal made the person coming in contact with it unclean. Even the vessel defiled by contact must be immersed in water and reckoned unclean until the even precluding its use until the next day. Earthen vessels, pots and vens were broken down to prevent further use under certain stipulated defilements. Even the water used in cleansing a defiled article was supposed to render unclean everything with which it comes in contact, until the proper rites were accomplished. In the smallest details a strict compliance with the law was obligatory.

It is not within the province of my subject to touch upon the sanitary phase of these ceremonies but I wish to notice somewhat the deeper moral and spiritual significance.

That touching a dead creature, eating or sleeping in a house ceremonially unclean, touching an unclean man, or the bed and clothing, or even being spit upon should have been pronounced unclean, as some suppose simply as sanitary measures is unreasonable.

While offending good taste millions of people have been through past ages and are at the present time constantly submitting to these forbidden practices with no apparent physical discomfort.

They no doubt served the immediate purpose of keeping the body pure but they emphasized daily the importance of purity of character and spiritual obligation to the Great Jehovah.

In the 44th and 45th verses of the 11th chapter of Leviticus this principle is stated plainly as the all important reason for the formal ordinances. "For I am the Lord your God. Ye shall therefore sanctify yourselves and ye shall be holy; for I am holy.....For I am the Lord that brought you up out of the land of Egypt to be your God." This God walked with them as an ever present helper, the most trivial act carried the mind heavenward to acknowledge their absolute dependence, and the soul found an outlet in songs and praise for his beneficence.

It is doubtful whether the Jews ever fully appreciated or understood the symbolic meaning of the great portion of the ceremonial law. We can look backward now through the New Testament references with the knowledge of the prophecies fulfilled, with a much clearer vision than they could in that early dawn of the world's history.

Scholars are of the opinion that this is particularly so with regard to circumcision, the rite most strenuously observed among the Jews up to the present time. Modern Jews may neglect all the requirements with regard to unclean food and all ceremonial defilements, but this one ceremony never. Still it is not recorded that they knew its hidden import farther than an acknowledgement of the covenant made with Abraham that through him should all the nations of the earth be blessed, and that the land of Canaan should be given to his seed for an everlasting possession.

In Genesis xvii. 9, God said: "Thou shalt keep my covenant, therefore, thou and thy seed after thee in their generation." The 13th verse reads: "My covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant."

The keeping of the Sabbath was not only for physical rest but for spiritual communion with God, and was typical of the eternal Sabbath of rest.

In the cleansing of the mother after the birth of a child the family dependence on the Lord was acknowledged. The difference in time required between the male and female child supposed to typify the difference between Christ and the Church. In the presentation of the first-born was established a ceremonial to remind them of their deliverance from Egyptian bondage. "And it shall be when thy son asketh thee in time to come saying, What is this? thou shalt say unto him, By strength of hand the Lord brought us out from Egypt, from the house of bondage."

The purpose of the Ceremonial Law as a constant reminder to passing generations and an effective means of keeping alive the memory of Power that guided them through all their meanderings is concisely expressed in the 78th Psalm, "He established a testimony in Jacob and appointed a law in Israel which he commanded our fathers that they should make them known to their children, that the generation to come might know them, even the children which should be born who should arise and declare them to their children, that they might set their hope in God, and not forget the works of God, but keep his commandments."

The ceremonies were a connecting link between the history of providential care and the prophecy of future redemption through Christ.

All the sacrifices in some way symbolize the upbuilding of Christian life and New Testament ideals. All denote approval by God only by purity of character.

The four principal offerings were the burnt offerings, sin offerings, trespass offerings and the peace offerings.

The burnt offering must be a male from the herd or flock, a turtle dove or pigeon, the body cut up and burnt on the altar after the blood had been sprinkled about. The creatures blood rung out by the side of the altar is typical of Christ's blood. Also the giving up of life. The blood is the life.

Without the shedding of blood there could be no remission of sin. The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

What a fitting type these beautiful feathered creatures were of the innocent, harmless One, through whose stripes all mankind are healed.

The body cloven a symbol of Christ's broken body, memoralized in the new disposnation by the communion service.

The sin offering differed from the burnt offering in having the blood sprinkled and poured upon the altar and under it, and having only the fat burned upon the altar.

The trespass offering is the exception in permitting the victim to be selected from the females being on account of special rather than general sin no doubt was more efficacious, and not as some commentators say because she was only permitted in a subordinate place.

The burnt offering signified atonement while the sin offering meant self consecration.

The peace offering taken from the herd or the flock was simply an expression of praise and gratitude.

The ceremonial of the cleansing of the leper is one of the most impressive rites pointing to Christ. The leper was kept afar off. He was brought nigh by the blood of Christ.

The two birds may each represent a different phase of the mission of love. One was slain, the other went to heaven.

The leprosy was a type of corruption. "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption."

How forcibly we can see the significance of the ceremonies on the great day of atonement, when Aaron, the high priest made sin offerings for himself and the people, sprinkling the blood on the mercy seat in the most holy place, and after confessing over the scape-goat sent it away into the wilderness.

This atonement or being set right again through a victim instead of the original offender is a perfect type of the vicarious suffering of Christ, who bore our sins making atonement on the cross as the scape-goat bore the sins of Israel. The burden was removed by confession, so by confession of faith in Jesus will the burden of sin and sorrow be lifted from our hearts.

The ashes of the red heifer sprinkled with water upon the unclean person as a token of purification was another type of Christ's blood. "How much more shall the blood of Christ who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God."

The whole structure of the tabernacle and its belongings are typical of future developments. Only a few of them can be noted here for lack of time.

The tabernacle is itself a type of Christ the "true" and "perfect tabernacle." In Corinthians the figure is carried farther and our bodies are compared to a tabernacle and temple, the first to be taken down, the second to be kept holy. It was the way to the Divine presence. A lesson in looking after the inner and not the outer adornments.

The plain badger skin covering represented the unassuming manner of Christ's first advent. "His visage was so marred more than any man and his form more than the sons of men."

But the inside was in striking contrast, being richly adorned with gold and silver and embroidery. Christ is "the chiefest among ten thousand and altogether lovely."

The brazen altar which bore the sacrificial fires, the fire itself a type of purification, the frankincense, praise.

The lavar a type of the Word and Spirit of God to cleanse our consciences. The water a symbol of cleansing. "Christ also loved the church and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the Word."

Then the altar of incense, prayer, the table of shewbred, the golden candlestick and the veil before the holy of holies have their counterpart. Christ is the Light of the world, the curtain of the flesh veils the holy of holies into which Christ the High Priest alone has entered to make intercession for us. As the countenance of Moses shown with the radiance of heavenly glory when he came down from the Mount, so will his countenance beam with immortal beauty when he returns from the invisible presence to bring the blessing to those waiting for his return.

This beautiful veil of the temple was rent in twain when Jesus was crucified.

The ark represented Jesus because it contained the mercy seat, and the cherubim above it. Inside were the golden rod that budded, type of the resurrection, the pot of manna type of incorruption. "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna."

The tables of the covenant contained the whole law of Israel in a sense. In the regeneration to be written on the fleshly tables of the heart.

The garments of the priest were full of typical meaning.

The scarlet type of sin indicating that Christ took upon him our nature for the purpose, "Though our sins be as scarlet they shall be white as snow, though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." Blueness indicated healing. "The blueness of a wound cleanseth away evil." The purple sign of royalty. They put upon Christ a purple robe in derision but the time will come when he will reign in righteousness as King over the whole earth.

The fine linen typified righteousness. The ephod a memorial of the twelve tribes. The breastplate of judgment and each of the twelve precious stones denoted some spiritual type. The mitre a crown of righteousness. The plate of pure gold Holiness to the Lord.

In the daily life and ordinances duty to God and family were predominant, but public duties in connection with the assembled multitude formed no small part in the development of character. Feast days and typical celebrations were instituted. These sacrifices appropriate to the many were conducted with solemn dignity and ceremony, befitting an act to be immediately followed by Divine approval or condemnation.

The annual feasts developed the social side of life and prevented the dull routine of domestic duties from stunting the faculties.

They were arranged in such manner as to give advantages of new scenes, associations and climate for the holiday, as they came together from long distances to the divinely appointed place.

Three times in the year were these annual meetings held, each marking a different fiscal year. These were times of rejoicing and a good time in general. Times for meeting distant relations for renewing old friendships and making new ties.

They were not a repetition of tiresome monotonous formalities, as is shown in Deut. xvi. 14, "Thou shalt rejoice in thy feast, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy man servant, and thy maid servant, and the Levite, the stranger and the fatherless and the widow that are within thy gates." What a beautiful picture they must have presented in their rich and striking oriental garb, and what a setting for romance, poetry and tragedy of the human heart as they poured down from the winding mountain slopes, rested in the sunny valleys and halted with their sacrificial victims by the rushing streams. What glorious anthems rose to heaven as the throng became more and more dense as they neared the place of meeting, the greetings more frequent and the excitement more deep and thrilling until with the accompaniment of sweet toned instruments a joyful shout arose from the assembled multitude in the spirit of the song of David, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord. Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem. Whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord, unto the testimony of Israel, and give thanks unto the name of the Lord," or again, "O God, my heart is fixed: I will sing and give praise, even with my glory. Awake psaltery and harp: I myself will awake early. I will praise thee, O Lord among the people; and I will sing praises to thee among the nations. For thy mercy is great above all the earth."

The first of those feasts, the Passover is very striking in its two-fold significance:—first to commemorate the historical phase of the deliverance. Giving an almost incontrovertible proof of the literal truthfulness of the Mosaic record. The manner of its celebration being in accord with the history.

The eating of the whole animal with unleavened bread, with the clothing adjusted as if for a hurried journey was a telling object lesson of the incidents preceding the flight from Egypt. "It is the sacrifice of the Lord's Passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, and smote the Egyptians and delivered our armies." The two young bullocks, one ram, and seven lambs as a burnt offering or type of general acknowledgement of man's sinful nature and the one goat for a sin-offering or special sin atonement all point toward the passion of Christ.

The blood sprinkled on the door-posts brought protection from the avenging angel. "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin." Christ himself acknowledged this similitude when he said the "Passover would be fulfilled in the kingdom of God." Paul says: "Christ is our Passover, sacrificed for us." The Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world. So Christ fulfills the sin-offering.

The Feast of First Fruits was founded upon a natural element in which it differed from the series of events which clustered around the Passover, its foundation resting upon miracle.

When the grains and fruits of the earth had come to perfection through the Divine blessings of fruitful soil, rain and sunshine, man was to gather in the bounties thus provided with feasting, joyful songs, and praise. It was a prolonged festival. "Seven weeks shalt thou number unto thee; begin to number the seven weeks from such time as thou beginnest to put the sickle to the corn. And thou shalt keep the feast of weeks unto the Lord thy God with a tribute of a free-will offering of thine hand, which thou shalt give unto the Lord thy God, according as the Lord thy God hath blessed thee." This continued "until thou hast gathered in thy corn and wine."

This feast also had its inner significance. It was not only to acknowledge the bounties of nature but the historical phase was not wanting. We need not draw upon imagination and analogy in this instance as the recitative furnished for this occasion embodies the historical reference.

"A Syrian ready to perish was my father; and he went down into Egypt and sojourned there with a few and became there a nation, great, mighty and populous; and the Egyptians evil entreated us and afflicted us, and laid upon us hard bondage, and when we cried unto the Lord God of our fathers, the Lord heard our voice and looked on our affliction and our labor and our oppression. And the Lord brought us forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand and with an out-stretched arm and with great terribleness and with signs and with wonders. And he hath brought us into this place and hath given us this land, even a land that floweth with milk and honey. And, now, behold I have brought the first-fruits of the land which thou, O Lord, hast given me. And thou shalt set it up before the Lord thy God, and thou shalt worship the Lord thy God."

The first offering of the tabernacle service connected with this feast was a sheaf to be waved before the Lord. The waving typical of active service. This was followed by the offering of a lamb without blemish, both to be offered on the day after the first Sabbath of the harvest season.

At the end of the seven weeks when the whole harvest was gathered in they brought two loaves made of new flour with leaven. These were also wave offerings and with seven lambs one young bullock and two rams were offered as a burnt offering. These were accompanied by meat and drink offerings and followed by the usual kid of goats as a sin offering.

The double allegory in this service is very beautiful. The sheaf representing God's bounty, the waving active service in his work, the tabernacle the work to be in his appointed place.

Why the bloodshed? Again, the animal should be without blemish but always pointing forward to the cross. The offering of the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

But so many practical lessons may be made from this shadow of Christ's mission. They must get remission through the proper sacrifice. Remission through Christ as the ante-type, must be obtained under the Divinely appointed way. "I am the way, the truth and the life. No man cometh unto the Father but by me."

The implied reference to this ritual is manifold in New Testament writings of Christ. "Christ the first fruits. The first fruits of them that slept." Thus referring to the resurrection. The first fruits of the great harvest of the dead."

The feast of ingathering, the last of the feasts, was the most rigorous of all. As the year advanced toward its close, typical of the cycle of life or perfected character the duties and the obligations became more earnest and impressive. A whole hour might be well spent in considering the sacred number seven in connection with this feast and its symbolic meaning. It began at the beginning of the seventh month, denoting completeness. The different elements of the two preceding feasts were included here. Commemoration of their deliverance—Thanksgiving for natural bounties; but these thoughts seem to diminish in importance now and the duty of personal devotion and spiritual communion takes precedence.

While the different sacrifices are offered as before, the burnt offerings, meat and drink offerings diminishing. The seven lambs remain, typical of the fact that the lamb-like nature is rather to increase than diminish. The ceremonies ended with the one goat, a shadow of the sin-offering offered once for all on Calvary.

After the human strength represented by the bullock, and dignity represented by the ram and the goat, man's willfulness all disappears, humility and resignation to the Divine will increase in the sevenfold offerings of the Lamb.

MRS. PHEBE THOMPSON-WILLEY.

Will any brother living in or near Denver, Col. please send me their address? I wish to address them concerning parties living near Denver, who are anxious to obey the gospel by putting on Christ in the ordinance of baptism.

Adrian, Mich. L. C. CHASE.

To Illinois brethren in special and all brethren in general:

Recently the Building Committee of the Illinois State Conference made a call through these columns for aid in raising a fund to build a suitable Conference building—not to use as a place of worship—but a building in which delegates may be entertained while in attendance at the Conference. The church in Oregon is large enough for all the meetings, having a seating capacity of about two hundred. Many generously answered this first call and the committee desires in this general way to thank all who have subscribed not only their money but also their words of encouragement. To them this second call is not directed, for we believe you have done well your part. We have now about $275.00 on hand. We need yet, at the very lowest estimate, $75.00. To put up a suitable building with lumber at its present price, we should have $400.00. This item is written to invite any who have not yet subscribed to do so in any amount, however small. Send remittance to the chairman of the committee who will promptly receipt for the same. Time and space forbid discussion as to the merits of locating the Conference permanently. Suffice it to say that we believe that when the plan is once in working order, all will be pleased with it. Building Committee consists: S. J. Lindsay, Chairman, Oregon, Ill.; J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Ill.; E. F. Gesin, Forreston, Ill.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

F. L. AUSTIN.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

The Indian and the Northwest.

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 115 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half-tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battleground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1600. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library. Price, 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.—May 25.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the who'e, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

Corbaley, who has been selected by the Church as an Evangelist.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Poetry.

Dove of the Wilderness, Dove of the Waters.

Dove of the Wilderness, Dove of the Waters,
Whom Noah o'er the billows for guidance sent forth,
Come with the olive-branch, ever-blest token,
That God has withdrawn from the sinner his wrath.

Spirit of purity, soul-winning gladness,
When David of Judah with weeping recalled,
Come in thy holy, white garments of virtue,
Restoring the contrite by blood-guilt appalled.

Dove of the Wilderness, Dove of the Waters,
Whose comfort was Israel's, when Ezra arose,
Come in thy pleasantness wiping the tear-drops
Of captives, returning from Babylon woes.

Spirit of power in double anointing,
Whose presence Elisha for service besought,
Come as at Pentecost, flashing thy fire tongue,
Till Christians St. Peter's great mantle have caught.

Dove of the Wilderness, Dove of the Waters,
Who rested on Jesus by Jordan's lone wave,
Come in thy mellowness laden with favor,
To teach us with kindness the Christless to save.

Spirit of prophecy, solemn, eternal,
To John on the Island of Patmos revealed,
Come in thy visions of splendor and judgment
Till Christ to the world is in glory revealed.
—Mark Levy, a Hebrew Christian, in The People, the Land and the Book.

Selections.

The Destination of the Jews.

"Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Luke xxi. 24.

"Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved." Romans xi. 25, 26.

In submitting a few remarks on the Destination of the Jews, I have selected these two passages, not because they are the fullest predictions on this momentous matter, but because they are among the latest. When you say that Israel will yet be restored and converted, and quote in support of your position Old Testament predictions, their force is often evaded on no other pretext but because they are found in the Old Testament, as if the Old Testament were not as authoritative as the New—or as if the Old were all fulfilled and finished the instant the New began. But leaving the Old Testament entirely out of view, the destination of the Jews might be sufficiently gathered from what Christ and his inspired apostles have told us. Had we no Scriptures but Gospels and Epistles, it would be extremely probable that the house of Judah should fill their old seats again, and absolutely certain that they should become the conspicuous favored people of God once more.

However, I confess that I have no desire thus to narrow the field of presumption and proof. I would read these New Testament prophecies in the light of the Old, and fill up these more recent hints from the ampler information of earlier predictions. I would, on the one hand, learn more fully what God's purpose is, and on the other would ascertain that this purpose is not yet fulfilled—in other words, that it is God's purpose still. The New Testament allusions to Israel's last return are cursory and few, but it is enough that there are allusions. If you get a letter from a friend in India telling that he proposes to take a journey home, and fixing the very time of his intended departure, describing the route he intends to pursue, the length of time he is likely to tarry at such a place, and the business which he hopes to transact at such another place, and the time when he hopes to arrive in Britain; should his next dispatch relate to some affair which has occurred in the meanwhile, you would not expect that this second letter should repeat all the details of its predecessor. It would be enough if he did not intimate any change of plan—it would be more than enough if he made the most casual reference to the subject; if he said, for instance, "When I take my journey homewards," or, "as soon as I set out;" however slight the allusion, you would know to expect him still. And when the Psalms, and Isaiah, and Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, and Daniel, and Micah, and Zechariah, and Malachi; when the Old Testament is full of Judah's restoration and conversion—of all the accompanying signs and subsequent effects, it is enough for us if Luke, and Paul, and John—if the New Testament penmen writing on another errand and a new emergency, do not supercede or disallow the predictions of their predecessors. It is more than enough, when I find by frequent allusions and explicit statements that they assume and sanction the whole.

Abstaining from all speculations regarding the period when, and the agencies by which the result is to be brought about, it will be the object of this lecture to show—

I. That the Jews are to be restored to their own land; and—

II. That they are to be converted.

In other words, the destination of the Jews includes their restoration and conversion.

I. It is God's purpose to restore the Jews. "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, till the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled;" in other words, when the Gentile lease is out, Jerusalem shall be trodden down no more.

When a great city is overthrown, and the first outburst of sorrow dies away, it is either quietly rebuilt and re-occupied, or forsaken and forgotten. In either case it is only one generation which suffers. If a new city rise on the ruins of the old, the conquerors and the conquered usually blend more or less together, and in some future age they live promiscuously and rejoice in common on a soil which their fathers moistened with one another's blood. What modern Roman lays it the least to heart that the grass waves in theatres where his forefathers sate the long summer day, and laughed, and cheered and shouted: or, who feels it personally that the bramble grows out of the riven altar on which Romulus or Numa laid the struggling victim? The chain of identity is broken, and the new race is clean severed from the old. If, on the other hand, no new city be suffered to arise, if the shock which overturned its walls have also dispersed its people, like the shattered fragments of the avalanche, they soon melt and are lost atoms in the stream of some mightier population. Where is the bosom in which Troy awakens the faintest throb or patriotic feeling? What nation pays its pilgrimage to the swampy sites of Nineveh and Babylon? And what emotion beyond a vague and impersonal sadness, a general impression of the melancholy, a sense of dreariness without any touch of tenderness, is ever called forth among the broken shafts of Palmyra, and empty rock-nests of Petra? Where are the people who have the hereditary right to sit down among such ruins and recognising emblems of departed glory, the right to weep because their "house is left unto them desolate?" Where are the old inhabitants? They were not exterminated, and yet they have vanished. Merged in the nations, and mutually commingled, there is no precipitate which can decompose them and bring them out in their original distinctness again. The house is desolate; but no one feels that the house is his, so no one mourns its desolation. But there is a city whose case is quite peculiar. Captured, ravaged, burnt, razed to the foundation, dispeopled, carried captive, its deported citizens sold in slavery, and forbidden by several penalties to visit their native seats again; though eighteen centuries have passed, and strangers still tread its hallowed soil, that city is still the magnet of many hearts, and awakens from time to time pangs of as keen emotion as when its fall was recent. Ever and anon, and from all the winds of heaven Zion's exiled children come to visit her, and with eyes weeping sore bewail her widowhood. No city was ever honored thus. None else receives pilgrimages of affection from the fiftieth generation of its outcast people. None else after centuries of dispersion could at the first call gather beneath its wings the whole of its wide-wandering family. None else has possessed a spell sufficient to keep in remotest regions, and in the face of the mightiest inducements, its people still distinct; and none but itself can now be repeopled with precisely the same race which left it nearly two thousand years ago. The reason of this anomaly must be sought, not in Jerusalem, but in the purposes of God.

Here are two familiar facts: The Jews are still distinct, and to the Jews Jerusalem still is dear. What is the final cause—the Divine reason for these singular facts? Why, when all other scattered nations mix and mingle—why is it that, like naphtha in a fountain, or amber floating on the sea, this people, shaken hither and thither, are found, after all their tossings and jumblings, separate and immiscible? And why, again, when every other forsaken city after an age or two is forgotten by its people—why has Jerusalem such strong affinity for its outcast population, that the city refuses any other permanent inhabitants, and the old inhabitants refuse any other settled home? Why these anomalous and mutually adapting facts, unless God has some purpose with the place and the people, and unless the place and the people have yet something to do with one another?

This presumption becomes an absolute certainty when we consult the sure Word of prophecy; and, in order not to confuse your ideas and oppress your memories with a multitude of quotions, I would by way of specimen select the following three:—

"In that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign to the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek; and his rest shall be glorious. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea. And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth."

"For I will take you from among the heathen, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land. Then I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean; from all your filthiness, and from all your idols will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them. And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God."

"Therefore, shall Zion for your sake be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest. But in the last days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it. And many nations shall come and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his way, and we will walk in his paths; for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem."

I would only further remark, that agreeable to these prophecies, no nation has been allowed to settle in Jerusalem. It has all along been "trodden down" of the Gentiles; but no one set of the Gentiles has been allowed to tread it long time together. It has been "successively occupied by the Romans, the Persians, the Saracens, the Turks of the Seleucian race, the Egyptian caliphs, the Latin Christians, the Egyptian caliphs a second time, the Mamalucs, and the Turks of the Ottoman race." And by this ceaseless change of occupants, it has been very plainly hinted that all were intruders and usurpers, and that the rightful owner had not yet appeared; so much so, that I greatly err if it be not the conviction of the present possessors, both Frank and Moslem, that they are the locum tenentes, sitting there by sufferance till the way be ready for the return of the ancestral lords. Christians and Infidels, Papists and Mahometans, Franks and Saracens, Turks and Egyptians, have fought for the Holy City, and possessed it all by turns; but never any of them to be able to keep it long. And while in their struggles for its custody, the Gentiles have trodden Jerusalem down, the persecuted people whose it is, await in calm assurance the day when the Lord himself shall put them in perpetual possession.

Looking to the present languid and withered aspect of the country, it may be a question with some whether a literal restoration to Palestine would be a blessing to the Jews. On that question we deem the people themselves the best judges, and if they desire it, it must be a blessing—a blessing because they desire it. The question with the exile is not whether his native land or his place of banishment be the fairest and most fruitful; but all the question is, how he shall get home. But independently of this, Palestine is "a goodly land." Its intrinsic resources are far from despicable, and its position, relatively to other lands, perhaps the most advantageous in the world. Spread out beneath a sky whose severest aspect is mild, and whose summer glow is only intense enough to elaborate those aromatic harvests unknown in more moist and chilly climes, Palestine used to be a land of sprightly music and long livers. In those regions where the air is sluggish, life is dull, and men do their work in silence. But in healthful climes, muscular energy is redundant, and the animal spirits overflow, and the prodigal excess of life and power escapes in joyous shouts and nimble movements,—in leaping and dancing, in melody and song. And just as you infer, not more from its long livers—those gay old "grasshoppers"—than from its merry singers, that ancient Attica must have been a genial, lifesome land, as you may gather, not more from the frequency of four score and five score among its patriarchs, than from the abundance of its popular minstrelsy and daily music, that Palestine was a cheerful and salubrious land. From the matron at the well, to the watchman on the walls,—from the strain that gushed with earliest spring, to the shout which closed the vintage, there were tokens unequivocal of life in its sunshine, and inspiration in its air. And perhaps nothing can show the change more solemnly than that a land once so vocal should be silent now. And as it was a salubrious, so it was a fertile land. In its better days it was "the garden of the Lord, a land of brooks of water, of fountains, and depths that spring out of valleys and hills; a land of wheat, and barley, and vines, and fig-trees and pomegranates, a land of oil-olive and honey." The long desolations have dried up many of its fountains, blasted its vines, and sadly thinned its fig-trees; but the bee still murmurs on the fragrant slope of Carmel, and the sleek rant [illegible] yields its fatness in Gethsemane. The ruthless natives, and more ruthless strangers, have not been able to exterminate the cedars of Lebanon; sycamores grow by the wayside as when Zacheus clambered up to catch a glimpse of the illustrious stranger; and the Arabian pitches his tent beneath the Terebinth, like his father Abraham when angels visited him at Mamre. The almond-tree flourishes along the Jordan, and like a pyramid of silver cleaves the azure of a cloudless spring, even as when its glad signal announced to the youth of Judah the winter past, and its snowy blossoms or leafless branches reminded the monarch-preacher that his own almond-tree would soon be flourishing. Jericho was the city of palm-trees in the days of Moses. The palm-leaves of Jericho carpeted the path of the Prince of Peace on the only triumphal procession this world ever gave him. Jericho is the city of palm-trees still. The trees whose borrowed foliage spread a canopy of green over Jerusalem at each Feast of Tabernacle, have not entirely vanished. And even those humbler glories of the field, which no goodly land can want, may still be recognized. Sharon has not lost its rose, among the hills of Galilee you still may gather the gorgeous amaryllis, descendant of those very lilies to which the Divine Teacher pointed one autumn evening eighteen hundred years ago, and bade his disciples "consider" them. A traveller speaks with rapture of the delicious odor which sprang at every footstep from Jerusalem to Jaffa, when the long-looked for rains had revived the rosemary and other scented flowers. Hasselquist was charmed with the jasmine of Palestine, a trivial circumstance, were it not that a prophecy of many a sweet Jewish home and rural dwelling may be enfolded in that flower. But what is economically of far more moment, amidst all the recklessness of its trampling invaders, and all the resourceless poverty of its abject cultivators, the soil gives symptoms of its exuberant fertility. The lazy boor on the sea-coast scratches the mould and flings in a handful of melon-seed, and is rewarded with the most delicious produce in the world. The mountain ranges to the north are as green as when the bulls of Bashan rioted on their dripping slopes. And the very thistle-forests, which dense and tall usurp its plains, show that these plains are capable of yielding again their heaps of corn. In short, the Lord has only to turn that captivity like streams in the south, to fill the channel of that dry and thirsty land with the stream of its returning population, in order to clothe it on every side with the fertility and glories of unexpected spring. Let but the seed of Jacob people it once more, and its pastures will be clothed with flocks, and its valleys will be covered with corn. And whilst the little hills exult on every side, the people that went forth weeping shall doubtless come again rejoicing.

There is only one circumstance more which I would mention in this connection. It is that the geographical position of Palestine will make it now far more important to the people who possess it than it ever was before. So remarkably situated is it, that it forms the bridge between two continents, and a gateway to a third. Were the population and the wealth of Europe, Asia, and Africa condensed into single points, Palestine would be the centre of their common gravity. And with the amazing facilities of modern intercourse, and the prodigious extent of modern traffic, it is not easy to estimate the commercial grandeur to which a kingdom may attain, planted as it were on the very apex of the whole world,—with its three continents spread out beneath its feet, and with the Red Sea on one side to bring it all the golden treasures and spicy harvests of the East, and the Mediterranean floating in on the other side all the skill, and enterprise, and knowledge of the West. For the sake of higher ends it seems the purpose of God to make the Holy Land a mart of nations; and by bringing the forces of the Gentiles to Jerusalem, to send the blessing of Abraham among the Gentiles.—James Hamilton, London, in The People, the Land, and the Book.

The Bible.

How comes it that this little volume, composed by humble men in a rude age, when art and science were but in their childhood, has exerted more influence on the human mind and on the social system than all other books put together? Whence comes it that this book has achieved such marvelous changes in the opinion of mankind—has banished idolworship—raised the standard of public morality—created for families that blessed thing, a Christian home—and caused its other triumph by causing benevolent institutions, open and expansive, to spring up as with the wand of enchantment? What sort of a book is this, that even the winds and the waves of human passion obey it? What other engine of social improvement has operated so long, and lost none of its virtue? Since it appeared, many boasted plans of amelioration have been tried, and failed—many codes of jurisprudence have arisen and run their course and expired. Empire after empire has been launched on the tide of time, and gone down and expired. But this book is still going about doing good—leavening society with its holy principles—cheering the sorrowful with its consolation—strengthening the tempted—encouraging the patient, calming the troubled spirit and soothing the pillow of death. Can such a book be the offspring of human genius? Does not the vastness of its effects demonstrate the excellency of the power of God?—Dr. McCulloch.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Dear Restitution:

It has been a long time since I wrote to you, but I eagerly watch for your coming each week, and often think what would I do if I did not receive it weekly, for we are all alone so far as the one faith is concerned. We are now located near Wapinitie, Wasco Co., Oregon, near the emigrant road across the Cascade mountains, and would be pleased to have any of the brethren who may pass through here come and make us a visit. It is very lonely living away from all of those who believe as we do, but our Savior is soon coming, then if we are ready to meet him all trials will be forgotten.

Christ is coming, let this be
The herald note of jubilee,
And when we meet and when we part,
The salutation from the heart.

Yours in hope,
NANNIE OSBORN.

Editor Restitution:

How much we love our dear paper. Cheering words from faithful ones. O so often light us on the lonely way while we are waiting for the dawn of the blessed day. So many voices are hushed, so many loved ones gone out of our sight, and the sympathy and love that we shared is no more ours to enjoy. How much we need strength and patience to wait, the days seem so long and the nights are lonely. But blessed be the hope that comes to us beyond, into the glad resurrection, where sorrow and disappointments will have no place, and all the redeemed shall walk in the light of the beautiful city of our God.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 5, 1901.

IN the nature of things one will hate sin in proportion to his love for God and Christ.

MANY who complain of their weakness ought to be complaining of their worldliness.

AN Arab proverb says, "Patience is the Key of Joy, but waste is the Key of Sorrow."

"THERE is a discontent that is death; there is also a discontent that is life; one worries, the other works."

"OUR conversation should be such that youth may therein find improvement, women modesty, aged respect, and all men civility."

"OUR decays are as much the work of nature as the first principles of our being. We die as fast as we live,—every moment subtracts from our duration as much as it adds to it."

JEALOUSY is considered a most tormenting thing,—but is there not something unutterably sweet in the consideration of the jealousy of God—that he should so regard the affections of his child as to be jealous of occupying the second place?

"MODESTY is not properly a virtue, but is a very good sign of a tractable and towardly disposition, and a great preservative and security against sin and vice; and those children who are much under the restraint of modesty, we look upon as most hopeful and likely to prove good."

WHY should we not take an enemy for our tutor, who will instruct us gratis in those things we knew not before? An enemy sees and understands more in matters relating to us than our friends do. Love is blind,—but spite, malice, ill-will, wrath and contempt, talk much, are very inquisitive and quick sighted.

HOW unfortunate that man, who ranges everywhere, ransacks everything, digs into the bowels of the earth, dives into other men's persons, but does not consider all the while that his own mind will afford sufficient scope for enquiry and entertainment, and the care and improvement of himself will give him business enough.

B. WILKINSON, F. G. S. says there is such a thing as a harmful criticism. He remarks as follows: "It is possible so to sift and filter a sunbeam as to intercept its heat, and to allow its light to pass unhindered. So it is possible to criticise and analyze the attributes of God in such a way as to cut off from the heart their warmth-giving influence, and to let their cold light only pass into the intellect."

THE flower of youth and beauty should be consecrated to God. We remember reading of the young women of Tongo, in the South Sea Islands, gathering flowers very early in the morning, and twining them into ornamental wreaths for their relatives and friends. They are taken while the dew is on them, because at that early hour they retain their fragrance longest. So should the flowers of youth and beauty be early gathered for the honor of him who gave them being, as they will retain longest through life, the sweetness of their early days. We hope this will bring to the minds of the young people who get THE RESTITUTION the sweet words, "I love them that love me, and those who seek me early shall find me;" and that other invitation, "My son, give me thine heart."

KITTY Trevelyan says: "The beauty of all beautiful places says 'God has been here.' But the life in the lowliest living thing—in the tiniest moss which puts forth a fresh green stem to-day—in the little leaf which has burst the gummy casing in which it was encased yesterday, and flutters in the air and sun to-day, with its crumples of its long winter packing not yet fluttered out of it—in the trembling snowdrop, which a touch can crush, but which all the weight of the inanimate earth could not keep from bursting up into the sunshine—life in its lowliest development says, not that God has been here, but God is here. The Life of the Life-Giver is breaking through us all. Reader do you feel the joy of his presence?"

A FIRM faith, and true honesty are not to be forced by necessity, or corrupted by reward.

Getting Over a Difficulty.

Dr. Andrew Wilson says: "We often get over a difficulty by going around it;" and illustrates it by alluding to the bending of plants to the sun, as follows:—"In all plants—which as a rule are less active than animals—the one great means and mode of altering their states is by the production of curvatures in their parts. This curvature wages when the tendril or the stem clasps the support in the case of a climber. We behold it equally well when we see a sensitive plant droop its leaves, or a moving plant swing its foliage right and left with an almost continuous oscillation."

John iii. 16.

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son."

We picked up a sermon recently preached in the Broadway Tabernacle, New York, by the pastor, Rev. Charles E. Jefferson. He said it was rare that this text is preached from; and possibly the oldest church-goers in the congregation have not heard it more than half a dozen times in their lives. Said he, "In looking through seventy volumes of sermons by the best preachers of the 19th century, I did not see one lesson on this text." He went on to say after this that it was one of the most familiar sentences of the Scripture. Other verses elude us but this good old faithful sentence never fails us, and we can always fall back upon its familiar and substantial declaration; but as a text it is so vast that it is almost impossible to do anything with it,—it hampers a man into silence,—it appalls him."

We think any one who reads his discourse will readily see that it hampered him; for he says, "There are some sentences that a man can get around, and walk into, and take possession of the truth,—this is not such a sentence. There are sentences that are easily explained, but this is not such a sentence.....that is the reason preachers seldom touch this sentence as a text. It is a reservoir from which trickle often sentences better fitted for ordinary texts. A tin cup is big enough to bring to a congregation. It is only a waste of time to attempt to bring the ocean."

Surely enough he does'nt "walk far into this text. He calls his text a sentence. The words he quotes are divine words but they do not form a divine sentence. If a sentence, it is a sentence of his own make. He stops at a comma, half-way into the Lord's sentence. The Lord tells what God gave the Son for, but he left his hearers to find out that themselves if they wanted to know. Evidently he did not think it necessary for them to know what God gave his Son for; Jesus did think it necessary. Our readers can decide as to that after getting the cream of the sermon as follows:—

"God so loved the world." The day begins with God. That is where every pastor and every church begins. [Question.] Some one has said, "Let me define God." No! To define that word would be to spoil it. It is the greatest noun in the language. It is wider than the sky, deeper than space. My heart loathes definitions."

"God loved." Love is the greatest verb in the language. Some one said, Let me analyze it. No! You cannot analyze love. You will spoil it if you attempt it."

"God so loved." "So." That word was ordained of God. It is going to multiply that word into infinity,—dont brush it aside."

"Now we come to a more familiar word. It is warmer—"World." Do not try to define it. You might clip off the edges of it.....let it stay as Jesus spoke it. It stands there reaching out its arms gathering nations, tribes, peoples, empires, into its embrace."

"God." That sounded rather cold at first. "God" and "love" taken together they are like two stars that shine aloft; and when we add the "world" it seems as if the stars had come down and touched us.

"God so loved the world that he gave." We knew that word was coming.....wherever you find love you find "give." The two words go hand in hand throughout the universe. You know our word "get." That is the earth word. Let us rub out "get" and write down "give."

"He gave his only begotten Son." There is the word that surprises—Son. His only-begotten Son—mark the adverb. See how the word cuts a chasm between us and that man.

"Son." Man can explain the meaning of this word. I know it. There have always been men who could explain it; such are called advanced thinkers. They are not advanced but belated. I call no man advanced who has not got six inches beyond the reach of pagan thought two thousand years before we were born." The preacher said he did'nt want to explain anything or illustrate anything or expound anything, but wanted to stand in the presence of this mountain-like sentence, and fall into silence before it. The title to this sermon was:—"An Epitome of the Gospel."

The Far East.

The Semi-official Journal de St. Petersburg explains Russia's attitude in regard to Manchuria, as follows:—"From the moment when the conclusion of an arrangement became impossible, by reason of the obstacles encountered by the Chinese Government, Russia, while abiding faithfully by her political programme, resolved to wait until a normal state of things is re-established in China, and a central government independent and sufficiently strong to offer guarantees against the renewal of recent disorders is restored to power."

The Scottsman says:—"It cannot be safely assumed that Russia has given up her purpose in that portion of the Chinese Empire. She sometimes halts, but rarely or never goes back. Where she does withdraw for a little, it has usually been to make a better spring forward. With regard to Manchuria, it is a big morsel which will take a good deal of licking before it can be conveniently swallowed. It can await the completion of the Trans-Siberian Railway. In the meantime, we do not find that there is any immediate intention to bring the military occupation to an end."

The Economist says,—"The blow received by Russia regarding Manchuria will not be felt as it would have been in a western state, for it will make no change in the regular conduct of affairs. The Army of Manchuria will remain there; the money will be found somewhere, and after a year or two the Russian Diplomats will deny that any recoil had occurred, and will tranquilly resume their efforts to obtain by treaty, a legal protectorate over Manchuria. Meantime Russia is actively engaged in strengthening her position. It is said that by the middle of this month there will be 300,000 Russian troops in occupation of this part of China, and a preliminary order prepares the ways and means in case of need, of rapidly increasing the Russian army in the Far East to half a million of men."

The indemnity to be imposed by the Powers is stated to amount to about £60,000,000.

Placards in China have been posted in Pekin calling upon all patriotic Chinamen to rise on the 15th of May and expel the foreigners. What will happen when the main portion of the allied forces is withdrawn?

According to Reuton's correspondent at Yokohama the Japanese Press exhibit much concern respecting the loan concluded between the Korean Government and a French Syndicate. The hand of Russia is suspected in the transaction. The French Minister of Foreign affairs has been visiting the Czar.

Questions Answered.

For C. F.—You should see that you are not consistent with yourself, unless you can reconcile two opposing dogmas;—the unending conscious suffering of the wicked, and the salvation of all men. Inherent immortality makes the Book of God contradict itself. This, dear sir, is the seat of your trouble. And the tone of your letter suggests that we had better wait a little, while you attempt to reconcile Acts iii. 23, and Eph. i. 10, so we only add that if you reject the inherent immortality of the soul you will see harmony where there now appears little but confusion. Sin and sinners will be destroyed—rooted out of the earth, and all the rest gathered together in One, in Christ.

For J. R.—Yes, we surely hold that Jesus was the "first-fruits." The giving of life to a dead body however is not all that is involved in "the resurrection." Jesus was the first-fruits, in the sense that he was the first to rise into a new and everlasting existence, from the death state, into which the race of man was plunged by alienation from the life of God.

For W. W.—Your question,—"If the words, 'Where their worm dieth not,' refer to living persons or to dead bodies? must be answered in the light of Isa. lxvi. 24 where the illustration is taken from:—"They shall go forth, and look upon the carcasses of the men that have transgressed against me, for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh." A carcass is a lifeless body of an animal,—and therefore furnishes no proof of everlasting conscious punishment. If worms fed on living persons they would soon put an end to life. See case of Herod, Acts xii. 23. If the worms in this case had been killed, Herod might have lived, but the worms did not die, Herod did. Please notice that worms and fire are instruments of destruction. Strange, indeed that the indestructible character of these instruments should be deemed to imply the indestructible nature of what they destroy. Jesus showed the Jews that the wicked will be destroyed as literally as they burn up carcasses and other filth in the Valley of Hinnom. The fire cannot be put out nor the worm die till their work is done.

H. T.—We hold that "A conscious living being," is the equivalent of the word soul, when it is used for the personality. But of course soul is not always said of the personality,—the subject in hand, or the connection will generally indicate for what it is used. As both consciousness and life of a human being end when the breath leaves the body,—the soul or self of the person is then no more.

"The Bottomless Pit."

A correspondent writing from Kansas, says: "I had a lady friend, (not of our faith) ask me the other day to explain about the bottomless pit, if there was no hell. Now I think I can understand a little as to the meaning, but could not make it plain, even the way I understand it to mean, so will you please explain through THE RESTITUTION?"

I would say to the correspondent it needs no explanation, because it don't mean anything, for the reason the phrase, "The bottomless pit," is not a part of Holy Scripture. I think I can hear my correspondent say, "How is that? I find it seven times in the Book of Revelation. Yes, I know you can, but its appearance there is not authorized by proper authority. I will quote the authorities which give the evidence that the phrase, "bottomless pit," is not a part of Holy Scripture.

See Rev. xvii. 8. The Greek is as follows: "ek tês abussou—out of the abyss." The Dinglott so renders it in place of "out of the bottomless pit."

The Revised Version has it: "to come up out of the abyss."

Constantine Tischendorf, in his various readings from the three most celebrated manuscripts, the Sinaitic, Vatican and Alexandrine, says, "bottomless pit" should be translated by the Word, abussou—abyss.

I will now give you a translation from S. P. Tregelles, LL. D. with regard to which it is said: "This translation of the Book of Revelation is executed from the Greek text according to the ancient authorities; so that there is not a single word which is not guaranteed by manuscript authority of at least twelve hundred years old; and by far the greater part is vouched for by manuscripts of fourteen hundred years old." This translation has it, "to ascend out of the abyss." Hence ancient manuscripts from twelve to fourteen hundred years old, authorize the use of the word "abyss," in place of "the bottomless pit."

See Rev. xi. 7, speaking of the completion of the testimony of the two witnesses. The literal translation reads: "The wild beast rising up out of the abyss (the deep) will make war with them." Now we often hear the word "sea," called "the deep," or "the great deep,"—the wild beast is seen "rising up out of the deep." King James' Translation has it: "The beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit," (the abussun—abyss—the deep) Rev. xiii. 1, shows what "the bottomless pit," or abyss—the deep is, we read: "I stood upon the sand of the sea, (the deep) and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, (abyss—the deep) having seven heads and ten horns," etc. This is the fourth beast that will some day astonish the people when they see it "rise up out of the sea" (of nations). It will be a matter of exceeding great astonishment when this beast shall rise out of the "bottomless pit" (abussun—abyss, the deep—sea). See Rev. xvii. 8: "The beast that thou sawest, was, and is not: and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and go into perdition: and they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, (whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world,) when they behold the beast that was and is not, and yet is." Compare this with Tregelles' translation of the same verse, it reads as follows: "The beast that thou sawest, was, and is not, and is to ascend out of the abyss, and go into perdition: and those who dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, when they behold the beast, because he was, and is not, and shall be present."

This beast is seen to "rise up out of the sea," otherwise called the abyss—deep, or sea. "Water," or "sea" is used in Revelation as symbolic of "nations." See Rev. xvii. 12: "The waters which thou sawest, where the harlot sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes and nations."

In Rev. xvii. 8, "the beast shall ascend out of the bottomless pit" Abyss—the deep.

In Rev. xiii. 1: "I saw a beast rising up out of the sea."

In Rev. xvii. 1, 15, calls "many waters," or seas, "peoples, and multitudes, and nations and tongues," which is the "bottomless pit," abyss—deep, or sea, out of which the beast shall rise. What a fearful stretch of language, and fanciful flights of imagination it will require to convert this abusson—abyss, into a bottomless pit full of lurid fire in which condemned immortal souls are to be tortured through all the ceaseless ages of eternity? Such people cannot conceive that the One Great Yahweh, whom we delight to serve is LOVE, and not a monstrous devil, delighting in endless torment of poor unfortunate sinners. It is a blasphemous libel upon his nature and character. He takes no delight even in the death of a sinner, and much less in absolutely abhorent cruel torture which is never to terminate. I think it would cure the so called Reverend gentlemen of their delight to "shake sinners over the pit of hell," if they could have a few minutes roasting before they commence their sermons. A lady told me that her nervous system was shattered and ruined for life when she was a little girl by such devilish preaching. Such preaching has been considerably revived of late as a lever to convert sinners. My Bible tells me that the way to convert sinners from the error of their way, is to preach Christ and his gospel, and the love of Yahweh.

The preaching of the hell of torment, and a scare crow devil, is the way to make devils in place of Christians. Such converts are only restrained from criminal acts through fear of this bugbear of a devil, and his bottomless pit full of fire.

THE following item found in the daily papers is of interest to all who follow the cause of the Jewish people:

The London Daily Mail says that Dr. Theodore Herzl, founder of the Zionist movement and the Palestine association, has recently had several audiences with the Sultan of Turkey who decorated Dr. Herzl and presented him with valuable gifts. Dr. Herzl has obtained valuable concessions towards his project of Zionist colonization in southern Palestine, in which he was strongly supported by Emperor William.

In the case of the death of a woman of the Dowie faith the coroner's jury returned a charge of manslaughter against Dowie, two deaconesses and the husband of the woman. The case is before the grand jury for their finding at the present time.

What the world needs is men of strong convictions, of a "rock-firm" faith in the truth of the gospel—faith, not of the head merely, arising from intellectual persuasion of the truth, which is often accompanied with indifference to its claims—but the faith of the heart arising from a personal experience of the saving power of the gospel.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Poetry.

Jerusalem: The Old, The New.

Jerusalem, the olden,
Above the ether skies,
Where lives our God, Jehovah,
And dwell the good, the wise
Who climbed the stony hills of time
With bleeding feet and sore;
And at the end, they found their home,
Their rest forevermore.

But what of those, who, left behind,
Were martyred one by one,
Whose bones were left on every shore,
To bleach beneath the sun?
Be comforted, ye people mine,
Have neither wrath nor fear,
For sure as God in heaven lives
Deliverance is near.

A sun is rising in the East,
Whose rays so sharp and bright
Will sever, cut, the Christian world
And leave it in its night.
And on its ashes shall arise
A temple broad and fair,
A new Jerusalem on earth
Of love and tender care.

Lift up your hearts, rejoice again,
O, people of this hour!
The old Red Sea is nearly crossed
And lost is Pharaoh's power.
Aye, sudden Palestine will bud
And blossom once again,
And every Hebrew in the land
Will join the great Amen.

And grand old prophets will arise
And great rejoicing be,
When this, our new Jerusalem,
The good, the kind, the free,
Shall live again on mother earth,
With all its works sublime,
And with its pages sacred books
Float down the realm of time.

The silent Rothschilds never more
Their precious gold will give;
And grand old Hirsh's silver stamp
For sufferance to live.
The great Sanhedrin ever lives
And all its pages show
The Armageddon battle fought
And that not long ago.

'Twas when the Iron house was made
Beside the sullen sea,
That Frenchmen swore themselves away
From truth and liberty.
And when the humble Dreyfus, Jew,
Was from his prison cast,
That everyone beheld the plot,
The great world stood aghast.

One day of prophecy is more
Than twice ten thousand days,
For God, Jehovah, ever lives
Nor changes in his ways.
And righteous hands will smite again
The cymbal and the drum,
Will, wrong and cruelty be made
Forever, ever dumb.

The royal palm will wave again
Anear old Jordan's tide;
And weary prophets seek its shade
To ever there abide.
While loud Hosannas will be heard
From every lip and tongue,
For every heart shall have its peace
And holy psalms be sung.

Times of Restitution No. 2.

The restoration of territory as promised cannot have reference to anything but land. On account of sin there was a curse pronounced against the soil, and instead of pleasant things to spring therefrom, briars and thorns were caused to grow that man might literally earn his bread by the sweat of his face. But we have the kindly assurance, that the deserts and desolate places shall blossom as the rose, and all that delights the senses shall abundantly spring forth; and like as Adam was placed in the Garden of Eden to till it and to keep it, so shall it be in the glorious age to come. Ezek. xxxvi. 34, 35. This we believe will be literally fulfilled, for Joel in his prophecy 2-3 in referring to the close of the restitution age says, "The land is as the Garden of Eden," [illegible] kingdom of Jesus Christ [illegible] the kingdom of God be restored as in the days of old? has often been asked. We can only quote from the Word of God and leave our readers to draw their own conclusions. The answer is so full and complete, that I do not see where comment can add any light. It is so plain that a way-faring man though a fool, need not err therein; and indeed, if all the revelations given in reference thereto were quoted, THE RESTITUTION columns would have to be enlarged many times to contain them. The kingdom of God is now in an overburdened condition, and so will remain until Jesus comes to whom it was promised. Ezek. xxi. 27. There has been so much written on this subject as to its future, by pens so much more able than mine, that it would appear almost like conceit for me to add more, and what I shall say will be very brief, supplemented by numerous references, as we as a people are better informed, without doubt, on this subject than any other. The kingdom upon its inception we can not question, will have imperfections; it had in the days of long ago; if this is not true it would never have been destroyed. But the conditions will not be the same; sin and sinners will have no part in executing the righteous laws of that blessed age; the people to whom will be entrusted the administration of government will all be righteous, having been tried and made white in the blood of the Lamb.

The evolution towards perfection will be rapid, because the father of sin will have no power to deceive the nations until the little season. This must necessarily be just at the close of the restitution age. For he (Christ) must reign until he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death, I Cor. xv. 25, 26, and that must occur at the end of this brief season, that God may be all in all.

The covenant that will be made with Israel, I am inclined to think, will be embodied in the law from Zion and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. However, let us not trouble ourselves about that, for it is not fully revealed. But let us trust in the Lord, for his goodness and mercy endureth forever. Then will be established the new heaven and the new earth where all people shall be righteous, a condition that does not and will not exist until death and its author is destroyed. We look for this kingdom that shall extend over the whole earth, to be a peaceable kingdom, for is not its King the King of peace and Prince of Peace? To show its peaceable nature allow me to refer you to Jas. ii. 2, 3, 4; ix. 6, 7; xi. 1-10; xxxii. 1, 15-18; xxxiii. 17 to end of chapter; xxxv. 1, 2, 9, 10, whole of ls. lxi. and lxv. 17 to end; Jer. iii. 15-20; xxvi. 3 9; xxx. 17-21; xxxi. 8-14; xxxiii. 7-17; Ezek. xxxvi. 23 to the end; Dan. vii. 13, 14, 18, 27; Amos ix. 11 to end; Obadiah; Micah iv. 1 to 9; Rev. xx. and xxi.

We find no place in God's Word where there is a promise of eternal life together with power to rule over the nations of earth after the second coming of Christ. Please notice that statement; it may come clear farther on. That there will be people saved after that time, would be difficult to disprove. In a former article I made the statement, that part of the means used in the restoration would consist in preaching. Listen to Jeremiah, "And I will give you pastors according to my heart, which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding, and at that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord, and all the nations shall be gathered unto it. Jer. iii. 15, 17. And again, "In those days and at that time, saith the Lord, the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none, and the sins of Judah and they shall not be found, for I will pardon them whom I reserve." Jer. l. 20; Acts xv. 17.

At Christ's coming he will sit upon the throne of his glory, and also those who have been patient in tribulation and been overcomers. To these will be give the exalted position on "his throne that he now occupies on his Father's throne." Rev. ii. 26 and iii. 5, 11, 21. If he is our Mediator now, they (the overcomers) will be mediators in the age to come to overcome the nations. No man can become his own mediator. Some will wield sceptres, all will wear crowns or bear palms. These righteous ones will not at that time stand before God in judgment, for they have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine once delivered to the saints; and Paul says, "There is therefore no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the [illegible] Rev. will [illegible] "bowed [illegible] glory of God the Father." These are they that are a kind of firstfruits, Jas. i. 18.

The nations over whom Christ and his saints will reign, will occupy the same position that Adam did before the fall, but some will be overcome and fall. Isa. lxv. 20. The material earth will be restored to its primitive condition. Is. li. 3. A most glorious estate, up to the letting loose of Satan for a little season, and as many are deceived, proves that the nations in the millennial are mortal. The saints of God cannot be deceived as they have been made spiritual bodies. When Christ comes he will send his angels to gather out of his kingdom all things that do offend. It is evident that this gathering out will require 1000 years and at or near that time, will be the "great time of trouble," when after a brief season death shall be destroyed. Then will be inaugurated the new heavens and the new earth, when God shall wipe away all tears, and there shall be no more crying nor sorrow, nor death, for the former things are passed away. Therefore brethren, let us refrain from agitating questions not pertaining to us. God in his infinite love and mercy will provide just laws and rules for the people in the kingdom age, that he has in all ages. We in this age have laws and commandments given us, whereby if we are obedient to them, we may be permitted to share in the glories accorded to the saints. Judging the future by the past, earth will never receive its fruition only by an exhibition of God's power in confining the author of sin. Sin will continue to increase, as long as it is continually added to. How easy it would be to do right if we had no temptation to do wrong. Temptations beset us on every hand, but let us like our beloved brother Paul, "Fight the good fight of faith," ever trying to show "ourselves approved of God, workmen that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth." Let us shun vain babblings which lead to ungodliness. Let us teach men what they must do to be saved; knowing that we can do nothing except the Lord be with us, and if he be with us who can be against us? Also let us be charitable toward all men! Not compromising the truth in anything, for some have erred concerning the faith. Let us earnestly realize that we cannot drive men into the truth. Let the love of God so abound in our hearts, not only to those of like faith, but to those with whom we come in contact, believing that they seeing our good works, may be constrained to follow in the footsteps of the Lord Jesus and worship him in spirit and in truth.

Finally brethren, you see what a long letter I have written with my own feeble hand. Though I am afflicted, tormented, and often approach very near the valley of the shadow of death, yet the Lord is my comfort and stay. I so earnestly desire that there shall be perfect harmony and peace in God's holy church, that I pray that we "put on the whole armor of God, having our feet shod with the preparation of peace." Looking for that blessed hope and the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify us unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. May the grace of God be with us all, and make us patient unto every good work." Amen.

MERRITT ELLIOTT.

Dear Restitution:

In an old number of THE RESTITUTION I noticed an article headed—"Why I wish to be Saved." The writer goes on to say—"Dear ones, it means that we shall have a beautiful place to dwell in throughout eternity without sickness, disappointment, or death. All this is good and true. But when is there a desire expressed to help produce this state of things? We, as servants of the Lord Jesus Christ cannot expect to enjoy the happy state of things unless we assist in bringing about the golden age we hope to enjoy. My daily prayer is, that I may have a share in the great work of the restitution. If I am so unspeakably happy as to get into the kingdom, I expect I shall find plenty of work to do. Indeed, it will be work, work all the time, and not simply enjoyment. If our highest aim is enjoyment and happiness, I fear we shall fail of getting into the kingdom when it comes. We may have believed the gospel and have been baptized, yet I find no promise that simply belief and baptism entitle one to a place in the kingdom. The promise is "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Many, very many, will [illegible] "And he that [illegible] eth my works unto the end, to [illegible] will I give power over the [illegible] he shall rule them with a rod of iron."

Let our desire to get into the kingdom, be founded upon a desire to assist in the great and glorious work of restoring the earth and mankind back to the position that was occupied before the fall. God's design in creating earth and man must be carried out. Jesus the Son of God and second Adam has been appointed to remove the curse and bring in the great restitution, and it will take a thousand years after Christ comes to accomplish this work. Oh, brother, sister, don't you want to help about this great and glorious work? I do.

A Rabbi was once asked: If your God loves the poor, why does he not support them? He answered: God allows the poor to be with us always, that the opportunities for doing good may never cease.

Though differing somewhat from our usual style of topics, yet we trust they will be helpful to our readers, especially the younger classes of students. They were originally written for and published in the Denton Journal, and necessarily have some expressions that refer to local surroundings.—ED.]

Lately we have been reading in the daily papers about the mission of Professor Gardner, in the wilds of Africa. This gentleman it seems, has been sent out by certain "scientists" in order to teach the monkeys in the jungle to talk and, also, to learn their language, the secondary object being to establish proof that the human race is of "simian origin," and so the Professor, we are told, has had a steel cage built to defend him against the attacks of beasts of prey, and in this he is conveyed to remote places in the woods and wilds of Guinea, and there he cultivates the acquaintance of his supposed hairy-coated relatives.

The trouble with the scientific theorists is that they have the faculty of discovering some little out-of-the-way fact from the dreary wilds, where nobody goes, and so combining it with some other little out-of-the-way fact, from the other end of the earth, that they manage to rig up a pretty decent argument for the theory they have adopted; while they carefully ignore the whole trend, the sweeping outlines, and the bulk of evidence on the other side—facts and evidence that everybody is familiar with. Take the matter of language as an illustration. Suppose the ambitious Professor does learn the chatter of the monkey and succeeds in teaching some ape to say [illegible] wants a cracker," what has he done? The main, the large, the apparent truth in regard to the language of man and animals is ever conspicuously before us in all the relations of life, especially to dwellers in the country, and any one may study the subject if they so desire. Now it is a mistake to suppose, as some do, that the lower animals have no language. They have in many instances very complete modes of expression, so far as answers the purpose of communicating between their own kind or, in some cases, even with other kinds. The British blackbird for instance, has a cry of alarm that hustles everything in the woods to cover, so also here, has the crow, and well do the chickens understand their caw as dive and flutter around the hawk. Then, of all animal vocabularies probably that of the chicken is the most complete. All who take interest in these faithful little servants know how to interpret the sounds they utter. There is that of alarm, or suspicion, as some shadow falls in the neighborhood, "Lookout! lookout;" then the cluck to the little ones, "come, come;" there is the old [illegible] ding her neighbor for looking [illegible] r nest, "go 'way, go 'way;" [illegible] the rooster's crow, "ain't I [illegible] test thing about"—all these, [illegible] w, is the first point to be observed. [illegible] chicken language and all other [illegible] us of the lower animals, are [illegible] t and entirely unlearned. The [illegible] hey make are as instinctive as [illegible] r breathing and is a part of [illegible] ng that they cannot change. [illegible] d female chicks, hatched out of [illegible] ator on an island, far removed [illegible] y of their kind, will, when arriving [illegible] maturity, discuss matters in the [illegible] language as their ancestors [illegible] hens cluck, the roosters [illegible] o, in like manner, with all the [illegible] mals. They do not change their [illegible] uage because it is a part of their [illegible] ural endowment. A kitten [illegible] p with puppies will not bark; [illegible] brought up with kittens will [illegible] and this remarkable thing in [illegible] construction, this setness, this [illegible] qued fixedness is worked out, as we [illegible] say, to the utmost delicacy into [illegible] ttle trills of sparrow chirrup [illegible] lanet songs—and the natural [illegible] ved the observant country [illegible] an at once tell the kind of bird by [illegible] song or the twitter—another illustration of the iron law "after its kind."

Now there are natural noises that human beings make, also, that may be said to belong to the class of inherent or instinctive sounds; such, for instance, as laughter, crying, shouting, and so on—these all men do alike. Perhaps, too, the musical gamut may be said to belong to this category, but such noises and notes are not generally considered as human language at all. In truth they are not, and in fact the vast, the infinite difference between human speech and all such does not consist in the matter of sound at all; parrots can be taught to speak like us. The real difference is in the high intellectual endowment of the race, in the power which enables us, out of any set of sounds at hand, to create a code of signals to express, communicate, and cultivate thought. In the matter of language man may be said to be released from all the ties that bind him to the brute creation; here he enters upon the plane of Godhood; a divine fashioner of sound. This is true of verbal communication and it is even more so in regard to the ability we possess of recording thought by marks and signs, as in writing and printing, whereby members of our race who lived thousands of years ago have expressed thought to us, for time, distance or variety of tongue is no bar to the human intellect, it soars over and looks beyond all such obstruction. To what part of the brute creation can we look for even the faintest suggestion of this? Yet, strange to say, this magnificent and marvelous power, the greatest we possess, seems to be just as old as the race. Not so long ago it was the fashion of the "scientific" critic to laugh at the idea of Moses writing, because, they said, the very art of writing was not invented for many centuries after the time when Moses was said to have lived. Now it is the other way. The archæologists, digging around in Babylonia, are discovering whole libraries in baked clay which, they say now, reaches back far beyond the time of Abraham or even Adam! One of these records is quoted in part at the head of this article and here we have a striking similarity to the Biblestory of the Tower of Babel. Again, the very evident derivation of all human language from a common, original stock bears this story out. And, by the way, in the "differentiation" of language into the thousand and one tongues of earth, each one careless to keep any set channel, and promiscuously mixing with every dialect in the neighborhood, regardless of race, color, or previous condition of servitude, we have an excellent illustration of the true doctrine of evolution, so that the mongrelism to which I hereby attempt to express a few ideas to the patient reader is a mixture of Hebrew, Greek, Arabic, Latin, French and German, with an occasional spice of Chinese and Choctaw, and the registering power of the press is sometimes insufficient to hold it fast in shape, for those at one end of a county or State wander off into a different pronunciation and "differentiate" still further.

Now, if language, spoken and written, and expressing as high a degree of civilization as in many so-called Christian communities of the present day, can be traced to a period of time as far back as we can trace the human race at all, had we not better eliminate from the school books all the high-sounding "scientific" references to the "stone age," the "brass age," the "iron age," and so on, all of which are thus proven to be myths, and is it not vain to plant our ancestral tree in the African ape, which indeed, so far as intelligence is concerned, is far beneath the homely and useful domestic friends whose kindly services to us have been invaluable in the cause of civilization, as witness the horse, the camel, the dog, and so on. In truth these people are hunting for the "missing link" in the wrong direction. According to the Bible account of creation there was a link of intelligence that did once connect us more closely with the "beasts of the field," but for reasons best understood by the Creator alone that link was shattered; doubtless he considered that we had trouble enough now.

"When out of the future the light of the eternal city gleams, it glorifies the meanest moments of the present. The dignity it brings to man affects all he touches, dignifies through him toil, the commonest every-day mechanical labor. The citizen of heaven feels no work drudgery, for he can never be a drudge; in the hour of humblest endeavor he stands in the midst of the immensities, in the centre of the eternities which God inhabits."—A. M. Fairbairn, D. D.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. C. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

2 FACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 50 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

Genesis. Chap. 25.

1. And Habraam took another wife by the name of Chettoura.

2. And she brought forth for him Zomhran and Jedzan and Madal and Madiam and Jeesbook and Souir.

3. And Jedzau begot Saba and Dedau: and the sons of Dedau are the Assourieim and the Latousieim and Laoomeim.

4. And the sons of Madiam are Gephar and Aphair and Enooch and Abeida and Eldaga, all these were sons of Chettoura.

5. And Habraam gave all his possessions unto Isaak his son.

6. And unto the sons of his concubines Habraam gave gifts, and sent them away from his son Isaak, while he was living at the East, into a land of the East.

7. And these were the years of days of the life of Habraam all that he lived, namely one hundred and seventy-five years.

8. And Habraam leaving off died (under sentence) in a good old age, an elder and full of days, and was added to his laity;

9. And Isaak and Ismaeel, his sons, buried him in the double-cave in the field of Epiroon, the son of Saar, the Chettaite, which is over opposite Mambree;

10. The field and the cave which Habraam acquired from the sons of Chet; there they buried Habraam and Sarra his wife.

11. And it came to pass after Habraam had died, that God blessed Isaak his son, and Isaak took up his abode beside the well of the vision.

12. And these are the generations of Ismaeel, the son of Habraam, whom Agar, the Aiguptian housemaid of Sarra, brought forth for Habraam.

13. And these are the names of the sons of Ismaeel according to the names of his generations: first-born, Ismaeel, and Nabaioo and Keedar and Nabdeul and Massam.

14. And Masma and Douma and Massee,

15. And Chouddau and Thaiman and Jetour and Naphes and Kedma;

16. These are the sons of Ismaeel and these their names in their tents and pasturing places; twelve rulers according to their nations.

17. And these were the years of the life of Ismaeel, namely one hundred and thirty-five years, and leaving off he died, and was added unto his race.

18. And he dwelt from Euilat unto Sour, which is in the face of Aiguptos until one cometh unto Assurians; in the face of all his brethren he took of his abode.

19. And these are the generations of Isaak, the son of Habraam; Habraam begot Isaak;

20. And Isaak was forty years old when he took Hrebekka, a daughter of Bathouel, the Surian, from out of Mesopotama of Suria, a sister of Laban, the Surian, to himself for a wife.

21. And Isaac besought the Lord for Hrebekka his wife, because she was barren; and God hearkened to him and Hrebekka, his wife, conceived.

22. And the children in her were leaping; and she said, If it is destined to occur to me in this wise, What for me is this? And she went her way to inquire from the Lord.

23. And the Lord said unto her, Two nations are in thy belly, and two laities will come forth from thy womb; and a laity will be above a laity, and the greater will serve the lesser as a bond-servant.

24. And the days for her to bring forth were fulfilled: and she had twins in her womb.

25. And the first-born came forth fire-red, all hairy like a beast's hide; and she named his name Heesau.

26. And after his brother came forth and his hand grasp the heel of Heesau; and she called his name Jakoob; and Isaak was sixty years old when she brought them forth.

27. And they grew to be young men; and Heesau was a man who knew how to hunt with dogs, a man of the fields; but Jakoob was an undeveloped man, a stayer at home.

28. And Isaak loved Heesau because his game was his food; but Hrebekka loved Jakoob.

29. And Jakoob had cooked a mess of pottage, and Heesau came in exhausted from the plain.

30. And Heesau said unto Jakoob, Let me taste of this red pottage; for I am exhausted. Therefore was his name called Edoom (Raw-eater).

31. And Jakoob said unto Heesau, Give me today thy first-born privileges.

32. And Heesau said, Lo, I am going to come to my end and what to me are these first-born privileges?

33. And Jakoob said unto him, Swear it unto me today, and he swore it unto him; and Heesau gave unto Jakoob, the first-born privileges.

34. And Jakoob gave unto Heesau bread and a pottage of lentils; and he ate and drank and arose and went away; and Heesau made little of his first-born privileges.

COMMENT.

This chapter seems to the casual reader a well-told story and indeed a very simple narrative and very plainly told; as we should say a charming little tale of Bedouin life; but in the light of subsequent history and still unfulfilled prophecy as well as some that has been fulfilled and which is easily verified, is fraught with the fate of nations and empires long past and gone, and the coming dominion of another order of things or a new world; and being written for our instruction in righteousness, may we be able to draw from it the realities of its profounder spiritual teaching.

The names are of course significant not only as intended by the human agencies used in giving them but still more manifestly in the divine purpose when understood.

Isaak, "On an Equality" Jakoob, "smitten and healed," Heesau "Delight Again" Edoom "Raw-eater." The reader will recall the fact that Hrebekka was barren for some time and this was accounted a "smiting" or visitation of the Lord. This may account in a human way for the names of the twins, much more probable than that she should name one of them "supplanter" as the common Hebrew interpretation is.

Hrebekka "Bread-root" is also a very significant name in the light of history, and prophecy as related to the Habraam covenant and what the Christ himself teaches in John's gospel about the "bread of life." Bear in mind that he himself is a "son of Habraam" according to the flesh as well as "a Son of God" according to the Spirit.

The true philosophy of the "law of heredity" which has been so exploited of late in the teachings of sociology is here given in the concrete example of the choice of Heesau. In other words we are taught that the advantages of birth and heredity are of much or little value according to our own accounting—that the dynamics of the spiritual are so much more dominant and efficient that if we honestly make the higher choice with a true ambitions purpose all the weaknesses and hindrances naturally inherited fall away as in the case of Jakoob, who becomes an Israeel, "strong Root of Mercy." Like him we may come off limping from the titanic struggle of the spirit with the flesh; but nevertheless we are victors or as Paul puts it "more than victors" in the great accomplishment.

CHAS. GARDNER.

To Illinois brethren in special and all brethren in general:

Recently the Building Committee of the Illinois State Conference made a call through these columns for aid in raising a fund to build a suitable Conference building—not to use as a place of worship—but a building in which delegates may be entertained while in attendance at the Conference. The church in Oregon is large enough for all the meetings, having a seating capacity of about two hundred. Many generously answered this first call and the committee desires in this general way to thank all who have subscribed not only their money but also their words of encouragement. To them this second call is not directed, for we believe you have done well your part. We have now about $275.00 on hand. We need yet, at the very lowest estimate, $75.00. To put up a suitable building, with lumber at the present price, we should have $400.00. This item is written to invite any who have not yet subscribed to do so in any amount, however small. Said remittance to the chairman of the committee who will promptly receipt for the same. Time and space forbid discussion as to the merits of locating the Conference permanently. Suffice it to say that we believe that when the plan is once in working order, all will be pleased with it. Building Committee consists: S. J. Lindsay, Chairman, Oregon, Ill.; J. M. Gladfelty, Lanark, Ill.; E. F. Gealn, Forrestou, Ill.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 288 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Visit Winona Lake,

Winona Lake, Ind., on the Pennsylvania Lines, is an attractive summer haven for persons who desire to combine devotion, entertainment and instruction with rest and recreation. This resort is the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, and is annually visited by many persons who are strengthened in mind by the excellent facilities for educational work, and invigorated in body by the health-giving influences for which Winona Lake is famous.

The season for 1901 will open May 15th. Commencing on that date excursion tickets with fifteen-day limit will be on sale via Pennsylvania Lines. They may be obtained during May, June July and August. The sale of season excursion tickets will also begin May 15th and continue daily until September 14th. Excursion tickets will be good returning until September 17th.

Full information about the attractions at "Beautiful Winona," its Assembly and Summer School, etc., will be cheerfully furnished all who address Mr. Sol. C. Dickey, Secretary, Winona Lake, Ind. Inquiries about excursion rates, time of trains, etc., should be addressed to Passenger and Ticket Agents of the Pennsylvania Lines, or to F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Poetry.

If Need Be.

These gracious words, not all for nought,
In sorrow, grief and pain,
The heavy burdens that we bear
Will not be borne in vain.
Our heavenly Father knows our frame,
He knows how weak we are,
And every sigh and every tear
He sees from afar.

If daily cares oppress our hearts,
And creature comforts flee,
Or aught disturb our peace of mind,
He knows it need to be.
And when the need be has fulfilled
The end marked out by God,
And we are taught to trust him more,
He will remove the rod.

Oh blessed thought, there's not a drop,
In all the cups of woe,
That is not measured by his hand,
And will not overflow.
Then may we ever trust his love,
And though severely tried,
Remember that it need to be,
And in his strength abide.

Destination of the Jews. No 2.

"Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Luke xxi. 24.

"Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved." Romans xi. 25, 26.

I now pass on to proven point without which the restoration of the Jews would be a blessing neither to themselves nor to the world. I mean their conversion. There are some things from which the Jews do not need to be converted, e. g., they are not idolators, and do not need to be turned from image-worship. They are better than some called Christians in this respect. But they are self-righteous. They have mean ideas of God's holy law, for they think that with heart and hands tainted by the original transgression they can render a pure and acceptable obedience to that law. They have wrong ideas of sin, for they fancy that the fasts, and prayers, and tears of the sinner can atone for insults offered to the Almighty Majesty and sin-repelling Holiness of God. And they have wrong ideas of God himself; for his amazing gift of a free forgiveness is too magnificent for them to receive it, and the condescension of the Son of God in coming down and dying is too divine for them to believe it. If the Jews had right views of the law of God, of sin, and the Savior, they would be converted. We believe that the Spirit of God will give them such views ere long. But whether some of them may not be converted before the restoration, and the remainder afterward; and what are to be the agencies employed, whether there is to be a second personal appearing of the Son of God beforehand, or whether the work of their conversion is to be consummated solely by the plenteous outpourings of the Spirit, without whose working the bodily presence of the Son of God would make little impression on corrupt humanity; and whether the time is fully come; these questions I do not at present discuss, on some of them having formed no conclusive judgment and because on all of them you will more readily come to a clear light and sound conclusion if you be first fully persuaded of the fact that the Jews are to be converted. And here, as in the former instance, I prefer quoting, without comment, the sure word of prophecy:

"Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, It shall yet come to pass that there shall come people, and the inhabitants of many cities; and the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, Let us go speedily to pray before the Lord, and to seek the Lord of Hosts; I will go also. Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of Hosts; I will go also. Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of Hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold, out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you; for we have heard that God is with you."

"And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem. And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem the spirit of grace and supplications; and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his first-born. In that day shall there be a great mourning in Jerusalem, as the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon. And the land shall mourn, every family apart; the family of the house of David apart, and their wives apart; the family of the house of Nathan apart, and their wives apart; the family of the house of Levi apart, and their wives apart; the family of Shimei apart, and their wives apart; all the families that remain, every family apart, and their wives apart. In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin and for uncleanness."

"For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits: that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved.....These also have not believed, that through your mercy they also may obtain mercy. For God hath concluded them in all unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all."

But I feel that I would not be doing justice to my subject if I ended here. I doubt not that the Jews are to be the possessors of Palestine and the people of God again. This is their destination; but this is not all. As was truly said: "The Jews possess no prerogatives for themselves. Whatever immunities and distinctions they enjoy, they hold for the world." So is it with their destination. God has great things in store for Israel, for he has great things in store for all mankind. And to understand the destination of the Jews you must go back to the day of their original segregation from the nations, and recall God's promise to the Chaldean shepherd: "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." A promise already most bounteously fulfilled in "one" seed, "that is Christ;" but a promise whose riches, as prophecy assures us, are far from being exhausted yet. From Isaiah, and Zechariah, and Paul, it is very plain that Israel's restoration is to be the world's elevation: that Israel's ingathering is to coincide with the world's great harvest-home. Their fall was a blessing to a few of our Gentile families; their rising again in their fulness will be a blessing to the whole. How it may produce its full effect of blessing I cannot tell; but with Bible help, may offer the following hints:—

1. The restoration and conversion of the Jews will be striking facts. Whether effected in the more ordinary ways, or, as is almost certain, with miracles intermingled, the result will be abundantly remarkable. It is not probable. Many of the Jews sneer at the devout expectation of their brethren, that they will yet be planted, as of old, in Palestine. Many of them smile at the idea of a restoration, simply because there are such hindrances in the way. Very well. When the restoration takes place it will be all the more wonderful. "When the Lord turns the captivity of Zion, you will be like them that dream. Your own mouth will be filled with laughter, and it will be said among the Gentiles, The Lord has done great things for them." The event is not probable. You do not all expect it yourselves, and many Gentiles do not. So it will be very surprising when it does take place. Again, much as many of the Jews desire a restoration, and confidently as some look forward to it, they all with one accord deprecate conversion, and are confident that such a calamity never can befall them. Now, of all prophetic truths, this is the plainest and most positive; and when it does take place—when over the face of the most staggering difficulties and stupendous prejudices, the great consummation is brought about—when, probably all of a sudden, the world sees the spectacle of the inhabitants of Jerusalem with glistening eyes looking to the Pierced One, and sees all Israel actually saved, a result so strange must needs be striking. The moment the veil is rent from Israel's eyes, the veil will be rent from a thousand prophecies; and, read in the light of restored and regenerate Judah, the Word of God will sparkle with unwonted coruscations, and, like deep-colored gems that look dusty in cloud-light, many of its dark saying will brighten up into its divinest truths, when the beam breaks forth from Salem. It is not so much the new evidence as the new impulse which this event will give. It is not so much that it will merely illustrate or fulfil, the prophecies, as that it will arrest the world and animate the faithful, and by giving palpable reality to the things of faith make unbelief as impracticable as it is already inexcusable. It has been admirably shown in a recent essay, that foreign missions have exerted a most quickening power on domestic Christianity; and that every triumph of the gospel abroad has pioneered a corresponding victory at home. When Christendom was stagnant, when preaching had come down to a few meagre common-places, when ministers preached with slight expectation that they were to impress or change their hearers, and when hearers heard with no attention of being impressed or changed, word came that the gospel was proving itself the power of God unto salvation among savages, Indians, Esquimaux, and South Sea Islanders. Why should it not prove itself the same to the Greek which it had proved to the barbarian? The cause got a new impulse, the gospel got a new trial, and the work of evangelization went on with new success in Britain. If this was the reflex influence of a few Pagans converted, what would be the effect of like conversions among the Jews? Would it not be as life from the dead to the once more drooping Churches of Christendom? The gospel has already proved itself the power of God and the wisdom of God unto the salvation of Gentiles, and that on a somewhat extensive scale. But to complete the case, let it prove itself the power of God and the wisdom of God unto the salvation of the Jews. They are confessedly the hardest and most impracticable materials on which it has yet been brought to bear. Are they beyond its influence? In the infancy of chemistry half the substances in nature were reckoned insoluble, not because there was no power in nature to dissolve them, but because men were ignorant of that power, or knew not how to apply it. And after the poor alchymist had labored in the fire, heated his furnace seven times, and spent all his acids and alkalies, there still remained in the alembic a relentless mass which laughed at all his labors: a caput mortuum, which would neither evaporate, nor melt, nor burn. But as knowledge grew, solvents multiplied, till the intractable substances became very few. Still, however, men would say that a thing was as hard as adamant, that you might as soon melt marble or fuse platinum as make an impression on that thing. But these comparisons are no longer significant. There is a power in nature which can melt marble, fuse platinum, and burn the adamant. In the infancy of evangelic effort, even Christians looked despondingly on some sections of the human family; and it was a grave question with some whether it was better to extirpate cannibals or evangelize them; whether the gospel should be preached to the Indians; and a large mass, consisting of Negroes, and Hottentots, and "Chinese," were set aside as utterly out of the question, a caput mortum, of which nothing could be made. These despondencies, which were unlawful from the moment it was said, "Preach the gospel to every creature," have now been effectually refuted by the partial success of the gospel on every creature; partial, but still enough to show that every creature is a fit subject for the gospel to act upon. But I can quite see in some brethren a suspicion that the Hebrew subject will prove refractory—that there is a peculiar impracticability about the Jew. Be it even so; that the Jew's heart is the hardest of all hearts; that peculiar hardness has happened unto Israel. There is a power, an agent which can dissolve this stony heart; and just allow that they are the most obdurate people in the world, and it follows that with the gospel has proved itself the power of God, and the wisdom of God to the salvation of the Jews, it will be seen how omnipotent is the gospel of peace in the hand of the Spirit of Love. When the Jews are converted, it will be a most singular event; the final evidence of the gospel's Divine original, and a mighty impulse to its spread.

2. But, secondly, the Jews are likely themselves to be most energetic and efficient evangelists. Isaiah says, (ii. 2, 3) that, "in the last days the law shall go forth out of Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem." And Zechariah says, "Many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord.....ten men out of all languages of the nations shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you; for we have heard that God is with you." (viii. 22, 23.) Jerusalem, by that time possibly the great centre of wealth and influence, will be the source of light and evangelization; the emanating fountain and the converging focus, whence truth shall issue and whither inquiry shall return; from which the Word of the Lord shall go forth, and to which all tribes of awakened people shall go up—the missionary metropolis of the world.

3. [illegible] third and more important way in which I believe that Christianity is to profit by the conversion of the Jews, in which all families of the earth are to be blessed in Abraham, is that in that converted nation we may expect to see a reproduction of Christianity in its noblest and purest style; the graces of the gospel exemplified as they have not been since the day when the very chiefest Christians were Jews. It ought ever to be remembered that, whether for the purposes of ulterior conversion of the world, or for the elevation of the existing Church, the instrumentality most needed is a normal piety of the highest type; a living Christianity so full-grown, and so full-hearted, that no man shall despise it, and no man shall mistake it. And in reading the prophecies I see many proofs that regenerate Palestine is to present the world with a living epistle largely written of this first-rate Christianity. The paradisaic scenes of peace and harmony delineated, streets without violence, and sanctuaries without profanation; the worshipping concourse; the rapt adoration, and the manifested presence of Jehovah; the blending of Sabbath sanctity with week-day activity, bespeak a piety of the most exalted order. And I stagger not at the promise because of what the Jews are now—I believe that they are much maligned, and I also believe that they are not too moral. But I also believe that, though everything which prejudice has suspected and malignity invented were true, the miracle of grace, which makes them a pattern to all people, will only make them more adorable. I do not stop to say that if they be abject, persecution has made them so; nor do I interpose the names of Reuchlin and Benazra and Neander in arrest of that sweeping sentence which would adjudge them to irretrievable degradation. But I fall back on the unquestionable fact that the finest specimens of redeemed and regenerate humanity which mother earth has ever borne upon her surface, or received into her bosom, are the men gathered to their fathers in the sepulchres of Israel, the saints that sleep in Palestine.

I do not forget that the Church's finest models and most stimulating examples are men who answered to the name of Jew. And just as from the in-devotion of a prayer-restraining and irreverent age, I look back to the son of Jessie praising seven times a day, and soliciting the lyre familiar with his ecstasies to a strain more seraphic yet, till the laboring lyre could do no more, and his awe-struck hand trembled into silence; so from the stinted devotion and phlegmatic praises of our Gentile churches I look forward in hope to the day, when other Davids shall lead the choir, and sweet singers of Israel sound the keynote of the Church's gratitude; and if without the temple grain, at least with Hebrew fervor, we shall answer one another—Praise ye the Lord, for his mercy endureth forever.

And just as from the selfishness, and caution, and wary worldly wisdom of modern preaching, I look back with amazement at the meteor of mercy, that burning and shining light, who, self-forgetful and self-pending, flamed round the benighted earth, knowing and making nothing known but Christ, then exhausted, shot back into that sun which had fired him at the first; so looking round on our glow-worm regiment, to the leeward side of the hedge, and then looking out on a dark Britain, and a darker world, I am ready to exclaim, "The Lord send us another Jew like Paul!" And then, when I look round on the Church of Christ, comminuted into a thousand fragments; and every day shattering more and more the stone which ought to fill the earth—when I think how fallen out by the way are the pilgrims, the brethren journeying to the same land of peace and love, I look back with wistfulness to the Daniels and Johns of better days—who exerted such healing and harmonizing influence on all their coevals, and when I think of it as one most likely source of Christian union, I pray the Lord to hasten in his time the day when Ephraim shall no longer envy Judah, but from Ephraim and Judah, converted and restored, shall come forth a company, the models of the Church, the missionaries of the world.—James Hamilton, London, in The People, the Land, and the Book.

From Our Letter Drawer.

Dear Restitution:

I am a little late sending in my mite, but better late than never. I enjoy reading the letters from the different parts of the world and especially from those who are shut in. It is pleasing to hear them express their willingness to continue faithful to the truths they have learned. It is very trying to be left alone and not have any one to talk to and reason out those precious promises that God has left to comfort one another. I see so many pieces written in THE RESTITUTION on the begettal of our Savior, that my attention was called to the fact, that one of the writers, after writing two long articles that Christ was the Son of Diety and the Virgin, then says that no such thing is possible as a mixture of the animal and spiritual natures, that is just what I believe that Moses and the prophets testified. St. John i. 13, 45, born not of blood, that leaves man and woman out, blood had no part in the begettal of the Son of God. God does not need the assistance of humanity in his work. He was a chosen one taken out from among us. Peter made the good confession that he (Christ) was Son of the living God. Flesh and blood did not reveal it to him, but his Father in heaven. I hope these few remarks will not be taken as an argument. They are God's own truths which are quite helpful to be reminded of.

Yours for the truth,
MRS. I. E. FORSYTH.

Brother Underwood:

We send a few lines for THE RESTITUTION which is a welcome visitor in our home and which we should miss very much. We are amongst the few who are watching and waiting to meet our Lord. He has declared he will come again and gather his children home. Oh, may we be of that chosen number, where we will meet our loved ones who are sleeping, awaiting the last call when the dead in Christ shall come forth to meet their King, where we shall part no more. We believe the promises made to our father Abraham that we shall at a future time inherit this earth when it is made new like the Garden of Eden was when Adam was put there to dress it. By failing to obey the law Adam fell and lost his inheritance. We must obey the law laid down in the Scriptures to guide us from temptation and bring us to an inheritance with Abraham. We are told to search the Scriptures for in them is all our hope of an eternal life. We hope to have that true faith gained by a knowledge of the truth, so when temptations gather round us we will be able to withstand them and fit ourselves for a better life. We see all nations preparing for war, all try to gain the victory, there is no one satisfied. We know all kingdoms are to be put down when the King of kings shall set up his kingdom, which shall have no end, when wars shall cease and man with man shall be at peace. The Son of Man shall rule the world in righteousness, will sit upon the throne of his father David, and have dominion over the whole earth. How impossible and how untruthful the teaching of today, that we are to reign with him in heaven, when he is to return to this earth and sit upon his father David's throne and have dominion over the whole earth, which was promised to our father Abraham and his seed. We must have the faith that Abraham had or we are not of that seed, if we are not of that seed we have no inheritance, therefore we have failed as Adam did. By believing and obeying we will receive the long promised inheritance which our father Abraham saw afar off. The time is at hand, we must watch. Adam sinned by partaking of the forbidden fruit. Will we do the same or will we be faithful and gain everlasting life, for as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. Oh, may the time soon come when our King shall appear and put down all man-made rule, all man-made churches, and ungodly teachings, and reign in righteousness is our hope. Watching and waiting for the kingdom.

Your Brother and Sister,
MR. & MRS. J. W. LOVETT.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I am late with my letter, it is now past time for our love feast, but he that cometh in at the eleventh hour will receive his penny also. I love to read the letters of our dear ones. I ask an interest in all your prayers. From the signs of the times it looks as if our Lord's coming is nigh at hand, even at the door. May we all have our lamps trimmed and burning and full of oil, is my prayer.

Yours in hope of eternal life.
MARTHA A. WAYMIRE.

Dear Restitution:

The gospel has not lost its power to save those who believe yet! Last evening we again had occasion to visit Lake Erie, because two young sisters believed the gospel, and wished to obey it by being buried with Christ in baptism, and be raised to walk in newness of life. The lake was quite rough, and it rained too, but nothing could daunt the courage of these believers in the good news. They are bound for the kingdom, and will fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold of eternal life. One is a daughter of Bro. and Sister Stadden and the other our own grand daughter. May God, even our Father, bless them on the way! Having been taught the truth at home all their lives, they have but little to unlearn. I often think it is harder to learn the truth when our minds have been filled with the errors of the day and as taught by our popular clergy. There is nothing like filling the young mind with the pure Word of God from the start, and to not leave room for modern errors. I know modern taste hankers for some thing new, something original, but give me the original Word of God as it was when first spoken or written, and if folks would only try it, they would find it new to most people. On next First Day these two young sisters will be received into or added to the Church of God meeting at 1231½ Euclid Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 12, 1901.

Who can tell how much dimness of sight is connected with neglect of known duty?

If we are of Christ the Truth not only forms our creed, but that which moulds our character.

"WHEN a person values the precepts of the gospel, it is always a proof that he has tasted the doctrine for himself."

"OH, let not the ingratitude you meet with chill your love. He hath not met with such abundant gratitude from you."

A LETTER from Sister M. A. Woodwood, dated June 7, informs us that Brother Woodward is somewhat improved, though his cough is still quite bad.

EVERY command Christ has given must have in it infinite wisdom, tenderness, holiness and love; and we would add, there is not one command too many.

"As every feature in the character of God is essential to the glory of that character,—so the due consideration of every feature is essential to the right formation of the character of his people."

THE followers of Christ are of necessity subject to the reproach of men; the servant cannot be greater than his Master,—and as Jesus once said, "If they have persecuted me they will also persecute you." Jno. xv. 20.

NOTICE is given by the friends at Bur Oak, Ind. that their new church will be dedicated on the third Sunday in June. They invite all to attend. It is expected that Sister M. A. Woodward will be there.

The Faith.

The faith of religion embraces what God has done,—what he promises to do and everything taught in his Word, all of which is presented for the development of a godlike disposition, termed divine nature in 1 Peter i. 3, 4. The obedience of religion is conformity to the law of faith, and is the result of believing the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, it is termed the obedience of faith, for believers only can yield it. Acts viii. 12; 1 John iii. 8.

Conscience.

An evil conscience is made manifest by the Truth, and is evinced by shame, and doubts and fears. John iii. 21.

A good conscience is characterized by a full assurance of faith and hope, founded upon an understanding of the gospel of the kingdom, in the name of Jesus, and obedience to it. The obedience of the faith gives the subject the answer of a good conscience. Col. ii. 2; Acts xvii. 31.

A seared conscience has no compunctions it is that condition of thinking flesh which results from the absence of all divine knowledge, and habitual sin; it is incurable. 1 Tim. iv. 1-2; Rom. i. 28.

David's Throne.

According to the promise made by God to the Israelitish fathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, he sent his servant Moses to lead his people Israel out of Egypt to the land of promise. Moses, because of disobedience, died in the wilderness, and was not permitted to enter the Holy Land. But Joshua by the command of God completed the task Moses begun. He led them into the Land and divided it unto them by lots, and there they did prosper into a kingdom. Ezek. xvi. 13. Rejecting God as their King, Saul the son of Kish was given to them for a king, but because of his unfaithfulness, God gave the kingdom to David, the son of Jesse, a man after his own heart, and to him he promised,—"Thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee; thy throne shall be established for ever." 2 Sam. vii. 16.

Just before he died we are told, "Now, these be the last words of David: David the son of Jesse, and the man who was raised up on high, the Anointed of the God of Jacob, and the sweet Psalmist of Israel said, the Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and his Word was in my tongue. The God of Israel spake to me, he that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God. And he shall be as the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain." 2 Sam. xxii. 1-4.

Again we read that God said, "I have made a covenant with my chosen. I have sworn unto David my servant, thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations.....Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established for ever as the moon, as a faithful witness in heaven." Psa. lxxxix. 34, 35. The prophet Isaiah says: "Unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall collect Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform this." Isa. ix. 6, 9.

"The descendants of David sat upon his throne for many generations. To the last one Zedekiah, God said, "Thou profane, wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end. Thus saith the Lord God, Remove the diadem, and take off the crown, this shall not be the same; exalt him that is low, abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it,—and it shall be no more until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him." Ez. xxi. 25-27.

"It is contended that the promise made by God to king David, in relation to his throne in the passages quoted, was fulfilled in the person of Solomon, but the last two show unmistakably that this was not so. The promise in Isaiah's prophecy was given some centuries after Solomon had gone to dust; and the one contained in Ezekiel speaks of the overturning of David's throne until the coming of the one to whom it belongs. Hence we must look to another than Solomon to fulfill the promise. "Turning to the New Testament, we find the angel Gabriel announcing the birth of Jesus to his mother Mary, and saying, "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 32, 33. Surely this looks like the one who is to fulfil the promise. Again we read, "Therefore (David), being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne." Acts ii. 30.

"After such evidence one would think it scarcely possible that any one would contend that the promise was fulfilled to Solomon. Yet, strange to say, the majority of those who profess to follow the Christ do so. No doubt the reason in many instances is a lack of knowledge of what is written in the Scriptures; while in other instances preconceived notions blind the eyes to the truth. Nevertheless, this promise is yea and amen in Christ Jesus, as are all the other promises of God; and in due time the Redeemer shall come out of Zion, and turn ungodliness from Jacob, build again the tabernacle of David that is fallen down, raise again the ruins thereof. Of him it is written: "He shall judge the people with righteousness and thy poor with judgment. He shall judge the poor of the people; he shall save the children of the needy and shall break in pieces the oppressor. He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass, as showers that water the earth." Psa. lxx. 2, 4, 6.

"Has not God declared that he will set his King upon his holy hill of Zion, and command him to ask of him, and he will give him the nations for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession? Hence it is written of him when he is enthroned in Zion, in fulfillment of the promise made unto his father David that "he shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." And that "They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him, and his enemies shall lick the dust. Yea, all kings shall fall down before him, all nations shall serve him."

Do you wish to live without a trial Then you wish to die but half a man—at the best but half a man. Without trial you cannot guess at your own strength. Men do not learn to swim on a table. They must go into the water and buffet the waves.

What Do We Believe?

Dear Restitution:

The question of what questions should be discussed in THE RESTITUTION and the manner of their consideration and discussion is one of the utmost importance. All contributors have the same object in view, that is, the advancement of the cause of the Master.

Should questions about which the brotherhood are not agreed be discussed? My answer is, yes, most assuredly, if the discussion is carried on in the right way and in the right spirit. Nothing like controversy should ever be indulged in. We cannot convince those who differ with us by "pitching into" their views. "Critics are born." It does not require any ability to criticise, and it does not do any good. Besides all that, I am unable to find any authority in the good Book which authorizes one brother to criticise and call in question the views of another brother, either in a newspaper article or in a public address. To do so is very unfair. Only a very few persons are able to write for publication or deliver public addresses. One thing we ought always to remember, that is this, the belief of those who differ with us is just as dear to them as our belief is to us. They are honest and cannot be driven from the views they hold. The power of the gospel for the conversion of the people and setting them right when in error, is in the gospel and not in the advocate. We may spend a life time in making an argument to disprove erroneous doctrines relating to the resurrection and not accomplish half as much as Job did by his affirmative statement when he said, "I know that my Redeemer liveth and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth." It will not do to cut off the consideration of questions about which the brotherhood are not fully agreed, but controversial discussion ought not be indulged in. It is not necessary to answer the argument of a brother who holds a different view from what we do. If we have no other means of enforcing our views, it shows that we may be standing on a sandy foundation. Let us all remember this. The Lord has not commissioned us to remove the error there is in the world. We are our brother's keeper, but we are not our brother's judge or critic in a sense that we may rebuke him in a public manner. But some one will say, if I cannot criticise the erroneous views of my brother or my neighbor, what can I do? Preach the gospel to a dying world with all the power God has given you, both from the public desk, in the columns of THE RESTITUTION and by your daily walk and conversation.

The question is asked, how are we to conduct ourselves toward those outside our church? One brother says that in one copy of THE RESTITUTION there was an article in which the writer held the view of the general resurrection of all the dead and also an article advocating the doctrine of the resurrection only of those who are in Christ. There is nothing wrong in this so long as each brother presented his views in a calm Christian spirit, allowing the brother who differs with him the privilege which he demanded for himself. One of the fundamental principles underlying the organization of the Church of God is the right of free thought. But we are not all at sea upon the fundamental questions underlying our faith and our belief.

For more than a quarter of a century THE RESTITUTION has been the recognized exponent of the views held by the Church of God. The short but concise statement of our belief contained in the upper right hand corner of the paper, is brief but explicit. It is a kind of index to our faith. I fear we do not read and ponder it as often as we should. I wish Bro. Underwood would set it up in large, leaded type and publish it on the editorial page for at least one week, so that each reader would be lead to read it carefully and ponder it well.

My recollection is that Bro. Chaplin, of blessed memory, wrote the statement, but it had the approval of the brotherhood generally and has been recognized for so many years, as an expression of our faith, that it ought not to be set aside, or added to without very careful consideration. About twenty-five years ago there was a general feeling in the churches that we ought to have a concise statement of our views printed, so that members of the church could, when asked what our views were, hand out this statement. The matter was canvassed and discussed for a long time. Conferences appointed committees to consider the matter. Finally the statement referred to above was written and published in THE RESTITUTION and has been kept standing ever since. It met with general approval and it was conceded that it was just what was wanted. I speak of this to show that this statement of our belief was not written and published without the questions having been thoroughly discussed, both in private, in the Conferences and through the paper. Bro. Chaplin being the Editor of the paper at the time, was in close touch with the views of the members of the church and very happily prepared a paper that met with general approval. Are we content with it? Have we been wrong all these years, and must we pull down this little beacon light and add too it and make it broad enough to include what is called the "broader hope," the "fair chance" and Universalism. Or must we make it narrow enough to suit the views of those who leave all the children in their graves?

Dearly beloved, we are in the last days of this dispensation when it is perhaps more difficult to hold fast the truth than it has been in other ages of the world. Jesus seemed to have had doubts as to whether he would find followers holding the faith when he shall come again. Let us strive to enter in by being faithful to the Master and charitable with each other.

Conference Report.

At Dutton, Michigan, June 1, 1901, Thursday evening, the Church of God is again convened for the purpose of holding another Annual Conference, a goodly number all gathered together, the hearty hand shaking, the earnest question about the truth of the gospel show where the heart is and already gives an impetus of inspiration for the coming days.

Ministers present: F. L. Austin, Argos, Indiana; C. Winchester, Byron Center, Michigan; M. A. Woodward, Dutton, Mich. Thursday evening meeting called to order by President H. C. Hammond, preaching by F. L. Austin, subject, "The Power." Friday morning 9:30 we enjoyed a good social meeting, with earnest prayers from several whose hearts were warmed to the work. Meeting led by Sister Chaffee, lesson Rom. viii. 10:30 Bro. Hammond changed the order of the meeting, Bro. Austin spoke again from Phil. ii. 12, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." 2:00 P. M., we had a very interesting sermon from M. A. Woodward, "The Holy Spirit." 7:00 P. M. social meeting led by Sister Emily Barnum, Col. i. 9, 13, "The new and living way;" followed with speaking from F. L. Austin. Saturday morning met for song and social meeting. 10:30 A. M. Bro. Hammond changed the order of meeting by announcing the time for business meeting. The minutes of the last Conference were read by the Secretary and approved. The Treasurer, A. K. Richardson, was unable to attend, having been very sick for nearly two weeks before the Conference, and was only able to sit up for a few minutes at the time. Treasurer's report was sent in by Bro. Edwin Conte. Report: amount on hand $53.08, June 4th, 1900; June 3rd, 1901, received during the past year from all sources, $165.59; payed out to the Evangelist, $102.00; Conference expenses $31.50. Moved and carried that the Treasurer's report be accepted.

Evangelist's report: days work 84; sermons, B. W. Woodward 112, funerals 3; sermons, M. A. Woodward, 87, funerals 9; those accepting Christ and being baptized 49. Moved and carried that our Evangelist's report be accepted.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Pres. L. D. Decker, Blanchard, Mich.; Vice Pres., Wm. Moses, Byron Center, Mich.; Secretary, Emma Jackman, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Treasurer, A. K. Richardson, Coate Grove, Barry Co., Mich.; B. W. and M. A. Woodward, Evangelists.

The attendance was good considering how many were sick. Bro. Woodward was very sick before Conference, and unable to attend any of the meetings, for which we were all very sorry. At the invitation from Bro. Austin two came forward for baptism, the ordinance was administered Sunday at 1:30 P. M. Those buried with Christ by baptism were Robert Henry Baird, Mrs. Alice Rebecca Myers. At the invitation Sunday morning four more came forward for baptism, the ordinance was administered Monday morning; Mrs. A. A. Rooker, Allen Richardson, Clara McCroden, Eva Eldridge. May they trust their Lord and Master for grace in every time of need and be faithful to the end. Several interesting letters were read from those unable to attend, which were enjoyed by all.

The meetings were all good but those of Sunday were especially so, and will long be remembered by all present. Bro. Austin's subject Sunday forenoon, "The kingdom," evening "The Resurrection." Thus it is that another good meeting has ended, its record is made, it may be the last, as it will be for some at least. So let us cherish the good in our hearts, that it may bring forth an hundred fold, and in the end everlasting life, is our prayer.

Letter to General Booth, Salvation Army.

Dear General Booth:

You will excuse a few words from a plain man older than yourself. I was present at your "campaign" all day on Sunday, 31st of March, not, however, for the first time. I have long considered your position as a standing rebuke to popular religious bodies, especially as regards home missions. The zeal and enthusiasm of the "Army" seem awanting elsewhere, except where imitation has obtained. To but few, however, is it given to be born orators, and to fewer still the will to use such a gift for a good end. Your aim seems to be to excite the feelings, certainly not, however, without some reasons from Scripture of a certain stamp.

While admitting all this I feel constrained to say, more than "one thing thou lackest." Is it not unapostolic to urge sinners to sing hymns? as well as to press excited persons to make public profession at a so called mercy-seat. But more serious than even these is the matter of your preaching. Did not the Apostles proclaim a certain truth for the intelligent belief of their hearers? Paul said, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." And again, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." Of course the gospel had its definite aspect. Paul said, "I know that ye all among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God shall see my face no more." He "dwelt two whole years in his own hired house.....preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things that concern the Lord Jesus Christ." We read, "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women."

This preaching was our Lord's own practice "I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also; for therefore am I sent." And he said, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness." The nature of this kingdom was well known to the Apostles, for they proclaimed it along with their Master for several years. They did not know the time of its restoration to Israel, having asked this question at a later period without a satisfactory answer.

The nature of this kingdom is further seen from the first gospel discourse by the Apostle Peter. He says, "Let me freely speak of the patriarch David.....that God had sworn with an oath to him that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne." See promise to Mary. Luke i. 32, 33. Nathanael confessed his Master in these words, "Thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel." John said—"These are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." That is, eternal life through belief that Jesus is the Christ—the King of Israel—raised up to sit on David's throne, when the kingdom is again restored to Israel. As Paul said, "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain."

The same Apostle predicted a departure from the faith. Was not "the faith" here just the faith concerning the kingdom referred to above? So-called Christendom has for many centuries possessed no such faith, although it was proclaimed everywhere in the first century.

It may be thought that such a "faith" as that described wants the so-called evangelical elements of sacrifice, atonement, etc.; but the fact is these always went along with it. See Acts viii. 12; xxviii. 31, etc. Has not the Almighty a perfect sovereign right to make his own terms of salvation. How very few texts of a certain stamp, are sufficient for such preaching as yours? for what an "officer" called a "short cut to salvation?" But may it not be too "short" to ensure success?

Just a word on the immortality of the soul. You say it is assumed in the Bible. But is not the opposite of this expressly declared? "Shall mortal be more just than God?" "Let not mortal man prevail against thee." 2 Chron. xiv. 11. Margin. Do not we read of "saving a soul from death?" And is not "death the wages of sin?" And is not future life for man dependent on living again by a resurrection from the dead, rather than by a surviving soul apart from the body, of which Scripture is silent?

These brief notes respectfully submitted by

Editor Restitution:

I will be at Morse Mills, Mo., June 10th, at the dedication of the new church, and, the Lord wills, will preach the dedication sermon, which will be dedicated to the Lord and all of the Lord's followers. A cordial invitation is extended to all. All come that can. Truly yours,

JOHN FOORE.

Brother Underwood:

Will you kindly insert a notice in THE RESTITUTION stating that Sister C. E. Hatch, who is visiting in Indiana desires to return to California the latter part of June and would be glad to correspond with any one who contemplated coming to Los Angeles during this month. She is in poor health and dreads to make the trip alone. She went back with father (J. S. Hatch) in March. Thinking some of the brethren or sisters might contemplate a trip out here I take this method of finding company for her. Hoping you may favor us I remain your Brother in Christ. Address Tustin, Cal.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

For Our Children.

Rover in Church.

'Twas a Sunday morning in early May,
A beautiful, sunny, quiet day,
And all the village, old and young,
Had trooped to church when the church bell rung.
The windows were open, and breeze sweet
Fluttered the hymn-books from seat to seat,
Even the birds in the pale-leaved birch
Sang as softly as if in church!

Right in the midst of the minister's prayer
There came a knock at the door. "Who's there,
I wonder?" the gray-haired sexton thought,
As his careful ear the tapping caught.
Rap-rap, rap-rap—a louder sound,
The boys on the back seat turned around.
What could it mean? For never before
Had any one knocked at the old church door.
Again the tapping, and now so loud
The minister paused (though his head was bowed)
Rap-pety-rap! This will never do;
The girls were peeping, and laughing, too!
So the sexton tripped o'er the creaking floor,
Lifted the latch and opened the door.

In there trotted a big black dog
As big as a bear! With a sedate jog
Right up the centre isle he pattered;
People might stare; it little mattered.
Straight he went to a little maid,
Who blushed and hid as though afraid,
And there sat down, as if to say,
"I'm sorry that I was late today;
But better late than never, you know;
Besides, I waited an hour or so,
And couldn't get them to open the door
Till I wagged my tail and bumped the floor.
Now, little mistress, I'm going to stay,
And hear what the minister has to say!"

The poor little girl hid her face, and cried!
But the big dog nestled close to her side,
And kissed her, dog fashion, tenderly,
Wondering what the matter could be!
The dog being large (and the sexton small),
He sat through the sermon and heard it all,
As solemn and wise as any one there,
With a very dignified, scholarly air!
And instead of scolding, the minister said,
After the service, "I never knew
Two better listeners than Rover and you!"

The Story of Israel. No. 101.

ON THE BORDERS OF CANAAN.

Our lesson for to-day gives the laws of war, as God himself gave them through Moses to Israel. They are good laws and show the mercy and thoughtful love of the Lord toward his people.

I once knew a man who became very angry when the thought was expressed, that God had something to do with war. What do you think about it children?

"He says he 'is a man of war,' it is in Exodus xv. 3. The wars of Israel are called 'the wars of the Lord,' Num. xxi. 14, and David said 'He teacheth my hands to war, and my fingers to fight.' Psalm cxliv. 1. He declares that 'Israel is his battle-axe and weapons of war,'—the instrument, with which he will 'break in pieces the nations, and destroy kingdoms,' Jer. li. 20, will 'thresh the mountains and beat them small, and make the hills as chaff, and fan them, 'so that the wind will carry them away and the whirlwind scatter them,' and his people rejoice in the Lord and glory in the Holy One of Israel.' He calls them 'his servant' and promises to 'help and uphold them' in their wars; and that 'they who war against them shall be as nought.' Isa. xli. 15, 16; x. 11, 12. But Israel of the ten tribes was carried away captive in the days of Isaiah, so the prophecy of the breaking of the nations into fragments, by the hands of Israel, as Daniel also foretells, was to be fulfilled after his time.

It is said, even of Jesus, in Revelations, that 'in righteousness he doth judge and make war.' It looks as if he himself, would take the oversight of the great war that is to settle the fate of Palestine, does'nt it Auntie?

It certainly does. The "sharp sword," or word of command, goes out of his mouth and it is his army that "smites the nations." These things are but a little way before us, and we must be watchful. But you must have used your concordance, Nova, to find out so much?

"I did. I like to learn all I can about such questions as these."

What is said in our lesson, Earl, as to the Lord's being "a man of war?"

"It says, 'For the Lord your God is he that goeth with you to fight for you against your enemies to save you."

That is right, and we may be sure that God has always had something to do with the wars of his people. Even in their defeat and captivity he was with them and watched over them. His promises, are to them for a thousand generations. He will never give them up. He has said "they shall not cease from being a nation before him forever," and we can no more break that covenant than we can break the laws of the sun and moon and stars. So that there shall not be day and night in their season. Jer. xxxi. 35–38.

The wars, the destinies of all nations, have been over-ruled so that his plans for the children of Israel might be carried out. Everything on earth has been made to revolve around this people, just as the earth, and all the planets, with their central sun revolve around the greater sun of Alcyone.

To them, "were committed the oracles," or Word of the Lord. The light of salvation emanates from them; just as light and heat comes from our sun. God has bought and taught them, that they might be used of him in saving and blessing other nations.

"Yes. I know, Auntie, I have been reading the 8th chapter of Deuteronomy. One of my playmates said he 'wondered why God monkeyed so long with the Children of Israel.' I think he had better read that chapter, don't you?"

Yes, but what did you find in the chapter, Edna?

"That the Lord humbled them and suffered them to hunger, and fed them with manna, that he might make them know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every Word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord, doth man live,'—'that he might prove them and do them good at their latter end,' and 'establish the covenant which he sware unto their fathers.'"

And that covenant was what?

"That 'in them and their seed should all the nations of the earth be blessed.'"

Well done for you Edna, but we must get at our chapter at once or we shall not get through with it.

What was the first of the laws of war, Ward?

"When they went out to battle with their enemies and saw horses and chariots and a people more than they that they were not to be afraid, because the Lord who had brought them up out of the land of Egypt was with them."

What was the second law, Myrtle?

"When they had come near to the battle that the priest should approach and speak to the people, to let not their hearts faint, to fear not, nor trouble, nor be terrified, because the Lord would go with them and fight for them."

And the third law, Harold?

"The officers were to come forward after the priests, and were to send home all the men who had built new houses, and had not dedicated them; all who had planted vineyards and had not eaten of the fruit; and all who had betrothed wives and had not taken them,—lest these men die in battle, and other men get their houses, the fruit of their vines, and their promised wives. And besides these, all the cowards were also to be sent home."

Why, Harold?

"Because, when in battle, if the cowards started to run, it would create confusion and make their brethren's heart faint as well as their heart."

That is right. Soldiers cannot do much with a pack of cowards among them. To win the battle, every man must stand firm at his post. God made this law to protect his dear soldiers from defeat.

What next Glen?

"Captains were to be made to lead the people."

What about the cities, Harvey?

"They were first to proclaim peace to the city they had come against, and if it made an answer of peace and opened its gates; its people were to be made tributaries. If not, it was to be besieged, and taken, the men slain, and the women, the little ones, the cattle, and all the spoil taken for themselves.

About what cities was this to be the law, Jessie?

"It was to apply to the cities that were very far off from the Israelites."

What was the law in reference to the cities of the Hittites, the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Hivites and the Jebusites, Gracie?

"Nothing that breathed, was to be saved alive."

Was this a merciful law, Harold?

"I think it was. These people did such dreadful things in the names of their gods, that if they had been spared, God's purposes for Israel could never have been carried out. They would have put out the light of his Word entirely with their abominable teachings and there would have been no people left in the world to give liberty and light and joy to the rest. It was better to destroy the few, and save Israel, that they might save the world, wasn't it Auntie?"

Indeed it was. We should never have known the blessings of freedom, of virtue and of peace that we now enjoy in our happy land, if the people of Canaan had all been spared. The blessings of to-day have come to us from what happened in the past through the merciful foresight of our God.

What was the last law in regard to conducting war, Cleo?

"That no fruit-bearing trees were to be cut down and used in besieging a city, but that other trees might be used in building bulwarks."

Have you found any other laws about war, Edna?

"Yes, I have. In the 23rd chapter of Deuteronomy the Lord says to Israel, 'When the host goeth forth against thine enemies, then keep thee from every wicked thing,' and farther on, that the camp must be holy, no unclean thing be seen in it, not even of filth, when the Lord walks in the midst of it, to deliver them or to give up their enemies before them."

Thank you, Edna. That is a good lesson for us in these days. Well it would be for our nation, if they would learn and practice it. But what shall our lesson be about the next time?

"The blessings and the curses, Auntie."

All right, Neva. We will see about it. Deut. xxvii. and xxviii.

Education. No. 10.

[The following article is one of a series of ten written by Bro. J. F. Gellerly, of Williston, Md., on various educational subjects, and are calculated to expose many of the theories of supposedly "advanced teachers." Though differing somewhat from our usual style of topics, yet we trust they will be helpful to our readers, especially the younger classes of students. They were originally written for and published in the Denton Journal, and necessarily have some expressions that refer to local surroundings.—ED.]

SIN; THE TRANSGRESSION OF LAW.

"And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eye, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat; and gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat."—Gen. iii. 6.

"Who told thee that thou wast naked?" Now this would be a strange question to propound to one who had differentiated from a baboon or a gorilla. He could find such a thing out for himself when the weather got cold; then, doubtless, he would throttle a calf, eat out the carcass, haul out the bones and crawl inside for shelter, and there you have your primeval and sinless scientist. But the nakedness implied in the scrutinising inquiry quoted above looks one in the eye a great deal squarer than even the vital question of keeping out the cold. All the lower animals know about the cold and take shelter from it, and kind husbandmen blanket their horses, and sometimes their cows. Fair ladies, also, have dapper little suits made for their lap dogs, and so have organ grinders for their monkeys; but there is just that mysterious something that we have discovered that the monkey, the dog or the horse cannot be made to understand, and wherever members of the race of man are, no matter if it is too hot to wear even a shirt collar, as they grow to maturity they make manifest the fact that they are human, by some sort of a tag, and so the story of Eden is corroborated and the race of man, along with the royal badge of authority, bears, also, the strange brand of shame.

Let us consider that simple story. The original pair were a magnified boy and girl, so far as innocence is concerned. Living in rural simplicity, on good terms with all the other creatures, which doubtless were all more or less pets. Among these creatures was one of particularly bright intelligence, far overtopping that of the dog, for instance. This animal was loving, beautiful, and, like all the other things in the garden, "very good," in its way; and doubtless as it had learned to talk by the educational efforts of Eve herself it would naturally be held in all the higher esteem. Note, particularly, that in the text of Genesis there is not the slightest suggestion that the serpent acted through malice to the woman and, in fact, the statement that God afterward "put enmity between it and the woman," precludes the idea that such had existed previously. As to the introduction of a foreign emissary from a red-hot, liquid world, such misconstruction of plain language, and such calumny on the watchful care of a fatherly Creator, is absolutely void of all truth. There is no mention of any thing unnatural in the incident, no fallen fiend instigating it, and, it was a fair, open, bona fide test, and many of us would have been deceived under the circumstances.

Now it may be premised that only our first parents were forbidden to "eat of the tree in the midst of the garden." The prohibition was not to the serpent. Though it is not stated we may conclude from the context that he had eaten of it, and that, moreover, the effect on his nature was somewhat similar to what it afterwards had on Adam and Eve—his brute intelligence was brightened by it—and he proved it to be "good for food." This was what "the woman saw." She could have "seen" in no other way the proof positive that the prohibited fruit was not poison, as she had supposed. The serpent-reasoning was pretty good as a "scientific theory," based on a narrow limit of known fact, but what staggered Eve, and what would have staggered any of us, was that the theory was evidently borne out by ocular demonstration. This is the important question: Did Eve violate the divine injunction of her own free will, and by her own judgment, or was she unduly constrained or hypnotized by a "foreign devil?" In the famous picture, by Michael Angelo, of "The Temptation," the serpent is represented by the figure of a man, with a snake's tail, handing out the fruit to the woman; but the text says that she "took of the fruit," implying that she acted on her own judgment, and the deception was all the more culpable on account of the fact that she was deceived by an intelligence infinitely inferior to herself. This is the point emphasized in the Genesis story, and in the Oriental imagery of Bible the "seed of the serpent" are the degraded race; those who lack the higher perception, the "spiritual mind;" those who reason from sight and sense, and not from faith; those who act from expediency and not from principle.

As to the rest of the story Paul tells us that "Adam was not deceived" (1 Tim. ii. 14). Evidently he decided to stick to his wife through thick and thin. Most men do this. It is generally what they ought to do. And now let us see how they were punished. Is there anything in this simple story of eternal barbecuing, such as some loud-voiced ignoramuses, even in the light of the twentieth century, hallos proselytes to the mourning-bench with? I trow not. On the man was imposed work. When you come to think of it that is not so much of a curse. The sturdy old Scotch philosopher, Thomas Carlyle, used to harp about the "gospel of work." And, indeed, work and the trouble that accrues from it has been the chief means by which we as human beings have arrived at the present height of our knowledge and power. For the woman there was that inflicted which makes her offspring dearer than life. Both these curses were in fact blessings in disguise, as all future history has proven. For the rest—the limitation of the period of existence—we were only deprived of what we in no wise could claim. There is no evidence that the other races were at any time exempt from death. In fact, our first parents must have been familiar with the extinction of life, in other forms else the word "die" would have no meaning to them. As to the serpent it was relegated to a position in the scale of nature where it could do no further harm. To humanity in a perfect state such an animal would be quite an acquisition in our list of "domestic." Under present conditions it would be a constant danger, as its intelligence could be so utilized for evil.

Now in all these dealings of our Creator it will be perceived by the intelligent reader that both the impossibilities and the limitations were merciful provisions under the changed circumstances. There are no fiery threats, no triumph of vindictive fiends, and so forth. The whole procedure was in fact the divine introduction of a process of discipline by which and through which alone, so far as we can see, the human race could have acquired the experience which we even now are in possession of; and if, in the matter of eternal life, the door of hope was closed it was left, as we may say, on the latch. And as the rest of the Biblical story continues it is only a relation of the further careful dealing of the heavenly Father to bring about, in a more perfect way, by a much superior and enlightened race, a "paradise restored."

The Coming Kingdom.

Following is a synopsis of a sermon delivered by Elder P. H. Bonk at the residence of Mr. Lent in Salamanca, N. Y.

"And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 29.

We will endeavor to speak from the above text as embracing two definite points, viz: First, How may we become Christ's, and second, the benefit to be obtained by becoming Christ's.

The context shows us briefly how individuals may become Christ's, or the children of God. In the 26th and 27th verses of the above chapter Paul says: "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ."

God has manifested his love toward man in a very important manner in the gift of his Son, whom he qualified to perform the work given him to do. Hence, Jesus could say, "As the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given the Son to have life in himself." And he said to his disciples: "Because I live you shall live also." Again, he said, "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore, and have the keys of death and the grave." And on account of this qualification he is able to raise up the dead saints at the last day and give them a life that will never end. But before this could be accomplished it was necessary that he abolish death (render it ineffectual) and bring life and immortality to light through the gospel. This he has accomplished by his own death and resurrection.

Paul has said: "For when we were without strength in due time Christ died for the ungodly. Rom. v. 12. Again he said: "For if when we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more being reconciled we shall be saved by his life." He was delivered for our offenses and was raised again for our justification.

This salvation has been manifested to us through the gospel. It has pleased God through the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. In this gospel is revealed to us how we may become reconciled to God and become redeemed or delivered from the bondage of sin and its penalty, which is death.

God has spoken to man at different times and in divers manners, and has in these last days spoken to us by his Son, and it has been said that whosoever will not hear him shall be destroyed. Oh, how important then that we hear him in all things! God has had his own way in every dispensation by which to save them that believe.

Paul said in Rom. vi. that though they were sinners, they had obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered them; being then made free from sin they became the servants of righteousness, and the end would be life everlasting life. The above quotation is in harmony with the commission as given by Christ to the Apostles just before his ascension. Repentance and remission of sins was to be preached in his name, beginning at Jerusalem. See Luke xxiv. For the fulfillment of this please read Acts ii. Those who obeyed on that occasion continued steadfast in the Apostle's teaching.

From the above considerations we can see the propriety of Paul's statement in the 27th verse of the chapter, which contains our text, viz: "For as many of you as were baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise."

In the second place we will show some of the benefits to be obtained by becoming Christ's. Paul says we are Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. The first intimation we have of this promise you will find in Gen. xii. and xiii. As recorded in the 12th chapter, God calls Abraham out from his country and tells him he will show him a land. And the account shows they came unto the land of Canaan. In the 18th chapter, 14th verse, it is stated that the Lord told Abraham to look north, south, east and west and all the land he saw he would give to him and his seed for ever.

Paul referring to this promise in the 16th verse of Gal. iii. says that the seed referred to is Christ, and by becoming Christ's we become heirs of the same promise. And in the 18th verse he says that God gave it to Abraham by promise. And Stephen shows in Acts vii. that Abraham died without the fulfillment of said promise; therefore it remains to be fulfilled.

This position is also sustained by what Paul says in Heb. xi. 8th to 16th verses. He says Abraham with Isaac and Jacob, heirs with him of the same promise sojourned as strangers in the land of promise: and they as well as a multitude of others died in the faith, not having received the promises, but they saw them afar off and lived as strangers and as pilgrims, looking for a better country. Yes, a country where they would be permitted to enjoy it forever, according to the promise, which cannot be fulfilled in this mortal state, from the fact that man is not physically qualified in the present state to live forever.

This promise made to Abraham is in harmony with many more precious promises contained in the Holy Scriptures. The promise made by Jesus to his Apostles is quite in harmony with the promise to Abraham. He said, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." Again said David in Psalm xxxvii.: "The meek shall inherit the earth and delight themselves in the abundance of peace." And also, "Their inheritance shall be forever." Jesus said to those on his right hand at the judgment: "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." And David, speaking of the same subject, says "For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth, and they that be cursed of him shall be cut off." Here you notice we come to the real outcome of the matter; each one gets into its proper place or condition. The blessed inherit the earth and the cursed are cut off; or as is elsewhere stated, are destroyed.

Further, as respects the future home of God's people, Daniel vii. 27, says, "The kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

This will be fulfilled when the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord, and he shall reign forever and ever. See Rev. xi. 15. Then will the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Then will the redeemed come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy, and sorrow and mourning will flee away. May the time soon come.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

The Nickel Plate Road offers low excursion rates to Denver, Colorado Springs, Glenwood Springs, Col.; Ogden and Salt Lake City, Utah; Hot Springs, S. D.; St. Paul and Duluth, Minn. Tickets on sale from June 18th to Sept. 10th, good to return until Oct. 31st. Write, wire, 'phone or call on nearest agent, or C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Sept. 10.

One of the most remarkable but least-noticed facts in connection with the war in the Transvaal is the extreme youth of a large part of General De Wet's army. When hostilities broke out almost every grown man enlisted, even the enfeebled, but the pace has been too rapid for the venerable burghers. As they were killed or incapacitated their places have gradually been taken by mere school children, many only thirteen or fourteen years of age. Under the title of "The Youngest Soldiers in the World," in the June Cosmopolitan Allen Sanger throws more light on the make-up and life of General De Wet's commandoes than anything hitherto published. The naive, simple letter from fourteen-year-old Deneys Reitz to his father, the Secretary of the Transvaal Republic, has seldom been equalled for vital interest by any carefully written article on the war.

The Nickel Plate Road will sell 4th of July excursion tickets on July 3rd and 4th, good returning until July 5th, inclusive, at one fare for the round trip, good only within a distance of 200 miles. Write, wire, phone or call on nearest agent, or C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind., or R. J. Hamilton, Agent, Ft. Wayne, Ind.—July 3.

To Illinois brethren in special and all brethren in general:

Recently the Building Committee of the Illinois State Conference made a call through these columns for aid in raising a fund to build a suitable Conference building—not to use as a place of worship—but a building in which delegates may be entertained while in attendance at the Conference. The church in Oregon is large enough for all the meetings, having a seating capacity of about two hundred. Many generously answered this first call and the committee desires in this general way to thank all who have subscribed not only their money but also their words of encouragement. To them this second call is not directed, for we believe you have done well your part. We have now about $275.00 on hand. We need yet, at the very lowest estimate, $75.00. To put up a suitable building with lumber at its present price, we should have $400.00. This item is written to invite any who have not yet subscribed to do so in any amount, however small. Send remittance to the chairman of the committee who will promptly receipt for the same. Time and space forbid discussion as to the merits of locating the Conference permanently. Suffice it to say that we believe that when the plan is once in working order, all will be pleased with it. Building Committee consists: S. J. Lindsay, Chairman, Oregon, Ill.; J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Ill.; E. F. Gesin, Forreston, Ill.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and post-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Pan-American Exposition Rates to Buffalo via the Nickel Plate Road. Tickets now on sale at all stations, one and one-third fare for round trip, good returning 15 days. Write, wire, 'phone or call on nearest agent, or C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind. —Aug. 1

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Visit Winona Lake.

Winona Lake, Ind., on the Pennsylvania Lines, is an attractive summer haven for persons who desire to combine devotion, entertainment and instruction with rest and recreation. This resort is the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, and is annually visited by many persons who are strengthened in mind by the excellent facilities for educational work, and invigorated in body by the health-giving influences for which Winona Lake is famous.

The season for 1901 will open May 15th. Commencing on that date excursion tickets with fifteen-day limit will be on sale via Pennsylvania Lines. They may be obtained during May, June July and August. The sale of season excursion tickets will also begin May 15th and continue daily until September 14th. Excursion tickets will be good returning until September 17th.

Full information about the attractions at "Beautiful Winona," its Assembly and Summer School, etc., will be cheerfully furnished all who address Mr. Sol. C. Dickey, Secretary, Winona Lake, Ind. Inquiries about excursion rates, time of trains, etc., should be addressed to Passenger and Ticket Agents of the Pennsylvania Lines, or to F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa. —June 29.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 80 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Poetry.

Thy Will be Done.

Shadows gather round me—yet
Thy will be done.
Even me, Thou'lt not forget—
Thy will be done.
Tho' the way seems dark and long,
I will cheer it with a song,
I am weak but thou art strong—
Thy will be done.

Sorrow's cup pours out its woe—
Thy will be done.
But despite I will not know,
Thy will be done.
Tho' dark billows round me roll,
I will strive to reach the goal.
Echoes still my troubled soul,
"Thy will be done."

Fiery troubles must be passed—
Thy will be done.
Then will keep me till the last,
Thy will be done.
Tho' the waves of sorrow's sea
Fiercely dash and threaten me,
Still I say, "I trust in Thee—
Thy will be done!"

Going Shares.

READ AT MICHIGAN CONFERENCE.

Do you know, dear ones, that Paul thanked God upon every remembrance of his Philippian brethren; always in every prayer making request for them with joy? And knowing it, do you know the reason for his thankfulness? It was for their fellowship in the gospel, and the literal meaning of this fellowship says an English writer, is "going shares." What a beautiful thought it is, this going shares in the work of the Lord! No wonder that Paul thanked God that he had found some courageous souls at Philippi; willing and glad to embark with him in such a grand business venture as the defence and confirmation of the gospel, and prayed that they might be "partakers of his grace," abounding in love, in knowledge and in judgment, that they might be found sincere and without offence in the day of the Lord Jesus."

"Going shares," how do you like the idea? To me, it is a delightful one. We might put our money into the Board of Trade, but we would be sure to lose it; or take shares in some great canal scheme, only to see it collapse. Investing it for God, it is sure to pay. Let us stop and look at Paul. When writing the Philippian letter he was a prisoner at Rome. He had put everything into the cause of Christ, that he might "go shares" with him in the merciful work of saving lost and ruined man. But he had been arrested, tried, and sent to the city of the seven hills, that the spread of the gospel through him might be stopped. Was it? Even the soldier-guards to whom he was chained were changed six times a day, and he had six men to preach to instead of one, and into the palace of Cæsar and into the Pretorium, went the glad tidings! The chains that were meant to keep him from telling the story of Jesus and the coming kingdom had given him one of the best opportunities in the world to "further the gospel." And his brethren, "waxing confident by his bonds were much more bold to speak the Word of God without fear." The courage of their leader, though "an ambassador in chains" gave them courage; if he could magnify Christ in such a position, whether by continued life or by death,—could make his life in bonds tell for Christ; or his death prove gain to Christ, surely they need not be ashamed, but might with all boldness do the same; might "take shares" with him in persecution, in shame, in death. But it took money to carry on evangelistic work, even by the imprisoned Paul, and this the Philippians were careful to remember. They cared for his temporal needs; they communicated with him in his affliction, and Paul rejoiced. The things sent by the hand of Epaphroditus had an odor of sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing to God. He had not desired the gift, but he had desired "fruit that might abound to their account," and assured them, that "God would supply all their need, according to the riches of his glory in Christ Jesus." And what minister of the gospel does not desire gifts from the members of his church for this very reason? Fruit cannot abound to the account of any person unless he has educated himself to bring the gift. It is not his own comfort that the minister wants, but it is the saved souls. These are "the fruits" that he prays for; that the gifts will enable him to win. And fruit did abound to the account of the Philippian brethren. Imprisoned in his own hired house, Paul begat many children in his chains. A crowd pressed upon him daily, and some even of the Jews believed when they heard him expounding and testifying the kingdom of God, and persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses and out of the prophets," but from the Gentilized house of Israel did most of his converts come, for unto them was the salvation of God sent and they heard it, became obedient believers and kept the glad message to carry it on to others. We know this people as the Vaudois and Waldenses of later times, and in them lay the roots of the great Reformation, our civil and religious liberty, the blessings of civilization, the committing of the oracles of God into our keeping, and the sending of the blessed Bible to them that "sit in darkness and the shadow of death." And all this in part the fruit of that Philippian gift to Paul when in Rome! Thinking of it can we ever henceforth, despise the day of small things? And though Paul himself preached only in Rome, he had faithful messengers who preached in all parts of the Roman empire and who kept up intercourse between him and all the churches. We do not know whether the Philippians helped in this work or not, in a direct way, but if not, they helped by helping Paul. Luke and Timothy, Domas and Mark, Aristarchus, Epaphras, Epaphroditus and Onesimus, with Tychicus, were his attendants and messengers, and some of these probably lived with him during all the years of his confinement, for he calls them "fellow-prisoners."

But we turn now to Macedonian givers. They, too, took shares in the great investment of bringing in the kingdom. In sending their bounty to the poor saints at Jerusalem, they gave out of deep poverty—the very word used here for "poverty," meaning "beggary." They were as poor as beggars and yet the abundance of their joy at having found Christ impelled them to give down to the very depths, and not stinted gifts either, but what Paul counted "riches of liberality" and this too, of their own accord, when in "a great testing of affliction." There was no need to beg of them to give for "God's glory and man's good," instead of this they besought Paul "to grant them the favor of sharing in the ministering unto the saints." Such a spectacle is not often seen in these days. Think of it, dear ones, when you are tempted not to give for the cause of Christ. The poorest one in our ranks is not so poor as were those beggared Macedonians. I am so glad that Paul told us the story.

The life-sketch of a little boy in a recent number of the Young Pilgrim, put me in mind of these Macedonians. It made me ashamed. It made me feel as if I had never prized the Bible as I ought, nor known him "whom to know aright is life eternal."

The little boy had been born a cripple. He could not earn money as we can, but before his mother died, he had often dragged himself of evenings to a mission hall in the vicinity that he might warm his poor benumbed limbs. He did not think much about what he heard at the time, but afterwards, when compelled to take to his bed in the attic room of an old granny, it came back to his mind and he longed to know more about the things of God.

One day he was presented with an English shilling by a boy companion, and plead that it might be invested in a Bible. He wanted a Bible; it had become the one prayer of his heart, the longing of his life to get in possession of that book. Food, clothes, bedding and fuel were almost wanting in his cheerless home, but more than these did he want the Bible, that he might find out "if the mission folks told true about some one they called Jesus." His friend was reluctant. What could a little, helpless boy do with a Bible? It was only for scholars. It had taken him months to earn the shilling and now to spend it all for a book! But persuaded at last he ran down to Fisher's shop, and telling what he wanted, was assured that he could leave to the orphan no better friend as a parting gift, and that "it might be worth to him a thousand pounds," satisfied that "there was suthin in the book," that he as well as the orphan ought to know about," he bought it, placed it in his comrades' hands and went his way. The two, never met again, but the little cripple poured over his Bible until he found that Jesus was indeed his Savior, and that "obedience to God's will meant helping to save others." He wanted at once to "go shares," in the work with Jesus. "It would not do to keep the news to himself," he said, so he devised a plan.

He told his old granny-friend that if she would get him a paper, he would give up the milk she gave him every day. She consented. His bed stood by a window that overlooked the street. He wrote down texts on his paper, and directing them "to the passer-by," dropped them down, one of these texts struck the hat of a man. It read, "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work." Though a professed Christian he had not been working for Jesus, and the text came to him like a command from God. He went up the stairs and said, "Are you the boy who drops the texts from the window?"

The answer was, "Yes, have ye heard as some one as has got hold of one?"

"Plenty, lad, plenty!" was the gentleman's reply, "would you believe it, if I told you that I picked up one last evening and God blessed it to my soul?"

"I can believe in God's Word doing anything, sir," was the humble answer.

"I am come to thank you," said the gentleman.

"Not me, sir! I only does the writin; he does the blessin."

"And are you happy in this work for Christ," said the visitor.

"Couldn't be happier, sir, I don't think nothin of the pain in my back, for shan't I be glad when I see him, to tell him that as soon as I know'd about him I did all I could to serve him? I suppose you gets lots o' chances sir?"

Then the gentleman was obliged to confess that he had neglected his chances, and that the words of his sick and dying boy, "Father I wish I had done some work for Jesus; I cannot bear to meet him empty-handed" had been ringing in his ears for two days and nights before the text struck his hat and that now he was going home to work for the Master."

The cripple was greatly pleased and after telling the man his own brief story, said, "Are the people happy who have lots to give him, sir?"

The visitor was obliged to confess that thousands who profess to belong to Jesus, and "who have time, talents and money, do little or nothing for him."

The cripple's quick reply was, "They don't know him, sir, knowin' is lovin' and lovin' is doin', it ain't love without."

The child was provided for by his friend, but not even for the sake of dying easy, when Jesus died so hard, would he give up his work, but kept at it until the end came. And now for the fruits of the little lad's gift for Christ.

After he had offered a simple, touching prayer for the gentleman, the latter went home, built a mission hall on his own place, and becoming a minister, led many to Jesus. But this was not all. There was much more fruit to abound to the cripple boy's account. He died and his Bible was sent to the youngest son of his friend. That son was led to the Savior by a wish or prayer of the orphan, written on the fly-leaf of the book, and went as a missionary to Central Africa, to "go shares" in the furtherance of the gospel there.

"Going shares"—are you willing to "go shares" now? If a little cripple boy, almost freezing and starving, gave to Jesus in the abundance of his joy, cannot you, who have so much more? If not, then indeed you do not know him. Have you, who have been paying tithes, been blessed in the faithful return to the Lord of his own money? I should like to find the person who has not. I never came across such an one.

No matter how poor we are, the tenth of what we earn belongs to God. It is his and we have no right to use it, not even in our direst need, not even for our dead! It is robbery to do it. When will we ever learn that blessing comes only in the path of obedience? "Will a man rob God?" Put the emphasis on the words "a man" and see how it sounds—a man rob God? Few would go into a church and take money from the church treasury and yet they are doing every day what is just as bad. They have "gone away from God's ordinances and have not kept them." They have robbed him in "tithes and offerings" and been "cursed with a curse." Bring all the tithes into his store-house. Let not one keep back that which belongs to God, no matter how small the sum, and you will see the windows of heaven open and the blessing poured out, until there is not room to receive it.

Conversions? Why do we not see them? They are the fruits of joyful giving, God will not vouchsafe them to us unless we give. "Bring ye all the tithes," and God will "rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground, neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of Hosts." Have I been blessed in paying my tithes? Indeed, I have. It is "abundant joy" to me to "sow by all waters," as the Lord prospers me. Shall I distrust him now, when a poor cripple, I stand before him, unable to earn the money I so delight in returning to him, my dear banker? There will be some way; if I cannot give, he can raise up those who can. Has my earthly store decreased in paying tithes, or in bringing to the Lord my free-will offerings? Never once! And my dear, J. L. W. can say the same. The more we have given, the more we have been able to give. Launch out, dear ones, on the promises of God. Be faithful in handling that which is another man's. Pay over to him every penny that is his. Do not rob the great God of heaven, obey him and be blessed and kept, and saved at last.

Short Sermons. No. 19.

Unequal yoking forbidden. The Apostle to the Gentiles, he who had the care of all the churches to look after, in his instruction to the church at Corinth (which church had its full share of toil and trouble) tells them not to be unequally yoked together with unbelievers; telling them why, by asking for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? This one cause—this yoking up with unbelievers—has been the source of a world of trouble in all time past. God was careful to instruct and warn his people of olden time at this point, and yet they were stubborn and rebellious and self-willed, and were constantly in trouble by taking their own course. Their present self-interest or selfishness caused them to shut their eyes to their better judgment and divine instruction. And while they were constantly prone to evil, they suffered and paid dear for their lesson. God, for good reasons, told his people to keep themselves separate from other people, and not to marry and inter-marry with them, as this would be a snare to entrap and lead them astray; and cause them to follow after strange gods, and thus forget the living and true God. The human heart being prone to evil, and the inducements of the enemy so numerous and pleasing to the carnal mind, God's purchased people were daily exposed, and entrapped by those deceptive sins. And oh, how humiliating it must have been when orders came from headquarters for those refractory ones to separate and break off those human bonds and unholy alliances, and be a separate people. The history of this ancient, typical people, their ups and downs, are written for our instruction, to the intent that we should not lust after evil things as they did. And today with all of our past experience and hard lessons, we find ourselves slow to believe and profit by our mistakes and that of others. So many are blind to their best interests. It is always best to follow the instruction of the Lord in all things. So many men and women, too, make the sad mistake of their life when looking for a partner, a helpmate, by yoking up with some one of an entire different disposition or turn of mind, or of a different creed and a different faith. They overlook these mighty matters, and oftimes deceive themselves with the idea "I can reform him," which I am sorry to say oftimes turns the other way. And then we are in a trap and have all our life to rue our folly. For a man or woman who loves the Bible, and desires above all else to live an humble Christian life, to yoke up with an unbeliever, or one of an entire different turn of mind, one whose mind and ambition and great desire is to toil day in and day out for political fame, or for the perishable things of this life, surely have missed their calling—missed the mark, and missed it all but an unhappy life. It is much like yoking up a good quiet ox with a wild Texas steer. It is very risky at best, and full of trouble. Just so it is unwise to yoke up in church capacity with unbelievers, and the fruits and follies of all such unions are manifest in most all churches and in most all families. The preachers are at fault in part, and do not use good judgment, they are over anxious about the number of fishes, and not so much the kind and quality, seeming to forget that the bad fish are to be sorted out and thrown away. They lay more stress on sincerity and joining the church, than on a correct faith, hope and life. And thus church rows and church meetings follow in quick succession. And there is no real genuine fellowship and agreement between such diverse metals. A little silver mixed up with a lot of lead and dross, wood, hay and stubble, and a constant friction among the different metals. Just so young people, yes, and old ones too, in their haste to yoke up with some one, often make matters much worse and themselves and all about them miserable for a life time. When if they had studied human nature a little more, and been more careful in their selection and choice, they might have been well suited and mated, and had a life of sunshine and happiness. By all means never yoke up with an unbeliever, it matters not what they say or do or promise, as such promises are just as easily broken, unless you want trouble, and you will find plenty of that at best.

T. E. ADAMS.

"There is a Work for All."

This is the title of one of our good old songs that we have sung so long. Well, as some of our people say, all means all. In this case any way it does.

"Our Master has taken a journey,
To a country that's far away,
And has left us the care of his vineyard,
To work for him day by day."

We would be poor vine-dressers if we did not feel that in a measure the fruit of the vineyard depended upon the vine-dresser. And should we be negligent in our work? Now, dear brothers and sisters, (for it is to you I am writing) are we all doing the best we can in the Father's vineyard? Are we working and doing all we can, or are we some of us at least, like the drones in a hive of bees, letting others do the work while we idle our time away, feeling that we have done our duty when we were baptized and united with the Church? Oh, no, for "There is a work for you and a work for me, Something for each of us now to do."

We can not all preach, neither can we all teach, but we can live such a life in our home and in our own neighborhood that our children will rise up and call us blessed, and our neighbors will know that there is a reality in the religion that we profess. Even our presence in the Sunday school will help others. Our presence in the social meetings, our little exhortation that we give now and then are drops in the bucket that help to make up the whole. Dear ones, do not say we cannot talk, we are not gifted, that is not what our Savior asks of us; but he wants a willing heart, one that can tell the great things he has done for us as we can tell what great things Washington or Grant did for us. Now what would you think of a man or a woman who loves our free country that could not tell others that they love the name of George Washington? What would you think of a man or a woman that did not teach their children to honor his name? Well, why can't we tell others that we love the name of Jesus, and why cannot we teach our children to honor his name who did so much more for us? We talk sometimes about the coming of the Lord to our neighbors? Are we living in a way that they will believe that we are really expecting him at any time? Now, dear friends, we who are waiting, or say we are watching day by day, are we waiting for the Savior, do we wish him on the way? Can we say, O come Lord Jesus, like the godly saints of old? Is there naught what ere to keep us from uniting with the fold? Do we try to love the brethren as is written in the Word? If not so, we are not ready for the coming of the Lord? Can it be that we are waiting and watching for the coming one and not do what Jesus taught us, leaving many things undone? Can it be the weightier matters we have neglected all along, giving tithes of mint and walking with the world along?

Pause and think, dearest brother,
Ere we hear the word too late,
And the good of ages gather
And enter through the golden gate.
If there's a hardness toward our brother,
Ought we not to make it right?
What are we above another
In our blessed Savior's sight?
Ought we not, dear friends, forgive,
Even as we would be forgiven?
This is what is asked us,
By our Lord who dwells in heaven.
Do we know we're epistles
Known and read by men along?
They are watching every action,
As we mingle with the throng.
Know you not our every action,
And the thoughtless words we say,
Will be counted up against us
In the Lord's great reckoning day?
Then all too late we'll see our error,
Time and talent thrown away,
All because we have not followed
Our Savior's precepts day by day.
We should reach out to our neighbor,
Tell him Jesus comes to save;
Tell him a loving Savior
Came and died for our behavior;
Tell him that we all are watching
For his advent once again,
And to all that's truly watching
Unto them a crown he'll bring.

O, yes, there are so many things we can tell and teach to those that know not Christ, but let us be very careful that we teach a "thus saith the Lord." Let not the trumpet give an uncertain sound. Let us ride no hobby, but give God's Word in plain words, as an unvarnished truth, and by so doing souls may be saved.

"There are lonely hearts to cherish
While the days are going by;
There are weary souls who perish
While the days are going by."

Oh, the good we all may do, if we only try in God's name. May God bless our efforts in my prayer.

Yours in hope,
ALMIRA BROOKS.

To be beaten, but not broken; to be victorious, but not vainglorious; to strive and contend for the prize, and to win it honestly or lose it cheerfully; to use every power in the race, and yet never to wrest an undue advantage or win an unlawful mastery; verily in all this there is training and testing of character which searches it to the very roots, and this is a result which is worth all that it cost us.

All who can should arrange to attend the dedication services of the new Church at Burr Oak, Ind., on Sunday June 30, at 10:30 A. M. Brother and Sister Woodward and others will be there. Arrangements are made to entertain all, and we trust the friends there will not be disappointed in the attendance. There will be meeting in the afternoon also, so the day will be well occupied. Give them a good big crowd to start with.

The Spirit.

Teaches that mortality and immortality are both bodily manifestations of life; in the one case through a corruptible body, and in the other through an incorruptible body. Is there an Invisible Church?

A preacher in Bucyrus, Ohio, writing in the Christian Standard, answers, "Yes, dear brethren, there is; don't deceive yourselves. Some think the visible the larger. No; the invisible is so great it cannot be numbered. You become acquainted with it by experience, not by sight. I have gone where prayer services were to be held, and found the invisible church. Churches often, with an enrollment of two hundred, find on the Lord's day one hundred and fifty are invisible, but not angelic members. Some churches practice invisible communion,—some invisible baptism. Some persons have a visible baptism, but they soon become invisible in the sanctuary, in the Bible school and Endeavor. Yes, things are getting too invisible in service, in life and holiness,—invisible honesty, invisible Christian union, invisible piety, invisible purity, invisible sympathy. The good Samaritan of today uses invisible wine. An invisible coat is put on the naked man. He is put on an invisible horse and taken to an invisible inn, where the fare is paid with invisible money which is current of the invisible church. Yes; there is a large invisible church. Let your light shine so we can see not only you, but your good work." *

Comments of the Learned.

Dr. Adam Clark's note on Dan. xii. 11, is as follows, in part:—Perhaps Mohammedanism may be the abomination, which sprang up in A. D. 612. If we reckon one thousand two hundred and ninety years, ver. 11 from that time, it will bring us down to A. D. 1902, when we might presume, from this calculation, that the religion of the false prophet will cease to prevail in the world, which, from the present year 1825, is distant only seventy-seven years."

"The wise shall understand." Dan. xii. 10. Professor Stuard states the meaning of these words to be that "the wise man to the time of the end, will make diligent inquiry, both for the sake of instruction and consolation, And they will attain to a right understanding of the predictions."

Dr Gill thus paraphrases the passage:—The wise shall understand more or less of these things, such as are wise unto salvation, that search the Scriptures, seek to God by prayer, and are much in meditation, and make use of every help for the understanding of divine things, and even of these prophecies, and especially towards the close of time, as the accomplishment of them draws near."

Luther has this remark upon the place:—"It would therefore seem as if God would somewhere raise up a Noah who shall be able to calculate the identical day and to strike it unmistakably." *

Is Jesus a King?

For L. B.—If as you think, Jesus were King in fact now, he would be King over all the earth. This you know is not the case. And we doubt not that you are aware that the divine testimony also says, "We see not yet, all things put under him." This was written long after the ascension, and the "sitting upon the throne of his Father." In the next place, the throne for Jesus to occupy is not yet established. You seem considerably mixed up in regard to these things, but surely you will not deny that Jesus refers to himself, when he says "Jerusalem is (to be) the city of the great King".....And, inasmuch as he is now seated on his Father's throne, (Rev. iii. 21), and the same verse promises overcomers a seat on his (own) throne, as he is now set down with his Father on his throne, we have a clear intimation that Jesus will not always occupy his Father's throne. By consulting the 110th Psalm v. 1, you will see the invitation by virtue of which he is now seated on the right hand of the Father on his throne; and close attention will show you that it is for a limited time he is seated there "UNTIL I make thine enemies thy footstool." Up to that time or event stated he is to be seated there, no longer. You are aware that he came to his own land and people but was rejected, put to death,—they would not have him to reign over them,—and so his occupancy of the the Father's throne was a provisional arrangement, if we may so speak. You must be aware, too, that the Lord Jesus informs us of his return to earth in Matt. xxv. 30-33, and of his taking his seat upon the throne of his (own) glory,—showing that he and his Father were working out the programme announced in Ps. cx. And seeing we have just referred to his promise to seat overcomers on his throne as he is seated on the Father's throne,—it will be very interesting to turn back to Matt. xxv. and see what is to happen after he is seated upon the throne of his glory on earth. The King shall say to those on his right hand, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." This certainly looks like the fulfilment of the promise in Rev. iii. 21,—so that they will be in position to execute the commission given them. Rev. ii. 26, 27. Exercise power over the nations.

In this connection it will be profitable to remember that Jesus said he was born to be King of the Jews; and that Matt. xix. 27, 28 shows that that is the people who will be the subjects proper of his kingdom,—and 12 of his subordinate kings are mentioned there. Luke i. 30-33 has important testimony to the same effect,—and Acts xv. 16, 17 is exactly in point,—and the Spirit in Peter as recorded in Acts iii. 19, 20 shows that God intends to send Jesus to earth again as intimated in Psa. cx. The heavens only retain Jesus till the time arrives for restoring all things predicted by the prophets.

It will also help you to consider the words of the Spirit in Heb. x. 13 which show him to be now expecting, waiting for what the Father in Ps. cx. promised to do for him,—make his enemies on earth his footstool,—so that his reign can commence. And then what? "The Lord shall send the rod of thy strength out of Zion, rule thou in the midst of thine enemies." He is now only a Prince, a to-be king, and a Savior. See Acts v. 31. *

The Reward of the Righteous.

This is a Bible theme much dwelt upon by all the prophets. Righteousness consists in believing God, (Rom. iv. 3) and obeying his precepts. Col. iv. God as a righteous taskmaster has promised those who fulfill this righteousness, a reward exceedingly great and precious. 2 Peter i. 1-4. Abraham was righteous (2 Peter ii. 8), and to him God has promised that he shall have the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession. To inherit this promise he would have eternal life as a consequence. The righteous are co-heirs with him, (Rom. iv. 13-16), therefore their reward is much the same; though they have many additional promises. Jesus says the reward is stored in heaven, (Matt. v. 2); it is to be a place of honor in that kingdom which he is coming very soon to set up. Matt. xxv. 31. It is also that gift which every man wishes for, viz: eternal life. (Matt. xix. 16-19. To this will be added eternal happiness, no more sighing, no more tears. Rev. xxi. 4. David says the righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever. They are also beloved of God, who will protect them. Ps. lxii. 6. Solomon says the righteous shall flourish and be recompensed in the earth. Prov. xi. 31. Isaiah gives a glowing description of their reward in his 11th chapter, (also in chapters xli. and lxvi. Daniel says the righteous shall shine as the stars for ever. chap. xii. All these rewards are future, but one—that is the love that God has towards us, in guiding and protecting us in this dark, desolate world. But we know that the righteous will have a grand reward in the age to come. Eternal life and happiness, living and reigning with Christ in unalloyed splendor and joy. It is beyond our feeble imagination—we can only look at it as through a glass darkly, but then it will be an everlasting noon-tide. We shall see Jesus as he is, and be made like him.

Reader, what do you think of Christ? Have you accepted his gospel? Have you turned from all fleshly idols and sinful practices? Have you been baptized into his death, so that you may share the benefits arising out of that death,—remission of all past sins, and reconciliation with God, adoption into his family so that you have the privilege of calling him your Father, —and becoming an heir of God and a joint-heir with him who is heir of all things, in the meantime having access to the throne where favors are bestowed upon all adopted children through the powerful mediation of him who has overcome, and is set down with the Father on his throne? Are you one of those who have been begotten to a hope of life beyond the grave by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead? If you can answer these questions affirmatively, happy are ye! You can even in this vale of tears rejoice with joy unspeakable; because accounted righteous through faith and its obedience. If you have not yet secured a title to a mansion in the Father's house, we implore you to attend to it at once, time is short. *

Conference Report.

Conference convened in its regular yearly June meeting, at Antioch, Marshall County, Ind., June 7, 1901. Unlike most of these June meetings the weather was cool, being light frosts each of the three mornings of the meeting. The first two days, Friday and Saturday, the attendance was fair for week days, especially the night meetings. Sunday was a regular old time gathering, the attendance being very large, and attendance good. Bros. Halstead, Wince, Austin, Zilmer and R. C. Railsback were present, all bearing some part in the preaching, but the principal part was done by Bros. Austin and Zilmer. Three sisters were immersed into the all saving name of Jesus.

The business sessions of the Conference were held on Saturday, beginning at 9:30 A. M., the President, Bro. Halstead presiding, opened by a song, and prayer by Bro. Zilmer, followed again by a song. The Secretary's report of last regular Conference was approved as printed. The roll of churches was called by the secretary and showed the following represented by delegates, Argos 15, Bracken 2, Antioch 1, Burr Oak 2, Rensselaer 8, Plymouth 18, South Bend 4, Inwood 2.

The report of the secretary and treasurer on Evangelist funds, was read and submitted to an auditing committee, and by them approved. The treasurer's report shows as follows: Nov. 17th, 1900, balance on hand, $270.98; receipts from all sources, $137.20; total $414.18.

Expense: Nov. 17th, paid to H. T. Halstead, $73.62; to A. H. Zilmer, from Nov. 17th, 1900, to May 6th, 1901, $145.60; April 10th to Bro. Austin, $15.00; total $234.22. June 8th, 1901, amount to balance, $179.96. Bro. A. H. Zilmer's report of Evangelist work: receipts from all sources, $157.35; expense of car fare to various points, $13.95; days at work from Jan. 1st to April 27th, 1901, 65. Bro. Zilmer also made verbal report of the various places visited, the results, interest and prospects, and all seemed satisfied with the work done.

Tract work: Bro. Austin, chairman of tract committee, made report of receipts from all sources, $46.15; expense for books and tracts, 26.54; balance on hand, $19.61.

Bro. Halstead made report of his labors as solicitor of Evangelist funds on the co-operative plan, of the difficulties he encountered, which discouraged him in the work.

Bro. Austin, chairman of committee on ways and means, submitted a report looking to a plan for more concert of action between the various churches. And to that end a committee of five was appointed, viz: Bros. Elias Dickson, J. L. Wince, W. M. Huffer, F. L. Austin and A. H. Zilmer, said committee to report at next annual Conference in September.

Editor Restitution:

I wish to say to the brethren in Kansas, Oklahoma and elsewhere that we have returned from our western trip and am ready to fill calls for meetings and if any wish me to hold meetings in their neighborhood to let me know as soon as convenient, so I can make my arrangements. Address me at Attica, Harper Co., Kansas.

S. C. Oliver.

Dear Restitution:

Please find enclosed money order for the dear old Restitution, which I can not do without as I am so isolated here; it is like a very dear friend to me. Oh, I often think, do our brothers and sisters that have the privilege of meeting together, know how to sympathize with those that are all alone? I am very lonely since I came back from California. I was with the dear ones of the same blessed hope one year, and may God bless them all and all of the household of faith is my prayer.

Mrs. Emily Collett.

To the isolated of the one faith:

Our Savior says, "My sheep hear my voice and follow me." We should ever be ready to learn what the voice of our Master is and not believe as do others, so I am sincere and honest is all that is required. We find in Matt. xxxviii. 19, 20, he commanded his disciples to teach all nations. Teaching them (those they immersed) to obey all things which I have enjoined upon you. This they were authorized by Jesus and guided by the divine Spirit to ordain or appoint whatever was needful for the good of the Church. Paul praised the Corinthians because they kept ordinances as they were taught by him, 1 Cor. xi. 2, 23, 24 25. I received from the Lord what I also have delivered unto you. That the Lord on the same night that he was delivered took the loaf and having given thanks broke it and said, this is that body of mine which is broken in your behalf, this do you for my remembrance; and in like manner he took the cup. In the 25th verse he says, "For as oft as you may eat this bread and drink this cup you declare the death of the Lord until he comes again." It is evident from 1 Cor. xi. 20, they were accustomed to come together to pray and prophesy, partaking of the loaf. And in Acts ii. 42, strength is added to this testimony. They were constantly attending to the teaching of the Apostles and to the contribution and to the breaking of the loaf and prayers. We have nothing said as to the time. There is a constant attendance of these things. But let us go to Troas, they assembled there on the first day of the week. Take this in connection with 1 Cor. xvi. 1, 2, shewing it was a custom to meet on that day, and our Master says, "Except ye eat of the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood ye have no life in you, do this in remembrance of me." And Paul says, "As oft as ye eat this bread and drink this cup you do show the Lord's death until he comes again." Is it too much for us then to show our faith and hope by remembering him once a week, him who has done so much for us, who for the joy set before him endured the cross and despised the shame. Is there not joy enough set before us that we can obey the commands he has left for us? We are admonished in Heb. x. to hear each other in mind, for an incitement of love and good works, not the forsaking of the assembling of ourselves together as is a custom of some, and so much the more as you see the day drawing near (Diaglott). Dear isolated ones, do you not believe that the time is drawing near when our Master will return? Yes, yes, I hear you all respond. Can we who are isolated live up to and keep the commands of the Master, where there is but one? He says, "where two or three are gathered together in my name, there will I be in their midst." Let us therefore arise and go where we can meet with those who are looking and watching for the Master, lest we be found with no oil in our lamps. If the Lord wills it so, I am making arrangements to go this fall where I can meet with those of like precious faith. Where shall I go?

Lonesome and lonely I live here alone,
Looking for Jesus and that bright world to come,
Seeking his refuge, trusting his love,
Praying for mercy and help from above.

Praying to be worthy when Jesus comes,
I will hear him say thou art well done,
There is life, there is rest, there is peace,
And a home in the kingdom for thee.

Oh, that beautiful world so pure and bright,
Where there will be no more death and be no more night,
And saints ever rest there free from strife,
Their present labors o'er.

Oh, when I think of that beautiful clime,
Where the saints of all ages in their white robes shine,
I want to be transported from this world of care,
Over to the new earth, for Jesus will be there.

Yours in hope,
Mrs. Cassie L. Hucklin.

Dear Restitution:

I saw a report of Bro. D. M. Hudler's work in Lake Shore, Washington, and I thought some would like to hear from Freedom, Neb., South Frontier. I will enclose the work of Bro. Almus Adams. Meeting commenced May 15 and closed May 20. Preached 7 discourses. We heard some good and interesting sermons, and had good attendance. It has been a long time since we had Sunday school or Bible reading, for some have moved away and some have fallen asleep, and it seems good to us to hear the truth preached in its purity; and we hope the few words that have been spoken will encourage us on, that we may work more diligently for our Master, knowing the time is short.

Yes, this is our hope 'tis built on his Word,
The glorious appearing of Jesus our Lord;
His promise to all, it stands as the sun,
Behold I come quickly, hold fast till I come.

Oh may we all be found worthy is the prayer of a sister.

Florence Selleck.

Dear Restitution:

Dear brothers and sisters of the one faith, I can say that I am stronger in the faith than ever, as I see our Lord's prediction fulfilling every day. I believe we are living in the last days. Were there ever times like these? I believe it is worse than it was in the days of Noah according to the light they have now. Our Lord is soon coming, oh let us keep our lamps trimmed and burning that we may not be found in darkness at the last moment. I love to read the letters of the brothers and sisters. I love to read Brother Foore's letters, he seems like one of the family.

Your Sister in hope.
Mary A. Vermillion.

A missionary in Nebraska organized a Sunday school one summer day with only four persons present, and he felt that there was little hope of making anything out of it. Nine months passed; then the missionary found himself engaged in a protracted meeting in the same place. The attendance at Sunday school was a hundred and four, and a church organization was effected.—S. S. World.

Obituary.

Lara Winchester, son of Bro. Calvin Winchester, died suddenly at the home of his sister in Grand Rapids, Michigan, May 27, aged 21 years. Funeral sermon preached by the writer, May 29th, from 2 Cor. vii. 10, "The sorrow of the world worketh death." We sympathize deeply with the bereaved family; this was the first death in the family of seven children. O when will death be stayed? When Jesus comes, is our only answer.

The next day we were called to Alaska to preach the funeral sermon of a young man, Fred Wise, who while working at his post of duty in the round house, Grand Rapids, was so seriously burned by the explosion of a gasoline torch that he died in four days. And so the terrible work goes on. God pity the mourning hearts. Come Lord Jesus, come quickly.

M. A. Woodward.

John Rose was born Feb. 28, 1858, in Canada, came to Michigan in 1867; was married to Miss Ella Bowlingsby by Elder B. W. Woodward, Sept. 20th, 1883; died in Grand Rapids, May 20, 1901, at the age of 13 years. He leaves a very large circle of friends and acquaintances who will miss him sadly, but the saddest life is her's bowed down with grief, the lonely wife with only the one comforter left, the little black eyed boy, who carries the image of the father in his dear little face. The funeral was held from their residence on Front St., Grand Rapids. O how hard to give comfort at such a time, and no one can meet the sorrowing one like those speaking by inspiration. The words found in 1 Cor. xiii. 12, were used on this occasion. The floral offerings from I. O. O. F. and his comrades at union depot were very lovely, with others laid above his quiet form, spoke the love all had for him. Dear Sister Ella, lean heavily upon divine strength, altho dark the days ahead—still God is above the storm, and he will guide and comfort, keep and save.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Poetry.

We are Passing Away.

We are passing from this earth away,
As mist before the sun;
Our eyes are sore upon the day,
Before the race is run.

Chorus. We are passing away,
We are passing away,
Yes, we are passing away,
To the great judgment day.

We are passing from this earth away,
As leaves before the blast,
Our wealth, our fame, our motives all,
Will soon be lowly laid.

We are passing away from the stream of life
Swift as the weaver's shuttle,
Soon there will be an endless strife,
Soon we shall join the dead.

Our births, where are they?
And do the people live always?
Ah, no! how mournful, 'tis how true,
They all to us passed away.

Then hear and heed the call,
For us is mercy given;
Believe, repent and be baptized,
Thus all our sins may be forgiven.

Then when that mighty trumpet shall sound,
Then bid the dead arise,
Oh glorious day when Christ shall come,
We'll meet him in the skies.

This is an old song in use forty or fifty years ago. I have taken the liberty of changing the fifth verse so as to make it agree with God's Word, also added another verse.

Something About the Ages.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I send you this paper for the purpose of inviting the readers of THE RESTITUTION to some Scripture testimony concerning the ages which have been so accurately adjusted by the Word of God: "Which in other ages was not made known to the sons of men as it is now revealed to his holy Apostles and prophets by the Spirit. That the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs and of the same body, and joint-partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel." Eph. iii. 5, 6. "God hath spoken to us by his Son—Heir of all things; and on account of whom he hath constituted the ages." The oneness of the body of the Christ is affirmed throughout the New Testament; and necessarily so, in view of the harmonious activities of the rulers of "the world to come," in the performance of their official duties, in order to the full development of the Divine Purpose in the dispensation of the fulness of times (of restitution) he might gather together under one head—the Christ—Head of all principality and official power according to his eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord." "To us there is one God the Father for whom are all things.....and one Lord Jesus Christ through whom are all things, and we through him." 1 Cor. viii. 6. "One body and one spirit" animating the "one body." Eph. iv. 4. And, "For in one spirit we are all immersed into one body, and all made to drink into one Spirit"—"One Lord, one faith, one baptism" into the "one Lord" for the remission of sins. A necessity exists for perfect unanimity in all the deliberations of the body politic. "The Bride, the Lamb's wife"—the governing Power of the "world to come."

These quotations are submitted with a view to prepare the mind of the reader for a careful examination of the Scripture testimony having direct reference to the unfolding plan of the ages—the mystery which hath been hid in God; but now made known to his holy Apostles and prophets. The thought, that some being caused to believe and obey the truth to the degree of having sufficient strength to carry them into the kingdom some thousands of years after its establishment; and yet fall short of becoming a part of the bride—equal to a denial of such being of the one body; obedient believers not of the body of Christ is foreign to the testimony of the records. Having no part in the first resurrection; but dying to remain dead until the "final judgment" age. No proof offered: because none to be found in Scriptures. The Scriptures make no distinction: consult 1 Cor. xii. 12, 13, 22, 25; Gal. iii. 0; Eph. ii. 16; and we believe testimony, not a process of reasoning. There is "one hope of our calling," and leading in view of another hope is misleading in holding out another hope, and for those not of the "One body" which cannot be admitted as part of the one faith which is the basis of the things hoped for. Heb. xi. 1. Not of the body, equals "Having no hope, and without God in the world" Eph. ii. 12.

The present is the time for getting out material for the royalty of David's house—the prospective rulers of the ages to come who have been built upon the one sure foundation—Christ; these will be approved or disapproved in the day of inspection. Consult 1 Cor. iii. 13; Rom. ii. 16; Acts xvii. 31; 2 Tim. iv. 1; 1 Thes. i. 7-10. There is to be "a day of wrath"—a judicial arraignment—a revelation of the righteous judgments of God when he shall inflict just retribution on those who acknowledge not God and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." The time for judgment will be when "The Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works." Matt. xvi. 27. "When he shall be glorified in his saints and admired by all them that believe." "Who then is a faithful and wise servant whom his lord hath made ruler over his household?" But of the evil servant it is written: "The lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looked not for him and in an hour that he is not aware of and shall cut him off, and appoint his portion with the hypocrites." Matt. xxiv. 50, 51. Agreeing with 1 Cor. iv. 5, Judge nothing before the time till the Lord come."

Next: to submit the recorded testimony concerning the judgment of the nations, which event occurs after the coming of the Lord, and before the commencement of the thousand years.

The thought that Jesus and his bride will be sent back to this world to preach the gospel to all the living population, is without warrant from holy Scripture and contradicts the recorded testimony concerning the fact and time of the judgment—as it is written Psa. xcix. 9. Christ comes not to preach the gospel but to execute the judgments written. Because the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment to the Son; and given him official power to execute judgment also because he is a son of man." John v. 22, 27.

Jesus was anointed to preach, was sent to preach and did preach in all the cities and villages of the country, and we have a record of his first mission to the people of Israel, as it is written. Is. lxi. 1. And compare Lu. iv. 18, "To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord." Here he stops, and said: "This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears"—verse 21, and 43, 44.

But when he comes again he comes to execute the judgments written: judgment succeeding judgment upon the dwellers upon the earth, like as it was in Egypt of old. Consult Rev. xiv. 6, 7, "Because the hour of his judgment is come" and compare xv. 4, as to the beneficial results of such judgments upon the favored nations which obey the decree, or proclamations made in mid-heaven, ch. xiv. 6. For the time of judgment consult Joel iii. 1, "In those days and at that time when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem." "I will gather also all nations." Ver. 2. And bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, verse 12, the place of judgment and compare Zech. xiv. 1, 5; Isa. xxxiv. 2, 8 and compare lxiii. 1-4 with Rev. xiv. 14-20 and compare Matt. xxv. 32, 33 and 41, 46, with Isa. ix. 12. Full quotations here would take up too much space, and the reader is requested to read carefully these references according to their contextual import. And compare with the statement, That the Father sends back to the world Christ and his bride to preach the gospel to all who are living in the world." Note on "The rest of the dead" which is made a foundation for much speculation. Tischendorf says the passage is "a mere error" an interpolation on the face of it, and involves a contradiction. "Lived not again," is the opposite of resurrection; and to affirm that "this (lived not again) is the first resurrection," is inadmissable. The rest would be the remainder after subtracting the ones on the thrones and the martyrs of ver. 4, and which is said "lived not until," etc.

The harmony of the context demands that reading which harmonizes text and context and besides being well sustained by manuscript readings. Thus, They lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years; this is the first resurrection; blessed and holy is he who hath part in the first resurrection. ver. 6.

As the passage is evidently spurious any conclusions drawn from a process of reasoning therefrom must be spurious also. Before presenting testimony in relation to the order of the resurrection, I thought it would be in place to point out a few passage of Scripture contra an universal resurrection. Psa. xcvii. 7 and xlix. 19, 20. If such as these see light this ought to settle the matter with those. Compare Eccl. ix. 10, 20 and Isa. xxvi. 14. They are dead, they shall not live, they are deceased, they shall not rise," etc. But on the other hand, Thy dead shall live," etc. Read. Want of space forbid full quotations.

Apart from a resurrection, the dead in Christ perish. 1 Cor. xv. 18; Dan. xii. 2; Jer. li. 39 and Ob. 16. Many of Daniel's people who sleep in earth's dust shall awake. Not all of them, because some had already been put to death without mercy, having despised Moses' law, received just retribution. Heb. ii. 2; x. 28, 29. Add to these the myriads who never knew either law nor gospel. For where no law is there is no transgression, and no judicial trial and therefore no guilt. Rom. iv. 15, For sin is not imputed when there is no law. v. 13. and apart from law sin is dead. vii. 8, and, The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law. 1 Cor. xv. 56 compare with Acts xvii. 30. Times of ignorance God overlooked. Sin not charged up, yet death reigned right along just the same over saint and sinner alike; but law entered in so that the offense might abound. But where sin abounds by the introduction of law unto condemnation. But grace much more abounded unto justification of life. Rom. v. 16, 18. This passage from Dan. xii. 2 is suggestive of the agreement with the teaching of Jesus. Jno. v. 29.

All that are in the graves (tombs) shall hear his voice and shall come forth—they that have done good unto a resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto a resurrection of condemnation. Coming forth, not resurrection, but motion towards, as the preposition unto shows. Some to everlasting life: and some to their shame and contempt of the age. And the time is when Michael stands up in the interests of Daniel's people. Let it be noted that the great mass of the human family may be classed with those who are as ignorant of divine law as the beasts that perish, and the same destiny awaits them. One thing befalleth them, As one dieth so dieth the other, etc. Eccl. iii. 19. We have then the good, the bad, for resurrection, and irresponsibles, neither good nor bad, who remain in the dust, having returned to dust. Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return. And what is true of Adam is true of his descendants. Apart from divine intervention direct or through a resurrection all remain in dust eternally.

Through light comes responsibility—justification on the one hand, and condemnation on the other. Jno. iii. 19; Rom. v. 15-18. Consult the following passages: 1 Cor. iv. 4, 5; 2 Cor. v. 10; Rom. xiv. 10; Gal. vi. 7, 8; Col. iii. 24, 25 and Rev. xxii. 12 and read the messages to the seven churches.

ORDER OF RESURRECTIONS.

(a) Christ the firstfruits of those having fallen asleep. 1 Cor. xv. 20, 23. Afterwards (b) They that are Christ's at his coming. (c) Then the end of the series, the last or completion which finishes the resurrections prior to the thousand years.

End here does not refer to the end of time, or any particular time according to the preceding context. But the when does refer to time: viz. when he (Christ) shall deliver over the kingdom to the Father. And when is that? When he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power, when more definitely: when the seventh angel soundeth. Compare Rev. vi. 12 to 17 and xi. 13-18. The great day of his wrath is come, Revelation of his righteous judgments. (God is one, in power and in purpose. Having in his own proper person, an inherent right to reign over his universal realm, as the controller of all things according to his own sovereign will. Or to appoint another, or others according to his purpose and covenants of promise, to reign subordinately to him; to the praise and glory of his name through Christ Jesus. Christ delivers over to the Father those revolted provinces which God had just subjected by means of Jesus Christ and those associated with him in the wars of subjugation to a finish. See 1 Cor. xv. 27. And compare verse 28 with Psa. viii. 6. The purpose is to put all under Christ's feet. When it saith all things are put under Christ; manifest it is that God is excepted that did put all things under Christ. And (verse 28) when all things shall be subjected to Christ (at the end of the war). Then shall the Son himself also be subject to the Father, who put all things under Christ so that God may be all in all.

The reconstruction of those provinces long in revolt being accomplished, Christ then delivers over to the Father for his approval and acceptance as Christ's finished work, who maketh wars to cease to the ends of earth. And Rev. xi. 15 becomes a fact in the unfolding process. Then comes the appointment of the Father; giving the kingdom and the dominion to the Son and associate rulers to reign for the ages of the ages. Rev. xi. 15 and xxii. 5, compare Dan vii. 14, 27. The Lord God shall give unto him the the throne of his father David .....Of his kingdom there shall be no end. Luke i. 32, 33; xxii. 29, 30. He will be a King by divine right as well as by inheritance. His name shall endure forever, and his throne as the days of heaven. He not only reigns for a thousand years but for the ages of the ages. See references.

Now for the identification of those dead who will be the completion (end) of the series of raised ones. They are not of those who were Christ's at his coming, because these were all raised at that time, and now we are in the hour of judgment, that period of time during which those were developed, and put to death for their fidelity to Christ. The recorded testimony is to the point and hence believable.

Rev. vi. 9-11, They were slain for the Word of God, and for the testimony which they held. And it was said to them that they should rest yet for a little season until their fellow servants and their brethren that should be killed as they were should be fulfilled. Now compare ch. xiii. 15. Such should be killed by order of the two-horned beast. Note a counter proclamation from the other party. xiv. 9. If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark. The same shall drink (verse 10) of the wine of the wrath of God.

With these references in mind, turn to Rev. xx. 4, and read text and context carefully. And (I saw) the persons of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the Word of God and which had not worshiped the beast, neither his image; neither had received his mark upon their foreheads or in their hands. Compare with the white-robed martyrs. vi. 11. And they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. This is the first resurrection (in rank). They become partners in the honors and glory of royalty with those who were raised at the coming of Christ. It seems necessary to quote at length in order to keep the connection of thought undiverted. No use in worrying over one's preconceptions, nor of being satisfied with anything less than a clear, consistent, harmonious comprehension of the recorded testimonies. The eternity of the kingdom of Christ is assured though human wisdom may be slow to acknowledge it.

Some testimonies about judgments: And as Paul reasoned of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come Felix trembled." Acts xxiv. 25; Heb. vi. 2. Referring to the judgment on the Antediluvians, Peter says, Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water perished." 2 Pet. iii. 6; compare Gen. vii. 21, 23. Those who despised Moses' law received just retribution right along as conditions demanded. Heb. ii. 2 and x. 28. Many of the Israelites stood related to the Abraham covenant and therefore, to the "judgment pertaining to the age, at the time when Michael stands up. Dan. xii. 2. The nation of Israel, on whom the ends of the world had come. A. D. 70-72, suffered the fiery indignation in the overthrow of their polity, and destruction of their holy city and temple. The wrath came upon them at length. As it is written Matt. xxiii. 35-39; Luke xix. 41-44 and references. All these things shall come upon this generation. Matt. iii. 11, 12. For behold the Lord will come with fire, and with his chariots like a whirlwind, to render his anger with fury and his rebuke with flames of fire. For by fire and by his sword the Lord will plead with all flesh; and the slain of the Lord shall be many." The individual accounts of this age will be settled when the Lord comes. References already given. The age of judgment succeeds this age, and continues from the end of this age to the commencement of the millennium. Rev. xiv. 7, The hour of his judgment is come." chap. xvi. 14, The war of the great day—the epoch of the restoration of Israel, and judgment of the nations as already referred to. During this period of sore trial, including the seven last plagues, there will be many persons developed for part in the first resurrection; or on the other hand destined for a part in the big fire of the age. See Rev. xx. 4, 6, and compare ch. xiv. 10. Then finally, the end of the millennial age when all accounts contracted during the preceding thousand years will be settled and settled right, resurrection and judgment of all those amenable, and from the light and opportunities of this age one would infer that there would be universal amenability.

C. W. TOMKINS.

A Funeral.

"In my Father's house are many mansions." A mansion for every one! Is it possible that Jesus, according to popular teaching, has gone to heaven to prepare a place in heaven for us? And at death takes us to one of those mansions. Let us now consider. Is it possible that heaven, the throne of God, and Jesus on his Father's throne, and yet he must fix up mansions for us, and at death we are to go to one of those mansions? Are we better than God? And that God sends inflictions on people to make them repent in order that they may be saved? Is it possible that any professing to be a child of God, and calling him a loving Father, can cast such reflection on his dear name? It is the goodness of God that leadeth to repentance. Rom. v. 4.

What caused death? Sin. Rom. v. 12. Could any parent expect their child to love them if the parent would inflict some punishment on them that would cause them to suffer intense agony. No, no. They would loath the name of such a parent? Now go back with me to the beginning of the lesson. "Let not your heart be troubled, ye believed in God, believe also in me." The disciples had a reason to be sorry. Why? See Jno. xiii. 33, "Little children, yet a little while I am with you; ye shall seek me, and as I said unto the Jews, whither I go ye can not come." So now I say to you. Your Master has gone away and we can't follow. Can it be, you the Star of Jacob, you the one that calmed the raging sea, and raised the widow's son, that opened the eyes of the blind, and caused the deaf to hear? Yes, I am going away, but I am coming again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also. So you see we must wait until he comes again. As Jesus went under the power of death and came forth from the tomb, so must every child of God that goes under the power of death remain in death till he comes again. This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven. Then the ancient of days will set. His throne will be like a fiery flame, a fiery stream (of love) issued and came forth from before him; thousands, thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him; the judgment was set and the books were opened. Then the Son of Man begins his kingdom, and then will be given dominion and glory and a kingdom, that all people and nations and language should serve him; his kingdom will be an everlasting kingdom, and it shall never pass away, and the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. Now, if we never die but live right on, see how miserable. Will some one who claims they never die harmonize this passage of Scripture, and if the intelligent person never dies, why did not Paul when at Ephesus let those wild beasts kill him or destroy his old house? No, his hope hung on the resurrection, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order, Christ the firstfruits, afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." At present death has its sting, the grave holds its victims. Yes, the grave is our house. We cannot as soon as death comes, go and bask in the sunshine of God. No, but the clods of the valley shall cover us. We go to the house appointed for all living.

Yours in hope,
C. W. SMITH.

Trying to make others believe as we do is a poor business. It is a very different business from trying to win others to the truth. The man who points another to a star may help him toward the light, and, in helping, may get nearer himself; but the man who points others merely to his own opinion is without a star for himself, and does not know but that the star he points out to others is a firefly's lamp. A lover of truth is not wedded to his own opinions; he is wedded to the truth.

Report of L. T. S.

Another yearly Conference has passed with its work done and record made; and the sisters feel that their meeting of Saturday P. M. (time kindly allotted them by our president) was a very instructive and valuable part of the meeting, as many thoughts were expressed, which we feel do much toward the growth of the cause in the right direction. The meeting was opened by Scripture reading and prayer, a very instructive talk by F. L. Austin, "Our Christian obligations from a Bible standpoint" was about the gist of his talk, as he brought out thought after thought, I believe all felt that in the future we must be more careful how we spend our money, so many unnecessary things bought, such foolish outlay of the little entrusted to us. Following this was a splendid paper read from Sister Wince entitled "Going shares." How can we thank this dear sister for her kindness, for we know in all probability, she wrote it when she ought to have been resting and sleeping. May it be the means of awaking us all to our responsibilities in this matter. Letters were read from Sisters West and Parkhurst, a request by the latter to be remembered in our prayers; she has been sick in bed for six months, just beginning to sit up a little.

Next the question box was opened by the president. Several questions read and talked on. A chapter was read from the book entitled "God's financial plan." A hymn was sung and all wishing to withdrew from the room, and the business meeting was opened. After the usual preliminaries, election of officers, etc., the question was asked, What shall be done with the money on hand? And finally decided that a certain sum should be used for work in Grand Rapids, and Sister Clara Chaffee was appointed to act for the next months, intervening between June and the fall Conference, as a missionary colporteur, the society furnishing her with religious literature for her work. Our treasurer reported $106.08 in bank and amounts collected at this meeting $46.30, showing what system is doing in Michigan, and only a few really practicing it. Think, brothers and sisters, what might be accomplished if all would "Go shares" in this glorious work. $12.00 was used to send RESTITUTIONS to those unable to pay themselves. There were several who had formerly sent in their tenth, that we did not hear from this year, perhaps some forget to save or send. Let us remember, dear fellow workers, however small the sum, if given gladly for the Lord's work, is credited to you in the great record book. May we be careful not to get in debt to God, and have that stand against us in the judgment. Four new names were added to our roll, all young people, may they not forget what is meant to join the tithing society, but starting in the Christian life may they be partners with the Lord in all things, and remember that the great part of the religious life is made up of sacrificing. Let the kid gloves and expensive hats, the candy and gum go, and putting all these littles together you will be surprised how the Lord's pocket book will grow fat—try it dear ones for one year and see what the result will be.

Yours for work,
M. A. WOODWARD, Sec.

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

To Illinois brethren in special and all brethren in general:

Recently the Building Committee of the Illinois State Conference made a call through these columns for aid in raising a fund to build a suitable Conference building—not to use as a place of worship—but a building in which delegates may be entertained while in attendance at the Conference. The church in Oregon is large enough for all the meetings, having a seating capacity of about two hundred. Many generously answered this first call and the committee desires in this general way to thank all who have subscribed not only their money but also their words of encouragement. To them this second call is not directed, for we believe you have done well your part. We have now about $275.00 on hand. We need yet, at the very lowest estimate, $75.00. To put up a suitable building with lumber at its present price, we should have $400.00. This item is written to invite any who have not yet subscribed to do so in any amount, however small. Send remittance to the chairman of the committee who will promptly receipt for the same. Time and space forbid discussion as to the merits of locating the Conference permanently. Suffice it to say that we believe that when the plan is once in working order, all will be pleased with it. Building Committee consists: S. J. Lindsay, Chairman, Oregon, Ill.; J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Ill.; E. F. Gesin, Forreston, Ill.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 280 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 824 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Visit Winona Lake.

Winona Lake, Ind., on the Pennsylvania Lines, is an attractive summer haven for persons who desire to combine devotion, entertainment and instruction with rest and recreation. This resort is the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, and is annually visited by many persons who are strengthened in mind by the excellent facilities for educational work, and invigorated in body by the health-giving influences for which Winona Lake is famous.

The season for 1901 will open May 15th. Commencing on that date excursion tickets with fifteen-day limit will be on sale via Pennsylvania Lines. They may be obtained during May, June, July and August. The sale of season excursion tickets will also begin May 15th and continued only until September 14th. Excursion tickets will be good returning until September 17th.

Full information about the attractions at "Beautiful Winona," its Assembly and Summer School, etc., will be cheerfully furnished all who address Mr. Sol. C. Dickey, Secretary, Winona Lake, Ind. Inquiries about excursion rates, time of trains, etc., should be addressed to Passenger and Ticket Agents of the Pennsylvania Lines, or to F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa. —June 29.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Poetry.

"My Meditation of Him Shall be Sweet."

What e'er my God ordains is right,
His will is ever just:
Howe'er he orders mon my course,
I will be still and trust.
He is my God;
Though dark the road,
He holds me that I shall not fall,
Wherefore to him I leave it all.

Whate'er my God ordains is right,
He never will deceive;
He leads me by the proper path,
And so to him I cleave.
And take content
What he hath sent.
His hand can turn my gards away,
And patiently I wait his day.

What e'er my God or loins is right,
Though I the cup must drink
That bitter seems to my faint heart,
I will not fear nor shrink.
Years pass away
With dawn of day;
Sweet comfort yet shall fill my heart,
And pain and sorrow all depart.

Whate'er my God ordains is right,
My Light, my Life is he.
Who cannot will me aught but good,
I trust him utterly.
For well I know,
In joy or woe,
We soon shall see as sunlight clear,
How faithful was our Guardian here.

Whate'er my God ordains is right,
Here will I take my stand,
Though sorrow, need or death make earth
For me a desert land,
My Father's care
Is round me there,
He holds me that I shall not fall,
And so to him I leave it all.

Jesus, from a Moral Standpoint.

At the present time nearly all men from the Christian up to (?) the higher critic admire the Nazarene as a moral teacher and reformer, regarding him as one who had the courage of his convictions in full measure; and who in this respect stands before the world without a peer. It matters not in what light men view the Bible whether as wholly inspired as thought Paul and old fashioned Christians; or partially inspired as the socalled "advanced thinkers" think; or as a purely human composition as the avowed infidel holds; all feel bound in all fairness and reason to eulogize the character of this "inimitable and sublime man." The Christian is willing to live and die for him; the higher critic to surrender all the marvelous things of his grandmother's Bible, even the story of Eden and the physical resurrection of this wonderful man, but still hold on to him as the highest conceivable type of moral purity toward which the human race, which he says never fell, is slowly but surely climbing: while the infidel is willing to defend him even to the extent of charging Matthew, Mark and Luke and possibly John, with falsely reporting him as saying and teaching things he did not say and teach. So this third class of thinkers are concerned about Jesus to the degree that nothing in the New Testament shall reflect upon this marvelous man in a way to lower his character. The reader will understand what I mean after reading the following Scripture quotation: "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law; and a man's foes shall be they of his own household. He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me." Matt. x. 34-37. Luke's language is seemingly stronger, though, no doubt, designed to convey the same thought. This language, the unbeliever in the inspiration of the Bible, says Jesus never uttered; that he is here erroneously reported. The Christian thinks this is taking a good deal of liberty; and so it is. But he who denies divine authenticity of the record feels free to reject what would in his judgment lower the character of the great Teacher as he has made it out from other parts of the same record. The infidel says that Jesus was unselfish; and for this reason he thinks the language above quoted cannot in truth be ascribed to him. Now I believe that Jesus, of all men, was the most unselfish; that he understood the sacredness of the child's love for parents, that he knew what the law enjoined—the honoring of father and mother, which was in fact loving them in the most practical way—providing for their wants in old age, as appears from his own application of the command in his rebuke of the Pharisees and scribes who made void this precept. See Mark vii. 11. I know, too, how tenderly and affectionately he cared for his own mother, making provision for her sustenance and comfort, committing her to the care of John that disciple most richly endowed by nature and grace with the element of love—doing this in the hour of his agony on the cross. All this I believe concerning Jesus—and more. I believe that he meant what he said when he pronounced a blessing on the peacemakers; (Matt. v. 9) and that the very spirit of the man was averse to war and contention. Believing this; yet I believe that Jesus came to send a sword on the earth and not peace, that he set the members of families at variance with one another: and caused antagonisms where there were none before; and that he asked and urged men to love him more than they loved father or mother. There is no contradiction or discrepancy in the record as it stands. The language of this 10th chapter of Matthew is self-explanatory. "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves." ver. 16. Sheep do not fight, but wolves bite and devour. It is their nature to do this, "And the brother shall deliver up the brother to death and the father the child." v. 21. It was not the Christian that delivered up his brother to death. He was taught by his Master that if smitten on the one cheek to turn the other. The attitude of the Christian disciple toward his enemies is embodied in this Scripture: "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use and persecute you; (Matt. v. 44) and this "that they might be children of God." If in the history of the conflict that has been carried on since Jesus said, "I came not to send peace on earth but a sword," any wearing the Christian name, and making the Christian profession, have been on the side of the persecutor, with fire and faggot in hand correcting supposed heretics, and putting to death the non-resistent, they are not children of God—fall pat in the category of sheep, but that of wolves. This is Rome's wicked mistake; and it will sink her as deep in perdition as if she had a millstone tied to her neck and she were cast into the depths of the sea.

What was and is the cause (occasion) of the conflict? Primarily it was the preaching of the gospel, the unadulterated truth, by the apostles and other evangels divinely commissioned to go forth to the world. They preached Jesus and the resurrection, and freedom from the bondage of the law and the tradition of the elders; and forthwith the Jewish sword was unsheathed and Christian blood flowed. When they went to the pagan nations with the same sweet message of light and love, promising freedom from the errors and superstitions of the past, at once the anger of those to whom only blessing and favor was brought was aroused to murderous frenzy; the authority of magistrates invoke, and these men who "turned the world upside down"—and it surely needed turning—were hurried to prisons, to dungeons, to wear the felon's chains, to be subjected to slow tortures and to die the most cruel deaths. When pagan Rome had spent her fury on the overthrowers of her shrines and her gods, another power professedly Christian but Satanic in character, came on the scene and took in hand the bloody work and carried it on till every acre of Roman soil was drenched with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. Here is sword enough to verify the language of the great Teacher. In him these bringers of good tidings of good, and publishers of peace, would have peace, but in the world tribulation. John xvi. 33. The whole history of the Christian church through all the dreary centuries of persecution voices the meaning of the language, Matt. x. 34, 37 and shows how men and women would be obliged to love Christ more than they loved father and mother and kindred; for on this greater love to him was suspended discipleship, eternal life. The question of truth and the superior claims of Jesus were involved in the martyr's choice. Men might love parents more than they loved him and cling to the law which was powerless to justify and save: love father and mother and the world and the present life more than they loved him and have retained all their debasing errors and hurtful superstitions, and failed to gain eternal life. The sword and the antagonism of the past was the logical result of truth received and truth rejected; truth lovingly and heroically held, and truth maliciously spurned, because to receive it would overturn the existing order of things—ancient things rendered sacred by the memory of dead ancestors. What has been true of Christianity in the matter of opposition has been true of many other systems of truth when first introduced to the world. It has been the lot of those who have stood for reform to meet with opposition, even to imprisonment, confiscation of property, banishment and death. Liberty, to become the common heritage of men, has had to fight its way over many a hotly contested field. The unbeliever in the inspiration of the Bible, thinks profoundly, no doubt on many subjects, but when he comes to this book and its claims to divine authorship he becomes exceedingly superficial; so much so that like Mr. Ingersoll, as an example he fails to grasp the thought that lies on the very surface of the language. He jumps at conclusions and being over-anxious to make out that the Bible is not an inspired book he says things that are utterly silly, finds contradictions where there are none and false judgments where there is profound wisdom. Some of this class find time to read the Bible but not to study it. About a hundred years ago two young men, tinctured with infidelity, concluded to write a book against the Bible, but being honest they thought the fair thing to do would be study the Bible itself. To this task they earnestly set themselves. It is needless to say they never wrote the book intended. Men avowedly infidel and men harassed with doubts would do well to follow this example and acquaint themselves with the book they wish to overthrow. The Bible is more than a human production; and he who is the subject of it more than a teacher of morals; and while it is true that he ranks above all as an example to be imitated in man's daily life, he is the Savior of the world, the Giver of eternal life to all who obey him; the King of kings and Lord of lords; the One who is to settle all the great questions which continue to perplex the philosopher, philanthropist and the statesman. This is the grand issue of the future and will be worked out through the divine instrumentality of this preeminent Son of God. If Jesus is not what he claimed to be; and all he claimed to be, then of course the Bible is the product of man's own brain and we know not from whence we came nor whither we are going. The past is a profound mystery, the present a maze and the future a blank.

JOHN L. WINCE.

The Rich Man and Lazarus.

Editor Restitution:

A brother has asked for an exegesis on this subject, and here it is in my way of giving it.

Luke xvi., (The Rich Man and Lazarus) is urged as proof of a soul survivance in consciousness, when men are dead. Some contending that this Scripture is a real history, while others admit it to be a parable; but they say parables are taken from something that has been or may be. Before having done with it, however, I shall show that such is not always the case. Those who maintain that it is literal have no less difficulty in explaining it, yet they are bound to do so to be consistent. Let them make the attempt. Lazarus, covered with sores, died, and was carried into Abraham's bosom. Will they pretend that this is literal? Oh, no, they say. It was Lazarus' soul. But our Lord says Lazarus was carried into Abraham's bosom. Our opponents have to say, Not so, Lord, it was his soul. Thus they contradict our Lord to establish their own traditions. Let us see whether they succeed any better with their real history of the rich man. He died. What became of him? He was buried. The rich man was buried, remember. What next? In hades, the grave, of course where he was buried; [improperly translated hell] he lifted up his eyes being in torment, and seeth Abraham afar off and Lazarus in his bosom, etc. The rich man did this, they say it was his soul; but our Lord says it was the rich man. Thus again, they make void the words of Christ to establish their traditions, if our Lord did really give a literal history; but for the sake of showing the folly of their tradition about the soul, I will suppose that it was Lazarus and the rich man's souls or spirits, disembodied, that are in hades. I now ask, Are there disembodied souls or spirits material or immaterial? that is, are they matter or not matter? We are answered, They are immaterial. If so, they have substance. Can that which has no substance be seen or touched? If not the literal history advocates have an immaterial rich man with immaterial eyes, looking afar off and seeing immaterial Lazarus, or no substance Lazarus! Truly, these immaterial souls must have sharp eyes to see nothing, and an equally sharp understanding to know that it is Lazarus! But that is not all. The immaterial rich man desires that immaterial Lazarus should dip his immaterial finger in literal water, and cool his immaterial tongue! And all this is literal history! I have not placed the subject in this absurd light with any other view than merely to show the literal history advocates that they are, at least, as much involved in difficulty in explaining this Scripture as those who believe it to be a parable, and that it has no reference to man's state in a future life.

That it is a parable the context shows. It is in a group of them, viz: The lost piece of silver; the lost sheep; the prodigal son and the wasteful or unjust steward, with an admonition against serving mammon or riches. The pharisees, who were covetous, heard all these things and they derided him. Our Lord then proceeds in his discourse with special reference to the change about to take place in the dispensations. He says the law and the prophets were [preached] until John; since that time the kingdom of God was preached.

Dr. Adam Clarke remarks on parables, Let it be remembered that by the general consent of all (except the basely interested) no metaphor is ever to be produced in proof of a doctrine. In the things that concern our eternal salvation we need the most pointed and express evidence on which to establish the faith of our souls, or self.

Bishop Lowthe says, Parable is that kind of allegory which consists of a continued narration of fictitious or accommodated events, applied to the illustration of some important truth.

I state then, as a principle, that no parable is to be used as teaching doctrine not elsewhere explicitly revealed. Parables are used only to illustrate some truth already known, or partially so, or to prepare the way to present a truth not yet fully developed, but about to be, either by facts or explicit instruction.

The scope or design of the parable is what we are to seek, and not to pervert the truth of God by the assumption that the parable is a reality, that has been or may be; nor yet that every item in it was ever designed to have an application to the subject it was intended to illustrate. By such assumptions discredit has been thrown on revelation, the truth of God has been converted into food for the most fanatical, and men have turned to cunningly devised fables. If any doubt whether parables are not sometimes purely fictitious, let them read Ezekiel xvii. 1-10, the parable of the eagles cropping the cedar, and the parable of the ewe lamb, 2 Sam. xii. 1-7, and the parable of the trees choosing a king, Judges ix. 7, 15.

If it be replied that Jesus would not use fictitious names or characters in his parables, I answer that Jehovah the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, has done it, and why not his Son?

See the parable just referred to in Ezekiel xvii, The Word of the Lord came unto me saying, Son of Man, put forth a riddle and speak a parable unto the house of Israel, and say, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, and say, Thus saith the Lord God, A great eagle.....came unto Lebanon and took the highest branch of the cedar.....and carried it to a land of traffic; he set it in a city of merchants (say for example, in the City of New York. Think you the eagle would be likely to prosper in such a literal work? But proceed.) He, the eagle took of the seed of the land and planted it in a fruitful field; he placed it by great waters, and set it a willow tree, and it grew, and became a spreading vine of low stature, whose branches turned toward him (the eagle. These branches must have had souls, doubtless, that were intelligent thinkers to turn toward the eagle that planted the seed!) There was also another great eagle.....and behold, this vine did bend her root toward him, and shot forth her branches toward him, etc.

Thus the same vine works for both eagles with all the intelligence of a most intellectual being. Does any one believe this is a literal history of the actions of two eagles and a vine? or that such a thing had literally been, or may be? No one can doubt but that it is purely fictitious, and if Jehovah thus instructs men, shall I affirm his Son does not?

Of like character I regard the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, because the positive testimony of Scripture is, There is no knowledge in the grave (sheol) the state of the dead; and that in death there is no remembrance of God. See Eccl. ix. 10; Psa. vi. 5.

It is said the rich man must be conscious for he sees, feels and talks. I reply it was common among the Hebrews to represent things without life as knowing, feeling and conversing. See Gen. iv. 10; Hab. ii. 11; Isa. xiv. 8; Psa. xciii. 3; Rev. xviii. 1-3; ix. 1-5.

Our Lord, then, was in no danger of being understood in this parable as teaching the conscious state of dead men, and especially, as the Hebrew Scriptures expressly taught, the dead praise not the Lord—that in that very day their thoughts perish, Psalm cxv. 15, 16: and cxlvi. 1-4, that the dead know not anything, and that there is no knowledge in sheol where dead men go, Eccl. ix. 10, 45; and further, inasmuch as Jesus uses the expression in Greek to show the state of the rich man after death that exactly corresponds with the Hebrew sheol, viz: hades, he could be understood in no other way than as using a fabulous discourse like that to which I have previously referred to in the Old Testament—to illustrate an unpalatable subject to his deriding hearers.

The key to a parable is in itself or in the discourse connected with it. In the case before us it is in the context. The scope, or design of the parable was to teach the effect to follow upon two classes of men by a change from the Mosaic, or Law dispensation, to the Christian or Gospel dispensation; which new dispensation was the mystery which in other ages (or dispensations) was not made known unto the sons of men, but being now about to be revealed unto holy apostles, would change the condition of both Jews and Gentiles. This fact is clearly set forth in the 16th verse, which is the key to the parable and unlocks it perfectly. That verse reads thus,—The law and the prophets were (preached) until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached; that is, a new dispensation of God's favor is now opened; no longer to be confined to the Jews, or nation, but to embrace all nations in its offered benefits. This change would effect very differently two classes of men, viz: the Jews, who were under the law, and the Gentiles, who are to be embraced under the gospel, or to be made partakers of those peculiar blessings which had been hitherto so exclusively confined to the sons of Abraham. The effects of this change is illustrated by the parable under consideration. Let the reader note how our Lord introduces it.

After having spoken of the law and the prophets being preached until John, and that since that time the kingdom of God was preached, he intimates that the law was about to have its last and perfect accomplishment, that the last tittle of it was about to be finished; that then the Jews would be like the wife whose husband was dead, the law not binding them any longer; and that God, who had dealt with them under the title of husband, would be at full liberty to select a new bride out of all nations. Thus Paul reasons, Rom. vii. 1, 4, Know ye not brethren, for I speak to them that know the law, how that the law has dominion over a man as long as he liveth? For the woman which hath an husband is bound by the law so long as he liveth; but if the husband is dead, she is free (or loosed) from the law of her husband. So then if while her husband liveth she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress; but if her husband be dead, she is free from the law: so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man. Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God.

Now read the verse with which the parable of the rich man is introduced, Luke xvi. 18, Whosoever putteth away his wife, and marrieth another committeth adultery; and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from her husband, committeth adultery. So long as the law given by Moses continued, the Jews were chargable with adultery if they lacked in fidelity to that law as unto God their husband; (or Moses) but nationally they had often been wanting in fidelity, and the law was no longer to be the marriage contract; a new covenant, typified by the blood of Christ, and not by the blood of bulls and goats, was to form the ground by which the new bride was to hold her relationship to God, and through which she was to receive the blessings promised. The law being dead, by the body, or death of Christ, still to cleave to that law, as the Jew did, was to commit adultery, and bring upon themselves all its curses; they died unto Christ by rejecting him and putting him to death, and were broken off from Abraham's bosom, or from all spiritual connection with him, and have been in torments unto this day in consequence; while the believing Lazarus, who received Christ, even though he had been a polluted Gentile, full of sores, died unto the law, see Rom. vii. 4, and was grafted into the good olive tree, or was translated through the instrumentality of angels, (messengers or ministers of Christ) into Abraham's bosom, becomes a child of Abraham, an heir of God, and a joint-heir with Jesus Christ according to the promise to the kingdom of God, Rom. viii. 17; Gal. iii. 16, to end of chapter, Luke xii. 32, 33.

Now I am told that with my explanation of this parable it would cut off our Seventh Day Advents. Surely. The law is the gulf, you cannot pass from the law to Christ, that is, carry the law with you, as you cannot serve two masters. The law keeper cannot cross that gulf; he must believe the gospel and be baptized into Christ by which he lets go all claims to the law, nor can the Christian pass that gulf to the Jew. If he attempts it he falls from grace, and Christ shall profit him nothing. Not a drop of the water of life can pass from the gospel to one married to the law graven on stone, which is unto death. Ye cannot serve two masters.

The letter kills, the spirit giveth life. The words I speak are spirit and life, said Jesus. The seventh day people are married to a dead husband, and are living in spiritual adultery, and Christ will profit them nothing. They must let go of the dead body, or let go of the living Christ.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 26, 1901. NUMBER 24.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

An arrangement has been made to have Brother A. H. Zilmer preach for the Plymouth church once a month, but on account of previous appointments he will not likely commence till in August.

"Abide in me" says Jesus, John xv. 4. "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ask whatsoever ye will, and it shall be done unto you." Verse 7. "If ye abide in my word, then are ye truly my disciples." John viii. 31.

In looking over our list we find quite a number whose subscriptions expire this month, and some who have not yet sent in their money for this year. Please, brethren and sisters, to look after this matter a little, for we need the money to pay those whom we owe. So be prompt.

All who can should arrange to attend the dedication services of the new Church at Burr Oak, Ind., on Sunday June 30, at 10:30 A. M. Brother and Sister Woodward and others will be there. Arrangements are made to entertain all, and we trust the friends there will not be disappointed in the attendance. There will be meeting in the afternoon also, so the day will be well occupied. Give them a good big crowd to start with.

"Ease and comfort are natural desires of the human heart; and there are thorns real or imaginary in every one's pathway. But sitting down and brooding will never bring power to overcome them. Rather "be up and doing." If you have health and strength you have reason to be glad in spite of fortune's frown; for how much harder would be your lot or efforts to gain a living if you were crippled, blind, or deaf."

"Many men who have reached the summit of fame, and afterwards, "looked down into the humble valley from which they came, and longed to be back there again. The man who thinks the whole world is looking at him generally comes to realize after a while that the world has something better than that to do. Remember, that if the opportunities for great deeds should never come, be it ours to know that goodness, not glory, may be our portion."

The philosopher Bias, being asked, What animal he thought the most hurtful? replied:—"That of wild creatures a tyrant; and of tame ones a flatterer." Antisthenes said "To fall among crows is better than to fall among flatterers; for these devour the living,—the others only the dead." And an unknown writer has said, "Flatter not yourself in your faith to God, if you want charity for your neighbor; and think not that you want faith to God; where they are not both together they are both wanting; they are both dead if once divided."

"God in Christ."

At times the incomprehensibility of the Majesty in the heavens is forced upon us; but we turn towards the Anointed Jesus and invariably find relief; he lifts the veil for us. Only for him we could neither perceive his purity nor form a conception of his vastness. The scheme of redemption seems to remove the sense of distance. The divine perfections when reflected through the medium of perfect humanity, seem to have been brought near to us, familiar and lovable. When the law of human sympathy became available to religion, it seemed to link us to both the Father and the Son. Human frailties prevented, by seeming to forbid, direct contact or personal communion with God: but now in a peculiar sense we have been brought nigh to him: but though brought nigh,—we cannot by searching find him out. We can only know of him what he has been pleased to reveal respecting himself in his Word: and what he has revealed to us through the flesh of Jesus and the things that are made. At times we have cravings to know more of the personality and nature of him, "out of whom are all things, and we in him:" the eternal source of all being. —and the ever-present life of the world in infinite mind; and it seems profitable to go out at night and stand face to face with the infinite heavens above and about us that shine radiantly from age to age without change, although we cannot by searching find out God, and it dwarfs our comprehension, and brings to hand the sublime announcement, "They shall perish but thou shalt endure. All shall wax old as a garment: as a vesture shalt thou change them and they shall be changed. But thou art the same and thy years shall not fail." No,—we are brought no nearer to him. Only the blessed Lord Jesus can come to our assistance. His faith alone gives us the loftiest and most understandable idea of God, and satisfies our every desire. He taught us to think of him, and to feel that he is the Father of men, full of mercy, love and all abounding grace. Besides this the life of Christ himself, is the abiding witness of the Fatherhood of God. Why, sonship was the very kernel of the inner life,—the atmosphere in which he moved, and the inspiring force of his activity and the spring of his joy?

Do we not in Christ reach the point of knowing God as he would have us know him? Of loving him, and believing, as John says, that he loves us and dwells in us and we in him? Can we think of him as the God of truth, of thought, of love, of life, and light? The love of God is the most delightful exercise of which the human heart is capable, and if any man love God the same is known of him." Recognized as children, valued as joint-heirs with Jesus; directed by him as the custodians of his will,—oh what a calling! This is just the gospel we need; it is a gospel of consolation,—a gospel of repose. Says the Psalmist, "I am small and despised, yet the Lord thinketh on me," and Jesus pressed these facts upon his disciples then and now,—Have faith in God,"—"He careth for you." Do we realize as we should the sense of spiritual strength as we know that God is near; that God is ours,—that God loves us,—and the Truth of truths—GOD IS LOVE—that sent his Son to bring us back to him,—that he is willing to "hide his face from our sins, and blot out our iniquities if we confess them and follow Christ. Yea, we try to: verily and we would give fervid emphasis to the expression of Paul, as we feel the warmth of the Father's heart and rest in his peace: "Nothing shall separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

In the preceding article the controversy among Christadelphians was continued. The subject of God-Manifestation, the Nature of Christ was shown to have given rise to wide spread hostility among brethren. It would be observed that the doctrine of "Yahweh" was mentioned by D. Brown in referring to the names of God—"IEVE ALEIM" he shall be the mighty ones.

This is in one aspect of it the foundation of Dr. Thomas' teaching on the subjects above named. He says "Yahweh Elohim is the Mosaic symbol of Deity Manifestation in flesh." Antipas, 1864, some notice of this may naturally come in here.

So far as I am aware this doctrine first appeared in the Herald of the Kingdom Vol. VIII. for Sept., 1857. It had no place in Elpis Israel although that work contained a long dissertation on the Elohim. In this the name Jehovah occurs only once. It was fully developed in Vol. VIII. and IX., in eleven articles entitled "Mosaic and Nazarene teaching concerning God." So important was this subject esteemed that the articles were reprinted as a pamphlet in 1869, entitled "Phanerosis." The subject also formed the leading part of the tract by Antipas (Dr. Thomas). In Eureka Vol. I. 8 pages were devoted to it, and 20 pages in Vol. III.

The occasion of the articles in the Herald was a mission to Jews in New York city in 1857. It was carried on by two so-called converted Jews. The subject advocated was, "Christianity the true Judaism." The method was to prove the genuineness and authenticity of the New Testament. A learned Jew, D. E. de Lara, LL. D. took exception to this position, challenging the speaker to a regular debate. Before the second meeting Dr. Thomas had been invited to attend which he did. Matters not being very agreeable the Doctor resolved to hold meeting for a similar purpose in a separate hall. At the first meeting Dr. de Lara attended, having previously handed in a long letter to the lecturer. This formed the text of the first address. The drift of Dr. de Lara's letter may be guessed from the following: "The moment a Jew is told that God has a son and that there are three persons.....in the Godhead, and that these three distinct units constitute only one unit.....he shrinks back and stands sternly aloof."

In the Herald Vol. VIII. p. 28, referring to passages where the names Yahweh and Elohim occur, the editor says, "It behoves us.....to look into the signification of certain words brought before us in these and other passages of the sacred writings." These are dealt with too great elaboration, much stress being laid on the literal sense. He says, "Moses made proclamation, saying, "Hear O Israel, he who shall be (or Yahweh) our Elohim (or Divine and Mighty Rulers) is One Yahweh.' In this formula Moses teaches that there was a future time in the history of the Hebrew nation when it should by 'a King and Princes,' or Elohim, who should all be the Eternal Spirit, self-styled Yahweh, manifested in glorified humanity; and though a 'multitude which no man can number,' yet constituting in the aggregate a Divine Unity, or One Yahweh." Antipas, p. 4. "The purpose of Jehovah excludes the Elohim of Sinai from the Elohim of the proclamation.....This purpose is the development of Elohim from the human race equal to the Elohim of Sinai." Herald Vol. VIII. p. 99.

"The true believer meets the Jew face to face in the approving presence of Moses and Jesus.....compare Deut. vi. 3, with Mark xii. 29-32. By doing so the reader will see that Jesus was as emphatic and precise in his teaching concerning God as Jesus." The Doctor's interpretation may be correct or not; but the present writer took the author's advice and compared the passages mentioned, putting the result in the form of a short article. He reproduces the same here that the readers may judge as to the Doctor's theory, and to the tendency of such to excite division.

MOSES QUOTED BY JESUS.

Moses said to Israel, "Hear, O Israel: the Lord our God is one Lord." The word here rendered Lord (Jehovah), is derived from the verb to be, and is presumed to denote the underived and continuous being or existence of the great Creator. The word rendered God (Elohim) is said to be derived from a root signifying power or strength, and often occurs, as it does here, in the plural number. Much has been made of these facts by ingenious and speculative minds. Regarding the former word, Dr. Samuel Lee in his Hebrew Lexicon, says, "Among the Israelites generally it was held blasphemy—up to a considerable antiquity—even to pronounce it." He says, however, "it may be termed the Israelitish designation of the true God." The same authority says of Elohim, "the plural used for the True God has given rise to various speculations, some supposing that the notion of a Trinity in Unity lay concealed in his Word. Others, again, particularly the Rationalists of Modern Germany, have thought that vestiges of a very ancient polytheism were discoverable in it. Both seem in this case to have taken too much for granted, viz., that the ancients were guided in their writings by the technical rules of modern grammarians, and also that they were complete metaphysicians—neither of which can be maintained; hence both are probably false."

But Dr. Samuel Lee may be deemed of no authority, being probably ignorant of God's purposes as revealed in the Scriptures. Let us see, therefore, if any light is shed on this part of the Spirit's teaching from the other Scriptures.

It so happens that these words of Moses are quoted by Jesus. In Mark xii. 29, we read, "And Jesus answered him (one of the scribes), the first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord. And thou shalt love the Lord thy God," etc. Now Moses wrote in Hebrew, and Jesus spoke in Greek: at least Mark, as the Spirit's amanuensis, has given us the words of Jesus in Greek. The word Jehovah used by Moses is rendered in Mark by Kurios, and the plural Elohim by the singular Theos. The word Kurios signifies simply a possessor, hence a master, and is often applied in the New Testament to men. Hence there is nothing occult or exclusively theological in the rendering given of Jehovah by Jesus. Likewise regarding Elohim, if there was any thing remarkable couched under the plural number, it is altogether ignored by Jesus in substituting Theos in the singular.

"The doctrine taught by Moses in these words seems clearly confined to the grand truth of the unity or oneness of the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in opposition to the lords many and gods many of the idolatrous nations around. This is clearly corroborated by the conversation between Jesus and the scribe. After Jesus had quoted the two commandments, the scribe said unto him, "Well, Master, thou hast said the truth; for there is one God, and there is none other but he."....."And when Jesus saw that he answered discretly, he said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God." Here the scribe uses Theos in the singular, and shows his understanding of Moses' words, as quoted by Jesus, to be simply expressive of the unity of God. If there were any doubt of this it is quite removed by the words, "and there is none other but he." This was a discreet answer in the estimation of Jesus, and it could only be so esteemed by him because it was in accordance with the sense in which he himself had used the words of Moses.

But it has ever been characteristic of human wisdom to seek to draw more from God's words than they really contain. There is in many minds a morbid discontentment with simplicity, and a craving for the occult and marvellous. Swedenborg is a notable example. Hence human imagination has exalted itself against the knowledge of God, and thus the very gospel of the kingdom of God is at this day hidden from the eyes of men who have the Scriptures of truth in their hands, but whose minds are pre-occupied with human wisdom.—J. C. in Messenger of the Churches, 1864.

The manner of Jesus quoting Moses with regard to the names of the Deity referred to in the article reprinted above, finds other examples in our Lord's quotations from the Old Testament. Quoting Psalm cx. "Jehovah said to my Lord," or Adon, he gives it as The Kurios said to my Kurios. In quoting the words of Moses in reply to the tempter, "Ye shall not tempt Jehovah your Elohim," he gives it as—"Thou shalt not tempt Kurios thy Theos." Kurios here as in Mark xii. is put for Jehovah and Theos (singular) for Elohim (plural).

The same practice was followed by the writers of the gospels and epistles. Matthew recording the acclamation of the multitude—"Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, uses the Greek "Kurios" to represent the name Jehovah which is the term used in Psalm cxviii. whence the words are taken. John the Baptist said to the priests and Levites sent from Jerusalem to ask him Who art thou? "I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias." The term "Lord" here is in Isaiah Jehovah, and in the Greek of John i. 23, Kurios. The Apostle Peter said to the Jews at the beautiful gate of the temple....."Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall your Lord God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me." The terms Lord and God here are in the context of the passage in Deut. xviii. 18. Jehovah and Elohim, and in the Greek of Acts iii. 23, Kurios and Theos. So Stephen in Acts vii. 37, quoting Moses. The Apostle Jude quoting from Zech. iii. 2, "The Lord rebuke thee," uses for Lord here Kurios, while in Zecharish the term in the Hebrew is Jehovah.

These instances clearly show that the sacred writers of the New Testament used Kurios and Theos for Jehovah and Elohim respectively without any attempt to bring any peculiar signification out of the literal meaning of the names. What was sufficient for their practical use need hardly be considered insufficient for scholars of modern times.

It may be noted that the Hebrew tense has been a matter of some difference of opinion among grammarians. Dr. Samuel Lee, in his Hebrew Lexicon, says, "It is now placed beyond doubt that the Hebrew tense formerly termed the future is an indefinite or unlimited present; i. e. expresses the action, etc., of the verb as present with any time intimated by the context." From this it appears that the assumption of IEUE being a future tense apart from a qualifying context, must be inadmissible. Both give it as present "I am;" to render it future there must be some valid reason in the context.

I note that, at an aggregate meeting in Edinburgh (1864), this question called forth some remarks against unbiblical phrases. The speaker (A. Fordyce) cited A. Campbell as the advocate of speaking of "Bible things in Bible words." He disapproved of such terms as "frog power," etc., and classed along with such "Four-square multitudinous unity," found in Antipas.

Short Sermons. No. 20.

The resurrection and song of redemption. Paul in concluding his masterly argument in behalf of the resurrection of the dead, says, "Behold, I show you a great mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. See Is. xxv. 8. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The church at Corinth had been confused about the resurrection of the dead, and some had lost all faith in it. ver. 12. Paul seeing the danger, labors ardently to correct this fatal mistake, and set them right. He makes a strong plea for the resurrection, basing his argument on the resurrection of Christ. And it was an admitted fact that Christ had been raised from the dead, and was seen of more than five hundred witnesses at one time, then others will also raise. But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept or sleep in death. This being true, as a basis, then there must be and will be a resurrection of the dead. And to deny a future resurrection of the dead, is to deny that Christ was raised. Then the good people would be in their sins, and those who had fallen asleep in Christ are perished. There is no consolation in such a denial as this for any one. And yet this denial scheme of Satan was sprung on the people long time ago for large money, and this flimsy story is believed and reported among the Jews and all other unbelievers unto this day. Many years after this wonderful event, however, Jesus himself says positively —I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and death." And I for one have no doubts about this firm foundation on which all our hope of future life is based. And when the time comes for this same Jesus to return in person, and judge and reward the living and the dead, then his voice and power will rend the tomb, and the dead will hear and come forth. The good to life everlasting, who will then for the first time exultantly exclaim, O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? This glorious victory over the enemy death, comes through our Lord Jesus Christ, not at death, but at the resurrection or waking up of the dead. And to sing and apply it at death, as the many do is altogether out of place, and those who thus sing and use it, cannot sing with the spirit and understanding also, because it is entirely out of harmony with the teaching of the Spirit through the word. Just so of that grand song of redemption which the redeemed of all nations will sing when redeemed, and not before. And what will they sing? "And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. v. 9, 10. Note, all the redeemed ones will sing this song, they will sing it when redeemed from death, and could not in truth sing it at death, as the dead know not any thing, and do not sing anything while dead. The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence. For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave who shall give thee thanks? Note again, they sing we shall reign on the earth. Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth. Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth; much more the wicked and the sinner. The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever. This is the united testimony of three of the wisest and greatest men that ever lived on earth. This is the truth, and the truth makes men and women free who believe and obey it, while those who believe and sing, "We shall reign above the sky," are all out of harmony with the Bible and the Spirit, and cannot sing with the redeemed ones over there, unless they believe the truth, change their faith and their songs, and it is high time they were at it, as there is no time to change after death. Conclusion, as faith in and obedience to the serpentine, fabulous doctrine of Satan caused man to sin and die, lose life. Just so it requires faith in and obedience to (not the fables of our day, but) the saving truth of God—the message of life through Christ to restore life to the dead. One doctrine was and is a deadly poison, the other is an antedote, a divine remedy for sin and death. Oh, do not try to mix them and deceive yourself and others, as they will not mix.

Obituary.

Robert Thomas Young, born June 12, 1823, at Soho, England, died Feb. 1, 1901, at Ottawa, Canada. The seventy-seven years comprised within these two dates measures the natural life of a righteous man, a child of God and one of nature's noblemen. Although by birth an Englishman, and dying beneath the Union Jack, the activities of his life were all in the United States. Here he came when but a lad, where he was subsequently joined by his parents and three younger brothers, one of whom, George W. Young, formerly of Brooklyn, N. Y., later of Seattle, Washington, is most lovingly remembered by many readers of this paper. Brother Young's business career was as a clerk and publisher in New York City, for a period as farmer in Iowa, and later for many years a highly respected merchant at Tuckahoe, N. Y. He was twice married, living with his first wife for forty years, she being an invalid for thirty-four years before her death. Their only son, Albert T. Young, now deceased, was an officer in the U. S. navy for a number of years. Brother Young married again, and his widow, Louisa S. Young, and two lovely daughters survive him. On February 24, the Church of God in Brooklyn, N. Y., with which Brother Young had been connected for a great many years, held a memorial service. A number of brethren testified to the ideal Christian character of him who had fallen asleep in Jesus; and a memorial address was delivered by the undersigned, from Psalms xxxvii. 37: "Mark the perfect man and consider the upright, for the end of that man is peace." The key note to which the life of Brother Young was attuned, was the divine word love. He loved the truth and sought for and defended it earnestly; but he had no heart for that form of religion which finds its expression only in words, chiefly of combative and denunciatory character, speaking the truth in love, he taught that Christian life must find expression in good works, in gentleness, humility and righteousness, and as he taught he lived. "The good alone are great;" and by this rule we know that in the days when God's jewels are gathered, his life that is now hid with Christ in God, shall shine forth as a star forever and ever.

Samuel Wilson.

What the church needs, what the world needs, what God's vineyard is crying for today, is workers: men who are not afraid to work, who, feeling the awful necessity which sin laid upon the world, and constrained by the precious love of Christ, are willing to work from morn till noon, from noon till dewy eve, for the amelioration of the present condition of men, for the advancement of the truth of God in the earth.

"No man has come to true greatness who has not felt in some degree that his life belongs to his race, and that what God gives him he gives him for mankind. The different degrees of consciousness are really what make the different degrees of greatness in men."

Poetry.

God.

How wondrous is our God, how manifold
His mighty works, with cunning hand
He paints the varied face of nature o'er
With beauteous tints, soft, many hued,
The eye is soothed, the sense is charmed,
When viewing earth's soft emerald green
Or heaven's tender blue flecked with white clouds,
Like foaming billows in an azure sea,
Or thickly set with heaven's glittering troops
Tremulous they hang in the dark depths of space
Upheld by the strong arm of him who placed
Them in their course. How true the hand that guides
These mighty worlds through heaven's broad expanse,
And keeps with watchful care each whirling sphere
Within its orbit bound. The gray old earth
Has at its bidding sped for countless years
Upon her tireless course; nor weary yet she wings
Her vessel-like flight around the orb of day.
Day follows day, and night, dark winged,
Gives place to rosy morn. The years speed by
The summers come and go, and yet the sun
Doth shine as brightly now as when in old
It lit the splendors of the temple built by Israel's mighty king.
Or warmed the tender buds and herbs that fed the flocks
Of ancient Abraham. The golden moon
Doth shed her rays as mellowly o'er hill and dale
And mountain's rugged peak as when she lit
The humble manger where our Saviour lay
A tender babe—the wondrous gift of God
To fallen man. How many men have trod
The weary earth; each played his part,
Spent his short life, and then, the tolling bell,
The funeral knell tells of another gone
To his long home. The earth moves on, nor stops
For life or death, for woe or woe; but God
Doth count each tear that falls, and knows
The number of the hosts, who, in the silent past
Have come and gone upon the earth, and of those Who live and breathe today. O mighty God
How wondrous are thy works! Thy ways
Past finding out. All nature doth proclaim
Thy wisdom; from the dew drop that gleams
A liquid diamond in the lily's heart,
To the deep-sounding ocean, rolling on
From pole to pole in majesty sublime,
Its hollow echoes tell of him who said,
"Thus far shalt thou go, and here Shall thy proud waves be stayed." No eye
Save thine, hath seen the treasures rare,
Hid 'neath the rolling deep. Rare gems
Gleam from the hollow caverns; all secure
From avaricious man. And busy hosts
Sport 'neath the dancing waves, and safely dwell
In peace within their briny home, nor fear
The raging storms that lash the crested waves
To awful fury. When the billows wild,
Rise, like huge mountains reaching heavenward,
And the vast sea a seething cauldron boils,
Then ocean's tenants find a safe retreat,
Far, far beneath the angry billows, tempest-tossed,
And sporting in the hollow caverns, 'mid the grove
Of branching coral, and where lost rich gems
Lie all unsought. Where none save the Omnipotent
Hath marked the wonders of the pathless deep.
Oh wondrous God! Infinite, great, beyond the reach
Of mortals to conceive thy wondrous power.
The heaven of heavens cannot contain thee, yet
Thou dignest to dwell within the hearts of those Who love and worship thee. Oh, what is man
That thou art mindful of him? The son of man
That thou dost visit him? May the creatures of thy hand
Thy holy name adore, and render thee
The praise and honor due thy awful majesty.
The love and true obedience of loyal hearts
That bow in sweet submission to thy holy will,
Knowing 'mid life's sorrows, toils and fears
That thou, our God, art true and faithful still.

Genesis. Chap. 26.

1. And there occurred a famine in the land besides the former famine that occurred in the time of Habraam; and Isaak went his way unto Abimelech, king of Philistines, in Gerara.

2. And the Lord appeared unto him and said, Do not go down into Aiguptos; take up thy abode in a land of which I shall tell thee.

3. And sojourn in this land and I will be with thee and bless thee; for unto thee and thy seed shall I give all this land, and I shall establish my oath which I swore unto Habraam thy father.

4. And I shall multiply thy seed as the stars of the heavens, and I shall give unto thy seed all this land, and all the nations of the earth will have been blessed in thy seed.

5. Because Habraam, thy father, hearkened unto my voice, and watched to guard my statutes and my commandments and my acts of justification and my laws.

6. And Isaak took up his abode in Gerara.

7. And the prominent men of the place inquired about Hrebekka, his wife, and he said, she is my sister; for he was afraid to say, she is my wife, lest perchance the prominent men in the place might kill him for the sake of Hrebekka because she was beautiful to the sight.

8. And he had been a long time there; and Abimelech, the king of Gerara, peeped down through his window and saw Isaak playing with Hrebekka, his wife.

9. And Abimelech summoned Isaak and said unto him; Surely she is thy wife; Why didst thou say, She is my sister? And Isaak said unto him, I said it, for the reason perchance I might die for her sake.

10. And Abimelech said unto him, Why didst thou do this unto us? A little more and some one of our race had lain with thy wife, and thou wouldst have brought a sin of ignorance upon us.

11. And Abimelech enjoined on all his laity saying, Should any one touch this man and his wife he will be amenable to death.

12. And Isaak sowed in that land and found in that year a hundredfold of barley? And the Lord blessed him.

13. And the man became exalted, and going forward became greater until he became very great.

14. And acquisitions of sheep and acquisitions of cattle, and many fields became his; and the Philistines became envious of him.

15. And all the wells which the servants of his father in the time of his father had dug, the Philistines stopped up and filled with earth.

16. And Abimelech said unto Isaak, Depart from us, because thou hast become abler than we are?

17. And Isaak went away from there and pitched camp in the valley of Gerara and took up his abode there.

18. And Isaak dug out the wells of water which the servants of Habraam his father had dug, and which the Philistines had stopped up after Habraam his father died; and he named them by the names his father had named them.

19. And the servants of Isaak dug in the valley of Gerara, and found there a well of living water.

20. And the shepherds of Gerara fought with the shepherds of Isaak pretending the water was theirs; and they called the name of the well, Injustice.

21. And taking up from there he dug another well, and they fought for it; and he named the name of it Enmity.

22. And taking up from there he dug another well, and they did not fight for it, and he named the name of it a Wide Place, saying, It is because the Lord hath made things wide for us and hath increased us upon the land.

23. And he went up from there unto the Well of the Oath.

24. And the Lord appeared unto him that night, and said I am the God of Habraam thy father; fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee and multiply thy seed for Habraam thy father's sake.

25. And he built there an altar, and invoked the name of the Lord, and pitched there his tent; and the servants of Isaak dug there a well in the valley of Gerara.

26. And Abimelech went his way unto him from Gerara, and Ochozath his bride-leader and Phichoor, the commander of his host.

28. We saw that the Lord was with thee and we said, Let there come to be a blessing between us and thee and we would make a covenant with thee.

29. That thou wilt not do us harm even as we did not abominate thee and as we did thee well and sent thee away in peace, and now thou art blessed by the Lord.

30. And he made a reception for them and they ate and drank;

31. And arose at dawn, and swore each to his neighbor, and Isaak sent them away and they departed from him with a salvation offering.

32. And it came to pass that day also that the servants of Isaak came and told him about the well they had dug; and they said, We did not find water.

33. And he called it Oath. For that reason he called the name of that city, Well of an Oath unto this day.

34. And Heesau was forty years old and he took Judith, daughter of Beooch the Chettaite as a wife, and Basemath, a daughter of Heloon a Chettaite; and they were wrangling with Isaak and Hrebekka.

COMMENT.

"Gerara" "a place of veneration."

It seems from the narrative that Isaak was inclined to do as his father Habraam did in the time of another famine and go down into Egypt; and the purport of the vision here recounted is a divine warning not to do so; but to continue to sojourn in this land of promise with all its trials and tribulations.

Abimelech, the king of Gerara, introduced here again affords the reader of Genesis a very interesting and suggestive subject for ethnical and theological character study. Here is a man in an exalted position, as the world goes much higher and more prospered than Isaak, God's man, one who knows God evidently too though a heathen, and unto whom God deigns to reveal himself also in sleep-vision and whose ethnical sense and moral character as a whole seems to contrast very favorably with that of Isaak, if telling and acting the truth is to be our criterion in the way he treated both Habraam and Isaak, to say nothing about his hospitality and generosity exemplified toward both of them. Was he a covenant-keeper? The special "seven-lamb" covenant which Habraam made with him in regard to one well which became so historically prominent subsequently under the name of "the Well of the Oath-taking" or (Beersheba" C. V.) would indicate that even his bond was not as good as his talk in the long run.

The reader must not confound this well and its name with the old historic one we have just referred to and called "Beersheba" in the C. V. Genesis 21 as this well was dug by the servants of Habraam, and that was named "The Well of the Oath-Taking" and this was called "Oath" merely and the city subsequently near it was called "Well of an Oath." The two have been utterly confounded, as the reader will see in the C. V. and R. V. This is a matter to topographical importance it seems to me.

My Prayer for the Coming Days.

My prayer is that of a dear poet, who says,

"If I cannot do great things for thee, Lord,
Accept this mite that I give,
It may be the crumb of comfort,
That shall help some one to live;
It may contain drink for the thirsty,
That shall cause some one to say,
'I repent, I believe in the Word of God.'"

What were this to me; could I bring some dear trembling one to the Savior's feet. So happy myself this morning in thinking of all he has done for me. I would fain reach out my hands to others and say, Come and know yourselves that it is good to serve the Lord and to rejoice in him. The crowd murmured when Jesus went home with Zaccheus. They said, "That he is gone to be guest with a man that is a [illegible] that he came to be my guest; for they did salvation come near to my house. What had become of my sins, had he not come in at my door? They would terrify me in the night watches; they would be more than I could bear. But he has "been a shelter for me, and a strong tower from the enemy." "I will trust in the covert of his wings." Shall it not be said of you, dear unsaved ones, that Jesus is gone to be your guest? Your guest—not for a day—but as long as life should last? Your guest to keep you on good behavior; to pour out his treasures of knowledge for you; to help you when the storm-waves run high; to keep you in patience when every one else is angry; to guide your feet in the way of peace, when other feet are going wrong? Your guest in the sweet communion of prayer and song and hope, to be with you always, even unto the end of the age? And then you are to have part in the kingdom when this age shall end, with no fears to haunt, no temptations to battle with, no pain to benumb, no weariness to hinder, but with endowment of life, stretching on beyond all power of computation in fullest of perfection and bliss. Will you have it? "The days are going by," when will you come? Today? Tomorrow? You have no Savior, until you take Jesus to be your Savior. You have no God to be your God in an especial manner, until you take the God of the Bible to be your God in his own appointed way. No God to guard you in life; no God to redeem you from death! "Without God and without hope!" and yet drifting on without thought and without fear! No blood upon the lintel of your door! And the destroying angel soon to pass over! O that I could make you hear!

A Grove Meeting.

A general meeting of our brethren will be held in Nathan Lapsley's Grove, 4 miles north-west of Prescott, Linn County, Kansas, beginning Friday evening July 20th, and continuing over into the next week. Bros. W. J. Orem, John Foore and other speakers are expected to be in attendance. A general invitation is extended. Many brethren have tents bring them for camping. Those who come on the trains to Prescott will be furnished a way to get out to the place for meeting.

The Sultan and the Zionists.

The Zionist movement, which has been making rapid headway of late in Western Europe and the United States, has just received encouragement from a source which has heretofore been regarded as hostile to the purposes its promoters have in view.

Mr. Theodore Herzl, founder of the movement, who arrived in Constantinople three weeks ago, succeeded, it seems, in having a most favorable interview with the Sultan. The audience granted lasted two and a half hours, and resulted in the most gratifying concessions on the part of the Turkish ruler. The plans which Dr. Herzl submitted to the Sultan for the colonizing of Southern Palestine with Jews were supported by the strongest recommendations of the German Emperor.

Briefly summarized, the audience may be said to have had these tangible results: Dr. Herzl has made an offer of a considerable sum of money to the Turkish government to secure definite tenure and practical governing rights for the colonists. The Sultan, it is presumed from the meager details at hand, accepted this offer, but the Porte demands international securities for the fulfillment of the contract on the part of the Zionists. It is believed that Emperor William will be the principal surety. An international congress will shortly be called to support the plans agreed upon between the Sultan and Dr. Herzl.

These plans, among other things, provided for the immediate rebuilding of the ancient harbor of Jaffa, which is the port of Jerusalem. Large irrigation works are to be established. Jewish labor will be employed in the development of the new enterprises. As houses are built rural Jews from Roumania, Russia, and Galicia will be settled on the land.

The leaders in the movement do not propose to import the lowest class of workers. The plans for the colony are on a business basis, and remunerative returns are expected. These returns will be used in enlarging and developing the colony. The undertaking appeals to the world as the fulfillment of a prophecy, but its promoters are disregarding mere sentiment and endeavoring in a practical way to found once more a Jewish nation. For this is what it will come to if the Jews secure a firm foothold in Palestine. The only thing to be dreaded is the fitful policy of the Moslem empire and fanaticism of the Mohammedans. But, with a fair start, and with the civilized world behind the movement, the colonists will soon be intrenched securely enough to hold their own.

Whatever of success shall crown the enterprise will be due in great part to the friendship, the forethought, and the tactful diplomacy of the Kaiser. It now becomes apparent that his visit to the Holy Land, as well as the many attentions that he has shown the Sultan of late, were prompted by his desire to do a great service for the Jewish people. He has secured the confidence as well as the respect of the Porte, and his influence consequently is of the highest value to the Zionist movement. By a few bold strokes that are characteristic of the man he has accomplished more for the colonization project in the last three years than the English and French governments accomplished in that direction in the preceding fifty.

The above clipping is an editorial from the daily Inter Ocean, published in Chicago. There can be no doubt but what prophecy is being fulfilled in a remarkable manner when editors of our daily secular papers can discern it. The editor says: "The undertaking appeals to the world as a fulfillment of prophecy." If it "appeals to the world as a fulfillment of prophecy," what must it do to the Church of God, who have long prayed for the peace of Jerusalem, and the return of her long exiled people.

There is now a mighty "shaking" in the valley of dry bones. The bones are coming together, and soon Israel will stand upon their feet as a "great army."

Let us all rejoice and be glad.

W. H. WILCOX.

Pleads for New Zion.

London, June 15.—A critical moment has arrived in the history of the Jews. Despite every misrepresentation the Sultan of Turkey is a friend of the Jew. Indeed, I may say boldly the Jews of the world have no better friend than the ruler of Palestine. Shall they miss this unprecedented opportunity for laying the ghost of the Jewish question and ending the tragedy of the Wandering Jew? Will the Jews of America forget their own happiness in the glorious land of freedom how heavy is the bondage of their brethren?

Now or never is the moment for the oppressed Jews of the world to settle themselves in their old historic home. How much money is needed for their object—this great, historical religious enterprise? No more than the sum at which a hundred paltry companies are floated. No more than the sum at which I originally fixed the desired capital for the Jewish colonial trust to London—only £2,000,000 ($10,000,000.)

Only let the Jews of the world contribute but $1,500,000 to the amount already in our coffers—less than $1 a head—and this great tragedy of the ages changes its complexion and transforms itself into a drama with a happy ending; a ruined people regenerates itself, and in the regeneration the ruined soil of the desert blossoms as the rose, and an ancient race grows young again in the sweet air of liberty and security.

As my friend Zangwill said at the Maccabean dinner in London this week, even as an experiment it is worth trying. The magnates of the race might well give themselves the luxury of the adventure. It is so cheap! There are so many more foolish ways of wasting their money. If the magnates will not do it then the masses must. Shares in the Jewish colonial trust cost only £1 ($5) each, but whether few or many, whether by Jews or Christians, raised the sum must be. It is incredible that it should not be. An indelible stain would be left on my people. Their prayers would become blasphemy—but I will anticipate no such hideous mockery, such treachery to their centuries of sorrow—their ancestral dreams. Let me rather dwell on the vision of a unanimous people offering a materialistic world the spectacle of a splendid idealism.—Theodore Herzl, Founder Zionist Movement, in Chicago Record-Herald.

Dr. Theodore Herzl, who is now in London, expresses the greatest faith in the eventual success of the Zionist movement to colonize the Jews in Palestine. Israel Zangwill presided at a dinner of Maccabeans in his honor. Zangwill declared Dr. Herzl to be the first statesmen the Jews have had since the destruction of Jerusalem. Dr. Herzl declares that nothing now is needed to put his plans in operation but money.—Tribune.

Dear brothers and sisters of the household of faith:

I am again spared to write a few lines to the love feast, if I am not too late. But you know that Christ says, "He that is last shall be first and he that is first shall be last." Dear brothers and sisters, let us all be ready to enter in if the Lord says to us, "Well done, thou good and faithful servants, enter thou into thy joy, for thou hast been faithful in a few things." Although I am one of these isolated ones I hear no preaching at all; all the gospel I hear is what I get from my Bible and RESTITUTION and that gives me lots of consolation. I do not go to church very often, for I know I will not hear the Word of God, and so I think if I stay at home and read my Bible I will get the truth there. Dear ones, I must tell you that awful visitor death, has visited my family, has taken my oldest daughter MRS. A. E. Glick. She left one little child and husband; she was 32 years of age. She died Nov. 8th; she never made any profession nor never was baptized. I saw here some time ago where one of the sisters said that one of our old brothers had gone into magnetic healing and I am awful sorry to hear it, it almost made my heart stop beating, as I am somewhat acquainted with, and I thought his faith in God was too strong for that, for you know that Christ says he is no respector of persons, and why would he give mortal man such power? This is from a sister in Christ to one and all; I will close, hoping to meet you all in Christ's kingdom.

MRS. R. C. ELLIOTT.

He only measures things in the right relation who takes eternity into account. There is so much we must lay aside when we come to the end of life it is a question whether we are wise in spending strength as we do in order to secure it. How much will you carry with you into the next world? What are you doing now that you can take along and complete in the future life?"

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

Annual Meeting of the Kansas-Missouri Conference.

The Annual Meeting of the Kansas-Missouri Conference of the Church of God will be held in the public park in Severance, Kansas, beginning Friday evening, August 23, and hold over till Sunday evening, Sept. 1, 1901. Our audience tent, with dining tent and small living tents, and cots will be erected to accommodate all who will be in attendance. All coming will please bring all the bedding they will need for their lodging. A cook has been arranged for, and all will be boarded on the ground at the small expense of 25 cts. per day. Come prepared to remain during the meeting. The Conference work will be transacted Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. All desiring small tents will please address me at Atchison, Kansas, and so state, that we may know how many tents to order. A general attendance is desired. Let every body begin at once to get ready to attend this meeting. Severance is on the St. Joe and Grand Island Ry., 25 miles west of St. Joseph, Mo. Trains are run in connection with all regular trains into St. Joe. A regular programme will be prepare for work.

O. M. MYERS.

Editor Restitution:

Please announce through the dear old paper that Brother George Kidwell from Ark., will commence a series of meetings at the Hix school house on Saturday before the first Sunday in August next, five miles southeast of Climax Spring, Camden Co., Mo., all of the one faith are cordially invited to come and make themselves at home with us while this meeting lasts.

MARY E. HOWARD.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

To Illinois brethren in special and all brethren in general:

Recently the Building Committee of the Illinois State Conference made a call through these columns for aid in raising a fund to build a suitable Conference building—not to use as a place of worship—but a building in which delegates may be entertained while in attendance at the Conference. The church in Oregon is large enough for all the meetings, having a seating capacity of about two hundred. Many generously answered this first call and the committee desires in this general way to thank all who have subscribed not only their money but also their words of encouragement. To them this second call is not directed, for we believe you have done well your part. We have now about $275.00 on hand. We need yet, at the very lowest estimate, $75.00. To put up a suitable building with lumber at its present price, we should have $400.00. This item is written to invite any who have not yet subscribed to do so in any amount, however small. Send remittance to the chairman of the committee who will promptly receipt for the same. Time and space forbid discussion as to the merits of locating the Conference permanently. Suffice it to say that we believe that when the plan is once in working order, all will be pleased with it. Building Committee consists: S. J. Lindsay, Chairman, Oregon, Ill.; J. M. Clotfelty, Lanark, Ill.; E. F. Gesin, Forreston, Ill.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 280 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Pan-American Exposition Rates to Buffalo via the Nickel Plate Road. Tickets now on sale at all stations, one and one-third fare for round trip, good returning 15 days. Write, wire, 'phone or call on nearest agent, or C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Aug. 1

Special train to San Francisco, via Chicago & North-Western R'y, to leave Chicago Tuesday, July 9th, 11:59 P. M. Address, THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Visit Winona Lake.

Winona Lake, Ind., on the Pennsylvania Lines, is an attractive summer haven for persons who desire to combine devotion, entertainment and instruction with rest and recreation. This resort is the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, and is annually visited by many persons who are strengthened in mind by the excellent facilities for educational work, and invigorated in body by the health-giving influences for which Winona Lake is famous.

The season for 1901 will open May 15th. Commencing on that date excursion tickets with fifteen-day limit will be on sale via Pennsylvania Lines. They may be obtained during May, June July and August. The sale of season excursion tickets will also begin May 15th and continue daily until September 14th. Excursion tickets will be good returning until September 17th.

Full information about the attractions at "Beautiful Winona," its Assembly and Summer School, etc., will be cheerfully furnished all who address Mr. Sol. C. Dickey, Secretary, Winona Lake, Ind. Inquiries about excursion rates, time of trains, etc., should be addressed to Passenger and Ticket Agents of the Pennsylvania Lines, or to F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.—June 20.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

"The Christian's Home."

I am thinking tonight of a better home,
A home awaiting us over away.
A glimmer of the dawning light I see,
The coming of a brighter day.
When all who love and serve him here,
Will find sweet and heavenly rest,
Fair Eden aglow with blooming bowers,
The royal home of all the blest.

Oh the raptures though of the many joys
That we may find awaiting there,
Will leave the power of a mighty love,
And help the struggle light to bear.
Thorns will abound in the race we tread,
Thus with the sin upon us here,
We pray for strength to triumph o'er,
That we the glory there may share.

Oh a hope in the soul—for the time is short,
May our fight not always be,
That we who await the Christian's home
May cherish ever so willingly.
A tender thought for the wayward ones,
The prince of mercy bids them come;
Oh why not listen to the earnest call,
And ever say, "Thy will be done."

The dear ones that have gone before
Will all awake to hear his voice.
The visions of the heavenly home
Will make the waiting more rejoice.
The home over there—the beautiful home,
The city that cometh from above,
Will enlighten earth through every clime,
'Tis the Savior's home, a home of love.

On Oath Taking, etc.

Dear brother in Christ:

I write to ask you a question which a number of others as well as myself would like to know. Do we have to take the oath of allegiance to secure a home-stead? And is it wrong to take such an oath? Some say, we do not have to take any such oath; but it is possible we do, but perhaps not till time to prove up the land. The brethren here have promised to raise about six hundred dollars, if we can get an energetic man, sound in the faith, for an Evangelist. I am more than anxious to get such a man. We never needed help as much as now. I am so glad you are spared to give us such good cheering words—sound doctrine. May God bless and keep you to help us till the Master comes. May we all be strengthened and work while it is day.

Your Sister in the One Faith,
NANCY BARBER.

In reply to the above questions I would say, that foreigners only would be required to take oath of allegiance. it would be superfluous to ask a loyal citizen to swear allegiance. When the time arrives to settle the claim, and get a warrant from the government, the claimant would doubtless be required to take oath that he has fulfilled all particulars in the contract he made with the government, when he first made claim to the land.

IS IT WRONG TO TAKE AN OATH?

I think the Bible approves of taking proper oaths, but that which is false, the Lord hates, even as he hates every false way. See Zech. viii. 17: "Let none of you imagine evil in your hearts against his neighbor, and love no false oath." See also Psa. xv., "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill? He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart. He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor. In whose eyes a vile person is condemned; but he honoreth them that fear the Lord. He that answereth to his own hurt, and changeth not. He that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent. He that doeth these things shall never be moved." We here find that none but truthful, upright people, (even people who in their steadfastness to truth, can swear to their own hurt or disadvantage) will dwell in the Lord's holy hill. See Heb. vi. 16, 17: "Men verily swear by the greater: and an oath of confirmation is to them an end of all strife. Wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath." Would God do an evil thing to cause [illegible] from swearing by something greater? Neither is the [illegible] to be [illegible].

The security of a homestead in the commonwealth of America, is a right thing to do; but a more important matter is: "Have you secured a HOMESTEAD IN THE COMMONWEALTH OF ISRAEL?

Have you sworn allegiance to the King of Israel? In a few brief years your homestead in the American Commonwealth will pass from you possession, but if you can "prove a claim" to a homestead in the commonwealth of Israel, at the end of your period of probation, you will secure a permanent homestead.

Now is the time to file your claims, and enter into covenant with the Head of Israel's Commonwealth, that you will live up to the conditions of the homestead laws imposed by that commonwealth. The laws and conditions which must be observed in order to secure a home in Israel's Commonwealth, are just as minute and plain as are those of the American commonwealth, and when you come to "prove up your claim," no fraud can be practiced there, because a "book of remembrance," is kept of your acts. Your claim in the first place must be filed according to law, and the terms of the covenant must be lived up to, or you can never "prove a claim," at the end of your period of probation.

A few days ago, I heard a man say: "I can read my title clear to mansions in the skies." I cannot for the life of me tell where he could read such a title, from any better authority than a hymn book, but a title to an inheritance in Israel's Commonwealth which is sworn to by an oath, can be found on record, in the Official Record Book of Israel's Commonwealth. Unless your title can be read from that Record Book it is utterly worthless, and of no value at all. It is not legal.

If you cannot get Bro. Wagoner as an evangelist, as you said, send for A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Indiana, care of RESTITUTION office, and you will secure an able and also a godly man, sound in the faith, and abundantly able to tell the people how to secure a homestead in the Commonwealth of Israel. Those who have not filed claims to a homestead in the above commonwealth are not "citizens," but are "strangers," "aliens," and "foreigners." Eph. ii. 21. Do not delay to "file a claim," and swear loyalty to him who was "born King of the Jews."

W. H. WILSON.

Opening of the Seals.

"And I looked, and behold a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death, and hell followed with him. And power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth." Rev. vi. 8. The period covered by the symbols of this seal is evidently one of great calamity to the inhabitants of the earth. And as we have seen by the former seals, that the color of the horse indicates the Spirit of the heavens during the seal; our first inquiry is what is symbolized by a pale horse? And as we understand that the root of the Revelation is found in the prophets; so that is the proper place to go to, to find the meaning of the symbols, keeping in mind that, death, hell, the sword, and hunger go with him.

The prophet Isaiah in speaking of a good time coming to the house of Jacob says, "Therefore thus saith the Lord, who redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob, Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale." Isa. xxix. 22.

Another testimony is found in Jeremiah xxx. 5-7: "For thus saith the Lord, we have heard a voice of trembling, of fear, and not of peace. Ask ye now, and see whether a man doth travail with child? Wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, as a woman in travail and all faces are turned into paleness? Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob's trouble but he shall be saved out of it." These testimonies from the prophets reveal to us the use of the word pale or paleness; indicating fear and trouble. The period of this seal appears to be from the commencement of the crusades in the eleventh century, and extends to the time of the reformation in the forepart of the sixteenth century, having a marked beginning and ending by a change in the Spirit of the heavens. Before the time of this seal, the Papacy had arrived at its full height in its apostacy from the truth.

The Master said, put up the sword, for that taketh the sword shall perish by the sword. And again, "He that leadeth into captivity, shall go into captivity; he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword." Rev. xiii. 10. This verse in the revelation was written with direct reference to the Papacy and how literally do we in our day see its fulfillment: the Papacy itself claiming that the holy Father is a prisoner in the vatican. During this seal they were to kill with the sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth. Albert Barnes in his notes on this passage says that the word rendered "death" should be pestilence, and the reason he gives appears to be well taken, it certainly makes the verse more easily understood. He says. "That the pestilence here referred to is rendered more certain by the fact that the Hebrew word pestilence, which occurs about fifty times in the Old Testament, is rendered death more than thirty times in the Septuagint." A few extracts from Mosheim and Gibbon will suffice to show the fulfillment of the symbols of this seal. "The bloody signal was given toward the conclusion of the tenth century, by Sylvester II. in the first year of his pontificate; and the signal was an epistle, written in the name of the church of Jerusalem, to the church universal throughout the world, in which the European powers were solemnly exhorted and entreated to succor and deliver the Christians in Palestine." Mosheim p. 208.

"Peter the Hermit, went through all the countries of Europe sounding the alarm of a holy war against the infidel nations, and exhorting all Christian princes to draw the sword against the tyrants of Palestine;..... he carried about with him a letter which he said was written in heaven, and addressed to all true Christians, to animate their zeal for the deliverance of their brethren, who groaned under the oppressive burden of a Mahommedan yoke.....The army assembled was a motley assemblage of monks, prostitutes, artists, laborers, lazy tradesmen, merchants, boys, girls, slaves, malefactors, and profligate debauchees, and that it was principally composed of the lowest dregs of the multitude, who were animated solely by the prospect of spoil and plunder, and hoped to make their fortunes by this holy campaign.....In consequence of these grand preparations, eight hundred thousand men, in separate bodies, and under different commanders, set out for Constantinople, 1096.....One of the principal divisions of this great body marched under the guidance of Peter the Hermit, the author and fomentor of the war, who was girded with a rope, and continued to appear with all the marks of an austere solitary. The adventurers who composed this first division committed the most flagitious crimes, which so incensed the inhabitants of Hungary and Bulgaria, that they rose up in arms and massacred the greatest part of them. A like fate attended several other divisions of the same army, who, under the conduct of weak and unskilful chiefs, wandered about like an undisciplined band of robbers, plundering the cities that lay in their way, and spreading misery and desolation wherever they came. This army was the greatest, and, in outward appearance, the most formidable that had been known in the memory of men;.....it made the Grecian emperor tremble, and filled his mind with the most anxious and terrible perplexations of some secret design against his dominions. His fears were dispelled when he saw the legions pass the straits of Gallipoli, and direct their march towards [illegible] year [illegible] Nicæa was [illegible] the capital of Bithynia, was taken in 1097.....Jerusalem submitted to their arms in 1099, which seemed to crown their expedition with the desired success. In this city were laid the foundations of a new kingdom, at the head of which was placed the famous Godfrey, whom the army saluted king of Jerusalem, with unanimous voice."—Mosheim pp. 222-223. At this time there was in Europe an anxious apprehension of the growing power of the Turks, who had already subdued the greatest part of the Grecian empire, and might soon carry into Europe, and more particularly into Italy, their victorious arms. "The European nations were deprived of the greatest part of their inhabitants by these ill-judged expeditions; immense sums of money were exported into Asia for the support of the war; and numbers of the most powerful and opulent families either became extinct or were involved in the deepest miseries of poverty. It could not be otherwise, since the heads of the most illustrious houses either sold or mortgaged their lands and possessions in order to pay the expenses of their voyage, while others imposed such intolerable burdens upon their vassals and tenants, as obliged them to abandon their houses and all their domestic concerns, and to enlist themselves, rather through wild despair than religious zeal, under the sacred banner of the cross. Hence the face of Europe was totally changed, and all things were thrown into the utmost confusion. We pass in silence the various enormities that were occasioned by these crusades, the murders, the rapes, and robberies of the most infernal nature, that were committed with impunity by these holy soldiers of God and of Christ, as they were impiously called." Mosheim, p. 225.

To enumerate the horrors of the crusades would fill volumes. Gibbon gives the account of seven different armies of crusaders, covering a period of about 300 years, from the first part of the 11th century to A. D. 1291. The second crusade was undertaken by France and Germany; to relieve the hard pressed remnants of the first. Mosheim says, "The two princes, each at the head of a numerous army, set out for Palestine.....But before their arrival in the Holy land, the greatest part of their forces perished miserably, some by famine, some by the sword of the Mohammedans, some by shipwreck, and a considerable number by the perfidious cruelty of the Greeks, who looked upon the western nations as more to be feared than the infidels themselves. Louis VII. left his kingdom A. D. 1147, and in the month of March the following year, he arrived at Antioch, with the wretched remains of his army, dejected and exhausted by a series of hardships. Conrad set out also in the year 1147, in the month of May; and in the November following he arrived at Nice, where he joined the French army, after having lost the greatest part of his own by calamities of various kinds. From Nice the two princes proceeded to Jerusalem A. D. 1148; whence they led back into Europe, the year following, the miserable handful of troops, which had survived the disasters of the expedition. Such was the unhappy issue of this second crusade."—Mosheim, p. 268.

"The third expedition was undertaken, A. D. 1189, by Frederick the I. surnamed Barbarossa, Emperor of Germany, who, with a prodigious army marched.....into Syria.....but by an accident lost his life in the river Seleph, in Selencia.....and the greatest part of his army perished miserably by a pestilential disorder..... those that escaped were dispersed, and few returned to their own country." Mosheim, pp. 263-264.

About the middle of the 13th century Louis IX. king of France.....set sail for Egypt with a formidable army and a numerous fleet, from a notion that the conquest of this province would enable him to carry on the war in Syria and Palestine with greater success. The first attempts of the [illegible] were crowned with victory; for Damietta, that famous [illegible] was [illegible] but the sailing prospect was soon changed, and the progress of the war presented one uniform scene of calamity and desolation. The united horrors of famine and pestilence overwhelmed the royal army whose provisions were cut off by the Mohammedans in 1250.....Louis and two of his brothers, and the greatest part of his army, were made prisoners in a bloody action, and a bold and obstinate resistance.....the monarch was ransomed at an immense price;.....and returned home with a handful of men, the miserable remains of his formidable army." Mosheim pp. 295 The same story of death riding the pale horse may be continued until the fall of Constantinople in A. D. 1423.

How many perished by wild beasts cannot be known. "After the destruction of the kingdom of Jerusalem, many of the Latins remained in Syria, and retiring into the dark and solitary recesses of Mount Libanus, lived there in a savage manner, and lost by degrees, all sense of religion and humanity, as appears from the character and conduct of their descendants, who still inhabit the same uncultivated wilds." Mosheim, pp. 296.

During the period of this seal, there was war between the Latins and the Greeks; Constantinople was taken by the Latins, and retaken by the Greeks. The great Mogul conqueror, Timour or Tamerlane during the same period conquered a great part of Asia. "From the Irtish and the Volga to the Persian Gulf, and from the Ganges to Damascus and the Archipelago, Asia was in the hand of Timour: his armies were invincible, his ambition was boundless, and his zeal might aspire to conquer and convert the Christian kingdoms of the West, which already trembled at his name. He touched the utmost verge of land; but an insuperable, though narrow sea rolled between the two continents of Europe and Asia; and the lord of so many myriads of horse, was not master of a single galley." Gibbon, Vol. VI. pp. 271. It is appalling to contemplate the loss of life during this period. The Papacy persecuted very little during the first half of its existence, but during this period, which includes the last half of the reign of the Papacy, some estimate that fifty millions perished by the Papacy on account of religion.

"After a siege of fifty-three days Constantinople surrendered to the Moslems A. D. 1453. The male captives were bound with cords, the females with their veils and girdles. The senators were linked with their slaves. Above sixty thousand were dispersed in remote servitude through the provinces of the Ottoman Empire. The last words of the emperor Palæologus were, "Cannot there be found a Christian to cut off my head?" Truly death rode the pale horse during this seal.

GEO. FRANCIS.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead, the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, the prerequisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A Toy with a Moral for the Church.

Religious feeling is good, but it is good for nothing until it has a feeling in the pocket, with a resolution moved by a consecrated heart to give out of your income to the support of God's house, in proportion to your income. Some genius has invented a machine which represents a curious collect of children's toys. One set consists of an old woman with a wash tub, a wind mill all set for work, a mason with a trowel, a big rooster with his wings ready to flap and his throat ready to crow. And naturally all the children who see it ask, "Wouldn't it be fun to see all things move?" Now the children might stand about forever wishing and hoping and praying for that end, but it would do no good; but just deposit the money in the little slot left for it, and behold the mason begins to work, the windmill to turn, the old woman to rub her clothes, and the rooster to crow. The money started the whole machinery. So it is with the church. If you want to see the work of the church move, drop in the money!—The Pansy.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 3d, 1901.

"THE Lord also will be a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge for the oppressed, —a refuge in times of trouble. And they that know thy name will put their trust in thee; for thou Lord hast not forsaken them that seek thee." Psa. ix. 9, 10.

IN looking over our list we find quite a number whose subscriptions expire this month, and some who have not yet sent in their money for this year. Please, brethren and sisters, to look after this matter a little, for we need the money to pay those whom we owe. So be prompt.

TIME is rolling us on to the great consummation—events speak in trumpet tones we are almost home, yet, the condition of the world, the Church, and even our own standing, presents a picture that will sadden every true heart and make the saints cry out,—

"Spare thy people Lord,
And bring them full salvation."

IT is reported of the Egyptians that living in fens, and being vexed with gnats, they used to sleep in high towers whereby those creatures, not being able to soar so high, they were delivered from the biting of them. So would it be with us when bitten with cares and fear, did we not run to God for refuge and rest confident of his help," says Trapp.

THE British government army scheme, says Glad Tidings, has passed by a majority of 142. It provides for six army corps; three for home defence, and three for service abroad. When it is in working order Britain will be in position to send abroad, in case of need, an army of 120,000 men. The country has awakened to the fact that its army is insufficient in numbers, and needs re-organization. The spirit of war is in the country, and the government finds the time opportune for their proposals."

THE unrest on the Continent of Europe continues. In different parts of Spain there have been riots and bloodshed. Numerous arrests have been made. In Russia there have been struggles between the populace and the military in the capital and in the Provinces. At a recent military review in St. Petersburg the most extreme precautions were taken for the safety of the Czar and his advisers. The spirit of discontent and antipathy to the ruling classes is clearly on the increase all over the Continent.

THE London Express says that English capitalists have secured the only railway concession in Abyssinia. In conjunction with the "New Africa Company and the Oceana Company, the New Egyptian Company has secured all the rights in a railway to Menelek's capital. Some portion of this line has already been constructed from Dlibonti inland, and it is now proposed to build a branch line to Berbera, in British territory. Merchandise will be carried over the line in one direction, and the fruits of mining and other industries in Abyssinia will be sent down to the coast."

"ONE of the easiest things in the world is to find fault with other people. But how difficult it is to see our own faults; to understand our weak points, and to remember that as we can see faults in others, they see faults as bad and perhaps worse in us. Let us be charitable and do as the great artist did who painted a picture of his monarch, upon whose brow there was a scar. He placed his king with elbow resting on a table, and his head supported by his hand; but with a finger covering the scar. Let us endeavor to place the finger of charity over the scars of our brethren.

WE were lately cheered by a visit from the old-time faithful witness, and fellow-laborer, Dr. A. W. Mason, of Toronto, Ontario. He spoke to us twice on Sunday June 23, the subjects being "The Christian Life," and "Adam—What he Lost." He powerfully set the Divine example before us in the morning,—this was followed by a feast of love around the Lord's table, a number of brethren and sisters participating. The evening service was for the instruction of aliens, as is usual. The hour for parting came too soon, all felt it good to be there. We parted with the fervent hope that we would soon meet again, he'er to never.

ON Thursday, 9th of May, the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, representatives of Royalty, opened the first session of the Federal Parliament of Australia.—the enthusiasm of the people being immense. The Royal Party drove through seven miles of the streets of Melbourne, the site of which a century ago had not been seen by a civilized man. It has a population of half a million, and is abreast of any city of its size in the possession of the resources and machinery of civilization. It contains more people than the whole Continent of Australia did fifty years ago. Today, within the limits of the vast dominion of over three millions of square miles under the control of the Federal Parliament there is a population estimated to be close upon four millions of souls. This, says Glad Tidings, is striking evidence that the earth is being opened up preparatory to the establishment of the kingdom of God."

Death's Doings.

On Friday June 21st, 1901, we performed the last sad offices for another member of the household of faith, our dear Sister Wiley, who for nearly half a year had suffered from an internal cancer. The funeral services were held at the Church of the Blessed Hope, which was nearly filled by relatives, neighbors, and brethren and sisters. Having been requested to publish the address made on the occasion, when the Editor can find room for it, we will only add here that the sustaining power of the gospel of the grace of God was demonstrated throughout her illness, and we laid her to rest with a full and certain hope of resurrection to a better life.

Remember Thou art Mortal.

"So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." Psalms xc. 12. It is said that Prester John, the celebrated Tartar prince, amid all his magnificence, kept a human skull on his table, that in his feastings he might be reminded of his mortality.

Philip of Macedon had a boy cry after him as he walked the streets: "Philip thou art mortal," lest intoxicated by his successes he might think himself more than human.

Saladin, the Great, stretched himself upon the sand in the presence of his victorious army, after battle, and then rising, pointed to the impression his kingly form had made, and said, "See how little of the world I have conquered and ruled that will be mine at the last."

Trust in the Lord.

We want to remind our contributors and readers of a long-standing injunction. It may be found in the third chapter of Proverbs, and the 5th and 6th verses, but lest any may not have time to refer to it, we will quote it for them. It says:—"Trust in the Lord with all thine heart, and lean not unto thine own understanding; in all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths." This does not mean that you shall depend upon the Lord to miraculously inform your mind, but to trust in what he says; he has revealed his will, and you are expected to yield your will to his. If you are in Christ Jesus you have pledged to do this,—pledged to keep the commandments of Jesus; and not please yourselves. So when you are told to trust in what the Lord says, it is only doing what you voluntarily agreed to do, when you put on the name of Christ:—do his bidding and submit to his directions. "Lean not upon your own understanding." This means that what God says to you, he means; and you are only safe when you lean upon and that they must be taken in no occult sense. If you take him at his word when he calls things by their proper names, and acknowledge him in all your ways, then,—these conditions being complied with, he makes the absolute promise to direct your paths. If you have theories of your own beyond what is revealed, they are sure to conflict with the divine will in some respect. God has graciously revealed all you need to know. To think otherwise is to consider that his revealed Word needs supplementing by you, after he has declared it able to make you wise unto salvation. And dissatisfaction with is conclusive proof that the injunction to "speak as the oracles of God speak," and "If any one serve, let it be as from the strength which God supplies, so that in all things God may be glorified through Jesus Christ: WHOSE IS THE GLORY AND THE POWER FOR THE AGES OF THE AGES." 1 Peter iv. 11.

WHAT HIS WORDS MEAN,

The remarks of a progressive writer in a contemporary magazine, recently, caused us to pen these lines. The writer is tried because some cannot or do not grow in knowledge as fast as he supposes he does; they hang back instead of helping forward. But the law of growth in nature requires food of the right kind and plenty of it; and the same law rules in the spiritual realm. We understand that the Revelation of God's will was closed near 1900 years ago; and that too with the distinct announcement that any addition to it to him who added it. For our part we think those who are considered non-progressive by our writer, are profoundly grateful for any additional light on God's revealed will,—and we apprehend that the want of the growth he complains of is because the food he furnishes them and expects them to grow upon is not relished, and therefore neither digested nor assimilated, because not furnished by God's great store-house. His fertile brain is not competent to furnish

A CODICIL TO GOD'S WILL.

If he could furnish divine testimony instead of human deductions we would agree with him. To the law and testimony, we appeal; if they speak not according to this, it is for want of divine light that comes from it. We neither question his honesty or that of many more who think they can grow in knowledge of God and Christ and opinions,—but the verse to which we first called attention plainly teaches them that they are not doing business for God, but on their own account, and in their own name, when they distract the minds of others with opinions and speculations that have no "thus saith the Lord back of them." We once more give the note of warning that as sure as that the Word of the Lord will judge them, so sure will they come to grief. "Take heed how ye hear."

BY FEEDING ON SPECULATIONS

"God's Oath."

God's oath to Moses, recorded in Numbers xiv. 21, is as follows:—"As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." This is a clear and definite statement which cannot fail, however men may transgress the commands of their Creator. The children of Israel had again rebelled against God and spake of stoning Caleb and Joshua when they urged them not to rebel against the Lord their God, but to go up and possess the land which he had promised to give them, and when they were about to carry out their evil design appeared in its tabernacle of the congregation before all the children of Israel," and he threatened to destroy the rebellious ones; but, at the intercession of Moses he pardoned them, and then made the declaration that the whole earth should be filled with his glory. Although our first parents transgressed the law given them in Eden and brought death into the world, the purpose of God is sure in that he promised that should bruise the serpent's head, and ultimately fulfill his purpose. This woman's seed and the seed of Abraham who is to possess the land with him upon which the kingdom of God was afterwards established, and also the same seed that was promised to David, and who was to some day sit upon the throne of that kingdom and rule the world in righteousness and bless all the families of earth, and fill the earth with the glory of God as the waters fill the sea. To understand how this is to be accomplished it is necessary to have a knowledge of

THE "GLORY OF THE LORD

THE SEED OF THE WOMAN

GOD'S POLITICAL PURPOSE,

and this is not possible without a knowledge of the kingdom of God. It is a mere phrase, conveying no intelligible meaning in these apostate times. Nearly all the teachings of men are made real and substantial, while the things of God are made shadowy and unreal, and this is the very opposite of what the Scriptures teach. The things of men and the glory of men pass away for ever, whilst the things of God and the glory of God will never pass away.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD

in the past was as real as any kingdom ever established by man; and, although established for a time, when re-established it will stand forever. God has declared that "one generation passeth away, and another generation cometh, but the

EARTH ABIDETH FOR EVER,

Eccl. i. 4; and when he sets his Son upon his Holy Hill of Zion, in the land of Canaan, "Ask of me and I will give thee the heathen (Gentile nations) for thine inheritance, and the utmost parts of the earth for thy possession." Psa. ii. 8. Yet, in the face of such teachings as this we are told that instead of abiding forever, the earth is

TO BE BURNT UP.

But, if the Bible be the Book of God it cannot in one place contradict what it says in another; and were the passages thought to teach the burning up of God's footstool considered in the light of other portions of the divine record it would be seen that it is the destruction of rulers (the heavens) and ruled (the earth) and the constitutions they have established, that is the subject under consideration and not the

DWELLING PLACE OF GOD

(the heavens) nor the earth, the dwelling place of man. See Is. xxiv. 4 in illustration of this principle. "The earth mourneth," and fadeth not away, the world languisheth and fadeth away,—the haughty people of the earth do languish." ver. 19, 20. The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly. The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again." Surely no one will say could transgress. The earth, then, is the theatre of Jehovah's political purpose, and a certain portion of it the center of his operations, for it is written, that "the seventh angel sounded, and there were great voices in heaven, saying the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever." Rev. xi. 15. This can only be brought about by a beginning being made somewhere, as God works upon a definite plan from beginning to end. As the center then of his operations,

THE LITERAL EARTH

THE LAND OF CANAAN

was chosen upon which to establish his kingdom. Abraham, his friend, was also chosen as the medium through whom the people who were to be the rulers and inhabitants of that kingdom were come. The land is called no doubt because he especially chose it for the purpose indicated. The children of Israel after long affliction in Egypt were brought out with a mighty hand under the leadership of Moses, and after many vicissitudes in the wilderness, were brought into and established as the kingdom of God. In this land Jerusalem was chosen the city of God as the seat of government, and it is from thence "the glory of the God of Israel" shall in the future shine forth and fill the whole earth. This kingdom existed until it was overturned by God himself on account of the wickedness of its rulers and its people, as set forth in his decree, Ezek. xxi. 25, "And thou profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come when iniquity shall have an end, Thus saith the Lord God; Remove the diadem, and take off the crown, this shall not be the same, exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high, I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him." Observe, it is to be only overturned till a given time and event transpires,—"Till he come and I [Jehovah] will give it him;" this is what we read. It will be seen from this that his original purpose will be carried out just as if there had been no overturning or suspension of his kingdom. Confirmation of this may be found in Luke i. 30-33. Where Gabriel says the Son to be born of Mary is to sit upon the throne of his father David, and the house of Jacob for ever; clearly showing him to be the one having the right to it, as saith the Lord by Ezekiel xxi. 25, and harmonizes beautifully with what we read in xxxvii. 22, of the same prophecy, "And I will make them one nation in the land upon the

GOD'S LAND,

THE PROMISED LAND

WHOSE RIGHT IT IS,

REIGN OVER

MOUNTAINS OF ISRAEL

and one King shall be king to them all; and they [the 12 tribes] shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms [as they were in the past,—Israel and Judah] any more at all." Also Jer. xxxi 10, "Hear the Word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the Isles afar off, and say, he that scattered Israel and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock;" and with Isaiah xi. 1-9 where it says there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse and a Branch shall grow out of his roots who shall judge in righteousness and bring all things into harmony with the will of God, so that the fiercest will become tame,—the "wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid." "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."

WILL GATHER HIM,

"Strange Fire." Lev. x.

Under this title, in the January Watchword and Truth, Boston, H. M. Parsons, D. D., of Toronto, Ont., writes:

In the Hebrew camp were three circles. The innermost had its center in the Holy of Holies. The priest guarded the most sacred places, and had their ministry there.....As believers in Jesus Christ, we are constituted in him kings and priests after the order of a ministry holier than that of Aaron.....I am led by a deep conviction that something is lacking in the ministry of the saints today, and that there must be a positive error in our administration of the church in the presence of the world.....We are called to conflict, service, sacrifice, worship .....It is because I am persuaded that comparatively few of the members of our church have any adequate sense of this priestly office, which is so essential to any fruit or any comfort in the Christian life, that I venture to call attention to our "strange fire." Never have we seen so much machinery introduced to aid in producing spiritual results.....It is a general report from all denominations, that, while benevolence and reforms on a large scale are evincing the great popular progress in all humanities—yet very few conversions are reported, in which conviction of sin and repentance and forsaking of sins are prominent features. And if additions to the visible church are increasing upon the simple evidence of morality and conformity to external ordinances and a willingness to lead what is called a Christian life—I am quite sure this "strange fire" will ere long be followed by the devouring flame, which caused such terror and destruction in the Hebrew camp.....The world is introducing in the church its plans, methods, customs,—and the church, just so far as substituting these for inward life, is offering "strange fire" before the Lord.....And so the barriers of separation from the world are easily overthrown, and a very "mixed multitude" occupies the place of the church. Ceasing to use her armor, the church seeks to accomplish by benevolent and political organizations the mission God has given her to every creature. As a necessary result, this change of aim and purpose while still professing obedience to the gospel commission, gradually but surely substitutes reformation for regeneration, and the elevation of the masses for the commission of individual sinners —and, while numerically increasing, this anti-christian crusade under orthodox color, is rapidly preparing for the flame of judgment that will as certainly rebuke the offering of "strange fire" in the church of Christ, as in the church in the Wilderness.

Inventions and Christianity.

The inventive genius of the country is on the side of Christianity. You cannot tell me of an atheist or an infidel that ever invented or discovered anything of lasting good. The first message flashed under the sea by the telegraph was: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." The first message flashed on the line upon land was: "What hath God wrought!" If the steam engine had come from Africa or the telegraph from India, the infidel might boast. But Christian men have led the march of world's progress.—Pulpit.

Precious Promises.

Does your spirit faint? They are a dropping honeycomb, better than Jonathan's. Dip your pilgrim staff into their richness, and put your hand to your mouth, like him, and your faintness shall pass away. Are you thirsty? They are the flowing stream of the Water of Life, of which you may drink by the way, and lift up your head. Are you overcome by the sultry burden of the day? They are as the shadow of a cloud to bring down the heart; as the cool shadow of a great rock in a weary land. Have your steps well-nigh slipped? They are a staff in your hand, on top of which, betimes, like Jacob, you may lean, and worship God. Are you sad? There are no such songs to beguile the road, and to bear you on with gladness of heart, as when one goeth with a pipe to come into the mountain of the Lord. Put but a promise under your head by night, and were your pillow a stone like that at Bethel, you shall have Jacob's vision. The thirstiest wilderness will become an Elim, with palm trees and wells of water.—C. Geikie, D. D.

What to do with one's summer vacation is a perennial question. Most people have neither the money nor the wish to go to an expensive, overcrowded seaside or mountain resort, and yet every man needs a few days devoted to pleasure and a complete rest at least once a year. The Cosmopolitan for July gives a solution of the problem in a well-written, illustrated article, "A Houseboat—The Modern Palace." Undoubtedly a houseboat offers a cheap and comfortable vacation, and the ranks of its devotees are constantly swelling.

4th of July Rates via Nickel Plate Road, at one fare for the round trip, good within a distance of 200 miles. Tickets on sale July 3rd and 4th, good returning until July 5th inclusive. Write wire, 'phone or call on nearest agent, C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind., or R. J. Hamilton, Agt., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—July 3.

A New York trip with stop-over privilege at the Pan-American Exposition, may be made on low fare excursion tickets obtainable at Pennsylvania Lines ticket offices after July 1st.

Salvation.

They never sing salvation those seraphs round the throne,
For them the "Man of Sorrows" no Saviour did become;
They cannot join the chorus, Redemption through the Lamb,
They only say all blessings, and power, and praise, Amen.

They cannot prize salvation for which we,
They never were in bondage, and need no liberty,
But our chains have been riven, the Son has set us free,
And now our grateful hearts exclaim, What shall we render thee?

I would not be an angel, they cannot sympathize,
With man in his temptation, his doubts, and fears, and sighs;
But Christ, my "Elder Brother," my nature did assume,
And perfect made through suffering my Savior did become.

I'd rather have the motto "A sinner saved by grace,"
Than be the tallest angel that soars through endless space;
Near Calvary I'd linger and while the cross I see,
Say with adoring wonder, He gave himself for me.

How sweet the theme, salvation, my soul prolong the strain,
Till men of every nation have heard of Jesus' name,
Till in our home of glory with all the ransomed throng,
We sing the old, old story, Salvation to the Lamb.

Genesis. Chap. 27.

1. And it came to pass after Isaak had grown old and his eyes had become dim of vision, that he called Heesau his elder son and said unto him, My son, and he said, Lo, I is I.

2. And he said, Lo, I have become old and I know not the day of my end.

3. Now then do thou take thy equipment, the quiver and the bow, and go out on the plain and hunt game for me;

4. And prepare delicacies for me such as I like, and bring them to me that I may eat and my soul may bless thee before I die.

5. And Hrebekka heard Isaak's talk to Heesau his son; and Heesau went his way to the plain to hunt game for his father.

6. And Hrebekka said unto Jakoob her younger son; I heard thy father talking with Heesau thy brother saying;

7. Bring me game and prepare delicacies for me, that I may eat and bless thee in the sight of the Lord before I die.

8. Now then, my son, Hear me even as I am enjoining upon thee.

9. And go thy way in among the small flocks and take for me there from two kids tender and good, and I will prepare them as delicacies for thy father, such as he likes.

10. And thou shalt make ready for thy father and he will eat that thy father may bless thee before he dies.

11. And Jakoob said unto Hrebekka his mother, Heesau my brother is a hairy man and I am a smooth man;

12. My father perchance may feel of me and I shall be a despiser in his sight, and bring upon myself a curse and not a blessing.

13. And his mother said unto him, Thy curse be upon me, child: only hear my voice, and go thy way and bring unto me.

14. And he went and took and brought unto his mother; and his mother made delicacies, such as his father liked.

15. And Hrebekka took the beautiful stole of Heesau her oldest son, which was with her in the house and clothed Jakoob her youngest son with it.

16. And she put the skins of the kids upon his arms and upon the naked parts of his neck;

17. And gave the delicacies which she had prepared and bread into the hands of Jakoob her son;

18. And he took them to his father, and said, Father, and he said, Lo, It is I. who art thou, child?

19. And Jakoob said unto his father, I am Heesau thy first-born; I have made ready even as thou didst say unto me, Arise and take thy seat and eat of my game, that thy soul mayest bless me.

20. And Isaak said unto his son, What is this that thou hast quickly found my child? And he said, The Lord thy God gave in my sight.

21. And Isaak said unto Jakoob, Draw nigh me and let me feel of thee, child, to see whether thou art my son Heesau or not.

22. Jakoob drew nigh unto Isaak his father; and he felt of him and said, The voice is the voice of Jakoob, but the hands are the hands of Heesau.

23. And he did not recognize him; for his hands were hairy like the hands of Heesau his brother; and he blessed him.

24. And said, Thou art my son Heesau art thou? And he said, I am.

25. And he said, Bring unto me and I will eat of thy game, child, that my soul may bless thee: and he brought unto him and he ate: and he brought unto him wine, and he drank;

26. And Isaak his father said unto him, Draw nigh unto me and kiss me, child

27. And he drew nigh and kissed him; and he smelt the odor of his outer-garments, and he blessed him and said, Lo, the odor of my son is as the odor of a full field which the Lord hath blessed.

28. And may God have given thee from the dew of the heavens and from the fatness of the earth, and an abundance of grain and wine

29. And may nations have served thee as bond-servants; and may rulers have done thee homage. And mayest thou have become thy brother's lord, and the sons of thy father will do thee homage; cursed is the one who curseth thee and blessed is the one who blesseth thee.

30. And it came to pass that after Isaak had finished blessing Jakoob his son, Heesau his son also came from the hunt.

31. And he also prepared delicacies and brought them to his father; and said unto his father, Let my father arise and eat from his son's game, that thy soul may bless me.

32. And Isaak his father said unto him, Who art? And he said, I am Heesau thy first-born.

33. And Isaak was astounded exceedingly and said, Who then was he who hunted game for me and brought it unto me, and from all whose things I ate before thou didst come? And I blessed him and he will be blessed.

34. And it came to pass when Heesau heard the words of his father Isaak he raised a great and bitter cry for help, and said, Bless me also, father.

35. And he said unto him, Thy brother came with deception and took thy blessing.

36. And he said, Rightly was his name called Jakoob, For lo this second time hath he got me by the heel; he hath both taken my birth-right privileges and now hath he taken my blessing; and Heesau said unto his father, Is there no blessing left for me, father?

37. And Isaak answered and said unto Heesau, If I have made him thy lord, and have made all his brothers his house-servants, have stayed him up with grain and with wine, what forsooth shall I do for thee, child?

38. And Heesau said unto his father, Is there only one blessing of thine, father? Bless me also, father, And Isaak moved with compunction cried for help from above and Heesau lamented.

39. And Isaak his father answered and said unto him, Lo, from the fatness of the earth shall be thy dwelling and from the dew of the heavens above.

40. And by thy sword shalt thou live, and thy brother shalt thou serve as a bond-servant, and it shall be whenever thou shalt take off and unloose his yoke from thy neck.

41. And Heesau harbored a grudge against Jakoob concerning the blessing with which his father had blessed him; and Heesau said in his thought, May the days of the sorrowing for my father have drawn nigh, that I may kill Jakoob my brother.

42. And the words of Heesau her eldest son were told Hrebekka; and she sent and summoned Jakoob her younger son and said unto him, Lo, Heesau thy brother is threatening to kill thee.

43. Now, then my child hearken to my voice, and arise and run away into Mesopotamia unto Laban my brother in Charran;

44. And take up thy abode with him for days.

45. Until the anger and wrath of thy brother be turned away from thee, and he hath ignored the things which thou hast done unto him: and I will send and summon thee from there, lest I be rendered childless of you two in one day.

46. And Hrebekka said unto Isaak, My life is made hateful because of the daughters of the sons of Chet; if Jakoob should take a wife from the daughters of this land, what would it be for me to live at all?

COMMENT.

The reader will observe by comparing this translation with the C. V. or R. V. that there are a good many important variations, a few of which only I shall particularly note.

In the 1st verse it is apparent that Isaac was not entirely blind as stated in R. V.

"My end" instead of "my death," R. V. in 2nd verse.

In the 3rd verse and sequitur the word translated "venison" in the R. V. means "game" of any kind. Also the word translated savory meat in the 4th verse R. V. and sequitur means strictly anything eatable and especially what we mean by "delicacies."

In the 9th verse "tender and good" omitted in R. V.

Also should be "likes" instead of "loves." We do not love the things we eat or drink.

In the 12th verse should be "a despiser" instead of "a deceiver" or "mocker" R. V.

In the 14th verse should be "took and brought" instead of "fetch and brought" R. V.

In the 15th verse "the goodly raiment" should be "the beautiful stole" a long flowing robe.

What is "the smooth of his neck" In the 16th verse R. V.?

The 20th verse doesn't follow the text at all, compare and see.

"Very" "my very son Heesau" is inserted along here not in the text and takes away from the dignity and simplicity of the narrative.

"Outer-garments" instead of "raiment" in the 27th verse.

Why does the R. V. make poetry of the 28th and 29th verses and materially change the thought of the text to accomplish this end? The same criticism applies to the 39th and 40th verses.

In the 33rd verse "trembled" should be "was astounded" which is much more suggestive of the effect of the deception to which he had been subjected.

The 37th verse begins with an "il" and there is no idea of "reserve" in the 36th. Isaak's answer in the 37th shows this and that his subsequent blessing upon Heesau is God's answer to his own cry for help in his dilemma.

A very important clause in the 38th verse which makes this clear is omitted in the R. V. namely "And Isaak moved with compunction cried for help from above."

The far-reaching import of the coming blessing is also obscured in the R. V.'s poetry of the 40th verse. For it is made clear that Heesau will do "bond-service" to Jakoob as stated in the Jakoob blessing until the yoke has been loosed and taken off by the coming of a higher bond-service which will break Jakoob's yoke also.

In the 42nd verse "doth comfort himself" R. V. should be "is threatening."

"Such as these" inserted by R. V. in 46th verse and other unwarrantable changes made.

CHAS. GARDNER.

The Christian.

"One in whom persuasion and belief
Had ripened into faith, and faith becomes
A passionate intuition."—Wordsworth.

A man does not become a Christian in a day. The gospel must be presented to his understanding. He must be persuaded that the things presented are the true things of God, and that they have a solemn and weighty bearing upon his destiny, and then time must be given for "persuasion to ripen into faith." We cannot hurry things, even though it be an age of haste. Nor do we dare give license for putting off obedience to God.

Just as soon as a man is fully persuaded that Jesus is his Savior, and that he is coming again to establish his kingdom, here upon this earth; just so soon must his desire to go down into the watery grave, be made known, and he become "A child of the King."

And after baptism? He dare not stop. There must be growth. He must go forward in the way of life. He must keep the commandments. His influence must be such as can be felt. "The joy of God's salvation" must be his; he must be "upheld by God's free spirit." "Then will he teach transgressors the way of the Lord and sinners will be converted unto him."

"Faith becomes a passionate intuition."

Who else, beside Wordsworth ever reached that point? Many an one of God's saints, who have daily and nightly talked with him. It is the privilege of each one of us. We may know when God hears; we may feel as it were, the touch of his hand. The thrill of his presence may rush over us like an electric shock.

Daily nearer and nearer to him to find ourselves growing, conscious ever of a fixed purpose, to be his, and to live in accordance with his will, looking ever upward, and joying in having a sure protector and guide. Glad to have the blessed privilege of working for him, glad to lay our gifts upon his altar. Such is the true Christian's experience.

When he dedicates a thing to God it is truly dedicated, and not with the thought that it is still his, and that he will sometime get it back. He lays his gift upon the altar, and looks upon it as belonging to God, and prays that it may be sanctified and blessed to the saving of souls, and the glory of his Land and King. When his brethren labor to do good, he puts his shoulder to the wheel and helps them; he does not put stumbling-blocks in their way, nor find fault with every thing they do.

Show to others, brethren, the proof of your love. Be Christians. Christ-like, indeed and in truth. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.

S. ROXANA WINCE.

The Faith of Abraham.

My dearly beloved brethren, of what faith are you? Do you believe God as Abraham did, when he said, "In thee and thy seed (God and Christ multitudinous) all the families of the earth shall be blessed"? How wonderfully the glad message was shown to Abraham in his eight sons and Rebecca, as types of the great work God has done and will do for man. The first one, Ishmael, represents Israel under the law of condemnation, which brought forth only Christ, typified by Isaac, who was born, not of the strength or will of man, but God. Next Abraham (typical of God) gets his son a bride. Oh brother, read that 24th chap. of Gen. and see how God is taking out a people for Christ's name today, and soon the man child will be born and taken to the place prepared for them. Rev. xii.; Isa. lxvi. 5, 10; Jno. xiv. 2. Then Christ's prayer Jno. xvii. 24, will be answered where he says (after saying Jno. xvii. 18, and now come I to thee) he says, "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me; etc."

After Isaac, Abraham had six more sons by another bride, who were also born of the will of God, and who certainly must represent all the families of the earth that are to be blessed through Abraham (God as typified by Abraham) and his seed (Christ and his bride).

In Ezek. xlvi. 1, says, "the gate of the inner court that looketh toward the East, shall be shut the six working days, but on the Sabbath it shall be opened." When it is opened, the people can all pass in and get the blessing. The 4th verse shows what the offering will be, the ram represents the older son who has been cut off at all times in the past, first Cain, then Ishmael and Esau who all tpyify Israel in the flesh, or in bondage of law and death. They will have the first place in Adam's kingdom restored, Then comes more good news to Abraham, the six lambs without blemish. Adam was without blemish when created. So I ask, if the six lambs do not represent the families of earth in the six working days, the six thousand years before the Lord comes, what do they represent? This and many more good things did God show to Abraham, and called it the gospel.

Do you believe, brother, that the blessing comes on the people before or after the high priest comes out of the Holy of Holies, where he has entered through the veil, as the one that runs before? Forerunner shows that others are coming after, yes, and remain there three and one-half years. When Christ and his bride, the Melchisedec priesthood complete, come, then all the families of the earth will be restored, first Israel, then all the families of the earth. Brother, is this good news to you? It was to Abraham, it is to me. Brethren, don't let us be like the foolish virgins, have no oil in our vessels, but know what work the Lord has for us to do when he comes, and then we can be of the 144,000 bride.

Your brother in the faith of Abraham.

PLATT M. CORDALEY.

Dear ones of the precious faith:

While I may not be able to bring out anything new, but one thought has struck me in reading the prophecies; God's wonderful patience with the rebellious people. He sends them his prophets to rebuke the sins of the people, and even in Moses' day he tells them to circumcise their hearts. Deut. x. 16. Down to the prophets we find that God again says, "Circumcise your hearts;" and Paul speaks of it: "Circumcision is that of the heart." It was a seal of the covenant that he was righteous even before he was circumcised. The 4th chapter Romans, the eleven verse shows this. How anxious they were to observe the outward appearance of the ceremonial law, and they rested in that circumcision which was of the flesh. When he who was greater than Moses came, he came to his own and his own received him not. How much had their outward ceremonial worship prepared them? To deceive him of whom Moses and the prophets wrote. And we find that the natural branches were broken off because of unbelief. Why, is not Paul mistaken about charging them with unbelief? Did they not make their boast in Moses and the prophets? No, Paul is not mistaken, because we find Jesus charging them with that very thing himself. He says, "If they had believed Moses they would have believed him." And we find in the 11th of Romans beginning at the 17th verse, where Paul speaks of the wild olive tree being grafted in. How are we grafted in? By mere intellectual belief in the truth? Nay, verily! Turning to the 6th chapter of Romans, which is a wonderful chapter. (I hope every one who reads these lines will read the chapter.) Stop at the 12th verse, and ponder the following words. Has sin dominion over you and me, my brother and my sister? The 14th verse: now we are exhorted to walk in newness of life. Has the old man been crucified? Have we indeed died with Christ, for he that is dead is freed from sin. Is this our experience today? If we sin wilfully, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin, but a certain fearful looking forth for fire, indignation that shall devour the adversary. Turn to the Eph. 11, 12, we find that we are brought into the same relationship as Israel of old. Now, brethren and sisters, God will not spare the grafted branches, if the fruit is not produced in harmony with the root which is Christ. A word here to those who rejoice in baptizing believers in the gospel. Your duty towards those people becomes doubly great, to see that they walk in harmony with the vine. In the 15th of John, we find these wonderful words, in 3rd verse especially, "Now ye are clean through the words which I have spoken unto you. Abide in me and I in you," etc. By turning to Ephesians, you will find he is to cleanse the church by the washing by water by the Word. Does the Word of God do that for you and me? Or have we been cast forth as withered branches? John xvi. 6. We find in the 6th of Hebrews, "therefore leaving the doctrines of Christ, let us go on to perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works and of faith toward God," etc. In the 5th and 6th verses, are solemn words. The 15th verse, "so after he had patiently endured he obtained the promise." This brings to my mind the words of the Savior, "he that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved." It means much to endure. We find Israel of old could not endure in the wilderness, when they were tried 40 years, but they murmured against Moses, which was really against God. But, oh praise his blessed name. God's wonderful mercy and love will yet be manifested toward Israel and Judah. We only need to read the 31, 32 and 33 chap. of Jer., the 8th verse, "I will cleanse them from all iniquity." Each day my longings are for him to come that this work may be accomplished and the world may be at rest. But, my brother, my sister, will you and I be privileged to take part in that glorious restoration works? Let me close with this wonderful admonition of the Lord himself. Rev. iii. 11, "Behold, I come quickly: hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown."

Editor Restitution:

Please announce through the dear old paper that Brother George Kidwell from Ark., will commence a series of meetings at the Hix school house on Saturday before the first Sunday in August next, five miles southeast of Climax Spring, Camden Co., Mo., all of the one faith are cordially invited to come and make themselves at home with us while this meeting lasts.

MARY E. HOWARD.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

The Nickel Plate Road changes time Sunday June 30th. No. 6, the Standard Express leaves Chicago at 8:35 P. M., arrives at intermediate stations about 2 hours earlier than under former schedule. Is in Cleveland at 7:25 A. M., leaves at 7:47 A. M. and arrives at Buffalo at 2:05 P. M., Central Time. Local Sleeper from Chicago to Cleveland, in addition to the regular New York sleeper. No change on other trains.—July 5.

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

To Illinois brethren in special and all brethren in general:

Recently the Building Committee of the Illinois State Conference made a call through these columns for aid in raising a fund to build a suitable Conference building—not to use as a place of worship—but a building in which delegates may be entertained while in attendance at the Conference. The church in Oregon is large enough for all the meetings, having a seating capacity of about two hundred. Many generously answered this first call and the committee desires in this general way to thank all who have subscribed not only their money but also their words of encouragement. To them this second call is not directed, for we believe you have done well your part. We have now about $275.00 on hand. We need yet, at the very lowest estimate, $75.00. To put up a suitable building with lumber at its present price, we should have $400.00. This item is written to invite any who have not yet subscribed to do so in any amount, however small. Send remittance to the chairman of the committee who will promptly receipt for the same. Time and space forbid discussion as to the merits of locating the Conference permanently. Suffice it to say that we believe that when the plan is once in working order, all will be pleased with it. Building Committee consists: S. J. Lindsay, Chairman, Oregon, Ill.; J. M. Glotfelty, Lamark, Ill.; E. F. Gosin, Forreston, Ill.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Pan-American Exposition Rates to Buffalo via the Nickel Plate Road. Tickets now on sale at all stations, one and one-third fare for round trip, good returning 15 days. Write, wire, 'phone or call on nearest agent, or C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind. —Aug. 1

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 10 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 824 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

The committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 288 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Visit Winona Lake.

Winona Lake, Ind., on the Pennsylvania Lines, is an attractive summer haven for persons who desire to combine devotion, entertainment and instruction with rest and recreation. This resort is the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, and is annually visited by many persons who are strengthened in mind by the excellent facilities for educational work, and invigorated in body by the health-giving influences for which Winona Lake is famous.

The season for 1901 will open May 15th. Commencing on that date excursion tickets with fifteen-day limit will be on sale via Pennsylvania Lines. They may be obtained during May, June July and August. The sale of season excursion tickets will also begin May 15th and continue daily until September 14th. Excursion tickets will be good returning until September 17th.

Full information about the attractions at "Beautiful Winona," its Assembly and Summer School, etc., will be cheerfully furnished all who address Mr. Sol. C. Dickey, Secretary, Winona Lake, Ind. Inquiries about excursion rates, time of trains, etc., should be addressed to Passenger and Ticket Agents of the Pennsylvania Lines, or to F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa. —June 29.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS UP PLEASE RENEW.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 10, 1901. NUMBER 26.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Life's Storms are Passing.

The storm has broken, and the heavy blast
That stifled morn's fresh breath, and shook its dew,
Is dying into sunshine, and the last
Dull cloud has vanished from yon arch of blue.

I know it is not this alone; the woe
Must soon be waged again 'twixt earth and heaven;
Another tempest will arise to mar
The tranquil beauty of the fragrant even.

And yet I joy as storm on storm awakes;
Not that I love the uproar of the gloom;
But in each tempest over earth that breaks,
I count one fewer outburst yet to come.

No groan Creation heaves is heaved in vain,
Nor e'er shall be repented; it is done,
Once heaved it never shall be heaved again;
Each pang and throe are lessening one by one.

So falls the stroke of sorrow, and so springs
Strange joy and comfort from the very grief,
Even to the weariest sufferer; so brings
Each heavy burden its own sweet relief.

One cross the less remains for me to bear;
Already borne is that of yesterday;
That of today shall no tomorrow share;
Tomorrow's with itself shall pass away.

That which is added to the troubled past
Is taken from the future, whose sad store
Grows less and less each day, till soon the last Dull wave of woe shall break upon our shore.

The storm that yesterday ploughed up the sea,
Is hushed now beneath its level blue;
One storm the fewer now remains for me,
One sky and earth are made forever new.

"IMPORTANT WIN FOR ZIONISTS."

Under this caption the London Daily Mail for May 30th, published the following:—

"The movement for the return of the Jews to the Promised Land has scored its first great political success

Three weeks ago Dr. Herzl, the founder of the Zionist movement, arrived in Constantinople, accompanied by Herr D. Wallssohn, president of the Jewish Colonial Trust, and Herr Oscar Marmorek, secretary of the International Executive of the Zionists.

They were received with distinction, and at the Selamlik on May 17 Dr. Herzl was given a place in the pavilion reserved for the imperial guests. Immediately after the service he was sent for by the Sultan, and was granted an audience lasting for two hours and a half.

He laid before the Sultan a scheme for the colonization of parts of Southern Palestine by the Zionists, and his plan was supported by the strongest recommendations from the German Kaiser.

Dr. Herzl offered considerable monetary payments in return for definite security of tenure, and what practically amounts to internal governing rights over great tracts of land.

These payments will probably take the form of a fixed amount down, and further instalments as the work and development of the country progress. But before the first payment is made, international securities for the carrying out of the contract will be demanded, and the leading surety in such securities will probably be the Kaiser.

After some hesitation on the part of the Sultan, who, however, treated them with great distinction, the Zionists received the greater part of what they wanted.

An International Congress will shortly be called, to support the plans already in train. There is no idea of any immediate rush of Jews, and the leaders are already preparing for the work of keeping back volunteers. As a beginning, Jaffa Harbor will probably be rebuilt, and considerable irrigation schemes undertaken. In these works Jewish labor will be employed. Houses will be built, and gradually a number of rural Jews from Roumania, Galicia, and Russia brought on to the land.

The present scheme is not in any sense a charitable one. The Jews who have undertaken it, look for business returns on their expenditure. The new colonists are to be by no means the submerged, but the best working classes. It is not expected that many English Jews will go back."

It is scarcely possible to overrate the importance of the above announcement—supposing its substantial accuracy, which is not at all improbable.

The proposal is that the Semite should come to his own again; though for the immediate moment the leaders of the Zionist movement are willing to take less than the whole, as "half a loaf is better than no bread." Trusting, ere long, having the thin end of the wedge inserted, to drive it fully home, and thus secure the full patrimony promised to "the seed of Abraham."

Is the scheme practical and practicable? Why not? To begin with, "the times of the Gentiles," spreading over a period of 2,520 years, are on the eve of expiry. When the clock strikes the closing hour of that period, the Semite is to come to his own. Is it therefore wonderful that "coming events cast their shadows before"?

But by those not well instructed in the "Plan of the Ages," it might be objected; That as Judaism is dead and done with, and the Jew merged in the other nations of the world, it is idle folly to look for a literal fulfilment of the promises made to Abraham,—which are all spiritually fulfilled in Christ. This, though commonly held in the Christian world, is not in keeping with God's revealed purpose. And the promise made to Abraham,—and still one of those divine promises waiting fulfilment—was not made under the law but before the law. It was an unconditional promise, which is in no way affected by the question of Judaism—a promise made to the Race of Semites, and to be redeemed to that Race. Made to Abraham, and made possible by Christ. Under that promise the Race springing from Abraham will re-inherit the Land of Promise in all its wide extent, from the Nile to the Euphrates, and from Syria to Arabia.

But by others who are well instructed in the "Plan of the Ages," it is objected: That the Land is to be restored by the divine act, quite apart from any question of purchase; and this in the day of the Manifestation of Christ to his ancient people, when they shall say "This is the Lord, we have waited for him," and "a nation shall be born in a day." It gives us very sincere pleasure to assent to this; but we must remind such that there is to be, prior to this, a partial return, and in unbelief. A return of a few (in comparison), and those only from two of the tribes—those of Judah and Benjamin. These will return for social and political reasons, along the lines of their own will, working their ends by human methods. This is what we see fulfilling before our eyes in Zionism. Therefore we may expect to see some such action as that named in the extract from the Daily Mail. It is not the Restoration promised in the Word of God,—but it is the avant courier thereof, its herald or harbinger, and therein lies its solemn suggestiveness. As this is not a pamphlet, or even an article, but only an extended note, we must refer our readers to the Word for corroboration thereof, and the exercise will be healthful for mind and heart.

But there is another standpoint from which we may ask, Is the scheme practical and practicable? From that of "political economy." From which point of view we may name a few facts for your consideration.

Geographically it is a good land, for it is the land-center of the world. Need we explain this term? perhaps it is best to do so, even at the expense of being thought a pedant. Palestine stands at a point which is surrounded by a larger area of land—as distinguished from sea—than can be found at any other point of the earth's surface. We do not regard this as an accident, but a divine design. Thus, in near proximity to Palestine three Continents meet—Europe, Asia and Africa. But this advantage of land surface is supplemented in this case by the singular fact that Palestine has also unrivalled water communications; it being in close proximity to the Mediterranean Sea, the Red Sea and Arabian Ocean, the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers and the Persian Gulf. To these might be added, on the S. W. the Nile, and on the N. and N. E., the Dardanelles, the Sea of Marmora, the Bosphorus and the Black Sea, and the Caspian Sea. All navigable waters, or which, by means and skill, could be made navigable. Given suitable harbors—for there are none at present—and Palestine would become the commercial center of three vast continents. So much for its geographical possibilities in the hands of a shrewd and wealthy race, like the Semites.

Politically it will be in the right hands. The Jews' position as the world's cashier gives him great political influence, which he will not scruple to use to further the ends of Zionism. It is felt on all hands, that the Turk cannot be allowed longer to curse those Eastern lands with his thrall. They must pass into other hands, for their proper development. Into whose? France covets them. So Germany. So also Russia. Britain cannot allow either of these Powers to "disturb the balance of power in the Mediterranean" by taking the prey. Neither can these allow Britain to further aggrandise herself as a Mediterranean Power by annexing Syria. There is only one way out of the difficulty, and that is to allow the Jew to return to his own. He is not even a nation—judged by armies and fleets—and so may be allowed to take possession by a European Mandate—not out of love, but to keep the peace among the Powers, as an arrangement less divisive than any other possible plan.

The Jew has wealth, which Palestine needs. Roads, railways, bridges, canals, harbors, etc., are all sorely needed for the development of the land—which the Jew can supply. He has not only wealth, but wealth out of all measure or proportion, compared with his numbers. America is now boasting that it is the wealthiest nation of the world. That is not so—Judah, numerically considered, holds that proud position. Moreover, the Jew has also that thing next in potency as a world-force to wealth. We speak of Credit. There are Jewish names whose endorsement would be considered ample security for millions sterling!

But more, the Jew has skill. Some of the foremost names in Art and Science are those of Jews. And he has, also, that practical wisdom by which he can use his skill to the best advantage.

He has numbers. Some 12 to 14 millions of the sons and daughters of Judah and Benjamin, with the call to their high destiny in the land of their fathers."

He has that trio of advantages Patience, Caution and Perseverance.—Features which demonstrate his fitness for this work.

But has he influence? Few more so. Save in Russia and Roumania—where he is feared—the Jew, though not loved, is fairly respected. While, chiefly perhaps, as holding the purse-strings of the world in so large a measure. And,—as the Word declares,—"the borrower is servant to the lender," this gives the Jewish people an influence amongst the Gentiles which is out of all proportion to their numbers. Thus, as one who lends but does not borrow (outside his own race) the Jew has a potent influence even in the councils of the great and mighty.

As far then as we can see, Zionism will bring about the return of the Jews to the land of their fathers in considerable numbers, but not wholly,—and in unbelief. It will, under the guaranteed protection of the "Great Powers," put labor and capital into Palestine, and so develop the land commercially and agriculturally. The "orthodox" Jews may be expected to secure the re-building of their Temple and the re-establishment of the Temple ritual. With the establishment of the other features common to civilized lands will come a demand for a Prince, or head, of Jewish lineage. Then, or later, will be fulfilled the Savior's prophecy: "Another will come in his own name: him ye will receive!" He will be found within the area of Alexander's Grecian Empire, and in an Eastern Semite, though not of necessity a Jew, for that term stands for two only of the Tribes. Probably an Assyrian. He will bring great eclat to the Jewish cause, and give an immense impetus to the development of those Eastern lands, making, probably, Jerusalem his religious capital, but Babylon his temporal seat and throne. Soon after he will manifest his real character as Satan's Man, inspired and energized by the "god of this world," whose vassal he will be. Thus, instead of being a Jew zealous for the customs of his fathers, he will make a bid for the mastery of the world. Then he will come to the end of his tether, for he will meet the embattled angelic hosts of "the great King," who is "King of kings and Lord of lords" and "only Ruler of princes." For in the slaughter of the valley of Megiddo "he shall come to his end and there shall be none to help him." Then shall Judah be delivered, and then shall the Race of the Semites own and acknowledge the Tragedy of the Cross. Forgiven and restored to divine favor and pre-eminence, they shall be re-united in their own land,—the whole Twelve Tribes, and that under a "Prince of the House of David,"—whom we believe will be no less a person than King David of old, risen from the dead, who will serve under Emmanuel—the Righteous Ruler of the whole world. DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

The preceding article was occupied with what may be called the Yahweh doctrine which, in one respect, was a foundation of Dr. Thomas theory of "God Manifestation," and related topics.

"History repeats itself" is a saying that finds ample illustration in the extreme importance that Christadelphians have attached to the nature of our Lord's person, in connection with his being "in the likeness of sinful flesh."

In these papers reference has been made in a general way to the many diverse opinions which have obtained in the religious world on the nature of the person of our Lord. A few details showing how this controversy has been reproduced in modern times may not be without interest.

One thing may be noted that seems to have been firmly maintained, all through, namely, that the sinless character of our Lord was a foundation truth universally acknowledged. It has therefore been the endeavor of scholars to reconcile this truth with his birth of Mary. This became a source of much disputation. In the later middle ages this question turned largely on the supposition that Mary herself was sinless, and hence her own "Immaculate conception."

Before dealing with this we may note some features of the previous controversy which led up to it.

We find that prior to A. D. 317 "the doctrine of 3 persons in the God-head had escaped the vain curiosity of human research.....Hence a variety of sentiments existed and each explained the subject with the utmost freedom according to his own notions without giving the least offense." Meek on sects, p. 63. Thus, in the preceding century, "Beryllus, an Arabian, bishop of Bozrah, a man eminent for his learning and piety, maintained that Christ had no proper subsistence before his birth, or any other divinity than that of the Father".....Paul of Samosata, bishop of Antioch.....maintained that Christ was born a mere man, but that the reason or wisdom of the Father descended into him at his baptism.....That in consequence of the union of the divine Word, or logos, with the man Christ Jesus, he might, though improperly, be called God." Meek on Sects, p. 54.

Using the same liberty, Alexander, Bishop of Alexandria maintained that "the Son was not only of the same eminence and dignity, but also of the same essence with the Father. Arius, a man of a subtle turn of mind, and of great eloquence, boldly opposed this .....went into the opposite extreme, and asserted that the Son was totally and essentially distinct from the Father, that he was the first and noblest of those beings whom God had created out of nothing; that by his subordinate co-operation God the Father created the universe; and therefore was inferior both in nature and dignity." Meek, p. 64.

A curious feature of this controversy was the question whether our Lord possessed human nature, body and soul, or only body. Neander in his History of Dogmas, says, "Tertullian was the first to express distinctly and clearly the doctrine that Christ possessed a proper human soul." Vol. II. p. 408. Again, he says, "The doctrine of a human soul in Christ as established by Tertullian and Origen, met with varied opposition at the end of the preceding age, which was prolonged to this." That is the 3rd and 4th centuries. He adds, "He (Arius) made the incarnation to consist only in the assumption of a human body." This finds a fuller explanation in Neander's account of Apollinaris of Laodicea, who was an Arian. "He was a man of much acuteness; he subjected the doctrine to a fresh scientific examination, pondered its difficulties, and tried to surmount them by a scheme which presented the unity of the two natures in the God-man with mathematical precision. The greatest difficulty appeared to him to consist in the union of the Divine person of the Logos with a perfect human person.....setting out from Anth.....he admitted that the essence of the rational soul consists in its self-determination. If this characteristic were retained in connection with the divine nature there could be no true personal union, but only such a divine influence on Jesus as might be experienced by any other man. On the other hand if the soul forfeited this characteristic it would renounce its essential peculiarity. On the first point he objected to the School of Origen that it admitted no true union of the divine and the human but made instead two sons of God, the Logos and the Man Jesus. Hence he thought the rational human soul must be excluded from the God-man, and in this the old undefined doctrine was on his side. For the human soul he substituted the Logos himself." Meek, p. 68, says, Apollinarius indulged "in philosophical subtleties and distinctions," and "maintained that the body which Christ assumed was endowed with a sensitive, but not a rational soul. That the divine nature performed the function of reason, and supplied the place of the spiritual and intellectual principle in man which we call mind."

Meek mentions that for 30 years under seven emperors, "the Nicenian and Arian controversy was carried on with the greatest rancour.....The severe laws enacted by Theodosius against the Arians inflicted on them the greatest calamities.....The violent opposition.....seduced them into extremes. "They became divided among themselves, and torn into factions, which regarded each other with the most rancorous aversion."

For several hundred years this controversy continued. Meek mentions that in the seventh century "The Lombards in Italy adopted the opinions of Arius in preference to the doctrines of the Nicenians." And "during the eighth the Arians.....notwithstanding all their persecutions, continued to flourish in the Grecian empire." Jones in his Lectures on Ecclesiastical history records that as late as the seventeenth century two men, named Legatt and Wightman were burnt for professing Arianism. This was done by the authority of the king (James I.) at the instigation of the bishops of London and Coventry in England.

In the fifth century, Pelagius, a monk and native of Britain held one doctrine which came into prominence among Christadelphians. He taught according to Neander, that "every child is in the same state as the first man before he fell." This is otherwise described by Meek,—"We derive no corruption from our first parents, but are born as pure and unspotted as Adam was made." p. 86. Pelagius "gives a list of sinless persons in the Old Testament, and closes with John the Baptist and the Virgin Mary." Neander II. 366. Without regard to the last named this was favored by the general tendency of the church and even by Augustine, the opponent of Pelagius.

In the sixth century Julius, bishop of Halicarnassus, affirmed that since the body of Christ was without sin it must have been different from those of other men." Severus of Antioch taught the opposite,—"that the body of Christ was precisely similar to that of other men." Neander I. 388. Julius had taught that "the divine nature had so insinuated itself into the body of Christ from the very moment of the Virgin's conception, that the body of our Lord changed its nature and because incorruptible: Severus maintained that the body of Christ before his resurrection was truly corruptible." Meek pp. 93, 94. It is stated by Neander that Severus taught that the body of Christ was precisely similar to that of other men." I. 388.

The metaphysics which entered into those discussions will be obvious. Thus Meek, speaking of Tertullian, says, "This great man by adopting the sentiments of Montanus, and defending his cause in a variety of books, has exhibited to the world a most mortifying spectacle of the sad deviations of which human nature is capable, even in those it seems to have approached the nearest perfection," p. 63. And claimed that he was the Paraclete or Comforter.

One man, Irenæus, bishop of Lyons in France, who flourished in the second century, seemed to have a glimpse of the subtle nature of certain discussions in his own day. Neander quotes his words—"Men will go on most safely if they distinguish what is certain to simple faith from what we cannot explain, and God himself has kept back." He also quotes Augustin as saying "Where Holy Scripture does not express itself clearly on an obscure subject, human presumption must be checked." II. p. 365. These cases are extremely rare.

A Grove Meeting.

A general meeting of our brethren will be held in Nathan Lapsley's Grove, 4 miles north-west of Prescott, Linn County, Kansas, beginning Friday evening July 26th, and continuing over into the next week. Bros. W. J. Orem, John Foore and other speakers are expected to be in attendance. A general invitation is extended. Many brethren have tents bring them for camping. Those who come on the trains to Prescott will be furnished a way to get out to the place for meeting.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Funeral of Sister Wiley!!

June, 1901.

Brothers and sisters and friends,—what strange thing has happened,—what great sorrow has overtaken you, that so many have gathered here with sad countenances and glistening eyes? Ah! Death, the cruel enemy has invaded our circle, and laid his icy hand upon a beloved Sister and a zealous worker, an affectionate mother, faithful wife, and kind and obliging neighbor, and she lies cold, still, unconscious and lifeless before us, and we shall never see her again till at the voice of the archangel and the trump of God she comes forth to life. Myriads upon myriads have been swept from the face of the earth in this way. We daily and hourly hear of death's ravages, but we as distinctly recoil from him as if he only visited earth two or three times in a hundred years. We never get used to his doings. I am aware that poetry and a false theology paint beautiful pictures of death, and tell us it is the gate to endless joy,—the very instincts of our nature tell us it is not a true picture. Paint him as they may, every tear-drop you see today, and every sigh you hear says plainly,

"I DO NOT BELIEVE IT:"

death is an enemy; it mocks our sorrow to say he has merely made us a friendly visit. But after all many are perplexed to know what introduced death in the first place, and I am here at the request of the dear one now silent in death to explain to you how death entered into the world. And you cannot honor her memory more than by listening to what is to all intents and purposes her last loving message to you with the earnest hope that you may heed it and take steps to secure the glorious life offered to you by a resurrection from the dead. She would have you know that we have thrown away all human creeds and traditions, and accepted the Scriptures as the only source of information on this subject; and they tell us emphatically that the [illegible] is death. And if there had [illegible] death as the wages of it would not be paid. Secondly, the Scriptures say sin entered into the world and death by sin." This traces the cause of death to man himself. Do not forget it, dear friends, sin is transgression of law, the penalty attached to that law, was death; and in pronouncing the penalty upon that one-man sinner, the Law-giver himself explained what the death penalty threatened, really was. It did not mean to be tormented for ever in fire and brimstone, or by the remorse of conscience to all eternity, or for any time whatever. God tells us in Gen. ii. 7 that he formed man out of mother earth, and caused him to live by breath and this was all there was to the First man; and, as like begets like, this is all there is to any man or woman. Man could not impart to offspring what he did not possess himself. He was dust organized as man with brain to think, eyes to see, ears to hear, lungs to breathe, heart to palpitate, and so forth. This organism when caused to live by breath was capable of every thing we see him do. And as we see breath caused him to live, so we find in Psa. civ. 29 that[t]he

"BY ONE MAN

TAKING AWAY OF THE BREATH—

I mean not being allowed to inhale the breath of life any longer, just lets the man formed of dust, go back to the dust he was formed of. I now ask serious attention to the words of the Judge as he sentenced the first sinner to death, and explain what death is. Listen to it, dear friends, it is a matter of life or death to you, eternal things depend upon it. What the Judge said to the father of the human race is the sentence suspended over you. "The wages of sin is death." Now as then. Rom. vi. 23. Does some one here say he didn't eat the fruit forbidden and ought not to be punished for what Adam did, and it is unjust for God to punish me for Adam's sin? Let us see; I quoted the passage which says, "By one man sin entered the world, and death by sin," and so death passed upon all men. But do not blame God because death passed upon man, it is not because God charges Adam's sin to all men that they all die. Adam by sinning became subject to death,—a mortal man, he under the law a corruptible creature after fair warning that this would be so. It was after this, after his sin that he begat children in his own likeness, subject to death, dying creatures every one, like their father by a law of nature that like begets like, so do not blame God because you have to die; you die because you had a mortal father. Are you now ready to hear the Judge pass sentence of death upon the first sinner? And learn from his lips exactly what he meant by death. Whatever death meant then, it means now, not something ten thousand times worse. This is what the Judge said to the guilty man: "Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree which I commanded thee saying, Thou shalt not eat of it, cursed is the ground for thy sake, in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life. Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee and thou shalt eat the herb of the field. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread,—how long?—until thou (Adam) return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Every cemetery, every hearse,

STAMPED HIMSELF

EVERY FUNERAL PROCESSION,

every corpse proves the literality of this sentence to you today. And those who out of their want of faith in the written Word, and their fertile brain, and presumption, add to God's sentence and make it hell torment forever instead of death, cause men to blaspheme God's name and throw away his Book. This is what has made tens of thousand reject the Bible, because they suppose God to be a monster of cruelty—and injustice; and while we cannot wonder at it, at the same time the people owe it to themselves to examine for themselves, and not take it for granted that our teachers properly represent the truth of God's revealed Word. The sentence of death read to you proves that in death man goes back to dust just as he was before he was formed. He is alive in no sense whatever, alive nowhere. He is not dead and alive at the same time. And therefore there can be no resumption of life by him, without a resurrection from the dead, and this is precisely what the gospel of the grace of God offers man.

THE BOOK OF GOD

[illegible] or may [illegible], perhaps, why did God make man so he could sin and entail death on all his progeny? I answer, it was not his purpose to make a living piece of machinery that could be wound up and be obliged to run on and obliged to do just so, and nothing else till it was worn out,—he is a holy and righteous God, and he organized man capable of doing right and also capable of doing wrong. He could do as HE himself pleased, or as God pleased. He was

A FREE MORAL AGENT.

If he obeyed God, he would live on and on, but if he pleased himself, and disobeyed God he would be deprived of the life he then had and never have life after death under the provisions of the law he violated. It was not, I repeat, a fine handsome looking man that performed bodily functions smoothly but character that was to decide whether man should live for ever or not. As God was under no obligation to make man at all in the first place, the natural life was a gratuity—God did not owe him anything and the Creator had the right to say on what conditions the man could live forever. If a man makes a machine that fails to do what it was intended to do, has he not

THE RIGHT TO DESTROY IT, and use the materials for another purpose? Surely the Creator has the same right, especially as man could, if he would, have lived on and on. As it was, the life he had was worth having while he had it; and I emphasize it—God owed him nothing first or last. Life is what people value most of all, if sane. And Jehovah could not make use of a disobedient man in his proposed and promised kingdom. Those who complain because God allowed man to sin if he wished to, have never taken the pains to learn what his eternal purpose was in creating earth and man, and therefore are not competent to criticize the conditions imposed upon man. But I wish to say to any fault-finder, that God proposes to redeem from death and upon all who fall in love with his gracious overtures, accept his invitation to his kingdom and glory, and peace, and keep the commandments of Jesus; this includes an everlasting life that's free from every ill; such as bereavement, pain, disease, hunger, thirst, loss, disappointment, persecution, sorrow or sighing, because there will be nothing to cry about. And—Here I would ask any present, if these divine propositions find any response in their hearts? Do they think such a life of joy and peace and beautifulness worth having? Seeing the now-sick now-well kind of an existence is regarded as more precious than or precious stones, and which some would give millions to have lengthened one year, or even one month? If a proposition of such a character as I have mentioned is rejected by a man who has had a hard up-hill struggle to provide bread for his family, and after suffering from ailments inherited from his parents; yes,—if a person like that rejects an offer of endless life free from the thousand ills that afflict this life,—there can be but one reason for it, and that is,—he doesn't believe the offer; and he doesn't believe the offer because he has no faith in the Book that contains the offer. Many unbelievers assign as the reason for not believing the Bible to be

BESTOW EVERLASTING LIFE

GOLD OR SILVER

THE BOOK OF GOD

is because it speaks of things that they have had no experience in; others say they cannot understand it; thousands say they CANNOT BELIEVE THERE IS SUCH A GOD AS HE WHOM THE BIBLE PROFESSES TO REVEAL. I wish to say in answer to this, that the fact that I can and do believe is evidence that man is organized capable of believing God. Science proves that all men are organized with the same faculties. Science also proves that if any of our mental faculties are not used, they grow less and less. If men never TRY to remember anything, it will come to pass by and by that they cannot remember when they do try. On the other hand men can so that they can remember nearly all they hear. And this principle holds good in mechanics, art, music, faith, hope, reverence, etc., as well as in the animal propensities. Whatever faculties of the mind are exercised improve, enlarge; and it is just so with the physical system; when an athlete wants to strengthen his muscles he goes into training for that purpose, and exercises the parts likely to be called into requisition on the other hand the muscles of a man who makes little or no physical effort become

CULTIVATE MEMORY

FLABBY AND WEAK,

and have no power of endurance. Observation teaches that when men let their animal faculties have a free course, they soon so enslave the whole man that he is utterly ruined. But when one by principle keeps his body in subjection, he in the same ratio rises higher in the scale of being, till the animal gradually dies out of him, is starved out of him for want of gratification, just as the muscles shrivel up when not used. The philosophy of growth by exercise is this: violent exercise brings an

INCREASED FLOW OF BLOOD

to the part and builds up new tissue; if that same part be thrown out of use, it decreases on the same principle. When man came from the hand of his Creator as a finished product his head was well balanced, evenly poised; but he started in business for himself with distrust of the God who made him. This unbalanced him, warped him, gave him a wrong bias; and made it easier to do that same thing again, than any thing else. And as like begets like, do you not see that he of necessity, to some extent warped his offspring? Do you not also see what a tremendous responsibility

FATHERHOOD INVOLVES?

Parents, take home this lesson with you, think of the misery sure to follow from imparting to offspring an inclination to any evil practices. Now I come to faith and the want of it; hope, and the want of it; reverence for God, and the want of it. Taking account of the three mental departments, the intellectual,—the moral or spiritual,—and the animal; the moral or spiritual is beyond comparison highest and noblest; it lifts him up to have intercourse and companionship with God. Next to this department, comes the intellectual. The intellectual can travel hand in hand with the moral faculties, providing the latter retain the first place. But if the intellectual usurps the place of the moral and crowds it aside; the result is disastrous,—the creature is held in reverence more than the Creator! And intercourse with him is suspended. Let us now enquire with the man who cannot believe there is such a God as the Bible teaches? Why he is wanting, practically of one mental department, and that the most ennobling of all. If you have followed my argument you will have anticipated my answer. How comes it that he is practically minus of spiritual faculties? I answer, he might have inherited an organism deficient in that respect, or he might by concentrating his mind upon the animal propensities, which include all selfishness,—acquirement of property,—indulgence of the appetite, etc., to the utter neglect of spiritual things; so that the spiritual or moral, including faith, hope, love and reverence for God, have been starved out for want of the food which exercise supplies. My remarks, then, are based upon the Word of God, and supported both by science and experience. We have

WHAT IS THE MATTER

A COMMON SENSE RELIGION

that is adapted to every-day life. It teaches a cause for every effect. We do not believe in a religion that grows out of excitement, but from listening to God's invitation, to come and reason with him, so that though our sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." Isa. i. 18. You see from this that God is anxious to pardon, but it is first necessary to show people

THEY NEED PARDON.

And he condescends to reason with them for that purpose, with the object stated; that they may be as white as snow, though as red as crimson. Whether you believe it or not, I have proven man to be a WILFUL sinner, because forewarned of its consequences. I have proved him to have been a gracious God to a wilful sinner; for, although the law demanded, and would surely take the sinner's life, God still had a desire for the work of his hand, and made promise of a revival from the death state to a life that would never terminate, providing man would believe the promise, and live the present life as becometh one who had become heir of eternal life by a

RESURRECTION FROM THE DEAD.

And this brings me to notice what God's Book says about the state of man in death. After reading of what God who made man,—dust,—says, and after reading that he shall return to dust, we would hardly expect to find God saying he was alive somewhere after he died, would we? Neither do we. The commonest kind of common sense would say that after dying, the man would be dead, and to be dead is not to be alive. I presume you are all aware of the popular teaching upon this subject and therefore will just present God's revealed truth on the subject and leave you to do as you please with it. You are as

FREE TO ACT AS ADAM WAS;

but you will have to take the consequence of your action as he did; also. Remember he shows man returns to dust. In Psa. cxlvi. 4 he shows that he is caused to return to dust by depriving him of the breath of life. It says "their breath goes forth, they return to their dust, and in that very day their thoughts perish." In Eccl. iii. 19 he says, "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts, even one thing befalleth them, as the one dieth so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath.....All go unto one place, man and beasts go unto one place; "all are of the dust, man and beast alike, and all—man and beast—turn to dust again." In Eccl. ix. 5 it says, "For the living know that they shall die, but the dead

KNOW NOT ANYTHING."

Ver. 10 says, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might, for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge in the grave, whither thou goest." There is no ambiguity about this language; it is in harmony with the account of creation, man goes to dust and knows nothing while dead. Calmly think a moment. If you don't believe man dies completely as God says he does, but is alive somewhere all the while, could you reasonably expect the Lord to come and raise you, if you believe you have an ever-living nature already, independent of any resurrection by him. Jesus said that he came that they may HAVE LIFE, and that he would raise up at the last day those who believe in him as the Life-giver, no mention of others, because his words just quoted rule them out as unbelievers! The words of Jesus, "They that are whole, have no need of a physician, but they that are sick," are present with me. They mean that those who think there is with them, and are immortal already and have no need of a physician and that is the reason I have dwelt so long upon this. Those who are of that opinion will not come to the great Giver of life; and this was his great sorrowful lament, when on earth, "Ye will not come unto me, that ye might have life."

Friends, we are in the presence of death again today. Yes; the proof of our own mortality lies before us; and the truth of the Scripture is demonstrated that our life is a vapor. It appears for a little time and then vanishes away." All flesh is grass, and the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, but the Word of our God shall stand for ever. One of Adam's children passes out of life every moment. Every swing of the pendulum is the death warrant of some child of mortality.

"DEATH, DEATH, DEATH," is the sound of the dismal vibration, as it swings to and fro. The river of death, figuratively speaking, flows sullenly past our dwellings, and we hear as it were, the splash and scream of one and another as they drop into the rushing torrent. The earth is full of death beds; the groan of pain is heard in cottage and castle, in the millionaire's palace and the peasant's hut. The tear of parting is falling everywhere. Rich and poor, good and bad, have to weep over the departure from life of loved ones. Oh, who can bind the strong one,—Death? Who can say to sickness, "Thou shalt not touch me? Who can light up the dimmed eye, or re-color the pale cheek, or re-invigorate the icy hand, or so that it can once more speak to us? Who can enter the chamber of death and speak the "Talitha cumi" of resurrection? Who can look into the casket and say, Young man, arise! or say at the tomb, "Lazarus, come forth?" Only One. Just one, only, can do this, and this is our best friend, the best friend of the dear one now silent in death, and oh, I cannot tell you how earnestly she pleaded with me to commend her best friend to you, and to

LOOSEN THE STIFFENED TONGUE

INTRODUCE YOU TO HIM,

as one that sticks closer than a brother, and has been always by her side through the terrible ordeal she has passed through, and enabled her to bear all without a murmur or complaint. I tell you, a faith and hope that will sustain one under such excruciating pain, and maintain a composure that enabled her to peer into the darkness and gloom of the grave and say with the Psalmist, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil, for thy rod and thy staff they comfort me; yes, a faith and hope like that is worth more than all the world beside. While not claiming perfection, she had implicit confidence that through God's favor she had been able to keep her title clear to a mission in and blessedness when Jesus comes; on no occasion during her long illness did any cloud appear to shut out the rays of divine light that illumined her pathway. While there was any hope of recovery she rejoiced in that prospect; but it was for others she wished to live. Those dear to her by the ties of nature were ever on her mind, she yearned to lead them to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world, that they might share God's great Salvation. Her constant desire and prayer to God was beget within them a hope of life through the Word of truth. And when it became evident that the enemy would soon seize her, again and again she charged me to attend to them, and endeavor to lead them in the way everlasting. The last day she was able to talk to me about all that we could understand was that her Father in heaven was with her, and some thing about her boys. I am sure the boys know, and understand, what her faith and hope was, and some of them believe it too, theoretically, but what she regretted so much was that they did not love it enough to become obedient to it, and live for God and truth. Having witnessed the transforming and sustaining in their beloved mother as death was feeling for her heart-strings, let them contrast with it the dying words of a skeptic. His friends gathered around his bed, and being fearful that he would weaken at the last, they urged him to hold on; but to their astonishment, he turned his ghastly face and staring eyes toward them and said, "Tell me what I shall hold on to will you!" This was something they could not do. The dear deceased one could hear the words of Jesus from heaven, hold fast that which thou hast, viz., a faith and hope based upon God's immutable promise, and to him that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations, to him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me upon my throne. What a contrast? Many of you have heard the words of life from her who is now in the silence of death.

THE KINGDOM OF GLORY AND PEACE

TO WIN THEM,

POWER OF THE GOSPEL

THEY WILL CONDEMN YOU,

if you do not obey them. You have no excuse. I plead with you by all the love of God and of Christ, and by the love cherished for your mother, resolve that her God shall be your God; yield while mercy's gate stands wide open; yes; while mercy lingers, come. I plead with you in the presence of death to insure your lives with him who charges no premium, it is WITHOUT MONEY AND WITHOUT PRICE.

We are all passing like shadows, our purposes are broken, our plans perish, our possessions take wings, we all fade as a leaf, friends fail, joys flee, pleasures pass, hopes perish, kindred die, families break up, only God changes not!! Oh, fly to God for refuge and rest. Lay hold on eternal life, and this will open for you the fountains of perennial bliss, for he offers you the vigor of an endless life. He invites you to partake of his own divine nature of existence. And if you would see the one on earth dearest of all to you again, see her made like to Jesus' glorified body, you must accept it. Failing of this your life will go out in the blackness of darkness for ever. Will you meet her there?

Brethren and sisters and friends, our dear deceased Sister was the daughter of William and Harriet Delano, of Garrettsville, Ohio, where her father was located as minister of the Baptist church. She was born Aug. 27, 1837; and at an early age her father received her into the Baptist Church Her brother, Henry Delano, was once minister of First Baptist Church. By some means her mother had come to understand many things concerning the Age of Glory to dawn upon the world when Jesus comes again, and this no doubt in a measure predisposed the daughter to take interest in the truth as we teach it, when many years after coming to Cleveland she first heard it publicly proclaimed. After the reception of the truth herself she became exceedingly zealous to have others hear the joyful sound, and we doubt if she allowed many opportunities to get past her, and hence it was that as she learned she taught her daughter, now Sister Hudson, and they were baptized together, another daughter followed later, and then she started to bring another into the fold, respecting whom she said to our present Sister Price she could die happy if she would obey the truth, but the seed laid dormant several years, but at last sprang up, thank God; besides this she brought in her daughter-in-law, and still another, Sister Gero became interested through her, and she was generally laboring with some one. And I have the address of two parties now that she was interested in when her work was cut off. What an example for all in this respect. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, yea, they rest from their labors and their works do follow them. Farewell, weary and worn one, for a little while, may we meet again on the evergreen shore, ne'er to sever. Amen.

In Remembrance of Me.

This do in remembrance of me
The Savior in tenderness said,
My body here broken for you,
Now take as you take of this bread.
O Savior, with wonder and grief,
Thy body here broken we see;
And though of all sconers the chief,
We eat in remembrance of thee.

This do in remembrance of me,
Oh take ye and drink of this cup:
It tells of my blood freely shed.
When high on the cross lifted up,
O Savior, we see thy blood spilled,
Thy thirst for our sake on the tree:
The cup with thy blessing so filled,
We drink in remembrance of thee.

This do in remembrance of me,
Be this the sure pledge of my love.
The bond of sweet fellowship here.
The seal of a sweeter above,
O Savior, this feast thou hast spread,
Our hallowed communion shall be
And one, as we eat of one bread.
We love in remembrance of thee.

This do in remembrance of me,
Until I in glory return,
Fulfilling the prayer of all saints,
Who for my appearing do yearn.
O Savior, that glory's foreglean,
Burning thy cross we can see;
And seeking its fulness supreme,
We live in remembrance of thee.

Light Sought For.

"Verily I say unto you this generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled." Matt. xxiv. 34.

Dear Brother Wilson:

It has been some time since I received any word from you directly, but I read up your articles very closely in the RESTITUTION. There is one Scripture concerning which I should be glad to see an article from your pen. It is found in Matt. xxiv. 34, and in the parallel passages in the other gospels. Matt. xxiv 34: "Verily I say unto you, this generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled."

Your Brother in the hope.
S. J. LINDSAY.

I presume the thought of the topic centers in the question, What generation does this passage refer to: the generation to whom the words were spoken, or some future generation?

The context makes plain beyond question as to what generation has the promise of seeing the grand and magnificent consummation of the ages without passing away. See verses 33 and 34, "So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors. Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled."

Note the phrase: "When ye shall see all these things."

The generation who heard these words, did not see those things, neither has any of the generations now living seen the signs spoken of.

As to what those "things" or signs consist of, see verses 29 and 30: "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken; and then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." "These things," consist of five points:

1. The darkening of the sun.
2. The moon withdrawing her light.
3. The stars shall fall from heaven.
4. The powers of the heavens shall be shaken.
5. The sign of the Son of Man in heaven.

None of these things has this or any other generation yet seen.

I am aware that Adventists point to a dark day which occured in a portion of the United States now more than a generation in the past.

We must bear in mind two things, in this investigation.

1. With regard to prophecies having a local application, signs may be discerned of its fulfillment only in the locality to which the prophecy applies.

2. Prophecies having general or world-wide application must be heralded by signs of a like character. The general character of these signs is indicated in verse 30: "And then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."

Notice the phrase: "Then shall all the tribes (nations) of the earth mourn, when they (the nations) shall see the Son of Man coming, etc."

The Adventist dark day was visible to only a part of one nation, and the generation seeing it having passed away without the prophecy being fulfilled, shows clearly that the Adventists made a mistake. They need not have made this mistake if they had paid attention to verse 29: "Immediately AFTER the tribulation of those days, shall the sun be darkened," etc.

The darkening of the sun, etc., could not possibly take place, etc, until "AFTER the tribulation of those days," which is now coming rapidly to a close.

What "tribulation" does this refer to? See verses 20 and 21: "But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the Sabbath day; for then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be."

The context shows that the "tribulation" is upon Israel. The corresponding passage in Luke xxi. 20-24, makes it clear that it applies to Israel: "And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. Then let them which are in Judea flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midst of it depart out; and let not them that are in the countries enter therein to: for these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled. But wo unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days! for there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people, and they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled. And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and upon the earth distress of nations, etc."

Notice the phrase: "great distress in the land (of Israel,) and wrath upon this people" (of Israel,) culminates in their being "led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles," etc. This is the parallel passage to Matt. xxiv. 29: "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened" etc. So we can see clearly that the Adventists have got a long way ahead of the Scriptural time for the darkening of the sun, etc. It must take place "immediately after the tribulation of those days," which according to Luke is not until "the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled," which is now rapidly coming to a close, and "immediately after" which, the signs will follow in rapid succession. The generation which shall witness the darkening of the sun, "after" the tribulation upon Israel shall cease, shall see the glorious consummation without passing away.

Joel speaks of this sign of the darkening of the sun, coming before the day of the Lord. See Joel ii. 30-32: "And I will shew wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord come. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be delivered; for in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the Lord hath said, and the remnant whom the Lord shall call."

These signs above spoken of by Joel, as you will perceive, will usher in the "great and terrible day of the Lord," or the "great tribulation" upon all nations, "immediately" after the close of the tribulation upon Israel.

Rev. vi. 12-17, is in exact accord with Joel: "And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became as black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth even as a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind. And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together: and every mountain and island were moved out of their places. And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?" This event quoted from Rev. vi. occurs during the sixth seal, towards its close, I apprehend. It is "the great day of his wrath," "the wrath of the Lamb," which has not yet come, but is so near at hand. This is the same as Joel's "great and terrible day of the Lord." Following this sixth seal, the seventh angel sounds, (Rev. xi. 15) "And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever." But previous to this, we read in verse 18: "And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great; and shouldst destroy them which destroy the earth."

The word "were" is in the past tense, "were angry," previous to the seventh angel sounding, which would place it under the sixth seal and near its close, "when the great day of his (the Lamb's) wrath is come." It is at that time "the sun became black as the sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood: (a natural result from the darkening of the sun) and the stars of heaven (a large meteoric shower) fell unto the earth."

Following the darkening of the sun, etc., "shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven." This sign will consist of a most magnificent luminous glory, bright as the lightning's lurid flash covering the entire expanse of the heavens.

Matt. xxiv. 23, 24, speaks of the arise of false Christs working wonders so as almost to deceive the "elect." With regard to these deceivers Jesus says: (verses 25, 26) "Behold I have told you before. Wherefore if they shall say unto you behold he (Christ) is in the desert, go not forth: behold he is in the secret chambers; believe it not."

Why not believe the reports? Because when the true Christ appears in the heavens (verse 27) it will be "as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." See also Luke xvii. 23, 24: "And they will say to you, Behold, there, or behold here, follow not. (Why not?) For as that lightning flashing out of one part under heaven, shines to the other part under heaven, so will the Son of Man be when he comes."—Diaglott. No imposter can counterfeit "the sign of the Son of Man in heaven." The "elect" need not be deceived if they will remember the Lord's own sign.

I apprehend the most important matter in this whole lesson is centered in Matt. xxiv. 37-42: "But as the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come."

It is indeed a very sad thought that when the angelic reapers go forth to gather in the first fruits of the harvest, some of the household are going to be "left" behind—"one shall be taken and the other left." Some of the "virgins" who went forth to meet the Lord did not have any oil, when the cry was heard: "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh." A lamp without oil will not give forth light. Dear reader, are you a light bearer? Do you let the light shine? or are you hiding it under a bushel? It is the entrance of the Word which "giveth Light." What Word? See 1 Pet. i. 23-25. We are there told that "all flesh (without the Word—oil) is as grass * * * the grass withereth, and the flowers thereof falleth away." Verse 28 shows how to escape from perishing like "grass." "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." What is the Word? See verse 25, "But the Word of the Lord endureth forever, and this is THE WORD which BY THE GOSPEL is preached unto you." The "Word" is the "oil" which will give the light necessary to meet the Bridegroom, and as we have seen from Peter that "Word" (the light-giving "oil,") is THE GOSPEL. Now many people profess to be looking for the Bridegroom, who have not this "oil"—the "Word of the truth of the gospel," consequently cannot have the necessary light with which to meet the Bridegroom, and so must be "left," when the Lord's angels gather in the first-fruits. As samples I point to the Dowieites, Mormons, Plymouth Brethren, etc., who are all looking for his coming, but have no "oil,"—the "Word" which gives light, even "the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you."

None but the "pure" can be ready to meet the Lord when the sign of the Son of Man appears in the heavens. Purity in the beginning of the Christian life comes as we read in 1 Pet. i. 22, "Seeing you have purified your souls (yourselves) in obeying the truth." See also Rom. vi. 17: "Ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Being then (by means of heart-obedience) made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness." Before this can be done light must be received from the light-giving Word, even "the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you." The word of darkness which comes through tradition, will not entitle one to be reaped along with the "firstfruits."

Jesus said: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." In that day many religious people will claim an entrance by pleading, "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied (taught) in thy name? and in thy name cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I NEVER KNEW YOU." Religiousness counts for nothing, if the one true gospel has not been obeyed. He also says, "Beware of false prophets (teachers) which come to you in sheep's clothing but inwardly are ravening wolves." They lead people astray from doing "God's will." Nothing counts "but he that DOETH THE WILL of my Father," and certainly none can doubt but what it is "GOD'S WILL," that the life-giving Word must be obeyed. Those who even consent to a compromise of the gospel of the kingdom with those who have not obeyed the gospel, will be classed with, and receive the reward of false prophets."

The above remarks may not be in strict accord with an answer to the question, but being seriously impressed with an idea that the present generation will witness the signs of the darkening of the sun, etc., I feel so anxious to save all that possibly can be saved from being "left" behind when the "elect" are reaped. Terrible will be the anguish of mind experienced by that part of "the household" who have failed to make their "calling and election sure," when they see the sign of the Son of Man in heaven, and realize that they are "left."

Let us seriously guard both the faith and our own personal conduct.

W. H. WILSON.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

On June 16th to the 23rd, we were with the church at Morse Mills, Mo. We had the pleasure of assisting in the dedication of their new church house. We read the 84th Psalm: "How amiable are thy tabernacles, Oh, Lord of Hosts.....For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my Lord, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness," and kindred Scriptures, such as Solomon's Temple or house that he built for the Lord, and how beautiful the building went together, and showed from 1st Peter ii. the living or spiritual stones for the future building. They have a very commodious house and all of the brethren that pass that way are cordially invited to call on them, especially the preaching brethren, as they need help. They are having much opposition from the Baptists, and the minister has forbidden his members attending our meetings, as we are all infidels, and our doctrine dangerous. I told them that if they did not want to believe the truth that the best thing they could do was to stay away for as sure as they hear us some will obey. But in spite of all this, on the 4th Sunday one more put on Christ by baptism. There is a fine Sunday School at this place, and I look for encouraging reports from them. This would be a good place for some live, energetic brother to settle in order that they may have regular preaching. I am so far away from them, and have so many calls, but will occasionally visit them, as I have opportunity. On July 2nd I returned home from near Nashville, Kansas, where Bro. G. F. Randolph lives, and gave them two discourses and baptized one sister, formerly a Methodist, very zealous in the faith and we predict that she will let her light shine. There are three or four members here, all standing in the faith. I left them with a promise of visiting them again some time this fall, if God so wills it to be. It seems as though it is mostly the poorer class that will hear and accept the gospel. Truly, the harvest is plentiful, but the laborers are few. I have more calls than I can fill, as I am getting up in years. Every one ought to help, as many poor people are crying, "Come over and help us." Brethren, delay not, as the train is nearly due.

Yours in hope of life, when Jesus comes.

JOHN FOORE.

We Earned It.

In a recent number of Our Hope is the story of two young boys, who though attending school at the time, earned their offering of fifty cents for "The Helpers' Union," by selling sassafras. "We earned it," they said. Earned it, and what for? That they might give it to God. I predict a happy future for those boys. It is good to work with such a purpose before us. I have found it to be so in my experience. Money earned for God, comes into ones hands, bringing with it such a feeling of delight. "I can do something for God now," is the thought, "I can send the papers and tracts to the sick soldiers." I can help on the cause of truth in so many ways. I earned some money today for the Master, and I am happy in having been able to do it, small as is the sum. A few cents does a great deal sometimes, if given with a prayer that God will bless. "Where there's a will there's a way."

AUNTIE WISE.

Conscience not a Safe Guide.

It is anything but the Word of God in these dark days! How few are there who really love this Word! How few seek to it for information and comfort! How few know what is written in the Scriptures of truth! Rarely is the Bible read, much less studied; and where it is read, how often is it read to no edification. And because of this utter neglect of the Word of God, or wrong use of it, the world lies in darkness. It knows neither the gospel which would heal them, nor the Word of God which would instruct them. Only here and there are found individuals who understand and cherish the good Word, and who are daily striving to conform themselves to the mind of God.

And yet this Word of God is the standard and the guide by which we are to direct our lives. It is a lamp God gives to show us light in this dark, dark world. Let [illegible] is necessary for all who would enter into life.

But instead of hearing men say, "To the Word!" "To the law!" "To the gospel!" "To the Scriptures!" conscience is frequently made supreme. The word is—"Act up to your conscience, and you will be safe."

That were well enough if the conscience of every man was enlightened up to the fulness of revelation. Then might each man safely follow his conscience. But conscience, as it is more or less dark in all, is not a safe guide. The Word of God is the true rule of faith and practice.

Why, a man may have a good conscience, and yet be committing actual and dreadful sin. He may be doing things which he thinks are very acceptable to God; and he may "know nothing against himself." Look at Paul. What a notable example of a man doing immense mischief, and yet enjoying a conscience that witnessed nothing against him. Whilst he was murdering Christians, he had a "good conscience!" He witnessed to the Council that he had "lived in all good conscience before God," until the day that he appeared before them. He did things ignorantly before the Lord Christ, and yet to his inward approval. And why? This is the reason,—he had not seen the light that condemned him. In his prejudice he closed his eyes to it.

And so may it be with many and the truth. You may be satisfied with what you believe, and the way in which you think you are doing what God requires of you. But is this satisfaction in view of the truth as plainly revealed in the Scriptures of truth? It behoves every man to examine himself, to see whether he be in the faith or not. For we are not to appear before our conscience for judgment; but we are amenable to the supreme court of Jesus the Christ, who is to pass decision on our faith and actions according to the Word.

O may it not be that any reader of these lines, now approved in his own conscience, shall at the bar of God "come short" of acceptance. With the possibility of a fatal mistake in view, we ask every man who may feel easy and satisfied in his own mind to [illegible] it afresh whence his comfort is derived. It can do no harm, while it may do much good.—Bible Echo.

King Edward's coronation in London will not be the only function of that kind that is to take place within the next twelve months. For, according to all appearances, the consecration of the sexagenarian Edward VII. in Westminster Abbey as King of Great Britain and of Ireland, as Emperor of India, Sovereign of Canada and Australia, Duke of Normandy, etc., will coincide with the coronation at Prague in the St. Vitus Cathedral of the septuagenarian Emperor Francis Joseph as King of Bohemia. This has been decided on the occasion of the recent visit of the chief of the House of Hapsburg to the Bohemian capital. Indeed, it has been announced both by monarch and Ministers, and it will be no empty or meaningless ceremony.

Not only has Francis Joseph promised to be crowned with the diadem of St. Wenceslaus, and to fulfill the home rule aspirations of both the nobility and of the people of Bohemia, but he has likewise informed the Burgomaster of Prague that he will comply with the request of his beloved Bohemian capital by directing one of the members of his family to take up his permanent residence once more in the Hradschin, or ancient palace of the Kings of Bohemia, where King Charles X. of France made his home for a time after the loss of his throne in 1830, where Emperor Ferdinand resided from the time of his abdication in 1848 until his death near a quarter of a century later, and where the ill-fated Crown Prince Rudolph lived with his Belgian consort for the first two years after his marriage.

A brave, resolute, Christian life is not always smooth sailing; but the inward power becomes an overmatch for headwinds. Sometimes the gales of adversity sweep away a Christian's possessions, but there is an undisturbed treasure down in the hold—a glorious consciousness that One is with him that the world can neither give nor take away.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

"A cigar in a preacher's mouth is about as uncomely a sight as one can see. It looks bad, it smells bad, and it is bad."

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

You can take in the Pan-American Exposition on excursion tickets to New York over the Pennsylvania Lines. This arrangement goes into effect July 1st on excursion tickets to New York to be placed on sale that date.

The Indian and the Northwest.

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 115 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half-tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battleground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1600. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library. Price, 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.—Aug. 31.

A New York trip with stop-over privilege at the Pan-American Exposition, may be made on low fare excursion tickets obtainable at Pennsylvania Lines ticket offices after July 1st.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh - day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Address, THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 288 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Excursion tickets to New York may be obtained at principal ticket offices of the Pennsylvania Lines, good going and returning over the Pennsylvania Lines—or going via Pennsylvania Lines and returning via the other direct lines from New York, including the routes via Buffalo with privilege of stopping over at that point to take in the Pan-American Exposition and Niagara Falls, or returning via Washington, D. C., with stop-over at that point. Full information will be furnish in reply to inquiries addressed to Ticket Agents of the Pennsylvania Lines.—July 31.

Chautauqua Lake Excursions.

Works of Immortal Interest.

TWELVE WORKS giving the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Death, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 80 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. Read X PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 17, 1901. NUMBER 27.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, the pre requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Content.

O thou, who kindly dost provide
For every creature's want!
We bless thee, God of Nature wide,
For all thy goodness lent;
And if it please thee, heavenly guide,
May never worse be sent;
But whether granted, or denied,
Lord! bless us with content.

The Creation of the Earth.

"Known unto God are all his works from the ages." Acts xv. 18. It is our purpose in this communication to consider the creation of the earth and the object of its creation. We shall not try to prove that God created the heavens and the earth, as we are writing for Bible believers and students.

The earth is the workmanship of God, and in the creation of this, as every other phenomena of the universe, he displayed alike his wisdom and power. "The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth; by understanding hath he established the heavens." Prov. iii. 19. Thus he assigned it a place in the great solar system of which it is a part. By his wisdom he placed it in its orbit. "He stretcheth over the north the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing." Job xxvi. 7. By this latter expression we have no doubt to understand the suspension of the earth in space.

By his wisdom he also proportioned the different elements of which it is composed. "Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out the heavens with a span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance? Who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord, and being his counsellor hath taught him? With whom took he counsel and who instructed him, and taught him in the path of judgment, and taught him knowledge, and showed him the way of understanding?" Isa. xl. 12-14.

The wisdom of the Lord is also apparent in the vast and various riches with which the earth is filled. "O Lord, how manifold are thy works: in wisdom thou hast made them all: the earth is full of thy riches." Psa. civ. 15. Riches of the soil, and of the seas: riches in the bowels of the earth, and riches in the forest; riches that contribute to supply man's physical needs, and riches with which to feed his mind. "That thou gavest them, they gather: thou openest thy hand, they are filled with good." Psa. civ. 28.

Likewise it is true that God made the earth by his power. "He made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heavens by his discretion." Jer. x. 12. He had the ability to perform what his wisdom proposed: and in the accomplishment of this, all the illimitable laws of nature are his; they are at his bidding. In the ages past, long before there was any man, God was engaged in providing for the well-being of the man whom he would place upon earth. The metals and minerals, the gases and oils, were being prepared, so that when man should come into his place, he might find those things that would be needed. No wonder that in view of this we should read that "the Lord shall rejoice in his works." Psa. civ. 31. This truth is also stated in Gen. i. 31: "And God saw everything that he had made, and behold, it was very good." It was good because everything was adapted to the purpose for which it was intended.

The earth, the sea, and the sky contributed to minister to man's well-being and happiness. What was God's object in creating the earth? Did he say or in any way indicate anything on this point? If so, we know what to say. "Thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: I am the Lord, and there is none else." Isa. xlv. 12. God was WISE ENOUGH and POWERFUL ENOUGH, when he made the earth, to make and adapt it to this end, "THAT IT SHOULD BE INHABITED" by man. This is also to be seen in the words, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth on the earth. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. And God blessed them, and said unto them, Be fruitful and multiply, and FILL (so Young and also Luther) THE EARTH, and subdue it." Gen. i. 26 28. If they were to "fill the earth," it must have been intended for their habitation.

Could ever any emergency arise which would divert the Almighty from the object he had in view in the creation of the earth? No. We find that when he "brought in the flood upon the world of the ungodly," he saved Noah and his house, and after the deluge said to them, in the same language as he told Adam and Eve, "Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the earth." Gen. ix. 1. All of which goes to show that it was intended to be the abode, the home of man. Also the Psalmist expressed this thought, when he said, "The heaven, even the heavens are the Lord's; but the earth hath he given to the children of men." Psa. cxv. 16.

Now, the question is, Will he ever take it from them, and give them something else instead? We know nothing of this unless he has seen fit to tell us. Therefore let us see "what saith the Scripture?" So far as the permanency of the earth is concerned, we are told, "Thou hast established the earth: it abideth." Psa. cxix. 90. But for how long has he "established" it? "He built his sanctuary like high palaces, like the earth which he hath established forever." Psa. lxxviii. 69. Also Solomon speaks of this matter, in these words, "One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh; but the earth abideth forever." Eccl. i. 4.

But we see that man, as he is at present constituted, does not abide forever. "He is of few days and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower and is cut down: he fleeth also like a shadow and continueth not." Job xiv. 1, 2. How does this come?—we ask. Because sin is in the world, and "sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." "The wages of sin is death." "There is none that is righteous." "Death has passed through to all men, for that all have sinned." Now, it is plain that man in this condition is not fitted to be the sovereign of God's creation whereon [illegible] But God has provided a way for man to become once more a righteous being through the Redeemer, in whom he is to have faith; and in this way man is not only to be justified as to the sins that are in the past, but is to obtain the ability to live forever. Then will he be able to exercise those prerogatives God intended for him to use.

The Word of God tells him (man) what to do to this end. "Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed.....Those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth .....The meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace,.....The Lord knoweth the days of the upright: and their inheritance shall be forever .....For such as shall be blessed of him shall inherit the earth.....The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever.....Wait on the Lord and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land." Psa. xxxvii. 3, 9, 11, 18, 22, 29, 34. "The upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it." Prov. ii. 21. "The righteous shall never be removed: but the wicked shall not inherit the earth." Prov. x. 30.

At last, when sin is weeded out, and its results overcome, "all the earth shall be filled with the glory of God." Num. xiv. 21. The place of God's feet is to be made "glorious." Isa. lx. 13. And the glory of the Lord is to cover the earth, as the waters cover the deep. Then will the great Maker of the earth again contemplate his work, and his delights will be with the sons of men; when "the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them and be their God." When he shall have "made all things new." Amen! Be it even so.

A. H. ZIEMER.

Short Sermons. No. 21.

"But now are they holy." 1 Cor. vii. 14. This is a conclusion from certain premises, a result of certain conditions. The conditions are these, the oneness and harmony of man and wife, God's original design. The gospel finds them in nature's darkness. One believes and obeys and is free from past sins, and can look up to God and call him Father. The other one can not as yet see the love and beauty in God's plan of salvation. The believer must be patient and very consistent, and thus in word and deed throw light around the one behind. And thus by an earnest, upright and consistent life they can and may help them to see the way to life, and thus by their good influence constrain them to come out from the world, and take their place by the side of their true helper, on the Lord's side. And thus, in this way the believer can and may sanctify—make sacred or holy the one who had been an unbeliever. In this way the true believer becomes a helper and worker with God. And why not, if they be a true Christian—a child of God by faith? This grand and glorious result being attained this oneness between man and wife now effected, they no longer pull apart like treacherous oxen, but are now one, in Christ and co-workers together with him. Thus their influence for good will be far greater and stronger than it was before. And their offspring under these conditions will not be unclean, but will in a sense be unholy. The oneness as God designed it, and as really exists between him and his beloved Son, being now found between man and wife. And the good influence flowing from this oneness and harmony between man and wife in all their thoughts and actions can hardly fail to stamp the divine impress upon their children, born and unborn. The influence on the unborn is most wonderful to relate, while the influence on those born, when they can see papa and mamma living together as two innocent loving kittens, will in a majority of cases cause them to be good and holy men and women. Am I in the right?

T. E. ADAMS.

Genesis. Chap. 28.

1. And Isaak summoned Jakoob and blessed him, and commanded him saying, Do not take a wife from among the daughters of the Chananaites.

2. Arise and run away into Mesopotamia unto the house of Bathouel, thy mother's father and take for thyself therefrom a wife from among the daughters of Laban thy mother's brother.

3. And may my God have blessed thee and increased thee and multiplied thee, and thou wilt be in synagogues of nations.

4. And may he have given thee the blessing of Habraam, my father, thee and thy seed after thee, to inherit the land of thy sojourning, which God gave unto Habraam.

5. And Isaak sent Jakoob away, and he went his way into Mesopotamia unto Laban the son of Bathouel the Surian (the Syrian C. V.) brother of Hrebekka, the mother of Jakoob and Heesau.

6. And Heesau saw that Isaak had blessed Jakoob and sent him away into Mesopotamia of Suria to take for himself a wife therefrom in his blessing him; and had commanded him saying, Do not take a wife from among the daughters of the Chananaites;

7. And that Jakoob had obeyed his father and mother and had gone his way into Mesopotamia of Suria.

8. And when Heesau saw that the daughters of the Chananaites were wicked in the sight of Isaak, his father.

9. Heesau went his way to Ismael, and took for a wife Maleth, a daughter of Ismael the son of Habraam, a sister of Nabeooth in addition to the wives he had.

10. And Jakoob went out from the Well of the Oath and went his way into Charrau.

11. And arrived at a place and lay down to sleep there; for the sun had set; and he took from the stones of the place and placed at his head, and lay down to sleep in that place.

12. And he dreamed, and lo, a stairway, firmly fixed in the earth, whose top reached into the heavens, and the angels of God were ascending and descending upon it.

13. And the Lord stood upon it and said, I am the God of Habraam, thy father and the God of Isaak, fear not. The land upon which thou art sleeping I am going to give to thee and thy seed.

14. And thy seed will be as the sand of the earth, and it will have been enlarged to the west and the south and the north and the east, and all the tribes of the earth will have been blessed in thee and in thy seed.

15. And lo, I am with thee to watch to guard thee through every way on which thou mayest go; and I shall return thee into this land because I shall not forsake thee until I have done unto thee all the things I have told thee.

16. And Jakoob awoke from his sleep and said, The Lord is in this place and I did not know it.

17. And he was afraid and said, How fearful is this place; this is none other than the house of God, and this is the gateway of the heavens.

18. And Jakoob arose at dawn and took the stone which he had placed there at his head, and stood it for a votive pillar, and poured olive-oil upon the top of it.

19. And he called the name of that place God's house; and the former name of the city was Oulamlouz.

20. And Jakoob vowed a vow saying, If the Lord God be with me, and doth watch to guard me through this way on which I am going, and doth give me bread to eat and outer-clothing to put on,

21. And shall return me with safety to the house of my father, the Lord shall be my God.

22. And this stone, which I have stood for a votive-pillar shall be my God's house; and of all things which thou mayest give me, a tenth will I tithe for thee.

COMMENT.

2nd verse reads "Paddanaram"—R. V. Greek reads "Mesopotamia."

3rd verse R. V. reads "God Almighty." Greek reads "my God."

"A company of peoples" R. V. also reads "in synagogues of nations."

4th verse R. V. omits "my father."

9th verse R. V. has "Mahalath" for "Marleth" and "Nebaioth for "Nabeooth." This first name "Mareleth" appears again in the 52nd (53d C. V.) Psalm—in the heading or first verse and is very significant—in fact is the key to the interpretation of the psalm.

10th verse R. V. has "Bursheba" instead of "the Well of the Oath."

12th verse R. V. has "ladder" instead of "stair-case." This is too crude an idea—the angels climbing a ladder.

13th verse R. V. says "the Lord stood above it," should read "stood upon it," R. V. also omits "Fear not."

14th verse R. V. has "families" instead of "tribes."

15th verse R. V. has "keep thee" instead of "to watch to guard thee through."

18 "Olive-oil" instead of "oil" merely R. V. and "votive-pillar" instead of "pillar" merely R. V.

19th verse R. V. has "Bethel" where it is "God's house" in the Greek and "Luz" where it is "Oulamous."

The vow referred to in the 20th ver. is of course the one signalized by the setting up of the votive-pillar.

In the 21st verse R. V. has "peace" instead of "safety" in the text, which proved to be the true state of things when he did return. He returned with safety; but he hadn't much peace about that time either behind or before him or while he was wrestling with the angel.

The Suffering Messiah in the Old Testament.

To Jew and Christian alike the Old Testament is an authoritative source of truth. In it we hear God's voice solemnly speaking, and it becomes us to listen with all reverence.

The Old Testament is many things: History, poetry, prophecy. But all its teachings culminate in the doctrine of the Messiah. If we do not understand that, we do not understand the Old Testament at all.

The Messiah is considered from many points of view in those sacred writings, and it would take a long treatise to cover the whole subject. The purpose of this paper is to consider simply the suffering of the Messiah. That he, the King of kings and Lord of lords, should suffer, leads us to suspect in advance that as his suffering is the most singular so it is likely in the end to appear the most important element in his experience.

To understand the Old Testament teachings about the Messiah we must remember that the whole ritualistic system of the Jews was Messianic, and that the chief thing about that system was sacrifice—the suffering of a victim, even to death, for the sins of its owner. If we moderns could look in upon the ancient temple service we should be struck most by the vast number of animals going to death. Most of that service was killing, and its most noticeable character was blood. What did it all mean? We can see these facts outstanding there clearly: sin recognized, man offering a sacrifice, a life given, God satisfied. It is needless to say that all this was but a symbol. No intelligent Jew could think that the blood of bulls and goats could cleanse away the guilt of the human soul. What did all this bloodsprinkling typify? The perfect sacrifice which should one day be given, not as a type but as something efficient in itself. That sacrifice was given on Calvary. There all the symbolical sacrifices received their fulfilment. There once for all an offering was made capable of taking away the world's sin, when the Messiah, Son of God and Son of Man, rendered up his soul in holy passion and death for the guilt of humanity.

Besides this general prediction of suffering in the Messiah, contained in the Jewish sacrificial system, there are in the Old Testament five great prophecies (or groups of prophecies) of the suffering Messiah.

The first is contained in Gen. iii. 15, in the words of the Lord God to the serpent: "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." This is certainly vague, yet it gives us thus much: that in history there shall be an undying strife between the human race and the great spirit of evil, that the seed of the woman shall get the better in this struggle (for the serpent's head shall be bruised), but that the victory shall be only at the cost of suffering (the bruised heel). No doubt this refers to the human race as a whole, including God's chosen people, but also including the Messiah, who is representative of both the Jew and humanity at large. It was plain enough, therefore, from the very beginning of prophecy, that when the Messiah should come he should suffer.

The second great passage is Deut. xviii. 18-19, the words of the Lord to Moses: "I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him." It is possible that this promise meant from time to time all through the history of his people, God would raise up prophets to perpetuate his truth. But the passage also hints at more than this. It suggests that there should be one great prophet, greater than all others. He should be the Messiah, and he should be like unto Moses as a prophet. Moses is generally thought of as a law giver and leader and scarcely as a prophet. Nevertheless at Sinai, when he received the will of God, he may fairly be called such. But what kind of a prophet was he then? A prophet who suffered intensely for the people, and who went so far as to offer himself to God to die instead of the people who had sinned. If the Messiah were to be a prophet like Moses, evidently he must suffer for the sins of the people.

In the third place, we have in the Psalms a group of passages, necessarily Messianic, which carry the idea of suffering in them. They are found in Psalms xxii., xl., lxix. and lxx. The experiences pictured in these Psalms may have had their first suggestion in the actual experiences of individuals among God's people, and also in experiences of God's people as a whole. Yet so intense are they in their delineation of the suffering servant of Jehovah, that it is plain that no experience of God's people or of any individuals among them could be supposed to fully exhaust their meaning. To be fulfilled, they waited for a deeper suffering such as no Jew and not even the afflicted people as a whole had ever known. They waited for him who was to be the servant of servants of Jehovah, the Messiah himself. It is singular how many of the sufferings of Jesus exactly fulfilled the descriptive details of these Messianic Psalms.

The fourth passage is the liii. of Isa. There the great Servant of Jehovah is seen plunged into the very depths of woe. One ignominy and torture is heaped upon another, until the picture becomes the most awful spectacle of undeserved pain known to the human mind. No individual among the Jews ever suffered so. The Jewish people as a whole never suffered so. Only the Messiah himself, humbling himself to be beaten with many stripes, not on his own account, but on behalf of his people, only he could fulfill this dreadful prophecy.

The fifth and last passage is Zech. xiii. 7, concerning the smitten shepherd. Other shepherds of Israel come and go, fulfilling their office, until at last the great Shepherd comes, whom God calls "gebor, i. e., a hero, my shepherd," and "my fellow." He is the Messiah. And what is his fate? God himself enlists the sword against him. He came from God, and it is God's will that he should suffer.

The idea of success through triumph is as superficial as the commonest career of the most ordinary of the brutal conquerors of history. But the idea of success through defeat is of God. Verily, his ways are not our ways, nor are his thoughts our thoughts. The world has had many poetical pictures of a divine king, but he has been depicted in the vulgar way as merely the master of greater armies and the devastator of wider areas than others. It remained to God's ancient people to give us the picture of a divine king, one who triumphed by love, who gained his glorious victory through suffering on behalf of others.

That was the most spiritual, most moving and most heavenly picture which came out of ancient thought. It had its fulfilment in a Jew, whose sufferings have done more to purify and elevate the world than the most splendid of antique civilizations. Jesus died, and in dying won a throne. He suffered as no one ever before or since suffered, and his sufferings made it plain that he was the Messiah, foretold in prophecy, come to redeem the world from sin.—The People, The Land, and The Book.

Empty hours, empty hands, empty companions, empty words, empty hearts draw in evil spirits, as a vacuum draws in air. To be occupied with good is the best defense against the inroads of evil.—William Arnot.

"No young man need worry about his subsistance who has the spirit of honest industry in him. The foundations of temporal prosperity are laid in that body in which a lazy bone is not to be found."

We have sent out a large number of letters the past week to some of those who are back on their subscriptions. We trust each one will take notice of our need, and attend to their renewal without further trouble to us. If your time is out certainly you know it, and we ask you to help us by sending the amount necessary at this time.

What a horrible betrayal of Christ has been the history of churches of sects.

"Use not many words in a multitude of elders, and make not much babbling when thou prayest. Eccl. vii. 14.

"He who knows the half speaks much, and is always wrong; he who knows the whole inclines to act, and speaks seldom and late," says Goethe.

"The Spirit of Christ is a zealous disposition to carry out the will of God; a spirit of meekness and submission to evil in the execution of that will, and an unostentatious, but courageous confession of God before a deriding generation of evil doers."

To neglect or misinterpret the principles and doctrines of Scripture as expressed in plain language, or to assume that these are known, and then go to the parables to expound them on such a basis, or the want of it, applying every detail to this theory or that, or extracting the theory from the parable alone is like the man that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way; the same is a thief and a robber."

For A. C., we believe and teach that women stand on an equality of spiritual relationship. In Christ there is neither male nor female, (Gal. iii. 28,) and throughout the New Testament we find women occupying an honorable and useful place in the ministration of the gospel. The public government of the affairs of the household of faith was entrusted to men, and a certain subordination of necessity followed. But the sisters were fellow heirs with brethren of the favor of life, and abundant opportunities were given them for co-operation in the common work of holding forth the word of salvation.

By turning to the Bible to ascertain what man is,—among many other things, that man is of the dust—mortal and dying; and unless he is brought within the circle of God's purpose by association with God's Son, he is like the beasts that perish, and of no more value than they in the sight of heaven in spite of his great achievements and the grandeur of his works. He perishes,—mingles again with the dust,—his whole nature unsatisfied, because of his non-acceptance of the conditions of salvation. Hear what the Psalmist says, xlix. 12, "Man that is in honor and understandeth not is like the beasts that perish. Like sheep they are laid in the grave,—death shall feed on them, and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning."

It was one of the pleasures that come to us to be enabled to attend the dedication services at the new church house of the brethren at Inwood, Ind., on Sunday July 14. The house is small, but sufficient for the place at present, and is located in a convenient place. It is plain and neat, nicely papered walls, and furnished with comfortable seats. The small number (only about a dozen) of brethren and sisters have been diligent in their labors to build up an organization at this place, and should be congratulated on their success so far. That their efforts will be blessed is sure, because they are working for God and truth. Bro. F. L. Austin preached for them Saturday evening and Brother A. H. Zilmer spoke three times on Sunday. After the forenoon meeting all went to the home of Bro. Wm. Klingerman where dinner had been prepared for all. The weather was very warm, but the interest was good, and the meeting was in every way one of profit and pleasure. All who can do so should aid financially and otherwise this struggling organization. They have Sunday school every Sunday, and are thoroughly in earnest.

"Exhort one another daily." Heb. iii. 13. This is not a text solely for speaking brethren, as it has sometimes taken to be, but belongs to those who have no power of publicutterance. It belongs to sisters as well as brethren, and is to be carried out in private conversation."

Miracles and Fixed Law.

The following is an extract from S. Bache's "Miracles the Credentials of the Christ."

"Here on earth we are under fixed will, and our normal state. The reason is that in no other way would it be possible for us to acquaint ourselves with the physical agencies around us, or to employ those agencies as our Creator has manifestly intended that we should employ them, for the accomplishment of our own intelligent plans, with a view to our comfort, improvement, and enjoyment as inhabitants of the world in which we live. Were the moral certainty and immutability of the law of gravitation, for example, destroyed no projects or works of human device with a view to outward and material benefit, could be reasonably contemplated or begun, because the very foundation of all physical stability would be destroyed, and we might as well attempt to erect our houses on ground heaving and yawning with the throes of an earthquake, as to erect them on any ground deprived of this essential warrant of its stability, and with materials themselves destitute of all reliable cohesion of particles. Accordingly this fixed will never has been, never is, and perhaps never will be generally or wholly subverted. Miracles did not thus subvert it; they only in what were comparatively a very few instances, and for a very important special purpose, interrupted it. During the entire ministry of Christ the stability of the earth and of its several parts and elements was normally inviolate.....Nor can anything be more reasonable than to imagine that the gracious Father of our spirits has so bound and imprisoned himself within physical laws—laws which he maintains and observes not for his own sake, but simply for the purpose of enabling his dependent children to discover and apply physical agencies—as that he should be unable to communicate directly with his children on interests which infinitely transcend those agencies, and which no discovery or application of the laws by which those agencies are regulated could ever enable them to discern or prosecute. If it be the power of every human parent to communicate immediately with his children by direct interchanges of thought and affection, why should the same be impossible with God?"

Mis-Interpreters of Scripture.

We recently met with a paragraph respecting one "Rica," who, having visited the library of a French convent, writes thus to a friend in Persia:

"Father," said I to the librarian, "What are those volumes which fill the whole side of the library?" "These," said he, "are the interpreters of the Scriptures." "There is a prodigious number of them," replied I, "The Scriptures must have been very dark, formerly, and very clear now. Do there remain still any doubts? Are there now any points contested?" "Are there," answered he with surprise, "Are there?" "There are almost as many as there are lines." "What, then, have all these authors been doing?" "These authors," returned he, "never searched the Scripture for what ought to be believed, but for what they did themselves, believe. They did not consider them as a book wherein were contained the doctrines which they ought to receive, but as a work which might be made to authorize their own ideas. For this reason they have corrupted all the meanings, and have put every passage to the torture to make it speak their own sense. It is a country wherein people of all sects make invasions, and go for pillage; it is a field of battle wherein, when hostile nations meet, they engage, attack, and skirmish in a thousand different ways." The above may perhaps be somewhat highly colored, but still represents with fair justice the tendency of sectarian disputes.

"There are joys which long to be ours. God sends ten thousand truths, which come about us like birds seeking inlet: but we are shut up to them, and so they bring us nothing, but sit and sing a while upon the roof and then fly away."

When you are an anvil, hold you still; when you are a hammer strike your fill.—George Herbert.

Conference Report

Dear Restitution:

I enclose the report of the Northwest Annual Conference of the Church of God, which convened at Lake Shore near Vancouver, Wash., on June 21, 1901. This was one of the most successful ever held; all was harmony and brotherly love and every one had an enjoyable time.

The program was as follows:

Friday at 8 P. M. we listened to an able and instructive sermon by Bro. E. E. Groat.

Sat. 10: 00 A. M. Social meeting at which all responded by giving encouraging remarks of the past and bright hopes of the future. At 11:00 our regular Evangelist W. L. Skeels, preached a good sermon. At 2:30 P. M. business meeting was called to order by Vice President W. Jaquith. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Then came the reports of the ministers, also the reports of the churches in different localities. After this letters from Walker Perrine of Wenatchee, and M. L. Adams of Corvallis were read in which they asked for letters of commendation and stating that they could not attend conference.

The following ministers were granted letters:—Walker Perrine of Wenatchee, W. L. Skeels, W. A. Prosser and E. E. Groat, of Scholls, Oregon.

The conference refused to grant letters to M. L. Adams on the ground that he did not agree with the other ministers and the church in general on the thousand years reign of Christ. The conference then voted to allow the conference committee to grant letters to ministers known to be of our faith, and who come well recommended by their churches.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, P. G. Woolf, Vancouver, Wash.

Vice President, C. H. Belshaw, Eugene, Oregon.

Secretary, W. J. Byham, Vancouver, Wash.

Treasurer, W. W. Jaquith, Scholls, Oregon.

Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock there was a social meeting which was well attended. At 11:00, preaching by W. L. Skeels, followed by the Lord's Supper.

1:00 P. M. Basket dinner.

2:30 preaching by W. A. Prosser and at 8:00 P. M. our conference closed with a sermon by Bro. E. E. Groat.

Those who attended conference returned to their homes pleased with the result and feeling much good had been accomplished for the cause of Christ.

Your's in the hope,
W. J. Byham, Sec'y.

What is Christian Science?

There is nothing "Christian" in this new cult, and there is surely nothing of "science." The hopeless, glaring, supreme inconsistency of Christian Scientists in denying the existence of matter, and yet eating to keep their bodies alive; their insistence upon dollars as tangible forms of thought; their demands for money to build temples of brick and stone, all of which are imaginary, suggest mental conditions of an extraordinary type. Their denial of the fact of sin makes the coming of Christ a mockery, overthrows the whole plan of redeeming grace, repudiates utterly the work of the Holy Spirit, and removes from the Bible everything of coherence and meaning. And yet they claim to be Christians! It would not be possible for absurdity, inconsistency, and even blasphemy to reach greater lengths. The only possible solution is the unbalanced mental condition of those who are sincere, and the remorseless, unscrupulous advantage which is taken of these conditions.—Christian Advocate.

It is evident that when Jesus had a day of crisis or of difficult duty before him, he gave himself to prayer. Would it not simplify our difficulties if we attacked them in the same way? It would infinitely increase the intellectual insight with which we try to penetrate a problem, and the power of the hand we lay upon duty. The wheels of existence would move far more smoothly, and our purposes travel more surely to their aims, if every morning we review beforehand the duties of the day with God.—James Stalker, D. D.

What is Revealed Concerning the Future Life?

Thanks to God, death does not end all. The gates of the grave have indeed been so fast shut from the beginning, that they have come to be spoken of as a bourne whence no traveller returns, but this has not been literally true. Travellers who have passed within the gloomy portals have come back, and to the abiding joy of the Christian heart the greatest of all travellers has returned, and is alive for evermore. It is because of this great fact that we can observe without dismay the ever closer approach of the last enemy, whose terrors retreat before the prospect of that eternal deliverance and rest that remaineth to the people of God. We are confident that as our Lord and Master has risen again, so shall we also be raised to live for ever with him.

It is remarkable, and yet not so strange at first sight it seems, how comparatively slight is the common interest taken in the prospect and details of a future life, so far as these are revealed. This is observable even amongst those who with Christian confidence expect it. The present existence is the gift of God and is precious to us, with its absorbing interests and duties, and as the plane on which our probation rests its issue, but that ought not to find us quite content with a confessedly indistinct idea of the conditions of a future state of being, satisfied to believe that we shall share in it when it comes, and even showing ourselves averse to any closer view, under the impression that as little is revealed about it, it is almost wrong to inquire into the matter lest we err in presuming to be wise above what is written.

This is not the spirit in which we view any great change of locality and circumstances which may happen to us now. On the contrary, we are eager to know what we can about the distant or foreign land and people we desire to go to. So I think we might, with all legitimate earnestness, seek to be at least wise up to what is written regarding that better country and life which we hope to inherit and enjoy, without abating a jot of our duty to that which is present and clamant.

I purposely pass without comment, in this inquiry, anything relating to what is known by common consent to be distinguished as "the intermediate state," i. e, the period between death and resurrection.

The literature of the subject is now extensive, and opinion upon it is widely varied, even amongst those who are in complete agreement upon "Conditional Immortality," or life only in Christ.

The life to come, which shall engage our present attention, will be that beginning with the resumption of an embodied condition at the resurrection. When, therefore, we ask the question: What can be known of the life to come? we refer to that state, and turn to the only source whence sure light on so deeply interesting a matter can come—the Holy Scriptures which reveal it.

Our Lord has arisen from the dead and "become the first fruits" of them who sleep, and I assume that in this case, as in the natural world, the first fruits are the same in kind as the harvest shall be. As the Lord rose, so shall our rising or change be, "fashioned like unto his own glorious body." Phil. iii. 21. When he came forth from death he made life and immortality visible to mortal eyes, and the record of that we happily possess. Let us turn to the contemplation of its strange eventful history. We have many of its marvellous details recorded, and as in these we have without the smallest doubt very much that touches, and shall coincide with our own future condition, the whole post-resurrectional period of Christ's life, between his rising and his ascension, presents a study of absorbing interest to us, whence we may draw information of the greatest personal concern. What then can we learn from it?

In the first place it is abundantly clear that the new life, the resurrection life, begins by the resumption of a bodily form, as real and objective as that which perished and dissolved in death. While, however, to all appearance—for want of a better term—it is material, in the sense that it can be seen and handled, and has many of the characteristics of the ordinary human body, it is yet essentially different in its nature, and the quality of its powers and endowments. It is no longer weak and fugitive, but powerful and everlasting. It is no more "natural," but "spiritual." So far, we know the former of these intimately, but of the latter nothing experimentally yet.

The first appearance of our resurrected Lord was to Mary in the garden, in the guise of an ordinary human being, speaking in an ordinary audible voice, clothed in what seemed ordinary raiment, and altogether so like an ordinary man at the time, that she mistook him at first for the gardener, and yet this was the Lord of glory standing before her in the deathless, spiritual body. Here at the first glance given of a new state of being, which in itself was altogether strange, there was nothing which struck the eye as strange. The familiar features of humanity were exhibited on this as on some subsequent occasions, but as we shall also find, these were capable of being either chosen or laid aside at will. I leave aside all speculative attempts to explain how "spiritual" garments can exist, and similar questions. Sufficient that they do apparently exist. The angels at the tomb were clothed, and so were all other spiritual presences which appeared on the earth, and I am content to note the fact.

The appearance and speech of Jesus at this interview were such as to subsequently lead to a distinct recognition of him, clearly showing that we also shall carry with us into the life to come the tokens of that individuality to which we are here accustomed. But in this matter, as in some other respects, it would be unwise to conclude more than we have reasonable warrant for.

Departure from the fixed configuration of being; which to us in present circumstances is impossible, is apparently a gift or property of the new life. Is it the appearance can be veiled, or changed, or made invisible. It was so in our Lord's case; at one time offering quite a usual aspect, and again showing an investiture of glory; with "his countenance as the sun shining in his strength."

Exercising an intelligent apprehension of exceptional features pertaining to our Lord's exaltation, it is yet ours to learn with gladness that "even as we have borne the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." This likeness is something more than simply a moral resemblance, because it refers to spiritual being or constitution, in contrast to the natural body, and so the image of the heavenly awaits us, when we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. 1 John iii. 2.

This anticipation of a substantial yet transcendent spiritual state of existence to come, while offering an inexhaustible prospect of glory and joy, is at the same time characterized, as we have seen, by features of life and happiness already familiar to us, and deeply interwoven with our best appreciation of what constitutes existence from God. This feeling has been so eloquently and forcibly expressed by Dr. Chalmers in his "Astronomical Discourses" that I cannot refrain from a short quotation. He is referring to the popular conception of a future state as being deficient in nearly all that appeals to the heart and mind of an ordinary humanity, and says:—"The common imagination that we have of paradise on the other side of death is that of a lofty aerial region, where the inmates float in ether, or are mysteriously suspended upon nothing—where all the warm and sensible accompaniments which give such an expression of strength, and life, and coloring to our present habitation are attenuated into a sort of spiritual element that is meagre and imperceptible, and utterly uninviting to the eye of mortals here below—where every vestige of materialism is done away, and nothing left but certain unearthly scenes that have no power of enjoyment, and certain unearthly ecstacies, with which it is felt impossible to sympathize." From such a colorless and unreal picture of future bliss we gladly turn to the warmer positive atmosphere of the gospel narratives, where a real ground exists on which to found a sure hope of that which is both spiritual and substantial. As this new life will be enjoyed in a new body, so shall it have a fitting glorious home in the splendor of the new heavens and the new earth wherein shall dwell righteousness. But our immediate topic is the new life, rather than the home in which it is to be spent, so that we continue the contemplation of our risen Lord.

It was a sad walk into the country the disciples were having when Jesus made up to them on the way, and joined in their conversation. Luke xxiv. 17. He did not make himself discernible to them at first, but simply approached them as a stranger. We have two reasons or explanations given for this. Mark tells us, after describing his appearance to Mary, that "He appeared in another form unto two of them as they walked." If this "form" was not familiar to the disciples, of course they would not know it was the Lord who spoke to them. Luke puts the matter in another way, which, however, may either be an additional reason or mean the same thing in other words. He says "their eyes were holden that they should not know him." In any case, here were abnormal or spiritual forces exercised. Jesus in the spiritual body could change or veil his appearance, and so close the ordinary sight to recognition of him, that he would seem to be a stranger. Either or both of these things are fairly understandable from the evangelists. But remarkable as they were, these were but the prelude to a still more strange and startling demonstration of the spiritual body. He accompanied them into the house, and while he sat at meat with them, their eyes were suddenly opened to know who their august guest was, and in that moment of recognition "he vanished out of their sight." The place he occupied was suddenly vacant. The objective bodily presence had become invisible to mortal eyes, and they were left alone, left in a state of extreme wonder and amazement. We perhaps can scarcely apprehend how much they were agitated at this following of one marvel so close upon another. The hurry of their return to Jerusalem again to tell the wonderful tidings plainly speaks of their great excitement over it.

After this there proceeded frequent unfoldings and manifestations of the powers and capabilities of the spiritual state, and unless we are prepared to affirm that the body of our Lord is not to be thought of like to that we are promised, we can with good reason predicate the same or similar powers, as were here shown, for that wherewith we will also be clothed when the day of our transformation has come, and we find ourselves among the congregation of the immortals.

Shortly after the above incidents, the eleven are described as sitting at meat together. Luke xxiv. Their meeting was apparently a private one, held in secret with closed doors for fear of molestation by the Jews, and it is especially mentioned in connection that the doors were shut, made fast, showing the trepidation of the gathering, for it was not at all customary in Palestine to be particular about closing house doors. They very commonly stood open, but here they were fast shut, and the fact is no doubt particularized in order to give due effect to the relation of the awe-inspiring incident which then took place. In the circumstances named, and without warning, the Lord Jesus in visible form suddenly stood in their midst, and gave them gracious salutation—"Peace be unto you!" No wall, nor door, nor barrier of material build can either hold in durance, or keep out, the presence of the spiritual being. The angel of the Lord came into the dungeon of Peter (Acts xii. 7) —all guards, and triple doors, and chains notwithstanding, just as if they did not exist. So here, with similar facility, a spiritual presence passes through all material obstacles and stands again embodied in the midst of the eleven disciples. Their astonishment is described in such terms as to convey without any doubt, I think, the supernatural character of the entrance which Jesus had made into their assembly. "They were terrified and affrighted, and supposed they had seen a spirit." This perturbation was entirely natural on the understanding that the event was supernatural. They had indeed seen a spirit, though not that which they had at first supposed, and presently they became so calm in the Lord's presence that their first terror was dissipated in an excess of joy. What their common idea of a "spirit" was may not have been much different from that which is common now, for God himself in allying their fear expresses exactly their conception—"A spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have." In saying this he gives an emphatic assurance, it will be perceived, that he was really truly at that moment in an embodied form. The character of this language leaves no alternative. We cannot yet understand the nature of the new or spiritual body nor the nature of these "powers of the world to come," which he exhibited, for now we only "see through a glass darkly, but then face to face."

Australian Letter. No. 8.

CHRISTMAS IN N. S. W.

After a stay of six months in Newcastle, on December twenty-fourth, we returned to Sydney for the holidays, in order to be present at some of the exercises connected with the new Commonwealth.

The ride of one hundred and two miles is a very pleasant one at this season of the year. It was particularly interesting at this time.

Everything in nature seemed to join the air of expectancy that was written on the faces of the country people thronging the platforms and filling the compartments of the railway carriages to overflowing.

The dull lifeless green of the Australian bush put on a brighter tint; the gnarled and twisted trunks of the gum trees smoothed their ghoul-like wrinkles into the semblance of a smile.

As we wound along the course of the picturesque Hawkesbury, paused to view the magnificent scene from its famous bridge, dashed through miles of tunnels under the low-lying mountains, or whirled steadily over long stretches of solitary bush, all the conversation was directed toward the coming festivities.

The young people, bouyant with life and full of the enjoyment of the hour were chattering about the promised pageantry and sports; while their elders were quietly discussing the political and industrial advantages attending the new order of things.

But I purposed to speak of Christmas and like every one else allowed thoughts of the New Year's Day and the New Century to overshadow the anniversary of a new dispensation.

Our wayward thoughts are recalled to the day by the cry of the boys on the platform, "Christmas Lilies! Christmas Bush! threpunce (three pence) a bunch!"

We think, Can it be Christmas? when we see the soft, delicate flush on the clump of Christmas Bushes that fringe the way and now and then get a glimpse of the stately stalk of golden red Christmas Lily.

Each station adds to our wealth until the compartment is soon a bower of ferns, flowers and pink branches. The hat racks are filled with huge bouquets of luxuriant roses, on their way to the city carrying a message of love. A very pretty custom prevails, that of taking a bouquet or basket of flowers when making a visit to relatives or friends.

When we reached Redfern Station it was Christmas eve, the time we should have been going to the Christmas Tree had we been in the northern hemisphere. But no holly and mistletoe mingled with the flags and bunting with which the city was decorated. In fact had we heard a few fire-crackers it would have completely confirmed the impression that we were celebrating the fourth of July. This feeling was deepened as we noted that the Stars and Stripes were so freely interwoven with the British Stand ard and Union Jack.

The streets were filled with happy people going to hear Grand Opera, to Concerts, and Literary and Religious Exercises.

Traditions and customs from English homes still cling to the people even in this Southern land, but they must be modified to suit the altered conditions and change of season and climate.

Santa Claus with his fur-coat, warm robes, with icicles on his beard would be ridiculous rather than otherwise to an Australian child when the thermometer is nearing the hundredth degree and scarcely enough ice can be obtained to cool a goblet of water. He is frequently pictured with an ivy wreath in his long white hair, and clothed in long flowing airy robes with a girdle about the waist.

The reindeer is an anomoly in a city where snow never falls. These legends and myths of ye olden time he views as such but they have no real force or place for him in his Christmas celebration. He relegates them purely to the realm of the imagination. But do not waste sympathy with him. Though the Australian child is less fanciful than his northern cousin he enjoys himself quite as well.

His picnic, fishing, swimming, boating and athletic sports fill him with as much interest as his Anglo Saxon ancestor with his yule tide and magic mistletoe. As to Christmas trees he lives in a land of perpetual evergreens.

Christmas Day dawned bright and beautiful. The chimes on the Cathedrals called to worship and a true celebration of the anniversary. All shops and other places of business were closed. The trams, suburban trains and excursion boats were laden with merry picnic parties of families and friends, going to the numerous bays, islands, parks, and retreats with which the environs of Sydney abound.

The little tots with tiny pails and shovels told us that a goodly number would enjoy the day on the ocean beach.

Hotels, cafes and restaurants were dressed in holiday attire. Festoons of wild fig leaves relieved by the pink leaf-like flowers of the Christmas bush were suspended from windows and ceiling, while huge bouquets of lillies and roses adorned the tables in profusion.

The smiling waiters had for once exchanged their monotonous black dresses, white pinafores and limp cotton string which is pinned to the back hair as a sign of servitude, in favor of dainty white muslins and gay ribbons.

As to the dinner, we had all that you had with the possibility of some dishes not on your menu card—did you have kangaroo tail soup, or jugged walloby?

The afternoon we spent in the Botanical Gardens, among the flowers, animals and birds. We had to tell ourselves again and again that it was Christmas time. The sun lingered long in the heavens as if loth to shorten the day's enjoyment. We strolled slowly home in the mellow, mild Summer twilight.

We completed an ideal day by hearing "The Messiah" rendered in the Town Hall by the "Sydney Philharmonic Club" and went to sleep with the grand strains of the hallelujah chorus still ringing in our ears.

BOXING DAY.

Boxing Day,—the twenty-sixth of December, is the holiday more nearly resembling our Christmas than the twenty-fifth.

It is a public holiday, all trade being prohibited. It is the day allotted to home and family gatherings. On this day presents and complimentary greetings are exchanged.

Amid the general happiness and good will the poor are not forgotten. Many humble homes are made to rejoice by a substantial remembrance. For charity thrives in this warm-hearted people, and emotions of pity have been transplanted with memories of the yule log and winter fires in old English homes.

The government made a special effort at this time in favor of the unemployed, by giving them work on government lands.

I may add in parenthesis that only a few accepted it because it meant banishment from the celebrations.

They preferred to chance the crumbs that fell rather than boil the billy can in the solitary Australian wilds. Perhaps there is more music in the Scottish bag-pipes than the screech of the cockatoo.

The "Christmas Box," may be a box, or anything else but a box. The sending of cards, tasteful and inexpensive is quite universal. Simply to remind your friends of your existence once a year.

This year many appropriate designs and sentiments embodying the idea of the New Commonwealth were interwoven with the Christmas Greeting.

Christmas in the past, all attention was directed to the coming celebration. Each day added to the throng of people and to the intensity of feeling. "The busy notes of preparation were heard on every side. Arches, festoons, flags and mural decorations sprang into life as if by magic."

One could wander about all day sure, at every turn, to happen upon something quaint and interesting.

Gazing into shop windows was not a fruitless occupation, since they were filled with works of art and treasures from all over the world.

Gazing at those who were also gazing was not less entertaining.

Comments and snatches of conversation some intelligible only through the accompanying gestures, added to the strangeness.

On one side might be heard the soft sybilent voices of the Indian officers, while from the other came the harsh, deep accent of the Gaelic tongue. Visiting the soldiers in their barracks afforded an opportunity of becoming acquainted with their every day routine and learning the significance of the different uniforms.

Practice with firearms, pontoons, telegraph and medical appliances gave us an insight into the deadly art which has become a science during this departed century.

Of course every one must make a visit to the Art Gallery to see the ormolu table, silver inkstand, and quill pen, used by the Queen in signing the Federation Act, afterward presented to the Federal Parliament.

The illuminations at night converted the city into a scene of magnificent splendor. The defects of dinginess and gaudiness of the day were covered by the friendly shadows.

The parks and gardens were a fairy land. The lights bordering the beds of flowers and gleaming among the green branches of the trees made a picture so rare that it gave one the feeling that it must be only of "such stuff as dreams are made of." Hundreds lay upon the velvet sward, drinking in the laziness of the hour, while other hundreds more energetic were over in the Domain, where nightly an open air concert was in progress.

The rasping sound of the bag pipes mingled with the lusty cheering as some favorite showed unusual skill at the Irish jig or the Highland fling.

For the lovers of athletic sports there was cricket, swimming, rowing, cycling, racing and all sorts of match games, so they said.

For the lovers of the stage, the theaters were overflowing afternoon and night. There were pantomines, plays and tableaux composed for the occasion. Then there was Mr. Musgrove's Grand Opera with Lohengrin, and Carmen on the program.

In the churches and numerous halls, the higher and better phases were not forgotten. Fervent sermons were preached and earnest prayers were offered for "United Australia."

Instructive lectures were given on the various phases of the New Commonwealth.

Amid all this busy whirl of things the week passed and New Years Eve was upon us.

MRS. PHEBE THOMPSON-WILLEY.

Brother Underwood:

Since I read so many soul cheering places in THE RESTITUTION from Sister Roxana Wince, Brother Wilson and a host of others, it gives me fresh courage to press forward to the mark for the Prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. I baptized brother Dr. Whitaker of Sherman on the 16th into the all-saving name. He is intelligent and zealous and I think will do good service for the Master's kingdom. I shun not to declare the whole council of God. I ask an interest in your prayers.

S. R. CLINKENBEARD.

Report of A. B. S.

The A. B. S. met at Lake Shore Saturday, p. m., June 22, to transact business for the ensuing year. The meeting was called to order by President Bellshaw. Bro. Bellshaw called on W. J. Byham to act as chairman. The following officers were elected: C. H. Schmeltzer, President; S. B. Lawrence, Vice President; Almira Brooks, Secretary; W. W. Jaquith, Treasurer; W. L. Skeels, Evangelist.

Secretary's report is as follows: money on hand at the beginning of the year, June 30, 1900, $145.50; gave to Treasurer Jan. 27, 1901, $10.00, and on June 22nd, $24.00; total $149.50.

Treasurer gave in his report and it was accepted. Evangelist gave in his report in full, which you will find below.

Now, dear brothers and sisters, we do not feel discouraged because our finances are not as large as last year; times have been bad with some of us. We had a good letter from Bro. Walker Perrine, of Wenatchee, Wash., which was read at our meeting. They have been building a church there, for that reason we did not receive help from there this year. Besides they have paid out considerable in evangelizing there. But we are determined to keep an evangelist in the field most of the time. Bro. W. L. Skeels seems fitted for the work. Any church that feels that they would like to have him go to them need not fear as to his capability. Now let us (as Sister Woodward says) try to "go shares" in this glorious work. Another year is past and gone, we cannot undo the past, but we can make a better future. Let us try with God's help to do it.

ALMIRA BROOKS.

To the officers and members of Association, brethren:

During the last Conference year I have worked on the following work:—Ocean Park, 3 days; Lake Shore, 4 days; Lake Shore, 11 days; Flatwoods, 48 days; Geumes, Tacoma, Seattle and Ellensburg, Wash., 61 days; Central Point and Phoenix, Oregon, 40 days. I delivered 92 sermons and 20 speeches in discussion and attended 28 sermons by other brethren. Two were added to the number at Ellensburg, three at Central Point and a church of 13 organized at Tacoma.

During the year spent in time 132 days, $198.00; expense of travelling, $36.20; full amount, $234.20; received through treasurer by order $90.00; other sources $96.36; total $186.26. Ballance due, $47.84; order on treasurer, $47.84.

Respectfully and fraternally submitted,

W. L. SKEELS.

Editor Restitution:

On Monday evening, July 1, after the day's work was done, a company of about a dozen friends and brethren gathered at the home of the writer and after a short service all repaired to the bank of our beautiful Rock River where we planted Sister Amelia B. Harlan in the likeness of Christ's death. This Sister comes into the household of faith well prepared to work and wait for the glorious appearing and kingdom of our Lord. May God open the way before her. We ask the prayers of all brethren, not only for this sister, but for the church at Oregon as well.

Selections.

What is Truth?

It is the old question still,—the question of perplexity in some instances, the question of curiosity in others, and not infrequently the question of desire for knowledge, and therefore of progress.

We do not ourselves ask this question as though we had not attained to the truth in the fundamentals of faith, which are the means of salvation. We are not of those who praise that state of mind which is ever learning and never coming to a knowledge of the truth. We have to thank God that One has come who has given us an understanding to know the truth, meaning by this term what the Scriptures therein signify.

Such an understanding is to us a very anchor, holding us in all the storms and seas of life. Circumstances, though black, and covering the whole heavens, do not cause us to forget that there is a light shining ahead. And seas of doubt, with washings up from the bottom of the human heart of all manner of polluting error, do not injure us: for the truth—God's own truth, as it is in Jesus,—is our salvation. We have no confidence in ourselves: our whole confidence is in the truth of our God, the truth of his mercy and love.

There would have been no need for such a question as we have made the subject of this article had not an alien voice spoken contrary to Jehovah. Once, in Eden, the voice of God was heard alone. Adam, therefore, had no need to query "What is truth?" It is that other voice of the adversary, that first came to the ear of Eve, that causes the perplexity, and prompts the cry.

That voice is heard today; but the voice of God is likewise heard. He whose sound reverberated in Paradise, has in these last days spoken unto us by a Son, his only begotten, his dearly beloved.

And if we would know the truth, we have only to listen to the voice of Jehovah-Jesus. It must not be God & Co.: it must be God alone, by his own mediums, and especially by that One who is the brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of his person.

Let each of our readers, then, ignore the adversary. Let us all be as oblivious to his words as if he had never spoken, and did not exist: for, as a great man has said, in another connection, "That which is first is true."

Away, then, from our attention for faith all words other than those chosen by the Spirit. And, with this, away with all ideas also which are of human wisdom,—or, rather, ignorance and folly,—which throw around the good Word of God a false light. And whoever will act on this wise, shall, by God's goodness, come to an exact knowledge of the truth, and be made free indeed.—Bible Echo.

Satisfied.

It is but a truism to assert that a happy satisfaction for man is unknown under his present conditions. To sit under his own vine and under his own fig tree and nobody to make him afraid, looks at first sight like contentment and peace. But satisfaction means something more. The man who never saw a half-crown without wishing it were his was not the sort of man to rest satisfied even should he come into possession of it. "Something would be wanted still."

It was and is ever thus. The child with her doll longs for another; the boy desires the time to come when he will reach manhood's estate; the poet burns to do something nobler; the artist would do finer work; Alexander weeps for other worlds to conquer.

Let us take a step higher. The man, with a knowledge of sin pardoned and his name written in the Lamb's book of life, must yet with Paul cry out, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" He still yearns for something "far better." Ever since our mother Eve longed for the pleasant fruit which would give her wisdom and knowledge, man, all "down the ringing grooves of time" has seen something, or fancied so that would give him all he desired. "Man wants but little here below nor wants that little long," but that little must be a little more than he at present has.

But a bolder step may be taken and the daring assertion made, with all reverence, that Christ, yea, God himself, the all-wise, the holy omnipotent Lord of all is not yet satisfied. From everlasting to everlasting he is God. During his long silence in the eternal past he has created angels and archangels and other marvelous creatures for his pleasure. Yet in the magnificent distances of eternity he, with his only begotten Son, begotten before all worlds, sat alone upon his throne; when sun, moon and stars were not, when life had not appeared and the words had been unspoken "very good." Then, after the creation of cherubims and seraphims those beautiful and commanding creatures of his power, he created man in his own image, perfect, yet liable to fall away from immortality. For man, at whose creation the Sons of God shouted for joy, reaching disobediently after the impossible fell from his high estate and God was grieved. Satan, in marring the beauteous handiwork of the Creator had had, or so he imagined, his revenge; but the eternal Father was equal to the occasion. The seed of the woman should bruise the Slanderer's head, and in that seed the Father would find his good pleasure. But what about the penalty that had been incurred?—"dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." The tree of life was withheld that man might not remain an immortal sinner, and though sin must have its wages in death, yet by the fresh plan evolved (not new to the Creator for it was in his mind from past ages) man should rise again from death, and, if worthy through the atoning efficacy of the Savior's blood shed upon the cross, and by his death and resurrection, he should have immortal life bestowed upon him. So in process of time the very Son of God left the throne of his glory with the Father, and, marvellous mystery, became flesh and dwelt among us, and became the Substitute for man, reconciling man to God, and so the race was saved. "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God." Was ever such wisdom, was ever such love? Satisfaction for man, yea, more than satisfaction. When man in Christ, (for it is only in Christ that man can find life) rises from the penalty of death he rises in the glorious image of his Savior and is SATISFIED.

But what of Christ? When he presents to his Father those saved through him, not one of which will be lost, when indeed he will see of the travail of his soul he shall be SATISFIED. And in the promised restitution of all things, when all shall be as though sin had never been, and the former things have passed away and the new heaven and new earth shall arise; when we shall know even as we are known; when it shall be face to face, and not as now darkly; when we shall understand what is now beyond comprehension, then will the eternal God be SATISFIED.

It may well be imagined that never again will sin be permitted in God's creation. He permitted it among the heavenly hosts for some wise purpose, those hosts so wondrous and beauteous; and then again among the children of men in order that he might show his character and power; but no more will the experiment, if such a word may reverently be used, be tried of allowing evil any more or any where throughout God's universe. It has brought to finite creatures the character of an infinite Creator. They know, and will know yet more abundantly how just he is, how merciful, how loving. They know him to be sympathetic in sorrow, comforting in affliction, helpful to the weak, a Savior to the sinner, a true Father to all.

The eternal Son of the everlasting God, who suffered for us more than can ever be realized by man, and who poured out his soul unto death, can never again die for his creatures. He once for all died to atone for sin and when that sin is swept out of existence along with the sinner who refused life, there can be no death, nor hell, nor the shadow of either any more, for earth and heaven, yea, God's entire universe, clean and holy will never more be defiled, but will be of such purity, blessedness and peace that man, his Savior Christ and the everlasting Father will be PERFECTLY SATISFIED.

And even now that satisfaction may be had in anticipation—"For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."—Alfred M. King, in The Faith.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 280 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Pan-American Exposition Rates to Buffalo via the Nickel Plate Road. Tickets now on sale at all stations, one and one-third fare for round trip, good returning 15 days. Write, wire, 'phone or call on nearest agent, or C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind. —Aug. 1

Excursion trains to Lake Maxenckee via Vandalia Line on June 2nd and on each Sunday thereafter during June, July and August, the Vandalia will run a train to Lake Maxenckee and return. Fare from Plymouth only 25 cts for round trip. The time of these trains will be published later. C. W. Hartman, Agent.

The Nickel Plate Road offers low excursion rates to Denver, Colorado Springs, Glenwood Springs, Col.; Ogden and Salt Lake City, Utah; Hot Springs, S. D.; St. Paul and Duluth, Minn. Tickets on sale from June 18th to Sept. 10th, good to return until Oct. 31st. Write, wire, 'phone or call on nearest agent, or C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Sept. 10.

The Indian and the Northwest.

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 116 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half-tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battleground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1600. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library. Price, 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.—Aug. 31.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, [illegible], Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 50 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Excursion tickets to New York may be obtained at principal ticket offices of the Pennsylvania Lines, good going and returning over the Pennsylvania Lines—or going via Pennsylvania Lines and returning via the other direct lines from New York, including the routes via Buffalo with privilege of stopping over at that point to take in the Pan-American Exposition and Niagara Falls, or returning via Washington, D. C., with stop-over at that point. Full information will be furnish in reply to inquiries addressed to Ticket Agents of the Pennsylvania Lines.—July 31.

Chautauqua Lake Excursions.

July 5th and 26th via Nickel Plate Road at reduced rates. Tickets good returning until Aug. 5th and 27th respectively. Write, wire, 'phone or call on nearest agent, or C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind., or R. J. Hamilton, Agent, Ft. Wayne, Ind.—July 31.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

A Prayer for Patience.

Teach me thy patience; still with thee
In closer, dearer company,
In work that keeps faith sweet and strong,
In trust that triumphs over wrong,
In hope that sends a shining ray
Far down the future's brightening way;
In peace that only thou canst give,
With thee, O Master, let me live.

What is Revealed Concerning the Future Life?

(Concluded.)

Among other remarkable things which may be again noted in this narrative, is the fact of the new body reproducing at desire the identity of the person. Our Lord, to satisfy his disciples, voluntarily showed them the cruel wounds he had received upon the cross. He showed them his hands and his feet, and his side. These wounds were personal to him, and all conjecture as to their permanency beyond serving a passing purpose would doubtless be unwise and unprofitable, but personal identity has here a marked and conspicuous example, and in this respect, as in other features, we also may anticipate identity; without it, indeed, the joy of the reunion would seem to be impossible.

The disciples could not refuse to believe such complete and convincing evidence, which, as we know, was not confined to this meeting, but was again repeated under precisely similar circumstances on a subsequent occasion for the sole benefit of Thomas, who had been absent, and with this additional fact that the Lord invited the doubting apostle to touch him, and so be convinced of his reality—"Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing."

We have not seen him, save by faith, but blessed shall we be if we believe without seeing of the eye now. The time is coming when we shall see him as he is. Words fail me to paint the wonderful moral of the Lord of life and glory here condescending to thus commune with mortal man, and chiefly on account of one frail man's doubt.

Jesus showed himself a third time to his disciples. This occasion was on the shore of Tiberias, and while we have here again an account of his association with them in a meal, there is no direct evidence in the passage that he actually partook of it, but this is probably a quite unintentional omission by the evangelist, because on the first occasion, in the room in Jerusalem, when the doors were shut, he is distinctly recorded to have joined in their repast (Luke xxiv. 42): "And they gave him a piece of a broiled fish and of a honey-comb, and he took and did eat before them." The language is of the plainest description. The Lord in this risen state did eat of the common food required to sustain human life, but in noting the fact we must take into account the circumstances, and while we may be ready to suggest a reason why he did so, none is given, and speculation in such a matter is inexpedient. It does not follow that the spiritual body necessarily demands food, nor depends in any way upon such sustenance. The contrary strongly suggests itself, but the incident yields yet another example of a striking familiar trait of the present life, which may not be quite unknown among the unrevealed mysteries of that which is to come.

It has sometimes been conjectured and questioned—How shall it be possible during the millennial reign that the immortalized saints, and ordinary men still in the flesh, can inhabit the same new heavens and earth, and hold intercourse with each other, the conditions being so very different? How can mortals and immortals mingle, or come into familiar contact, as if they were of one nature?

What need of such conjecture? Here are revealed instances given of familiar intercourse between [illegible] not only so, but examples of the spiritual superiority and supernatural power displayed along side of that which is yet merely natural, limited, and mortal.

The resurrection life of Jesus, thus, uncovers wonderful and weighty and comforting things to those who look for him, and care to grasp the import of its revelations. To the same effect also, may we not accept all the spiritual and angelic appearances recorded in previous Scriptures from the beginning?

Our Lord did not confine the demonstration of his resurrection to a few persons in the privacy of a secret meeting-place. He made an appointment with the eleven to meet him in Galilee in the broad light of day, and there on a mountain he stood before them, and was seen of about five hundred brethren at once. 1 Cor. xv. 6. In the narrative of this meeting, as given in Matt. xxviii. which is supposed to be the same, there is a short sentence which a false narrator would be very unlikely to insert. Amongst all those who believed when they saw him, and worshipped him for very gladness, these three words are added to the narrative—"but some doubted." I think we should take this little glimpse into the composition of that gathering of disciples as strong incidental evidence of the truth of our great Redeemer's rising from death—"some doubted." We must recollect they were all brethren, but that did not then level their human characters and minds and dispositions, nor has it done so since. Jesus did not show impatience with Thomas, and doubtless he bore with those "some" here mentioned, also, well knowing how unprecedented and miraculous was that which they were privileged to witness.

At this time our Lord appears to have had frequent interviews with his disciples, in many ways convincing them of his identity—"to whom he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God" (Acts i. 3)—an intercourse which had its conclusion in his glorious ascension at Bethany, where before their wondering eyes, and blessing them with up lifted hands, he was caught up to heaven. The evangelist speaks of their steadfast upward gaze, and we can well imagine its intensity, for it was a crowning and absorbing marvel they beheld. From their intensity of attitude they were only recalled by the voice of an angelic being in white apparel attending beside them, sent to soften the strain upon their minds by the glad assurance that he would so come again, as they had seen him go. This ascension was quite in accordance with the already manifested spiritual powers they had seen, though greater in degree, except in the case of the resurrection.

When our Lord went away he ascended alone, but when he returns we also shall ascend into the air to meet him, an innumerable company, all invested with the new body with its spiritual qualities and sensations. That will be our introduction to its everlasting enjoyment. From passages already considered, it is not necessary to suppose that because our Lord ascended visibly to mortal vision that he must be understood to continue in the same state. That is all we can venture to say, but when he comes with clouds, once more every eye shall see him, and his redeemed shall be with him. So come, Lord Jesus, O come quickly!

On several occasions, during the pre-crucifixion life of the Lord, we read of occurrences equally abnormal as some of the manifestations which took place after his resurrection. They were of a like kind and purpose as his miracles, wrought by the divine power within him. His walking upon the water, and the temporary communication of the same power to Peter, his transfiguration on the mount, and others, are instances in point. Elijah might also be cited, and the case of levitation mentioned by Paul. 2 Cor. xii. 4. But save at the risen of our Redeemer, these instances exhibit the influence of [illegible] and independent of personal [illegible] —advance evidences, as it were, of the unseen and eternal which is ready to be revealed in the last time when God shall dwell with men, and they shall be his people who have been faithful to his kingdom and righteousness.—G. G. Mitchell, in Messenger.

Phenomena of Spiritualism Accounted for. No. 1.

Every effect must have an adequate cause, and the question arises, what is the cause of the effect called spiritualism? Spiritualists claim that the cause of the effect is to be ascribed to never-dying spirits, said to survive death, at which time the work, device, knowledge, power and wisdom of the escaped spirit is intensified.

The Bible on the contrary says, that in the death state "there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom." "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish." The general testimony of Holy Scripture is, that death ends all conscious existence. We can therefore dismiss the cause claimed by Spiritualists as false. What is the cause then? In my opinion the phenomena can be traced to a natural, scientific and philosophical source. I have been much interested of late in reading a publication, entitled: "Odology an Antidote to Spiritualism," from which it is my purpose to quote extensively, and to accompany the same with suggestive thoughts. "Now, odology (from logos, a discourse, and od) is a discourse upon od. The phenomena of Spiritualists are odistic, if anything. I have chosen to denominate what I have to say upon the subject by odology, rather than pneumatology, psychology, or any other word which concedes the unproved, and unprovable affirmation of the existence of supposed dead men's ghosts disembodiedly." Professor Reichenbach says od is fluid more subtle than electricity, and is thrown off the ends of the fingers like a blue flame. I remember once spending an evening at a friend's house, in company with other friends. It was a bright, crisp winter's night. I noticed a little girl running about the room scraping her feet upon a Brussels carpet, as she passed by me she touched the back of my hand with her finger, and it pricked like the point of a pin. She repeated it several times, and ran away laughing. I said to her, what are you doing, have you a pin? She replied, No, I have no pin. I then arose and scraped my feet upon the carpet as I had seen her do, and as I passed my wife, I touched the end of her nose, which shocked her. I could see a little blue flame leap from the end of my finger. I also remember a nephew who, when he wished to light the gas, would rub his feet upon the carpet, and then light the gas from the end of his finger.

"On this fluid Reichenbach has bestowed the name of od—I suppose for the same reason that Dr. Faraday styles the electrical poles electrods (electrodes) from electron, amber (by the friction of which electricity was first artificially discerned), and odos, away—the poles being regarded merely as the doors or ways by which electricity passes. The od is the boundary of the decomposing matter in the direction of the electric current. Reichenbach's fluid passes off at the ods or poles; and as he regards it as something else than electricity, magnetism, or galvanism, he calls it by another name, even the Greco-chemical term for the extremity from which it exhales.

The electro-magnetic od is constantly passing off from the electrodes, or poles, of animal bodies, and certain crystals. It is probable that our bodies are enveloped with a halo of it, (like that which enveloped Jesus in a large degree on the Mount of transfiguration, and a great degree still as he appeared to Saul, on his way to Damascus). Mrs. Griffith says: It is well known that around and adhering to all surfaces there is a halo of semi-transparent light, seen only, however, when the object for [illegible] forth the spirit [illegible] regard to the eye and the light which falls upon it." Now, the "halo of our bodies it is probable, consists of Reichenbach's odic fluid, the color of which is visible to those who are highly odic, or in a state in which the od is abundantly generated. It is of a delicate blue when given off from the positive electrode, and yellow from the negative pole or crystal. From the fingers tips of the male subject it exhales of a blue color about an inch long, but from those of a female, the jet is inconsiderable, imparting, as it were, a luminousness to their extremities."

At night-time, this odic exhalation is seen in grave-yards (arising from decomposing bodies beneath the surface) "as a lumbent blue haze" and this accounts for the ghosts or supposed spirits of the dead seen flitting about among the tombs of the dead. The other day a friend of mine said, that when he was a boy, living in England, that himself, and several other boys, made up their mind one night, that they would go and see an old ruined monastery, and that near by the ruin, was an old well, called "the Holy Well," as they came near the well, they saw a group of ghosts dancing all around the well. The boys went home, and told their parents they had seen ghosts dancing about the holy well. After that lots of people went at night to see the ghosts, and everybody saw them. After awhile, an examination was made, and the decaying body of a man was found in the well. The body was removed, after which no more ghosts were seen about the well. The ghosts were nothing more than the odic exhalation in the shape of a blue lambent haze.

Phantom ships at sea, produced by refraction of the light reflected on the firmament from real ships, phantom appearances are sometimes seen by sensitive nervous systems, produced by refraction of the odic rays in and upon the mirror formed by the magnetic halo of the earth, which emanate from the forms corrupting in the dust thereof. These phantoms (in Greek styled phantasma—Matt. xiv. 26), are called separate, or disembodied spirits, by the ignorant and superstitious, under the supposition that they are the real men and women, boys and girls, who used to enact life's follies in the flesh! They are, no doubt, as real as phantom ships, and as awfully mysterious to the unphilosophical, and Scripturally-unenlightened as they are to the untutored barbarians of the forecastle; but rest as the phantom ships spectres are, who would be so crazy as to maintain that they are the souls or the spirits of the ships which gave them motion over the dark blue sea? or are they disembodied ghosts of the vessels caught up to the third heavens? Yet this would be just as rational as the psychological theosophisms of the schools, pulpits, and circles, about souls, ghosts, and spirit worlds.

The night is the best time to see the odic light. Spiritualists understand this matter, and use it to deceive the ignorant and superstitious. Cora Hatch was asked to explain why it was necessary to work in the dark in order to manifest the phenomena of spiritualism? The answer came: "The action of light agitates, dissipates, or in some way disturbs the (odic) fluid, gas, magnetism, or whatever the instrumentality be called, which is employed by spirits in acting upon grosser matter, that they are unable to control and employ it." This subtle element pervades all nature, [illegible] by scientists called electricity, and which is used by spiritualists to produce [illegible] phenomena which they erroneously attribute to supposed spirits of the dead.

"Now, it is a fact that in our day, there has been discovered a subtle, unanalyzable incomprehensible principle, which though inscrutable in its essence, is found to be at the basis of all the phenomena of nature—itself eluding the test of chemistry, or the deduction of philosophy, scientists have called it "[illegible]." The Scriptures call it spirit. [illegible] forth the spirit [illegible] By the [illegible] heavens." "The Spirit of God hath made me." "The Spirit of God moved upon the waters." On the day of Pentecost it appeared as "cloven tongues like as of fire," which certainly was an electrical phenomena.

"Professor Moser, as a result of his researches in Thermography, remarks that all bodies radiate light, even in complete darkness. Again, he says, "the rays of this light act as ordinary light," and that two bodies constantly impress their images upon each other, even in complete darkness. Thermographic experiments prove these principles, and lead him to the conclusion, that there is a latent light in certain vapors, as well as latent heat. The ordinary condition of the human brain, and organs supplied by its nerves, is that of adaptation to the common exterior aspect of imponderable matters, such as light, heat, the grosser forms of electricity, sound, etc. But there is a more exalted or refined perception of these things which the animal organization of its own power, however, Intensified by inherent excitation, cannot attain to. Our perception of the latent imponderables, latent light, latent electricity, or od, latent sounds, etc., may be rendered more acute than ordinary; but it can never rise to the highest penetration which is possible without the super-addition of something which the animal nature possesses only to a very limited degree. This something is "the Spirit of God without measure. All living animals have it in some degree, for 'in God' they 'live, and move, and have their being;' and if he were to 'gather unto himself his Spirit AND his breath, all of flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto dust.' Job xxxiv. 14, 15. This minimum possession of God's Spirit by quadrupeds and man, is just sufficient for the purposes of that peculiar constitution of things called 'this life;' but for the physical perception of things visible to beings of a more refined organization than ours, the sight of which will be vouchsafed at a future time called 'the world (age) to come,' the present amount of spirit is not sufficient. This can do for man what is proved, and what is randomly affirmed. He is not ordinarily in harmony with the latent imponderables; but God is intensely and completely so. Hence the darkness and 'the light are both alike to him.' If a man was imprisoned in darkness, a thousand feet below the earth's surface, God would see him as distinctly as we see each other above ground, in the light of noonday. Men profess to believe this, but upon what principle is it that God sees thus in darkness? Because his nature, every atom of which is condensed lightning, (as it were) glowing with such an intensity, that its radiation is felt throughout the boundless universe, penetrating through all substances, and developing life and motion in all things."

When Moses was in the mount, [illegible] contact with heavenly beings, his face became so luminous, that the children of Israel "were afraid to come nigh him." Ex. xxxiv. 29-35. "The glory of the Lord shone round about." Luke ii. 9. "At midday O king, I saw in the way a light from heaven, above the brightness of the sun, shining (from the person of Jesus) about me and them which journeyed with them." Acts xxvi. 13. "His countenance was as the sun shineth in its strength." Rev. i. 16. "Hence he is called 'light' and 'a consuming fire.' The rays from his presence, called spirit, diluted with the grosser menstrua of the earth's products, place him in the true relation to the imponderables which are but one and the same principle, variously developed by the media through which it passes, into the receptacle whence it came. Thus, for instance, the most subtle principle of the earth's halo is spirit, which is called by different names, such as electricity, magnetism, etc. This halo is its reservoir, as it were. It is diluted with atmospheric air. We breathe it. It pervades every atom of our bodies and having enabled our organization [illegible]

"For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of,—for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel." 1 Cor. ix. 16. What gospel did Paul preach? "We preach not ourselves," he writes in his second letter to the church, "but Christ Jesus the Lord" 2 Cor. iv. 5. and defines his gospel in the preceding verse as "the glorious gospel of Christ." To the Galatian churches he also testifies: "I certify you brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man. for I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." Evidently, then, both Paul and Christ taught the same gospel. That gospel was the gospel of the grace of God. This was the life-giving power —the means whereby salvation was obtained, without which all were "without Christ," being strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope. Eph. ii. 12.

So necessary was the preaching of this gospel to the future life and well being of men, that he distinctly affirms:—"But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." Gal. i. 8, 9. Turning to 1 Cor. xv. 1 we read, "Moreover, brethren, I declared unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain." Paul here calls what they were to keep in memory, the gospel, the gospel of Christ, the gospel of the kingdom of God. By this gospel are ye saved, for it is the "power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." "Now if our gospel is hid, it is hid to them that are lost." 2 Cor. iv. 3. Being hid to them they lack that power which alone brings life; hence, they are alienated from the life of God. Eph. iv. 17, 18. In the words of the Psalmist, xlix. 6, "Man that is in honor and understanding not, is like the beasts that perish." Therefore those who know not the gospel,—are without hope, alienated from the life of God to perish like the beasts. 2 Pet. ii. 12. "But these as made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not, and shall utterly perish in their own corruption," is it not clear,—is it not an unmistakable truth that belief of the gospel is necessary to a future life, and that unless we will search diligently, and obtain an exact knowledge of the truth and vividly hold it, a future life is an impossibility but our lot will be to remain for ever in the congregation of the dead. Can we find an exact anywhere but in the Word of God? The Scriptures are able to make men wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. Then study the Scriptures. Search deeply, search earnestly, search diligently like the Bereans of Paul's day—search daily and see whether these things are so. Find out, grasp, and firmly retain that which is so necessary to salvation—the gospel of

KEEP IN MEMORY

NATURAL BRUTE BEASTS

KNOWLEDGE OF THE TRUTH

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

You will find it in that Word vividly portrayed, and shining out from every page of God's record, pleading with you in every chapter you read. It will satisfy your utmost longings. It will settle all your hazy doubts. It will decide all your perplexing questions. It will make the future now so dim to your sight and cloudy, bright and glorious, effulgent with the rays of the coming Sun of Righteousness. It will tell you of a day not far distant, when a great and mighty change shall take place in the affairs of this world, when a panic,

SUDDEN AND TERRIBLE

shall seize upon the nations, and they will pale at the startling news, The King of all the earth has come. It will tell you he is now in the heavens at his Father's right hand—the once despised and crucified Nazarine—shall soon leave that throne and revisit this earth,—not then as the Lamb slain but as the Lion of the tribe of Judah, treading the wine-press of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God;

BREAKING THE NATIONS

with a rod of iron, and dashing them in pieces like a potter's vessel. It will tell you of a time when the Lord shall be King over all the earth, when there shall be one Lord and his name one; when the kingdoms of this world will have become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever. It will point out a time when the glorious temple, (Ezekiel xl. to end of the book) will have been erected; when Jehovah will return to the children of Israel, and build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down, and will build again the ruins thereof and set it up; when he shall inherit Judah, his portion in and shall choose Jerusalem again; when men shall have one religion only, all nations and families going up to Jerusalem to worship the King the Lord of Hosts. It will tell you of a time when Jehovah will have put down the mighty from their seats and exalted them of low degree; when the meek and poor, rich in faith, will inherit the earth; when wisdom and knowledge will be the stability of the times, and when the earth will be full of the knowledge of

THE HOLY LAND,

THE GLORY OF THE LORD

as the waters cover the sea. It will declare to you that at that time the inhabitants of the earth will all be righteous, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace, for all nations will beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks, they shall not lift up sword against nation neither shall they for all the nations will be blessed in Abraham and his seed—the Christ. This is the glorious vision opened out to the understanding by the gospel of the kingdom of God—the gospel which, unless a man believe, according to the words of Christ, he cannot be saved.

LEARN WAR ANY MORE,

The immortal brethren of the Lord Jesus Christ will be associated with him during the millennial age, as kings and priests in ruling and instructing the nations. They will be those who, during the present and preceding generations have been chosen by him as having manifested that child-like disposition so necessary a qualification for future rulership,—who have accepted the truth as it is in Jesus in its simplicity and through all opposition have faithfully kept it, and have through it manifested the obedience desired. Future rulership implies

PRESENT OBEDIENCE

—obedience implicitly yielded to him who is the destined king of the earth: and those who cannot yield that obedience to him now during the time of his humiliation, cannot expect to rule with him in his kingdom. Future rulership, involving an immortal, undying nature is offered to all fully and freely, but on the conditions stated,—

BELIEF AND OBEDIENCE,

and those who desire to be partners with Jesus in the glories and splendor of that age must believe the gospel and render strict obedience to its requirements before salvation is assured them. Truly nothing else on this earth is worth striving for. All else is fading, fleeting, corruptible, at the best, but for a few fleeting years to end at last in the darkness of the grave. "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

A Letter from Jerusalem.

[From the Herald of Life and the Coming Kingdom, we copy the following written by Miss Edith M. Dugan as a private letter to Mrs. L. B. Watkins. It cannot fail to be of interest to the readers of the paper it first appeared in, and is sure to be equally so to our patrons, hence we copy it here. —Ed.]

"I made a two week's visit to Sidon with some missionaries. I got a better insight into real Eastern life there than in Beyrout and enjoyed the quaint old city. I rode down to Sidon on horseback—a seven hour trip on a hard road in a hot sun; and came back the same way. There is no carriage road to Sidon. But this trip has been the finest one of all, and though I am tired this afternoon I must try to tell you a little about it.

It was nearly two weeks ago when our party of eleven left Beyrout on a steamer which set sail about midnight. We reached Haifa in the morning and took carriages for our trip through Galilee. We drove across the plain of Acre and the Kishon, to the base of the Mt. Carmel range which runs inland for some distance, terminating in the "place of sacrifice" where Elijah and the priests of Baal tested the power of Jehovah and of Baal. Down below we saw the place where Elijah slaughtered the priests. It was late in the afternoon when we reached Nazareth. We stayed there over Sunday, Easter Sunday, too. Before church we went up on a hill above the town where we had a fine view. On one side in the distance was the Mediterranean, Haifa and Mt. Carmel. Toward the east we had a glimpse of a tiny corner of the Sea of Galilee; nearer was Mt. Tabor, and toward the south the beautiful plain of Esdraelon out of which rose Mt. Gilboa where Saul and his sons perished, and Little Hermon, on the sides of which we could see Nain and Endor. It was on this broad flat plain of Esdraelon that Sisera marshalled his forces and fled defeated. It was across this plain that Elijah raced with Ahab's chariot twelve miles to Jezreel from Carmel, where he had been praying for rain.

Directly below us was Nazareth on the slopes of a little valley, and it seemed as if I could almost see Christ walking up and down those hillsides and teaching in the synagogue on the Sabbath day. I had feared that the dirt and ignorance of the people and the idolatry carried on in all these places would shock and disgust me and spoil the spiritual suggestions of the place. But my imagination was able to rise above the dirty details and I refused to go to Joseph's workshop and Mary's kitchen, which are only inventions of the Latin and Greek churches. Monday morning we took an early start and rode up Mt. Tabor on horseback. This is supposed by some to be the Mount of Transfiguration, but it is not certain. There are two convents on the summit and the ruins of a big Crusaders' Castle. We ate our lunch here and rode down again joining our carriages, in which we drove rapidly to Tiberias. Our first view of the Sea of Galilee, as we drove over the last hill-top, was very beautiful; the blue, blue sea with the little town of Tiberias nestling on its shores, and over it round the mountains of Gilead with steep rocky slopes, where the "swine" may have well "rushed violently down into the sea." We went out in boats on the lake next day, and had a tempest, so that the boatmen became alarmed and put us on shore. When we were well out of danger, we sang "Master, the tempest is raging," and appreciated, as never before, the scene of the disciples struggling with the storm and the Master asleep in the boat. What a sense of his power they must have had when he awoke and uttered that "Peace, be still!" and "the winds and the waves obeyed his will!" We had to walk from where the boatmen put us on shore, out to the reputed sites of Bethsaida and Capernaum. At every sacred place in this country there is either a mosque or a convent. We found a convent at Capernaum and were glad to get some bread and olives to satisfy our hunger. Then we walked back and went in the boat to Tiberias. We drove back to Nazareth that night, and next morning back to Haifa and up on Mt. Carmel, where we spent the night in a fine hotel. Next day after dinner three of us and a good bye to the others who were going back to Beyrout, and we started in a carriage for Jaffa or Joppa, the port of Jerusalem. We drove all the afternoon and stopped about six o'clock at Zimoreen, one of Rothschild's Jewish colonies, at a Jewish inn, where we ate a lunch we had brought with us, and lay down with our clothes on, on some rather doubtful-looking beds. At midnight we arose and pursued our journey over the damp, misty, chilly plain of Sharon, by the light of the waning moon. At sunrise we stopped to feed the horses and I walked up and down across the plain to get warm. The sun rose over the hills of Samaria and warmed up the green, glistening plain which stretched north and south for miles between the hills and the sea. We passed a great many ruins of Crusaders' Castles. The history of this country is one grand mixture of things; Syria means nothing distinctive or individual; it is Jew, Crusader, Arab, Turk and I know not what else. It was noon when we reached Jaffa, and after a tiresome wait at the railroad station we rode until six o'clock on the railroad which winds in and out among rocky hills in its ascent from sea-level to Jerusalem. You can imagine we were pretty tired when we landed in Jerusalem and the bed felt pretty good that night. Then for several days we investigated Jerusalem and the surrounding places of Biblical interest. We drove up the Mount of Olives, from which the view is exquisite. Here one forgets the dirt, the filth, the beggars and all the misery that make Jerusalem streets so repulsive. One only sees that wonderful, wonderful city on the slope of the hill opposite, with its surrounding battlemented walls, a city "compact together," and as the setting sun lights up those majestic walls and touches with gold the domes and towers, one does not wonder that Christ loved it and wept over it, "O Jerusalem! Jerusalem! How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not." In the valley beneath us, between us and Jerusalem, was the brook Kedron, and further down in the valley the pool of Siloam.

That same afternoon we visited the tombs of the kings, and I saw a "stone rolled away from the sepulchre."

Sunday, we walked across Kedron up to the garden of Gethsemane, and sat by the roadside for a little time. The Russians have shut in with high yellow stone walls their Garden of Gethsemane, and the Latins have walled in another garden of Gethsemane; and there are some very artificial looking trees that peep feebly over the stone walls, while a hideous, gaudy Russian church dominates the hillside. I had no wish to enter either one of these pens, so we sat by the roadside and thought it all over, how much Gethsemane meant to us. We walked back in the intense heat over the dusty roads, in through St. Stephen's gate and after a good deal of wandering about, found the new German church built in honor of the German emperor, and we were glad to sit down in its cool aisles. In the afternoon we walked around the walls on the outside; down into the valley of Jehoshaphat where there are several famous rock-tombs, and we walked home through the valley of Hinnom which was longer than we thought and very dusty. It got quite dark before we got back, and we were very tired. But next morning early we started for Hebron. It was a long, barren, monotonous road, but at last we reached the plain of Mamre, and saw the mosque which covers the cave of Machpelah. But the Moslems of Hebron are exceedingly fanatical and will permit no one to even enter that mosque. We ate our lunch under the shade of Abraham's Oak, and it was very refreshing, for the day was intensely hot. Here was Eshcol of which the two faithful spies gave such a good account. Coming back we visited Bethlehem; saw the church of the Nativity, and looked down on the fields where the angels brought the good tidings to the shepherds of old. This, too, was the city of David, and over on the opposite side of the valley stands Zelzah, the city of Saul and Jonathan.

On Tuesday we visited the big mosque of Omar. That is built on the old Temple. The mosque is very beautiful. We had to take off our shoes and put on some rude slippers before entering. Down below in another mosque, which is also built on this same temple area, are to be seen several huge round pillars; so large that three men stretching out their arms can just span one. These are probably a few of the pillars that once formed the magnificent approach to Solomon's temple, through which the Queen of Sheba entered into his presence. To get into this mosque area, one has to have a dragoman, a kawass, a soldier and a guide; so exacting are these Moslems. In the afternoon we walked through the Jewish quarter, which is exceedingly dirty, and came to the Jew's wailing place, which is against the outer wall of the temple area. Here the Jews congregate in the afternoon and especially on Friday afternoon to weep over the departed glories of their race. I saw some reading their laments and swaying to and fro.

On Wednesday morning we started in carriages for Jericho. Formerly one had to ride horseback, but two years ago when the German emperor made his visit here roads were made everywhere for him, and a very good one was made down to Jericho. We rode down, down through the barren brown mountains of Judea, descending more than 2000 feet I believe, for Jerusalem is high up, and the Dead Sea lies 1300 feet below the level of the Mediterranean. Usually it is intensely hot there, but we found it cool that day. We saw the gorge of the Cherith, where Elijah was fed by the ravens, and Elisha's spring, where he healed the waters, you remember, and the site of the Bible Jericho. The present town is a miserable collection of mud huts on the site of the Crusaders Jericho. We drove down to the Dead Sea, which, strange to say, was rough like the ocean. It was an unusual day there, for the clouds hung dark and heavy over the barren and rugged mountains and the broad sterile plain, that is brightened by the ribbon of green that borders the Jordan. We went wading in the Dead Sea, and got back into our carriages, just in time for a hard shower. It was raining when we reached the Jordan, so that we could not get out and wander about, but we could appreciate to the full "Oh Jordan's stormy banks I stand [illegible] We stayed over night at a hotel and drove back the next day, stopping at Bethany. It is as one returns from Bethany to Jerusalem that one gets the view Christ must have had on his triumphal entry into Jerusalem, when the crowd cried, "Hosanna to the Son of David."

Our sight-seeing here is about ended now, for tomorrow we go back to Jaffa, to take a steamer for Beyrout when we can get one.

The Jesuit Obligation.

In view of the loud protests made by Roman Catholics against the Protestant oath which King Edward VII. must take at coronation, the British Protestant press is returning the compliment by publishing a clause from the oath which every member of the Jesuit order is obliged to take. As the Jesuit asseveration has its bearing in other countries besides Britain, our readers will be interested in seeing it. We quote from the "Life of Faith":—

"I do renounce and disown any allegiance as due to any heretical King, prince, or State named Protestants, or obedience to any of their inferior magistrates or officers. I do further declare the doctrine of the Church of England, of the Calvinists, Huguenots, and of other of the name Protestants, to be damnable; and they themselves are damned and to be damned, that do not forsake the same. I do further declare that I will help, assist, and advise all or any of his Holiness's agents in any place wherein I shall be, in England, Scotland, and Ireland, or in any other territory or kingdom I shall come to, and do my utmost to extirpate the heretical Protestant's doctrine, and to destroy all their pretended power, legal or otherwise."

Six Important Points.

Six things a boy ought to know:—

1. That a quiet voice, courtesy, and kind acts are as essential to the part in the world of a gentleman as of gentlewoman.

2. That roughness, blustering, and even hot-headedness, are not manliness. The most firm and courageous men have usually been the most gentle.

3. That muscular strength is not health.

4. That a brain crammed only with facts is not necessarily a wise one.

5. That the labor impossible to the boy of fourteen will be easy to the man of twenty.

6. That the best capital for a boy is not money, but the love of work, simple tastes, and a heart loyal to his friends and to his God.—Texas Christian Advocate.

"People who do right no matter what the consequences may be, are always the gainers in the end."

Dear Brother Underwood:

While reading THE RESTITUTION this morning I was made to rejoice to think that the redemption of the Jewish people is so near, and more, that my redemption draws near. For here in this life we have sickness, sorrow, trials, tribulations, pain and at last death. Oh, what would be our lot if we had no hope founded upon the promises of God, that if we believe in him and obey his commands that we should have eternal life and enter in the kingdom, there to eat of the tree of life and live forever in the presence of Him who died to redeem us that we may enjoy the pleasures of an endless life where God will wipe all tears from our eyes, where sickness, sorrow, pain nor death can never enter. Oh, people of the one faith, are we walking in the light as he (Christ) is in the light? Do we keep our mind centered on him who died for us? We cannot be perfect in this life but we can walk in a way that we will be made perfect when that which is perfect is come, and that which is in part is done away. I was talking with a preacher not long since, he said if a man had done wrong; his conscience told him that he had done wrong. Oh, brothers and sisters, let us not depend on our conscience, but on the sure Word of prophecy, the gospel, that is able to make one wise unto salvation, and if obeyed will finally bring us into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Yours in Christ,

The Rich Man and Lazarus. No. 2.

The principles concerned and affected [illegible] distinctly marked. The items relating to the rich man clearly marks him as the representative of the Jews as a people. Let us note his case first.

His dress. He was clothed in purple and fine linen. Now turn to the law that was "until John," and see what was the clothing of the priests under that law. See Exodus xxviii., where Moses was commanded to make for Aaron and the other priests garments for glory and beauty. See verses 5, 6, 8, and 15. "And they shall take gold, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen. And they shall make the ephod of gold, of blue, and of scarlet, and of fine twined linen..... And thou shalt make the breast plate of purple.....and fine twined linen."

Such were the peculiarities of the dress or clothing of these representatives of the law and Mosaic dispensation, or Jewish system. These peculiarities your Lord commences with in his description of the rich man; and they are sufficiently striking to satisfy the unprejudiced enquirer after truth that the Jew nationally was to be represented by the rich man in the parable. The Jews were rich in those abundant communications of truth, knowledge and peculiar priviliges which God had endowed them with by direct communications or through the prophets whom he had raised up to instruct them from time to time, till at length he spake unto them by his Son. Rich were they, indeed, in these high and exalted advantages over all other nations and people. It would be easy to enlarge here, but I forbear. The period of their exclusive enjoyment of those peculiarities was their lifetime. But the time came when those peculiarities were to pass away, and that period is represented as a death. It was the death of their whole ecclesiastical polity—it was now to be superceded by a more spiritual and universal system, embracing other people. The lifetime of their peculiarities is ended—the change has come over them, symbolized by a death and burial.

Where next is this once rich man found, is it in theological hell? No; it is not even in gehenna; but in hades.

Hades is the Greek word corresponding to sheol of the Hebrew, and signifies the covered state, or state of death, in which, the Old Testament positively affirms, there is no knowledge. See Eccl. ix. 10; Psa. vi. 5, and other similar texts. The rich man is alive after his ecclesiastical death, but is stripped of all his peculiarities and reduced to a state of wretchedness and torment. And does not the history of the Jews, as a people, from the overthrow of their temple, city, and sacrifices there, unto this day, or the present century, fully justify the parabolic description given by our Lord, of the misery to which they would be subjected under the new dispensation which was to follow theirs?

No one can doubt this who has any knowledge of their history. Read the prophecies of the judgments threatened them. Lev. xxvi. and Deut. xxviii., and be no longer faithless, but believing. Wrath has come upon them to the uttermost. 1 Thess. ii. 16. And Jesus said, relative to the overthrow of their city, and the tribulation to attend and follow that event. "There be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled. Luke xxi. 22

Since the ecclesiastical and national death of the Jews—the rich man—there has been a claim maintained among them that Abraham was their father, but no relief has come to them from that quarter.

The desire expressed by the rich man, that further light or information should be given to convince that nation or people of Jews by a resurrection of one from the dead, is met in the parable by showing that no further information would avail with those who had rejected all the previous light God had given them: and the answer—neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead—was shown to be true by the conduct of the chief priests and pharisees when Jesus actually raised a Lazarus from the dead. 1 John xi. They called a council and from that day forth took council together for to put Jesus to death.

How true that they would not be persuaded though one rose from the dead; and after they had accomplished their bloody purpose, and put Christ to death, and he also had been raised from the dead, under such circumstances that there was no chance to doubt the fact, the same obstinate unbelief remained and they gave large sums of money to the soldiers to tell the most silly and improbable lie that ever was invented, viz: that the disciples of Jesus came by night and stole Jesus away while they slept.

The Jews as a nation, had their good things in their lifetime, or while they held the relation of bride to their Maker: but now being dead, nationally, in reference to that relation, they are tormented, grievously and sorely tormented; and all their appeals as to their relation to Abraham have proved unavailing; and it has added not a little to their torment and sorrow to see the Gentiles enjoying rich blessings from which they find themselves shut out. I speak of course, particularly of social, civil and political blessing, in which they possessed much advantage every way in the days of their national prosperity. But an impassable gulf has existed between them and the Gentiles for many centuries; but even that is nowhere said to be eternal.

It will indeed continue until the Redeemer returns to Zion. Till that time there will be no national repentance; but then will be fulfilled the prophecy of Zech. xii. 10, 14.

The Jews, as a nation, hitherto have professed that their rejection of Jesus as the promised Messiah was want of evidence; like the rich man in the parable, they have constantly cried, from the days of Jesus for more evidence. "Let him come down from the cross and we will believe." But when he rose from the dead as the rich man is represented as desiring one to do to convince the unrepenting Jews, instead of repentance being produced in them, as a nation, they put to death the witnesses of that glorious event. Who can contemplate the untold sufferings of that nation, from the time Jerusalem was compassed about with armies and their city destroyed to the present century, and not discover the propriety of the parable our Lord employed to illustrate those torments and their hopeless state?

Thus, the parable, so far as the rich man is concerned, has a fair and full application, and illustrates the obstinate unbelief and consequent misery and torment of that people after their final refusal to receive Jesus as the Messiah.

Well did Jesus say to the Jews—"Had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me; for he wrote of me; but ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my Words." John v. 46, 47.

These words illustrate what is said in the parable—"They have Moses and the prophets, let them hear them; and if they hear not them, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead."

It only remains now to briefly consider that part of the parable relating to the poor man, or Lazarus.

Prior to the change in the dispensations, from the Mosaic to the Christian, the Gentile, poor indeed in religious knowledge, and excluded from the peculiar priviliges of the Jew—the rich man, could only approach the court, or gate of the temple service, whereupon some of them sought the crumbs of knowledge which might better their condition. Still their general condition in regard to divine things was evil. The time at length arrives when they are no longer to remain in this condition, and that change—to keep up the harmony of the parable—is represented by a death. They [illegible] out of their previous state and [illegible] the [illegible] of Abraham's [illegible] partakers in that covenant God made with Abraham; "For if ye be Christ's then are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 16, to end of chapter. To this honor they are brought through the ministration of angels—aggellan—messenger. Christ gave his messengers commission to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. Mark xvi. 15, 16.

Under this commission they brought many Gentiles into the Abrahamic covenant; for the Scriptures foreseeing that God would justify the heathen, (the Gentiles) through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, "In thee shall all the nations be blessed." Gal. iii. 8. And the apostle adds—so then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham; they are in Abraham's bosom; a phrase which imports a partaker of his blessings, and being in the same covenant relation to God. In this condition are all believing Gentiles, and are now comforted; while the obstinate unbelieving Jew from the time of Christ, or from the introduction of the Christian dispensation, has been tormented, and the gulf between the two dispensations is impassable—they cannot be joined in one; to come into the blessings of the Christian dispensation is impossible to any one still cleaving to the Mosaic for justification; and to return from the Christian to the Mosaic is to fall from grace, and to be swallowed up in the gulf.

I might greatly enlarge the proof that the foregoing is the true scope and design of the parable; but enough has been said to satisfy the candid inquirer after truth, and I have no expectation that obstinate bigotry will be removed, even though another Lazarus should arise from the dead and affirm the truth of the exposition here given.

Are you masters in Israel, my brethren? and can you not see these things? The change from the law to the gospel, was a change of masters; that polity to which the Jew was wedded, must die: or it would be adultery to be joined to Christ. Some of the Jews insisted that converts to Christianity should also observe the law of Moses, Gal. ii. 3.

This transition from the one system to the other is clearly set forth in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. The gulf between the Christian and the Jew, which neither can pass, is in fact that in Christ there is no Jew, but a new creature. The Jew cannot cross that gulf: he must believe the gospel, and be baptized into Christ, by which he ceases to be a Jew, nor can the Christain pass that gulf to the Jew. If he attempts it he falls from grace, and Christ shall profit him nothing. Not a drop of the water of life can pass from the gospel to one married (or espoused) to the law graven on stone which is unto death. Ye cannot serve two masters. The letter kills; the spirit gives life. The Words I speak are spirit, and life, said Jesus. Let the Romanist have the letter; join the begging friars, go in rags, paint or make sores on their filthy persons in order to get into the bosom of Abraham.

What kind of a gulf is it that your supposed immortal soul cannot pass. No one not blinded by prejudice, can fail to see what this parable teaches, that this understanding is preeminently Scriptural in every part; and hence has no reference to departed souls. And yet having lost the true gospel faith, during the dark ages of superstition, modern theology concerning man's condition in death, is based on the literal interpretation of this parable. And so the claim is made that death seals the doom of mankind, for hell or heaven. This of course makes the resurrection of the dead of no account. Why bring the soul back from hell-fire, or the joys of heaven to re-enter the body to be judged, if it entered into its reward at death.

You, my sectarian brother, you know in your theology a resurrection of the dead has no legitimate place; it is simply an incumbrance you cannot dispose of. Resurrection being the very foundation of gospel hope, you should mistrust the soundness of your theology, rather than your foundation doctrine of a future life; for if the dead rise not, let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die.

A few misunderstandings of Scriptures, like this [illegible] have wrought the utmost [illegible] turning Christ, [illegible] into [illegible] plete habit of [illegible] thousand [illegible] made alive in Christ, the second man, Adam. Admit, notwithstanding the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, that in death, all go to one place. Stop translating sheol, hell, for your wicked neighbor, and grave for yourself. Believe the Scriptures, that there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in sheol whither thou goest. That the dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down in silence. That the very day a man dies his thoughts perish: his sons come to honor, and he knoweth it not, they are brought low and he perceiveth it not, and you will find harmony. Why not be cold, or hot; rank spiritualists, and follow demons, or believe the Scriptures. Do not suppose that Christ and the apostles taught that which conflicts with the law and the prophets; the only Scriptures then in existence, or referred to by Christ.

[illegible] admit that [illegible] is appointed [illegible] to die, [illegible] he is taken [illegible] the [illegible] will [illegible] again, be [illegible]

To love submitted for your consideration.

JOHN FOORE.

(Concluded.)

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I thought I would write a few lines to let you know that I am yet in the land of the living, awaiting the coming of our King, and endeavoring to live so that I can say, "Lo, this is our God, I have waited for him;" and hear the welcome voice, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." This is my hope; and I do believe that the time is near when our King will take to himself his great power and reign, King of kings, and Lord of lords. The darkness has covered the earth, and gross darkness the people. Now, what has caused this great darkness on the truth that is revealed to us in God's Word? Now it is very clear to me; how can it be otherwise? When God said to the first pair, "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Now comes the contradiction, and what is it? "Ye shall not surely die." Here is the foundation of all falsehoods, and the leaders and shepherds of the flocks teach nothing else for the hope of the people, saying, you all have immortal souls, that never dies, but when your body dies, that flies up to heaven; thus saying in harmony with the serpent, "Ye shall not surely die." Now, my brothers and sisters in the Lord's Anointed, how can the people be otherwise but in gross darkness under such teaching. Thus we see how the world became in such darkness, and the people in such gross darkness. But I thank God that the light of the gospel of the kingdom is shining, and some will hear and believe it, and obey it and thus become the seed of Abraham by faith, and thus become heirs according to the promise. But it is a grievous thought to have God's Word disregarded as it is. But we must not let anything interfere with the Word of God, but believe and stand by the truth, as God has given it to us. We have a blessed hope plainly revealed to us in his Word. My faith never was stronger than it now is. I need not the teaching of the apostacy; but my faith is in the Word of God, by it I stand or fall; but I have no fears of falling; I have laid all my hope on Jesus, and he will not leave us when he comes, which I expect will be soon. But if not I have but a few years at the longest to stay here; for according to the record I have, I will be 80 years old July 16, 1901; I would be glad to live to see My Master come; but if I do not he will find me in the morning of the resurrection.

When She Was Near.

My mother's heart was honey,
And her kiss was sweetest balm,
And, though the world was full of storm,
Her lap was full of calm.
Her arms and breast were filled with rest,
Her smile was full of joy,
And life was dear when she was near,
And I a little boy.

The world is full of golden gitts,
And yet my spirit sighs
Between the gracious long agoes
And happy by and byes.
I am aweary of the cares
That fill the lives of men;
I would I were a little child
Within those arms again.

For my mother's heart was honey,
And her kiss was sweetest balm,
And, though the world was full of storm,
Her lap was full of calm.
Her arms and breast were full of rest,
Her smile was full of joy,
And life was dear when she was near,
And I a little boy.

The Rescued Village.

A STORY OF THE CARPATHIAN MOUNTAINS.

It was in 1879, when circumstances overthrew all my well laid plans for the future, (man proposes but God disposes,) that I was compelled to abandon my studies and look for practical employment.

No one could have been more pleased than I, when a college chum informed me that his father was connected with a railroad concern, and was needing a qualified young man as surveyor's assistant to go to upper Hungaria, where he had a short line under construction. The railroad magnate knew me well, and so, though the situation would be but for a year and the wages low, I could have it for the asking. I set out at once and four days later was at work.

It was while thus employed that I went through an experience which I shall never forget. One day the foreman of a gang of laborers, working on the road-bed, reported that the stakes driven during the definite survey, did not correspond with the specified plan of that particular section. As these stakes had been verified by the surveyor only a few days before work was begun, not much importance was attached to the complaint, and it was deemed sufficient to send me to find the cause of the foreman's difficulty.

The tripod, with surveying compass on my shoulder I accompanied him to where work was in progress. Along a steep incline on the southern slope of the Carpathian mountains, the road was staked out nearly sharp from west to east, and in the valley below lay a seemingly prosperous village. The slope was almost bare; there were no trees to break the monotony; only a few grassy spots and a very few poor looking bushes, scattered at long intervals.

At first glance I was sure some of the stakes must have changed their relative positions since I with the surveyor had gone over the line a few days before; but close examination convinced me that no one had touched them. Then, what could be the matter? I stooped down to look at one of the stakes that was remarkably far from its original position, and some pebbles came rolling down from above me. Startled, I looked around for the cause. No animal was in sight, and our laborers were standing a few feet below. Thinking of an earthquake, I pressed my ear to the ground, but could not detect the slightest disturbance.

Discussing the features of the case, the foreman and myself were walking slowly around to more thoroughly inspect the ground, when being thirsty, I remembered having seen not far away, a spring bubbling from the mountain side, its water being emptied into a brook near the village. I searched and found it, but it had ceased to flow; its place was covered with earth and stones. The horrible truth now dawned upon me. The upper stratum of earth had become separated from the solid rock, and was pressing towards the valley; slowly and imperceptibly now, but sure to end as a landslide! It was the moving of the land that had moved our stakes! We had only a few hours in which to act.

I was in a subordinate position; I could only order the laborers away and send for the chief surveyor, while I warned, in utmost haste, the villagers. I was just in time. A party was rapidly organized, and we hurried to the scene with our plans all laid for the saving of the village.

At the extreme left of the affected area we began well calculated blasting and thus started the final movement there, diverting the downward rush of the immense mass from its path towards the town, and thereby

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 10 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 50 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 80 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

Lord Jesus come and quickly come we pray,
Dirges and tears hold universal sway,
We look for judgment and behold a cry:
Oppression rules and o'er a groaning land,
The church and world walk blindfold, hand in hand,
While thy true children for deliverance sigh;
Oft short the night and long the darkness seems;
Hasten our Master, though through trials many,
And on the grave-less, sinless earth let us
Thy beauty see.

Phenomena of Spiritualism Accounted for. No 2.

Article No. 1. closed with remarks relating to the vital life-spirit being scientifically termed electricity, magnetism, etc., which furnished vitality to the air we breathe. Now while the air we inhale is also called spirit, yet if it should lack the vital electrical spirit, it could not sustain life. Breath and spirit are necessary to sustain animal life, whether in man, or the brute creation. Job seemed to comprehend this, when he said: if the Lord should gather unto himself his "breath AND his spirit," all flesh would turn again to dust. In this instance at least, "breath" and "spirit" were not used as synonymous terms.

Do we not sometimes perceive the oppressiveness of the atmosphere, and how difficult it seems to breathe, and on such occasions how weak, languid and spiritless the physical system becomes? Then again, let this be followed by an electrical storm, and all life, both animal and vegetable, seems to be inspired with new life and vigor. We are here informed that "the most subtle principle of the earth's halo is spirit, which is called by different names, such as electricity, magnetism, etc. This halo is its reservoir, as it were. It is dilated with atmospheric air. We breathe it, and it pervades every atom of our bodies, and having enabled our organism to perform its functions, it exhales from the electrodes of our system as Od into the reservoir where we derived it by breathing. Thus a circle or circuit exists of the external atomic form-changing fluid, internal transformed matter, and nervous current, closing the circuit by Od (latent light radiating in darkness) exhaling into the outer fluid.

Now, this outer reservoir of fluid may be regarded as a highly-polished and extremely sensitive mirror, in which can be excited latent odic spectres, which become visible sometimes to those whose brains are subjected to odic exaltation. The spectral impressions may emanate from corrupting bodies, and from living brains acting upon other living brains. Reichenbach's graveyard experiments have demonstrated the first; thermo-electrography the second; and animal magnetism, in all its varieties, the third.

We may adduce here a philosophical experiment, illustrative of what we mean, by latent spectral impressions. Take a piece of glass, the temperature of which is low, lay a coin upon it, and breathe upon the surface; allow the breath to entirely disappear; then toss the coin off the surface and examine it minutely; no trace of anything is visible, yet a spectral impression exists on that surface, which may be evoked by again breathing upon the surface of the glass. A form resembling the coin at once appears.

M. Karsten placed a coin upon a piece of plate glass, which being supported by a plate of metal not insulated, the sparks from the conductor of an electrifying machine were made to strike on the coin, thereby causing them to pass simultaneously through the coin and metalic plate. After one hundred turns of the machine, the coin was removed; the glass plate appeared perfectly unaltered (the ghost was invisible), but when breathed upon, a perfect impression of the coin in its most minute details became visible; electric fluid remaining adherent to the glass plate; because the impression still remains with great distinctness, after all traces of electricity has disappeared, after the glass has been wiped with a handkerchief. And again, these impressions are neither destroyed, nor even weakened, by passing a stream of the opposite electricity over them.

From these experiments we see:

1. That by breathing upon the thing impressed, hidden things may be made manifest.

2. That this can be effected at the end of months.

3. That unseen but real impressions of words and figures can be made on surfaces by electricity, and afterward made visible by breathing. These principles are scientific demonstrations. And, pray, what is science? It is knowledge. Human knowledge, or science, when it is really knowledge, consists of the little men have discovered—the few general facts they have found obtaining in the universe, and more especially in this terrestrial system, in relation to the earth. Its substances, and man upon it. Men know but little of the laws to which God has subjected his earth and the things belonging to it, compared with what remains to be revealed. And yet it is the ignorant who undertake to draw conclusions from the data the most recondite, and pronounce the Bible a cheat, if it teach not according to what they have predetermined it ought to teach. But, after all, the multitude is not so much to blame for this as their guides. Like priests like people. The theosophist reasons out from insufficient data a crude theory, which pleases his fleshly mind, and then goes to the Bible to cull sounding epithets to sanctify it, instead of allowing God's Holy Word to teach him as a babe, and then to prove all things by its rule. This procedure is emphatically the folly of our age. All classes are guilty of it, and in consequence rush headlong to the adoption of theories which destroy the truth, and stultify themselves.

General facts are the laws by and through which God sustains all things and operates upon them. By these laws a relationship is established between him and man, who is subjugated to their operation in common with minerals and vegetables.

Thus, electricity acts uniformly whatever the nature of the thing acted upon; the products of that action vary according to the medium through which it acts. Like electricities repel, and unlike ones attract, whether minerals, vegetables, clouds or animal substances be the subject of their power."

Now, how does God speak to man? This is a point our readers should critically investigate. Millions of people known as spiritualists claim that he speaks to man by means of dead men's ghosts, which they claim are deathless in their nature, and whose powers are intensified when separated from the mortal body, and these are made the means of communication between the supposed inhabitants of heaven and earth.

The above theory upon investigation is proven not only to be unscientific, but positively unscriptural.

The doctrine that the above imaginary intelligences exist, lies at the foundation of every false religious system, as for instance the Roman Catholic worship of saints. The Roman church creates saints at her pleasure, out of some dead Catholic, which their church think worthy of the honor, and each good Catholic must have one of these saints assigned as his or her patron saint, to whom they must pray, and ask them to intercede in their behalf, with Jesus and the "holy mother of God." This is their means of communication.

This error lies at the base of the Mohammedan apostacy. The devout follower of Mahommet is promised that at death his immortal spirit shall ascend to heaven, and a numerous harem of spirit-wives will be assigned him, whereby he can revel in sensual pleasure to his heart's content. We and the leading denominations of the Protestant Church. The heathenish doctrine of eternal torment is also based upon the existence of the imaginary immortal spirit, which spiritualists claim is not only the medium of communication between God and man, but between all the inhabitants of heaven and earth.

In the next article we will introduce the quotation showing how God speaks to man, which in the past has not been by dead men's ghosts, but by means of his Holy Spirit.

Opening of the Seals.

"And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the Word of God, and for the testimony which they held: and they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said to them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were should be fulfilled." Rev. vi. 9-11. The souls that John saw under the altar were the persons who holding the truth as taught in the Holy Scripture, were a reproach to those who had departed from the truth, and were gone into apostasy. Here we see the truth of what the Master said. "I am not come to send peace, but a sword." There is an irrepressible conflict between truth and error—hence the death of the witnesses to the truth. That the souls are the persons should be evident from the fact that they cry for vengeance on account of their blood: the word soul being used in the sense given to it in the Old Testament, for instance, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Ezekiel. The altar is the altar of sacrifice upon which they offered themselves, sealing the truth with their blood. Some claim that this seal had its fulfillment in the time of the persecutions under Diocletian A. D. 303 to 313. That view is open to many objections: In the first place it necessitates the crowding of the first, second, third and fourth seals into a space of about one century. The reason for this position, I think, is found in the fact that during the early centuries of the Christian era, there was an expectation of the coming of Christ, and the end of the world—therefore those who attempted to fix the time of the different seals fixed upon some event that happened in their day as a fulfillment of the symbols of the different seals; and others coming later on have followed in the beaten track of those who had gone before. I see in our day an illustration of this principle of interpretation. In the time of Wm. Miller and his co-workers, they thought that what they called the end of the world would be in A. D. 1843 to 44.

Now, those known as Seventh Day Adventists thought that they discovered that they had been engaged in giving the first message of Rev. xiv. 7. And the two other messages were to follow before the coming of the Son of Man on the white cloud. So they set themselves to the work of giving the second message, and completed that in about six months: and why? Because the Lord was coming in a short time and they must give the third angel's message, and they have been working at that message for some sixty years. In the second place, if this fifth seal has reference to the martyrs that suffered at the hands of the pagans, it has no reference to any that were put to death by the little horn of Dan. vii. 25. This power was to make war with the saints and to overcome them. Rev. xiii. 7. This view of applying the martyrs of the fifth seal to those who suffered by the pagans, makes a mountain of a mole hill, as compared to those that suffered under the man of sin—the Papacy—and passes in silence the mountain, whereas in the Prophets and in the Apostles the Apostasy, the body [illegible]

Again, the little season that the martyrs were told to rest, does not fit the time from the days of Diocletian, because the time of rewards and punishments, to destroy them that destroy the earth, does not come until the sounding of the seventh trumpet. Rev. xi. 18.

Literally, the martyrs do not petition for vengeance on their persecutors: Christ says, "Father, forgive them.' Stephen says, "Lay not this sin to their charge." John Huss when brought to the stake exclaimed: "May thy infinite mercy, O my God, pardon this injustice of mine enemies."

The symbols of the Revelation only touch upon a few of the most important events of the world's history. The next great event after the fall of Constantinople was the reformation, which brought to light the martyrs under the altar, made them cry with a loud voice, and gave to them white robes. In order to understand the loud cry of the martyrs, and the giving to them the white robes, it is necessary to have an understanding of the symbols of chapter ten. The preceding context to chapter ten, reveals to us the fact, that the followers of Mahommet, compared to locusts from the Arabian desert, were brought by the Almighty, as a scourge to the apostate Christians, who had departed from the worship of the one true God, and were worshiping devils (demons) idols of gold and silver and of brass and of stone. But those plagues wrought no reformation for it is written, "Neither repented they of their murders, nor of their sorceries, nor of their fornication, nor of their thefts." Rev. ix. 20-21.

Now comes the angel of chapter ten; mighty and clothed with a cloud—symbol of majesty, "and a rainbow was upon his head," showing that he comes in the fulfilment of God's covenant. "His face as it were the Sun, and feet as pillars of fire; and he had in his hand a little book open; and he set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot on the earth. And cried with a loud voice as when a lion roareth; and when he had cried seven thunders uttered their voices." x. 1-3. This angel is a symbol of the reformers, who taking the Bible (the little book) cried with a loud voice against the abominations of the Apostasy. The light eminating from the open book made the angel's face as the sun. They travelled by sea and land, and the light of truth which they taught dispelled the darkness and superstition of the harlot of the scarlet robe. Fire being a consuming element, the feet of the angel are compared to pillars of fire. The Apostle Paul in 2 Thessalonians ii. 8, says in speaking of the falling away, and the revealment of the man of sin, "whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy by the brightness of his coming." By sea and land wherever the reformers went they by light from the open book dispelled the darkness of the Apostasy. One extract from Mosheim I will here introduce. "From this time, therefore he (Luther) applied himself to the pursuit of the truth with increased assiduity and fervor; nor did he only review with attention and confirm with new arguments, what he had hitherto taught, but went far beyond it, and made vigorous attacks upon the principle fortress of popery; the power and jurisdiction of the Roman pontiff, which he overturned from its very foundation. In this noble undertaking he was seconded by many learned and pious men, in various parts of Europe; by those professors of the university of Wittenberg, who adopted his principles; and in a more especial manner by the celebrated Melancthon; and, as the fame of Luther's wisdom and Melancthon's learning had filled that academy with an incredible number of students, who flocked to it from all parts, this happy circumstance propagated the principles of the Reformation with an amazing rapidity through all the countries of Europe." Mosheim ch. 2, p. 397.

This tendency of the reformers is what [illegible] they cry with a loud voice? By a figure of speech dead or inanimate things are made to speak. Thus the blood of Abel is said to have cried to God from the ground Gen. iv. 9-10. The stone cried out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber answered it. Hab. ii. 11. The hire of laborers kept back by fraud cried. James v. 4. So the souls of the martyrs could cry, and not thereby be proved to be conscious. If the blood of one righteous man (Abel) could, and did cry to God from the ground; how much more should the blood of hundreds of thousands be represented as crying with a loud voice. "How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth." John saw the white horse of the first seal; the inhabitants of the Roman empire who lived during the period of the seal, saw the things in fact, what John saw in symbol. He saw in symbol the souls under the altar, and heard their cry long before they were slain. But the people who lived in the time of the Reformation, and understood the truth taught by the reformers, saw the things John saw in symbol, they saw them in fact, and the truth that the martyrs were like Abel, the righteous ones, and their persecutors who put them to death were the real criminals. Therefore the sight of the slain appealed to them with great force, and called to God for vengeance on their murderers. The white robes given to them were symbols of righteousness, which was now attributed to the martyrs, who before the reception of the light from the little book in the hand of the angel, were considered as criminals and not worthy to live. We have not yet arrived at the time of the opening of the sixth seal, but think we see signs of the coming earthquake.

GEO. FRANCIS.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

I presume you have read the announcement of the Conference of the Church of God, to be held at Waterloo, Ia., commencing Aug. 24th next. I write this as a special invitation to all, to attend this Conference. An extra effort has been made this summer by the brethren, to add to the comfort of all who favor us with their presence. The ground and natural surroundings selected for holding our annual Conferences is sufficient of itself to induce members to lay aside their earthly cares, and spend a week with the brethren and sisters, enjoying their society in the shaded grove on the bank of the beautiful Cedar river, resting from toil and cares of life, and have their spiritual strength renewed as well. No pains or labor have been spared to beautify the ground by cleaning out the underbrush, leaving only the natural trees for shade, and with the large and commodius dining hall, erected this summer, the committee will be amply prepared to care for all those in attendance.

We want all to make an extra effort to come, and be prepared to take an active part in the meetings. Blessings are in store for all, then let us meet together and enjoy them. We as a people advocate the coming of Christ, and the establishment of the kingdom, and expect to share a part in blessing the nations of the earth. We also believe that the times of the Gentiles are near a close. How important it is for us to avail ourselves of every opportunity that will aid us in keeping our lamps trimmed and burning and oil in our vessels. Your presence is needed, and we have no hesitancy in saying, that you will return to your homes amply paid for all the sacrifice you make. An invitation is extended to members outside the State of Iowa.

Your Brother in the faith,
P. B. STOUFFER, Cor. Sec.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A Lesson in Faith.

While Mr Moody was in St. Louis he desired to illustrate faith—what it is, and what it does. Among the thousands who were hanging upon his words he noticed three little boys close to the platform and spoke to them.

"Boys," he said, "you know what it is to believe, don't you? If I should tell you that I had a New Testament in this pocket, would you believe me?"

"Yes, sir," answered the surprised boys.

"Well, I am glad of that; that shows you have confidence in my character. Now, I tell you that I have a Testament in this pocket; do you believe that I have?"

"Yes, sir," said the boys again.

"There it is," said Mr. Moody, drawing out a pretty Testament; "now you see your faith was not in vain. I'll give this Testament to one of you, if you'll come and take it."

The boys laughed, but not a boy budged.

"Don't you believe me?" he continued. "This is my Testament, and I tell you it shall be yours if you will come and take it. Won't you come, not one of you?"

A gentleman seated behind the boys leaned forward and whispered to one of them: "Why don't you go? Never mind if they do laugh, it can't do any harm."

At last the smallest of the boys walked up to the platform and held out his hand, in which Mr. Moody at once placed the Testament.

"What are you so astonished about?" he asked. "I told you I'd give it to you, and I always believe me and keep my promise!" "My friends," turning to the audience, "that is faith and does—it takes God at his word, and it does not apply only to the initial step of the Christian life, but to every part of the way; for are there not great and precious promises for all occasions, for temporal needs, for entangling difficulties, for sore spiritual trials? Let us believe that he is faithful that has promised, and thank God and take courage. Our Father has made faith the condition. How wise! The poorest child can meet the condition without money and without price, and be rich in faith. Even so, Father, for so it seemeth good in thy sight. Faith is giving God credit for telling the truth."

Getting Cheated by Satan.

The old prophet cried to Israel to put on God's strength. We do this in lower realms. Men are slow of foot, but they put on speed in the railroad train and travel fifty miles an hour. Men are weak of voice, but they put on God's strength in the telephone and talk from city to city while thought flashes from mountain top to mountain top on the unseen couriers of the air. These things are given us of God and we rejoice in them, but in moral and spiritual things we are not so wise. Men go to the devil for strength. They have been doing it for six thousand years and getting cheated all the time.

Eve went to him. She wanted knowledge, she got it. She got the sweat drop, and the blood drop, and the curse to all humanity. Men go to him now. They want financial strength. They cheat and lie and write somebody else's name to a note. They get a prisoner's cell. A man wants his blood warmed. He takes something to stimulate him. He gets out the bleared eye and the pauper's grave. When you deal with Satan, you give health and get sickness; you give in happiness and get out misery; you give in life and get out death; you give in heaven and get out the hottest place in hell.—The Pulpit.

O, blessed Savior, come and cleanse this world from all uncleanliness! O, blessed Savior, come with ten thousand of thy mighty virgins! O, blessed Savior, why dost thou prolong it? [illegible] waiting Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

The "Jewish World," says in connection with the Zionist movement:—

"We are now in a position to amplify the announcement made in our last issue respecting the interview of Dr. Herzl with the Sultan. On Friday, the 17th of May, after witnessing the Semalik, the solemn procession of the Sultan to the Friday service, from the pavilion reserved for the Imperial guests, Dr. Herzl was invited by an Adjutant to Yildiz-Kiosk, where he was received by the Sultan in an audience lasting two and a quarter hours. At the close of the audience Dr. Herzle was given the grand cordon of the Medjidic Order, one of the highest decorations bestowed by the Sultan.

On Friday evening Dr. Herzl, Dr. Oscar Marnovek, and Herr D. Wolffsohn attended service at the German-Austrian Synagogue, where they were received by the council of the congregation. The next morning Dr. Herzl was again called to the Palace, where he stayed from 10:30 till four in the afternoon. The departure from Constantinople had been fixed for Monday but had to be deferred, as Dr. Herzl and Herr Wolffsohn, who had again gone to the Palace at nine o'clock in the morning, remained there till five in the afternoon.

Before le[illegible]onstantinople Dr. Herz[illegible]d by the Sultan [illegible]rl pin, a further [illegible]or.

The [illegible]cle" says:—

"In [illegible] news from Constanti[illegible]ast always make full allo[illegible]cal color. Nevertheless, the [illegible]ionist leader and those whom he favors with his confidence appear to be well satisfied with the result of the mission to Constantinople. Exactly what Dr. Herzl has been able to accomplish, will not, we suppose, be known until he himself describes it from the Presidential Chair of the next Zionist Congress. But, whatever view of Zionism we may hold, nothing but congratulation can be offered to Dr. Herzl if he has accomplished anything substantial towards safe-guarding the position of the Jews in the Holy Land. The personal honors accorded to Dr. Herzl by the Sultan will be accepted as evidence that his majesty is not disinclined to welcome the Zionists as potential helpers in redeeming part of his dominions from "the dust of ages." And this is all to the good. That the mission to the Sultan, however gratifying the results may be regarded by enthusiastic Zionists, does not crown the Zionist mission no one knows better than Dr. Herzl. He will have but laid the foundation for the greater task which yet lies before him. All of us—and more especially those who oppose him and think the work he has undertaken impracticable—may well wait patiently for further developments, and for those details which will no doubt be forthcoming to encourage and strengthen the thousands of his faithful and zealous adherents."

Below we give an abridged report from the "Jewish Chronicle" of speeches by Dr. Herzl and Mr. Israel Zangwell at St. James Hall, London, before the Maccabeans:—

"Dr. Herzl was received with applause, and said: If it is true that God gave man language to conceal his thoughts, it is peculiarly true for me as regards the English language. But on this occasion I must not completely conceal my thoughts, although there are circumstances in which, in the very interest of what is at stake, not all can be said. There is a mean in things, and in this middle course I must the more keep in this hour and in this place since this club is neutral ground. I will now willingly admit that in the exposition and prosecution of our scheme we have often been at fault—that we were too unpractical in speech, too clumsy in action, inasmuch as we did not recognize thankfully enough the merits of those who worked before us, or simultaneously with us, for the interests of Judaism. All these misunderstandings and differences must be set at rest at this moment when we stand perhaps at the turning point in the destiny of the Jewish people. There were bad moments and there were good moments, in which one despaired and moments in which one hoped again. In such a good moment, in the autumn of 1898, it was that I told my brethren in the East End of London that I held the realization of my hopes to be nigh. I ought not to have said that. People fell on me as on a charlatan. The final judgment, however, will be spoken by a later generation which will have before its eyes all the evidence. Then it will be seen how truly I spoke on this occasion, and what it was that interfered.

Therefore, I from that time strongly resolved nevermore to awaken a hope, even when I had the strongest grounds therefore, moreover, I confess that the adversaries of premature communications have a certain measure of reason. It is better that the poor people should wait yet a little longer than that they should set out a little too early. The matter bristles with acute responsibilities, and the more seriously my friends and I take it the more cautious must we be. But there is that other danger—of saying too little. It lies in the possibility that people may believe there is nothing at all to say. Especially is it appropriate that one should say something on an occasion in which it is expected from one, that he will open his mouth not only to eat. And not only my present audience have I in mind, but I dare say the most distant members of our race on the continent and in other continents who will read the report of our proceedings to-night in the journals—in the journals of all languages—will all be asking the same question—What is the news?

"My last journey to Constantinople and the extraordinary complimentary and friendly reception by which I was honored, eminently justifies this question. I will answer it. You will not be immoderately surprised if I in Jewish fashion, answer this question with another. But when you, the present company hear the interrogative reply, when those who are far away read it, it may be that the whole Jewish question rises in its misery and its majesty. My question—my Jewish question,—The Jewish question is:—Are you ready? Are you ready to show yourself grateful for an historic succor which is being brought you? Are you ready to stand by him who is ready to stand by you? How great, how swift is your readiness? I speak, as you see, of money.....We want at once about two million pounds. As you will recollect, this was the amount my friends and I asked for when we established the financial instrument of our movement—The Jewish Colonial Trust in London. The response did not come up to our expectation, although money enough came in to make possible the foundation of the Trust. If the Jewish people, when they hear the demand I make to-day, add, say, one and one-half million to what we have already in our coffers, then, we can make a very definite step toward.....Circumstances have so shaped themselves that I am compelled to speak of money as for the moment the most important matter. But in this company of philosophers and artists, poets and scholars, I may be allowed to call to mind with a word or two the innermost and the deepest meaning of the new Jewish Movement. We must begin with money, but something grander than pounds, shillings and peuce, must and shall follow—work, culture, moral welfare."

Mr. O. Zangwell who presided, said he was surprised at the smallness of the amount called for. What was one and one-half million pounds; he said the British Government had taken as much as that as death duties from the estate of the late Baron Hirsh. What was one dollar per head from the Jews of the world.

Over the signature of Pester Lloyd in Glad Tidings, we find the condition of Turkey set forth. And if what he said be true, it easily accounts for the small amount called for in order that the Zionists can make a forward movement, as the Sultan is not in a position to drive a hard bargain. It says:

"Count Tolnchowski was speaking to the Hungarian delegation on the Macedonia question. He points out that there could not be a lasting set[illegible]tlement without a radical change in the methods of the Turkish Government.....This very day a fresh list of those condemned "in contumacium" is published, containing the names of Secretaries of the Embassy, Consuls, Ministers, Journalists, Officers, Seamen, Advocates, Students and even Priests.

On the other hand the secretaries of the Turkish Embassy in Paris, and the Consul-general there have published their ultimatum to the Porte—they say they must receive their salaries or they will join the Young Turks. Here is a definite issue: Pay us the money you owe us, or we make a revolution .....Now the people are awake—only the Sublime Porte is sleeping the sleep of the Middle Ages, and will not see the signs and wonders of the times."

Is Baptism Essential.

For E. E.,—Please notice that Christ himself who knew no sin, and in whose mouth there was no guile, was not excused from obeying the command,—and the Apostle Paul could not be excepted,—and seeing all the early believers submitted to the ordinance at the command of inspired men, who received their commission from the Great Head of the church himself, how can you dare to call baptism an unnecessary rite, and refuse to obey it? How can you presume to set aside a positive command of God? God never commands unnecessary things. It is quite evident to us that you have something to do before you are a fit subject for baptism. You have to learn that only he who does the will of the Father will inherit God's Kingdom with everlasting life. Jesus expressed that will of the Father in this respect when he said of the Gospel of the Kingdom, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." We must be faithful with you, and say to you,—You have not believed that gospel yet. It offers you life and glory in the kingdom without money and without price, although not worthy of it, and without means to purchase it. If you have come to the conclusion that the gift is a vast one, and desirable, it is not the love of the offerer that constrains you to enquire about it. If it were, you would not seek to evade the very condition intended to prove you a fit recipient of it. In a word, you need to be converted; you need to experience the transforming power of the truth, and then like Paul you would say, as the scales fell from your eyes, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do."

We said you had not yet believed the gospel. This does not mean that you doubt the truth of the promises relating to the throne and kingdom which is to fill the earth with God's glory; any inquiry from you respecting it proves that you believe some will inherit it. But one of the most precious parts of the gospel for sinners such as we, is that those who believe the things concerning the kingdom of God can obtain pardon for sins of the past, and become a joint-heir with the Anointed Jesus of the things he is heir to, by baptism into the saving name of Jesus—and this you show yourself utterly faithless about.

Besides faithlessness in that part of the gospel your position proves you do not understand what it means to be baptized into the death of Christ. Unbelief is a blinding thing of tremendous power. You do not see that there is no resurrection for you unless you are planted together in the likeness of his death. Rom. vi. 3-5. You do not see that baptism recognizes the law passed upon us, and thus dying symbolically, we assent to the righteousness of that law. Handing our body over to the grave, we rise new creatures in Christ Jesus. "Old things are passed away, behold all things are become new," for we have passed, in a figure, "from death unto life." We have now to walk as Christ walked, forgetting the things that are behind, reaching forth unto those things that are before, and remain; toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

We plead with you to believe first—believe with the heart, mind, affection—then turn away from sin, and you will not then seek to evade one of the most gracious ordinances of heaven for your own benefit.

We have received an article from some person not far away from our office, that is incomplete. No names signed or given. We cannot use the communication on this account. The Creation of Man.

We saw in a former paper that when God made the earth he had a definite purpose in view, which was "that it should be inhabited;" and the being whose home it was intended above all others to be, was man. It was said with a view to placing man on the earth, that God made the light and caused the earth to bring forth the various kinds of vegetable products, bearing fruit and seed each after its kind.

To the creation of man and its object we will attend in this article.

"And God said, Let us make man." Gen. i. 26. Man being "made, created, formed," there must have been a time when there was no man; and hence man did not have a pre-existence, of which the philosophers have spoken learnedly—in other words, man is not eternal, but there was a time when man began to be.

The material of which man was made, we are told, is "dust of the ground" (Gen. ii. 7; iii. 19; Eccl. iii. 19;) and hence man is, as the earth from which he was taken, a material being; "out of the earth, earthy." 1 Cor. xv. 47.

The Scripture narrative further sets forth that "God formed man," molded, fashioned, or gave him shape, as to bodily appearance. But as yet there was no life in him; hence, in order that he might be a living, moving, acting being, "the Lord breathed into his nostrils the breath of life." (breath of lives. Marg.)

Notice first, "Breathed into his nostrils." Whose nostrils? Those of the man made of the dust: he had been "formed" with every member of his body complete, and all that was required, was that the machinery be set in motion.

Then observe, "Breathed into his nostrils." Breath (ruach), the vehicle of the spirit of life, with other things, is necessary to man's subsistence, for "the body (however perfect its form and complete its parts) without spirit is dead." Jas. ii. 26. This "spirit of God in the nostrils" (Job xxvii. 3) is more than simply air in the abstract, but is or contains the principle of life that pervades every part of God's creation. As a great reservoir it surrounds the earth, and from this vast fountain all of God's creatures derive their vitality, from the infinitesimal form to man.

The result of this infusion was that "man became a living soul." Before this he had not been a living soul, but a lifeless one. The term soul, as used in the Hebrew (nephesh), and here applied to man, means a breathing being; or still more strictly, "A breather." God breathed (naphach) into man's nostrils,.....and man became a breather (nephesh). The general view is that because the term soul is applied to man, he is therefore immortal, this misconception arising from the Platonic error of the immortality of the soul. But nothing could be farther from the truth. If on account of his being soul man were immortal, this would also be true of every other form of animate life, from the worm creeping in the dust up to man, for this identic term nephesh, in Gen. i. 7 rendered soul, is applied to animals before man is even mentioned. And not only this, but is employed to designate creeping things and beasts no less than 29 times in the Old Testament, and is rendered into English by 36 different words, the more prominent among which are soul, life, person, self, heart, mind, beast, body and even dead. Therefore, if man is an immortal being, it must be upon other grounds than his being a soul or soulical, for everything that breathes is or has soul, according to the Bible.

I wish to add a few observations on the term "breath of life," as used in connection with man in Gen. ii. 7. This term, in common with soul, is applied to man and beast alike. If the reader will turn to Gen. vi. 17; vii. 15, 22; he will see that the above statement is correct; and by examination of the last-named reference he will see that "all in whose nostrils was the breath of the spirit of life, of all that was in the dry land (all flesh; man and beast alike) died." In view of this well-known and understood fact, the wise man said, "They (men and animals) have all one breath" (or spirit; ruach). Eccl. iii. 19-21.

The source of this spirit life is indicated in Gen. i. 2, "And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." That is the fountain or reservoir of life. How vast and how adequate.

If this breath or spirit life be withdrawn, the result is death, according to the formula laid down by James: "The body without spirit is dead." "Thou takest away their breath (ruach); they die, and return to their dust." Psa. civ. 29. This pertains to "small and great beasts." (v. 25). As to man it is said, "His breath (ruach) goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Psa. cxlvi. 4. A free rendering of Luther's translation of this passage is, "In that very day his devices cease."

From the above we make the following remarks:

(a) Man is of the earth; so are the animals. Gen. ii. 19.

(b) Man was formed; so were they.

(c) Man breathes the breath of life; so do they.

(d) Man is a soulical being; so are they. Num xxxi. 28; Job xii. 10.

(e) Man is to live on the products of the earth; so are they. Psa. civ. 14.

Here it might be objected that if all this be true, in what respect, then, is man better than or superior to the animals? But let not the reader be apprehensive least we degrade man or unduly exalt the beast. I only wish to impress upon the reader's attention the fact that man is a soulical being; later we will trace out God's intention and plan to bring him upon the spiritual plane. As to the above stated facts regarding the nature of man, they cannot be successfully contradicted by any one. It is therefore our duty to deal with them.

One remark we will make as to man, which is part of our subject, namely this: It is said, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness," and, "God made man in his image, in the image of God made he him." Gen. i. 26, 27. What does this image of God mean? It is assumed that this imports immortality; but to reach such a conclusion it is necessary to state your premises thus:

Major premise: God is immortal.

Minor premise: God made man in his image.

Conclusion: Therefore man is immortal. But who will say that the image of God pre-eminently means immortality? If this is affirmed, let me ask, Why may we not include some other attributes of God and draw conclusions?—as for instance:

Major premise: God is omnipotent, omnipresent and omniscient.

Minor premise: God made man in his image.

Conclusion: Therefore man is omnipotent, omnipresent, and omniscient.

It is simply an assumption that the above term means immortality, but assumption is no proof. Let it be borne in mind that man was made in the image, but not in the nature of God. The former does not necessitate the latter any more than that man is a sharer of any of the other attributes of infinity. Why single out immortality, and insist that it pertains to man?

But as this paper is lengthy enough, we will leave further consideration for our next.

Blow Ye the Trumpet.

"Blow ye the trumpet in Zion, sound an alarm in my holy mountain: let all the inhabitants of the land tremble; for the day of the Lord cometh, for it is nigh at hand." This is a warning that the Lord has commanded to be given. When the time is at hand for it, you may be sure that its warning notes will be heard; for everything that the Lord decrees must come to pass. Every one of the prophecies point to the fact that we have reached the very time when God is giving the message that "the day of the Lord" "is nigh at hand." It is not a man-made message, nor does it come from the theorizing of men. The very soul of all mankind is being awakened to the fact that some great event is hanging over the world. Those who take the time to study the Bible know that the event is the coming of the Lord. Do you know it? The Lord designs that you should; and if you will but take his Word for your guide, you will be overwhelmed by the evidence that the end of all things is at hand. The great thing before us is to get ready for it.—Signs of the Times.

A Judge on Gambling.

In a fashionable winter resort in the South, a judge of the Superior Court charged the grand jury to put an end to fashionable gambling. It will startle some people who profess to be Christians to find that playing for prizes is an offense punishable by law. Here is the charge: "I am aware that progressive euchre playing is very popular in society circles, and is played in the houses of some of the most prominent citizens and by some of the most estimable ladies of your acquaintance, but that does not excuse it. The law specifies that whenever card playing is indulged in for a consideration, whether it be money or prizes of intrinsic value, it is gambling, and punishable with as little mercy as is extended to the most hardened criminal. I am aware that it is asking a good deal of you gentlemen to take this matter under serious consideration, but you must do so in order to faithfully discharge your oaths as jurors."

A man can counterfeit love, he can counterfeit faith, he can counterfeit hope and all other graces, but cannot counterfeit humility. They have a saying in the East among the Arabs, that as the tares and wheat grow, they show which God has blessed, how their heads and acknowledge every grain, and the more faithful they are, the lower their heads are bowed. The tares which God has sent as a curse, lift up their heads erect, high above the wheat, but they are only fruitful of evil. I have a pear tree on my farm which is very beautiful: it appears to be one of the most beautiful trees on my place. Every branch seems to be reaching up to the light and stands almost like a wax candle, but I never get any fruit from it. I have another tree, which was so full of fruit last year that the branches almost touched the ground. If we only get down low enough, my friends, God will use every one of us to his glory.—D. L. Moody.

Conference Notice.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God of Indiana will be held (D. V.) at Burr Oak, Marshall Co. Ind., commencing Thursday A. M. September 5th and continue over the following Sunday.

As this is the time for election of officers and other important business, it is urgently requested that each congregation be represented by delegates, one delegate for every ten members.

The brethren of Burr Oak will put forth every effort to entertain the visiting brethren, and are desirous of a large representation.

Burr Oak is on the Nickel Plate R. R. one and one-half mile west of Hibbard, the crossing of the Nickel Plat and Vandalia R. R. and about three miles north of Culver. Please consult time tables in Restitution for time of trains allowing on the Vandalia about one-half hour for time between Plymouth and Hibbard.

By notifying brothers G. A. Maxey at Burr Oak or Samuel Osborne at Culver, brethren from a distance will find conveyance at Hibbard.

Obituary.

Howard Rohrer Steffa, only son of Brother and Sister W. O. Steffa, was born in Pomona, Cal., on Nov. 25, 1897, and fell asleep July 10, 1901; aged 4 years, 7 months and 20 days. The funeral services took place on Friday afternoon from the family home on East Holt avenue and were conducted by Rev. Grant K. Lewis of the Christian Church. The sermon was preached from 1 Thes. iv. 13-18, and was a tender exhortation to the bereaved family to "sorrow not even as others who have no hope." The presence of many friends and the profusion of beautiful floral offerings attested to the genuine sympathy the community feels for the sorrowing family. Little Howard was laid to rest in Pomona Cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

Poetry.

Come and Reign.

Come Jesus, King of kings,
And reign on David's throne;
O come and life eternal bring,
And gather Israel home.

Raise Abram from the dead,
Who did believe thy Word,
And not his mighty with was made,
The friend and heir of God.

Gather his precious, scattered seed,
From every land and clime,
And set the them in very deed,
In promised Palestine.

Thy Gentile pilgrims sigh,
To be with Israel blest.
The long sought hour is nigh,
Come give thy people rest.

When pain and sickness seize,
Upon our mortal frame,
We then with heart-felt sorrow grieve
For Christ to come and reign.

We long for sin to cease,
Oppression, death and pain,
But we shall never taste health or peace,
Till Jesus comes to reign.

O come thou mighty King,
Take David's royal throne:
All powers into subjection bring,
For all thy powers shall own.

Let proud, vain Gentile strike cease,
To curse whom God hath blest,
If you his judgments 'll now would shun,
Or gain his promised rest.

Come great Restorer, come,
Cleanse earth from every stain;
Come earth like Eden yet to bloom.
Come Jesus, come and reign.

—A. A. Perry—Howard, in 1856.

Our Prospect.

How cheering the thought that the day is so near,
When Jesus our Savior a King shall appear;
To reign on Mount Zion where David did reign,
And bring back that land to an Eden again.

He comes to prepare in Mount Zion a feast,
The meek of all nations will be the glad guest,
Then both Jew and Gentile in that glorious day,
Will rejoice, for the veil will be taken away.

He comes; O he comes, the humble to bless,
To relieve the afflicted, the poor and oppressed,
To break every yoke, and the captive set free,
And bring on the great antitype Jubilee.

How cheering the thought to the sick and distressed,
Of a day of deliverance, of health, peace and rest,
From all the confusion and sorrow and strife,
And evils unnumbered of this bitter life.

He comes as a conqueror mighty to save,
And raise up his people who sleep in the grave,
Then with joy everlasting and triumph they'll come,
To Zion, Mount Zion, their long-promised home.

He comes to fulfil all the promises made,
To Abram and David, and their promised seed,
And also to Gentiles, who have been grafted in
To Christ; made partakers, and freed from all sin.

We long for that bright day of promise to come,
When Israel no longer in exile shall roam,
Far away from their land by cruel fire oppressed,
Still longing and sighing for their promised rest.

He comes to dethrone all the monarchs of earth,
And give us a government holy and just,
And destroy every nation that will not submit,
To his righteous laws and bow at his feet.

Be patient, then, tried ones, though scatter'd and lone,
Though pilgrims and strangers o'er earth you now roam,
Be patient; remember the kingdom is sure,
To all who are meek and humble and pure

An Open Letter.

TO EPHESE REQUA, PASTOR OF THE M. E. CHURCH, BEAVER DAM, WIS.

In examining Dr. Clarke's Commentary that you so kindly loaned me, I find that the Doctor is greatly at a loss to know why the successors of the Apostles of the present day should have departed from the preaching of the Apostles on the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead. On 1 Cor. xv., the Doctor says, "One remark I cannot help making; the doctrine of the resurrection appears to have been thought of much more consequence among primitive Christians than it is now. How is this? The Apostles were continually insisting on it and exciting the followers of God to diligence, obedience, and cheerfulness through it, and their successors in the present day seldom mention it. So Apostles preached, and so primitive Christians believed; so we preach and so our hearers believe. There is not a doctrine in the gospel on which more stress is laid; and there is not a doctrine in the present system of practicing which is treated with greater neglect."

But the reason for this neglect on the part of the preachers of the present day is quite obvious. The doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and going to heaven at death have superseded the doctrine of the resurrection entirely. I was once talking with a man on the subject of the resurrection, and he told me that all the resurrection that he believed, is when the soul arises and goes to heaven. This man had been indoctrinated into that heathenish doctrine of the immortality of the soul. But Paul in 2 Tim. 17, 18 warns Timothy against this heathenish philosophy, and says, 'Hymeneus and Philetus have erred, saying that the resurrection is past already; and overthrow the faith of some." The man that I was talking with is in complete harmony with these men. The faith that Paul labored so strenuously to establish, was overthrown in the minds of some, by Hymeneus and Philetus. It is taught by the present day preachers that the righteous go to heaven from a death-bed, and that is good enough. They do not care for the resurrection of the old clog of clay. Such a resurrection they cannot contemplate with complacency. This is undoubtedly the reason why the doctrine of the resurrection has fallen into such a woeful disrepute among the preachers of the present day. I have studied Dr. Clarke pretty thoroughly and I have failed to find any thought that the doctrine of going to heaven has no sanction in Scripture; but on the contrary, it corrupts the blessed Savior with falsehood; for he plainly said: "No man hath ascended up to heaven;" and Peter said also, "David is not ascended into heaven." But on the other hand the Doctor seems to have imbibed the very doctrine of Hymeneus and Philetus and the man I was talking with. I therefore charge him with being responsible in a great measure for the indifference in regard to the resurrection that he complains of. Why should he not say plainly and distinctly that there is no proof in Scripture that the righteous shall go to heaven. But this doctrine is a strict fulfillment of Paul in 2 Tim. iv. 3, 4, "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned unto fables."

This warning of the Apostle is having its fulfilment in these days. The Doctor in commenting on this expression of Paul, "For the time will come," says, There is a time coming to the church, when men will not bear the practical truths of the gospel; when they will prefer speculative opinions. It is strange that the Doctor cannot see that he is upholding these speculative opinions. "Having itching ears," "abandoning the good and faithful preacher for the fine speaker," with a Rev. at one end of his name, and a D. D. at the other. "And shall be turned unto fables," believe any kind of stuff and nonsense. This is just what the Doctor is teaching—stuff and nonsense. How true.

The Doctor says of the resurrection of the just and the unjust, "that the souls of both shall be re-united to their respective bodies, and that both will be immortal and live eternally; the wicked being sent to hell, and the righteous taken to heaven." Oh, what stuff and nonsense. My advice to the Doctor and others is, refrain from such language and from such a doctrine lest you be found even to fight against God, for God says by his servant David, "All the wicked will he destroy. And the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away."

In the language of the Doctor above quoted, it is evident that he is "fighting against God," for it is not possible to destroy that which is indestructible; nor to burn up that which is incombustible. But evidently the Doctor would spiritualize, or symbolize, or mystify the many declarations that are found in Scripture that the wicked shall not live forever. Paul shows clearly that immortality, eternal life, is a gift of God to those, and to those only who seek for it by patient continuance in well doing; and it is put on at the resurrection of the just. See Rom. ii. 7; 1 Cor. xv. 42, 43, 44. I would advise Dr. Clarke and all his coadjutors to give up the doctrine of inherent immortality, and seek for immortality by "patient continuance in well doing."

I am fully satisfied that those that believe such an unscriptural doctrine, shut themselves out from having any part in the first resurrection. It is very evident that Paul had the doctrine of the immortality of the soul to contend with in his day; for in writing to his Colossian brethren (Col. ii. 8,) he says, "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." Paul seems to intimate that his brethren would be spoiled if they adopted this philosophic delusion; and it is very evident that the philosophy that he is warning his brethren against, is the Platonic doctrine of the immortality of the soul, for Plato lived long years before the birth of Jesus, and taught his philosophy with earnestness in Greece, and it was introduced into the Christian Church by Popery; and Protestants in protesting against Popery neglected this error; and adopted it as a Scriptural doctrine; and yet there is not within the lids of the Bible a thought that teaches it except Gen. iii. 4, "Ye shall not surely die;" and ver. 5, "Ye shall be as gods knowing good and evil." I once heard a Rev. D. D. make this assertion in Beaver Dam, Wis., "The soul is like God." I could not help thinking that this was about as the serpent put it.

The doctrine of the immortality of the soul is the foundation of all the errors that have ever cursed mankind. Not one doctrine except Mormonism, but has its foundation in that abomination; the Platonic philosophy of the soul. If all Christians would come into line with Paul, 1 Cor. xv. 18, "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished," they would realize that salvation depends upon the resurrection. If no resurrection, then no salvation for the fallen asleep in Christ. This appears to have been Paul's motto; but the motto of the present day preachers appears to be the Platonic doctrine of the immortality of the soul and of going to heaven.

In commenting on Rev. xvii. 5, Dr. Clarke does not hesitate to call Papal Rome or the Roman Catholic Church, the Mother of Harlots; but he says nothing about the daughters of that Mother. But we wish to enquire who the daughters are? We believe that all Christians who adopt the doctrine of the Romish Church are her daughters. And certainly the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, is a distinctive feature of the Roman Catholic church; and all orthodox churches (so called) are fully in the belief of that doctrine, and consequently are strictly speaking, the daughters of that mother.

On Rev. xx. 13, the Doctor says of hell (Hades) the place of separate spirits. The sea and death have the bodies of all human beings. Hades has their spirits. And, that they may be judged, and punished or rewarded according to their works, their bodies and souls must be reunited; hades, therefore, gives up the spirits; and the sea and the earth give up their bodies. If this is not "stuff and nonsense," I would not know where to find it.

I once heard a pastor of a Congregational Church say, "I am immortal." I also heard one of the members of his church say, "Mr.—— is a Universalist and he is sustained by Universalist money." Universalism is a direct and legitimate offspring of a belief in the natural immortality of the soul. And all who believe that doctrine, in order to be consistent, most certainly must believe in universal salvation; for the idea that God, all merciful and good, has made a lake of fire and brimstone in which any of his creatures shall dwell, is, and ought to be an exploded doctrine, for God says, "All the wicked will he destroy." The wicked die and that is the last of them; but if they are immortal they must have a dwelling place somewhere, they cannot be destroyed nor burned up.

But to return to Clarke, he speaks of principles which he thinks he finds revealed in the sacred writings and he says in note 27: "That the soul is immaterial and immortal, and can subsist independently of the body." Note 28, "That there will be a general resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust; that the souls of both shall be re-united to their respective bodies; and that both will be immortal and live eternally." Note 29, he speaks of judgment, "the wicked being sent to hell, and the righteous taken into heaven."

Here ends my strictures on Dr. Clarke's Commentary.

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

The preceding paper was occupied with the manner in which "History repeated itself" in the controversies among Christadelphians concerning God Manifestation and the nature of our Lord's person. The contest between Arius and the champions of the Nicene creed, as leading up to the question of our Lord being "in the likeness of sinful flesh," was considered. The mention of Pelagius and Augustin in relation to the Virgin Mary suggests a quotation from the latter.

Pelagius had named the Virgin in a list of alleged sinless persons. Augustin replied, "The Holy Virgin Mary excepted, of whom, out of reverence for the Lord, I do not wish to take account, when speaking of sins; for greater grace was granted to her to overcome sin entirely." Neander on Dogmas II. p. 366. In his "Theological Dictionary" under the words "Conception," Immaculate, Eden has, "A doctrine early broached in the Greek and Roman churches, that the Virgin Mary was conceived without the stain of original sin. St. Bernard in the 12th century, opposed this doctrine, and was followed by the order of the Dominicans; on the other hand the Franciscans eagerly maintained this tenet which soon became the subject of fierce controversy between the rival schools of the Thomists, who impugned, and the Scotists, who favored this article of faith".....

Neander gives some instances of the theories of scholars. He says "although the universality of sin was admitted, yet the excessive veneration for the Virgin Mary made an exception in her case. At first there was a reference only to the committal of actual sins, not to original sin. Pascal Radbert maintained that Mary before the conception of Christ was freed by special grace from all sins in order to be a worthy organ for the birth of Christ. But in the 12th century the doctrine was broached that she was free from original sin, and the Canonists at Lyons instituted a festum immaculatae conceptionis. But Bernard of Clairvaux declared himself decidedly against it. 'We ought not, he said, to attribute to Mary what belongs only to one Being, by whom all must be purified, he alone excepted, all must say, I am born in sin. Peter Le Le Calle also combated this view, which had been advocated by Nicholas, an English monk".....

"The difference between the older Augustinian and the Antiochian views whether the sinlessness of Christ was to be represented as a non posse peccare, or a posse non peccare, is to be found also among the Schoolmen. Anselm touches upon it incidentally, and decides in favor of the former. 'Christ,' he says, 'could have sinned if he had so willed; but this possibility is only hypothetical; he did not, and could not, so will.' Dogmas II. p. 512. The Antiochians here were represented by Diodorus of Tarsus, and Theodorus of Mopsuestia.

"Thomas Aquinas did not hold with the doctrine of her Immaculate Conception. He says, 'In the Holy Scriptures we find nothing more than that the Mother of Christ was honored by grace before all others. On some individuals, as Elijah and Jeremiah, the distinction was bestowed of being sanctified from their birth; and this was true also of Mary, who was purified from her personal sin, but not from the guilt that is attached to human nature universally, for this would have encroached on the prerogative of Christ, as the Common Redeemer'.....

"Duns Scotus, on the contrary, maintained the conceptio Immaculate, and established it in the following manner. As Christ is the universal Redeemer and most perfect Mediator, it follows that in reference to one person he exercises this Mediatorship in the most perfect manner; accordingly she was not only freed from sin, but preserved from all sin, actual as well as original'.....This "doctrine was afterwards expressed more strongly by Raymund Lullie." Dogmas II. p. 279.

In A. D. 1387 the Dominican John of Montesovo put forward the assertion that it was expressly against the faith to teach that not all, Christ excepted, had been defiled with original sin, and that it was so to teach this of the Virgin Mary. That it was equally against Holy Writ to except one human being as to except ten." As this dispute was prolonged the Council of Basle about A. D. 1430 announced the decision that Mary by special prevenient and efficient grace had never been subject to the actuality of original sin, so that she was always free from original sin and actual sin."

In A. D. 1483, Pope Sixtus IV. issued a command to let the controversy cease, and ordained that those who maintained the doctrine that Mary at her conception was freed from original sin, was a heresy, were to be condemned.....uttered it in preaching was to be excommunicated."

The Council of Trent about A. D. 1546 renewed the decree of Sixtus.

Midway in the course of this fruitless controversy, appeared Muhomet. Neander mentions that one "Felix had written a Dialogue against the Saracens;" and that Islamism acknowledged Jesus as a prophet, hence Felix had no occasion to prove the divine mission of Christ; but the original doctrine of Christ was regarded by Mohammedans as corrupted by the Churches especially in the dogmas of the Trinity, and the Divinity of Christ." The following sentences from the Koran show how Mahomet viewed the matter. "The angels said, O Mary, verily God sendeth thee good tidings that thou shalt bear the word proceeding from himself. His name shall be Christ." p. 41. "When God shall say unto Jesus at the last day, O Jesus Son of Mary, Hast thou said unto men, take me and my mother for two gods beside God? He shall answer, Praise be unto thee, It is not for me to say that which I ought not. If I had said so, Thou wouldest surely have known it. Thou knowest what is in me, but I know not what is in thee; for thou art the knower of secrets, I have not spoken to thee any other than what thou dost command me; namely, worship God, my Lord and your Lord".....Sale's Koran 1807, pp. 41, 98.

Genesis. Chap. 29.

1. And Jakoob lifting up his feet went his way into a land of the east unto Laban, the son of Bathouel the Surian, a brother of Hrebekka, mother of Jakoob and Hesaau;

2. And he seeth and lo, a well on the plain; and there were three flocks of sheep resting by it; for from that well were they accustomed to water the flocks; and there was a great stone upon the mouth of the well.

3. And all the flocks were gathered there and they rolled away the stone from the mouth of the well, and watered the sheep and stood the stone back in its place upon the mouth of the well.

4. And Jakoob said unto them, Brethren, whence are ye? And they said, We are from Charran.

5. And he said unto them, Brethren, do ye know Laban, the son of Nachoor; and they said, We do know him.

6. And he said unto them, is he in good health? And they said, He is in good health. And lo, Hracheel, his daughter was coming with the sheep.

7. And Jakoob said, There is still much day; it is not yet the hour for the flocks to be gathered; do ye water the sheep and go away and let them feed.

8. And they said, We cannot until all the flocks be gathered together, and then they will roll away the stone from the mouth of the well, and we will water the sheep.

9. While he was yet talking to them, Lo, also Hracheel the daughter of Laban, was coming with the sheep of her father; for she was pasturing the sheep of her father.

10. And it came to pass when Jakoob saw Hracheel, the daughter of Laban, his mother's brother, Jakoob went and rolled away the stone from the mouth of the well, and watered the sheep of Laban his mother's brother;

11. And Jakoob kissed Hracheel and raising his voice lamented.

12. And he told Hracheel that he was her father's brother (really nephew of course as we should say) and that he was a son of Hrebekka; and she ran and told her father according to these things recounted.

13. And it came to pass when Laban heard the name of Jakoob, the son of his sister, he ran to meet him and embraced and kissed him, and conducted him into his house; and he discoursed to Laban all these events above recounted.

14. And Laban said unto him, Of my bones and my flesh art thou; and he was with him for a month of days.

15. And Laban said unto Jakoob, Thou shalt not serve me as a bond-servant for naught, because thou art my brother (same use as above). Tell me what thy wages are.

16. And Laban had two daughters, the name of the elder Leia, and the name of the younger Hracheel.

17. And Leia had weak eyes, but Hracheel was beautiful to the sight and very timely beautiful in appearance.

18. And Jakoob loved Hracheel, and he said, I will serve thee as a bond-servant seven years for Hracheel, thy younger daughter.

19. And Laban said, It is better that I should give her to thee than that I should give her to another husband; Take up thy abode with me.

20. And Jakoob served seven years for Hracheel as a bond-servant; and they were in his sight as a few days because he loved her.

21. And Jakoob said unto Laban, Give me my wife; for the days are fulfilled for me to go in unto her.

22 And Laban assembled all the prominent men of the place and appointed nuptials.

23. And it became evening; and he took Leia his daughter and conducted her in unto Jakoob; and Jakoob went in unto her.

24. And Laban gave Leia his daughter Zelpha his hand-maid for her hand-maid.

25. And it became morning, and lo, it was Leia; and Jakoob said unto Laban, What is this thou hast done unto me? Did I not serve with thee as a bond-servant for Hracheel; and why hast thou cheated me?

26. And Laban answered, It is not in this wise in our place, to give the younger before the older.

2. Do thou then consummate the seven for this one, and I will give her also to thee in return for thy work which thou mayest do for me these seven other years.

28 And Jakoob did in this wise and fulfilled the seven for her; and Laban gave Hracheel his daughter to him for a wife.

29. And Laban gave unto his daughter Balla his hand-maid for her hand maid.

30. And he went in unto Hracheel, and he loved Hracheel more than Leia; and he had served him seven other years as a bond-servant.

31. And when the Lord God saw that Leia was hated, he opened her womb; but Hracheel was sterile.

32. And Leia conceived and brought forth a son for Jakoob; and she called his name Hroubeau, saying, It is because the Lord saw my humiliation, and gave me a son, (meaning of the name "Red" like a blush of shame) now then my husband will love me;

33. And she conceived and brought forth a second son for Jakoob, and she said, It is because the Lord heard that I was hated, and he gave me this one also; and she called his name Sumeoon (Symeon C. V. and R. V.) (meaning of the name "God with me.")

34. And she conceived again and brought forth a son and said, In the present period my husband will be with me; for I have brought forth three sons for him. Therefore she called his name Leuei (or Leui or Leuis all these [illegible] given—the original of our Le[illegible]uis and probable meaning[illegible]

35. And s[illegible]gain and brought fo[illegible]said; now again will I[illegible] unto the Lord. There[illegible] his name Joudas (mea[illegible]ame "Lo-a-Divider" or [illegible]other" under an allotment. He became this) and she stopped bearing.

COMMENT.

Observe "a month of days" instead of "a month" merely C. V. and R. V. Thus early in Genesis even we have the different kinds of months and days and years distinguished to guide the student of the prophetic periods as given later in the Scriptures.

"Leia" meaning "Gentle," Hracheel" "a Root of Mercy Crossed"—the cross being between the root and the mercy to come, a very significant name in the Messianic line of genealogy. We have here the evidence that Symeon (Symeon C. V. and R. V.) is a good name and the reason no doubt why "Simoon Petros" (Simon Peter) changed his name Simoon to Sumeoon. See Peter's Second Epistle 1 verse. This name translated "God (Ho Con) with me." Simoon meaning "a sneerer." Leuis (Levi C. V. and R. V.) "a seer." The descendants became a tribe of seers. Joudas meaning "a Divider or Apportioner" became this for his brethren as historically shown and was the type of the Christ. As "the Divider of the spoils" with his brethren in the larger brotherhood of Christianity.

This is a "seed-word" chapter and full of significant and fundamental divine teaching. This biography of Jakoob is the most wonderful human biography in all literature and worthy of the profoundest study and reflection.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 280 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Excursion tickets to New York, good going or returning via Buffalo with stop-over at Pan-American Exposition, go on sale July 1st at principal ticket offices of Pennsylvania Lines.

Address, THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 50 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

Works of Rev. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old. 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Poetry.

Not Mine, but Thine.

All those who journey soon or late
Must pass within the garden's gate;
Must kneel alone in darkness there,
And battle with some fierce despair,
God pity those who cannot say,
"Not mine, but thine;" who only pray,
"Let this cup pass," and can not see
The purpose in Gethsemane.

Man Made in the Image of God.

We will now proceed to an examination of the term "the image of God." "Image," according to Webster, is "a representation or similitude, a likeness, a picture, a copy." Now, it is easily seen that a copy or likeness need not necessarily be of the same nature as the original. It is said concerning God, that he "is spirit." This statement, however, does not imply that God is not "a person," or "substance," according to the Greek of Heb. i. 3, (hupostasis.) It is said of Christ that he was "in the form of God." Phil. ii. 6. And he himself said to the Jews concerning God, "Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, nor seen his shape." (John v. 37,) thus implying that he has shape.

Jesus is called "a quickening spirit" 1 Cor. xv. 45, and "the Lord the spirit," (2 Cor. iii. 18;) and yet no one would deny that he is at the same time possessed of a real and tangible body, especially in view of his own words to the disciples after his resurrection, "Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself; HANDLE ME, and see, for a spirit (or "phantasm," Matt. xiv. 26; Mark vi. 49) hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have." Luke xxiv. 39. He even ate with them in demonstration of his real and bodily emergence from the tomb. But notwithstanding all this, the Scriptures speak of him as being "a spirit." Therefore the fact of God's being so designated does not argue against his substantiality.

While it is true that man has spirit, as we saw in our last, it can not be truthfully said that, as he is now constituted, man is spirit; it is nowhere in the Word of God affirmed that such is the case. "The first man is of the earth, earthy." In what sense, then, is he in the image of God? This no doubt has reference to his physical "form," as for instance in Gen. v. 3, "Adam.....begat a son in his own likeness, after his own image," &c. This son in some way resembled, was like, or "in the image" of his father, in physical appearance; yet as to man's being in the image of God, I do not believe that this is the only sense in which these words are to be taken. God has manifested himself to us as an intelligent being, capable of communicating his thoughts to other intelligences; and he has so organized and endowed man with mental faculties, as to be superior to the beasts over whom he was given authority to subdue and rule over them. It is in this respect that "man is better than a sheep" (Matt. xii. 12,) and "better than the fowls." Luke xii. 24. Thus, while partaking of the same earthy nature as the substance from which he was taken, and of the same soulical constitution as the beasts about him; in intelligence, in ability to reason, in capacity to rule, he towers high above the rest of God's earthly creatures, as the copy and counterpart of the Deity. And the "beasts of the field," though at times they rise against him in cowardly fear, recognize him as their ruler and superior.

Let it be distinctly borne in mind in this connection that the Bible does not say that the image of God is "in man," as we are sometimes told, but man was made "in the image of God." Neither was the image "breathed into his nostrils," as is supposed by some, but the breath of life was so infused. "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him." It is through the various organs of the body that the life imparted by God manifests itself; and where these parts are defective or wanting in development, the expression of that life is correspondingly incomplete. This is true of the brain; if certain parts of this organ are defective, as for instance that of memory, the mind can not retain the knowledge received; and so on with every other part of the brain. Thus we see that for the exercise of any given faculty of the mind there must be the presence of that member of the brain or body as its necessary background.

Neither can it be truthfully said that the life so imparted to man has consciousness as its attribute, for a man may be alive, and still be unconscious, as with the person under the influence of chloroform. And thus we see that the image of God is neither life itself, nor yet immortality, but the manner in which that life finds its expression in the man.

Man's intelligence involves also his power of choice between good and evil. He has been gifted with discernment as to the moral qualities of his actions; and this gift in turn involves the right and obligation of its exercise. This makes man a responsible being—responsible to his Creator who gives him commands to observe, for the consequences of his actions. This responsibility presupposes in man the capacity of bearing the penalty of wrong doing, should he decide on such a course.

What was the object of man's creation? Can we know? Has it been revealed? "Thou madest him to have dominion"—is the divine answer. Psa. viii. 6. "Let them have dominion..... over all the earth." Gen. i. 26–28. An almost boundless field of thought and action opens out before him. Will the reader take note of two things.

First. In giving authority to man over the garden God said, "Dress and keep it." (Gen. ii. 15,) implying that it was in a state of cultivation, prepared for man's occupancy and habitation. I take it that this was to give man a pattern and sample of what the earth was to be. What a beautiful and happy home this garden was to man, with its fruitful trees, its sparkling fountain, its irrigating and fructifying streams, and its invigorating "tree of life." What a delight to walk in this wonderful spot; what a pleasure to "dress and keep" such a garden; and what holy companionship of that happy pair thus installed by a beneficent Creator in the "garden of delights."

Second. As to the earth God said, "Subdue it," Gen. i. 28. As if to say to the man, "Look beyond the confines of the garden, for there are riches stored away in the soil and the rocks and the forests and the seas. Be not content with present possession, but aspire, look aloft and beyond; there are wider fields of thought and activity, but observe closely the pattern in the home beautiful." Thus was made possible the development of man's mind as he went to useful toil in the subjugation of the earth entrusted to his supervision. But "We see not yet all things put under him." Heb. ii. 8. A foreign element was introduced—sin; and man must bear the consequences of its introduction, man must die. Will sin frustrate the purpose of God Almighty? No, never! For then how could he be the Almighty?

In our next we will study the sin question.

A. H. ZIMMER.

Opening of the Seals.

"And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs, when shaken of a mighty wind; and the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places, and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains and the mighty men, and every bond man, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?" Rev. vi. 12–17.

The symbols of this seal, to the student of the prophets, should be so easily understood as to leave in the mind no uncertainty. Indeed, to say otherwise would be to cast a reflection on the ability of the Deity.

Believing this seal to be in the future, we cannot refer as in the previous seals, to the pages of history to bear testimony to the correctness of the prophecy; but will endeavor to prove that the events have not yet transpired, but are yet in the near future.

The first symbol is a great earthquake.

The earthquake as a symbol denotes great agitations, or overturning on the earth,—political or religious.

In Rev. xvi. 18, when the seventh angel pours out his vial we have the account of a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake and so great. The effects of this earthquake in many points are the same as the one under the sixth seal; therefore we conclude they are one and the same, and are yet in the future. Of the one it is written, And lo there was a great earthquake, of the other it is said, So mighty an earthquake and so great. Of the one it is said, For the great day of his wrath is come, of the other it is written, And great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the wine of the fierceness of his wrath. Of the one under the sixth seal it is written, And every mountain and island were moved out of their places, and in the other place, And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found.

It is universally believed that the one under the seventh vial is future, and the similarity of the effects of the earthquake in both instances argues strongly that the one under the sixth seal is yet future.

Under the sixth seal it is written, And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together.

Now I submit that no such event took place in the history of Rome, either in the passing away of paganism; nor in the fall of the Roman Empire later on—namely about A. D. 476.

The Christians made gradual progress against the pagans from the time of the apostles to the time of Constantine. But not long after his time we find a pagan on his throne,—namely Julian the apostate. So there is nothing in the passing of paganism that could be compared to the rolling together of a scroll. Also the decline and fall of the Empire was gradual, caused by internal corruption, which invites invasion from without.

The language used under the sixth seal is too broad to be applied to the Roman Empire. Every mountain and island were moved out of their places, also, The great day of his wrath is come. This language cannot have its fulfillment until the pouring out of the seven last plagues; for it is written that in them, Is filled up the wrath of God. It will be fulfilled in the day of great slaughter when the towers fall, Isa. xxx. 25, and there will be an exact fulfillment of the rolling up of the scroll when Rev. xviii. 21, is fulfilled, And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, Saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all.

NEW YEARS CELEBRATIONS IN SYDNEY.

NEW YEARS EVE.

With our usual good fortune we made friends with the young people. A bevy of bright and fun-loving girls welcomed us among their number, and volunteered to chaperon us through the revels of New Year's Eve. We placed ourselves in their power and agreed to do as we were told.

At nine o'clock we went to the terminus of the line and filled the top of a bus. A misty rain was falling making the stone pavement very slippery. Being on an incline the bus began to move when the driver attempted to hitch the horses to it. The horses became unruly and the unwieldy vehicle more so. They were working at cross purposes, the horses determined not to go, the bus determined to move on.

By dint of much persuasion of the driver and use of his whip the horses were disentangled. The bus rolled on triumphantly and we should all have been toppled into the gutter had not the one masculine in the party climbed over the box onto the wheel and applied the brake. With much screaming and laughter the girls scrambled down from their dangerous elevation. We hailed a passing bus and made a fresh start on our round.

This proved to be the safest and surest way of seeing the street illuminations without being jostled and separated by the crowd, which from our vantage ground appeared to be a writhing, seething mass of people.

We were given unlimited license as far as noise and enthusiasm were concerned.

According to instructions the good natured police interferred only when personal and property rights were molested. In companies of tens and twenties boys in their teens with their little brothers in the center or hanging on behind, pushed their way through the crowd, making night hideous with horns, whistles and improvised unmusical instruments.

The pedestrians gave way perforce. The boys were allowed to overflow trams, busses and cabs.

From the tops, steps and platforms they calmly held on to the railings with one hand and the horn with another while they tooted and hooted to their heart's content. Slowly we made our way from Redfern Station to Circular Quay a distance of two miles, the people attracting our attention so much that we forgot the illuminations.

We became accustomed to the din and on our way back we leisurely studied the new designs and compared with those of the day before.

The historic, heraldic, classic, patriotic and prophetic significance taxing the combined imagination and memory of the company. The aptness with which our young friends grasped the meaning testified that the youth of Australia are interested in English history and heraldry.

The smiling weather which had favored the festivities so far, now wore a gloomy brow. The ominous mist grew more dense as it hung over the city, softening the lights and enveloping the buildings in semi-darkness. But this only added to the charm, as the girls declared. Exclamations of delight greeted the first view of Martin Place, an open space in front of the Post Office. This had been converted into a "Court of Honor" the lights gleaming from the four sides. The tower of the town clock was encircled with rows of electric lights which made the large building assume the form and appearance of some ancient castle. At least the imagination of the girls prompted the thought.

Our ride over we went to a hospitable home where we were entertained with music, stories and anecdotes of former escapades.

We then had a lunch of coffee, cakes and fruits. Parents, children and a number of guests beside ourselves, all gathered in the dining room for this midnight repast.

New Year Eve is somewhat of a Hallo'een, pranks, tricks and practical jokes are indulged in. A large number of Scots have brought their quaint beliefs and superstitions with them to which they still adhere with more or less seriousness.

None but the infirm remain indoors, but old and young pour forth at the midnight hour. As the guns and chimes proclaim the birth of a new year the bonfires are lighted, hymns are sung and good wishes and greetings expressed to those near you whether strangers or acquaintances.

On account of the increased danger of fires because of the unusual number in the city, the police had been instructed to prohibit bonfires on this particular eve. But the small boy was not to be deprived of the crowning glory of his celebration. In the afternoon, while the police were collecting and loading carts with the decoy rubbish which had been placed upon the forbidden ground, he looked on innocently with his hands in his pockets, calmly whistled and chuckled to himself, well knowing that organized effort carries everything before it.

A few minutes before the firing of the midnight gun, from all directions came the boys with their oil-soaked stores of fuel, which they had been adroitly collecting for weeks.

As if by magic the line of lights shot up from every available point, and young Australia was triumphant and satisfied.

It was one of the most spontaneous and pleasing incidents connected with the celebrations. Darling Harbor was lined on both sides with crowds of people. A slight rain was still falling but no one heeded. We passed from one bonfire to another, passing the usual salutations with all we met as we heartily entered into the spirit of the hour.

In front of the houses, we noticed groups of people some of them in laughing protest refusing entrance to others. My young friends explained that the visitor who first crossed the door-sill would bring ill or good luck for the year. The visitor should be dark-complexioned and not come empty handed, if he wished to appease the spirit of ill luck.

One old Scotch woman ran with a thimble-full of whiskey to her favorite neighbor. Perhaps you all know why. My golden haired instructor had incurred the lasting dislike of this queer woman by unwittingly being the first to enter her house on the previous year.

The amusing account of the old woman's rage was shortened by the girls calling to me to hurry. We found the whole company assembled in front of the door awaiting my return. They had unanimously agreed that I was the guest best filling the first requirement. They filled my hands with fruit and I stepped over the door-sill. I am sure that the wishes I expressed were sincere, that this company and home might be prosperous not only during this year but during the new century.

We then dispersed for the purpose of getting a little rest before the next day should be quite upon us.

As we were passing into the land of forgetfulness the voices of the choral boys broke the stillness of the night, for this old English custom still obtains here. After the fun and frolic were over these strains of classical music lifted the soul to higher and more serious thoughts of life and the deeper meaning and responsibility attending the new-born century.

MRS. PHEBE THOMPSON-WILLEY.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

I thought it my duty to write a few lines to you. This is my first letter I have ever written to the dear ones that are scattered abroad. I was at the Iowa Conference two years ago, and was baptized then, but I expect the dear brothers and sisters have forgotten me, but I have not forgotten you. We have a Bible class near here but no church. I attend every Sunday. We have nine members.

Your Sister in hope.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUGUST 14, 1901. NUMBER 30.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I presume you have read the announcement of the Conference of the Church of God, to be held at Waterloo, Ia., commencing Aug. 24th next. I write this as a special invitation to all, to attend this Conference. An extra effort has been made this summer by the brethren, to add to the comfort of all who favor us with their presence. The ground and natural surroundings selected for holding our annual Conferences is sufficient of itself to induce members to lay aside their earthly cares, and spend a week with the brethren and sisters, enjoying their society in the shaded grove on the bank of the beautiful Cedar river, resting from toil and cares of life, and have their spiritual strength renewed as well. No pains or labor have been spared to beautify the ground by cleaning out the underbrush, leaving only the natural trees for shade, and with the large and commodius dining hall, erected this summer, the committee will be amply prepared to care for all those in attendance.

We want all to make an extra effort to come, and be prepared to take an active part in the meetings. Blessings are in store for all, then let us meet together and enjoy them. We as a people advocate the coming of Christ, and the establishment of the kingdom, and expect to share a part in blessing the nations of the earth. We also believe that the times of the Gentiles are near a close. How important it is for us to avail ourselves of every opportunity that will aid us in keeping our lamps trimmed and burning and oil in our vessels. Your presence is needed, and we have no hesitancy in saying, that you will return to your homes amply paid for all the sacrifice you make. An invitation is extended, to members outside the State of Iowa.

Your Brother in the faith,
P. B. STOUFFER, Cor. Sec.

Conference Notice.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God of Indiana will be held (D. V.) at Burr Oak, Marshall Co. Ind., commencing Thursday A. M. September 5th and continue over the following Sunday.

As this is the time for election of officers and other important business, it is urgently requested that each congregation be represented by delegates, one delegate for every ten members.

The brethren of Burr Oak will put forth every effort to entertain the visiting brethren, and are desirous of a large representation.

Burr Oak is on the Nickel Plate R. R. one and one-half mile west of Hibbard, the crossing of the Nickel Plate and Vandalia R. R. and about three miles north of Culver. Please consult time tables in RESTITUTION for time of trains allowing on the Vandalia about one-half hour for time between Plymouth and Hibbard.

By notifying brothers G. A. Maxey at Burr Oak or Samuel Osborne at Culver, brethren from a distance will find conveyance at Hibbard.

D. T. HALSTEAD, Pres.
E. K. BAPSHILL, Sec'y.

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

The Indian and the Northwest.

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 115 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half-tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battleground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1600. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library. Price, 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. B. Knickern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.—Aug. 31.

PLEASE READ, AND THEN HEED.

WE wish to thank those who have responded to the letters we sent out some weeks ago, and to urge those who have not yet answered to do so at once. If there is some good reason for not sending now write and tell us of it, and say when you can remit. Don't neglect it any longer, for we need all—every last dollar—due us. We just must pay our obligations, and we can only do so when you pay yours. The responsibility lies with every one who owes us any money. Please attend to your part promptly.

WORDSWORTH prayed:—
"The best of what we do and are,
Just God, forgive."

ANY one will confer a favor on us by giving us the present address of Mrs. Lulu H. Smith, formerly of Floral City, Fla.

BROTHER Zilmer preached two most excellent sermons for our home church last Sunday. He expects to speak here again in September.

"IT is better honorably to incur the bad opinions of our neighbors than dishonorably court their good opinion," says Dr. Morneric.

WE seldom see sin as it is—much less as it is seen in God's sight, till some one sins against ourselves. Then how sensative we are."

WE the other day met with the remark that "the vine-dresser is never so near to the vine as when he is pruning it; this may have a consoling effect upon one under the pruning hook.

CARLYLE says, "Every one does, or ought to, feel unhappy till he finds out what to do?" Again he says:—"Blessed is he who has found his work; let him ask no other blessedness. He has a work, a life purpose; he has found it and will follow it."

"ENVY and jealousy light the intensest fires that ever burn in human hearts; gossip and scandal are the smoke emitted by them. If these passions could, like some modern chimneys, be consumers of their own smoke, a purer and better atmosphere would prevail."

RUSKIN says, "Nothing can atone for the want of truth; not the most brilliant imagination, the most playful fancy, the most pure feeling (supposing that feeling could be pure and false at the same time); not the most exalted conception, nor the most comprehensive grasp of intellect, can make amend for the want of truth; and that for two reasons. First, because falsehood is in itself revolting and degrading, and secondly, because nature is so immeasurably superior to all the human mind can conceive, that every departure from her is a fall beneath her, so that there can be no such thing as an ornamental falsehood. All falsehood must be a blot as well as a sin, an injury as well as a deception."

The Inner Man.

For H. L. R.—We take it for granted that our correspondent is not troubled with the popular delusion of an immortal soul, but hardly knows how to show others that Rom. vii. 22; 1 Pet. iii. 4; Eph. iii. 16, and 2 Cor. iv. 16, do not conflict with his idea of the unity of man. If we can help him we shall be glad to do so.

The first passage named reads as follows, "For I delight in the law of God after the inward man." But what is the inward man? We think the key hangs close by the door. The next verse furnishes an infallible answer, if we are not greatly mistaken. But it will be necessary to read verses 22 and 23 as if they were one verse, to get the sense. "For I delight in the law of God after the inner man; but I see in my members warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members."

Note, "delight," or pleasure, in the law of God is expressive of mental gratification, because in the 25th ver. in summing up the matter the apostle says; "So, with the mind I myself serve the law of God, but with the flesh the law of sin," absolute proof, this, that what is called the inner man in verse 22 is called the law of his mind in verse 23. And it would appear that although he says 1 Cor. ix. 27 that he kept his body under, and brought it into subjection, it would sometimes assert itself. The verses 14 to 22 should be read, and verse 24 also.

2 Cor. iv. 16 says "For which cause we faint not, but though our outward man perish, (which according to ver. 8 to 12, it was constantly in danger of) yet the inner man is renewed day by day." As the author of Rom. vii. 22, 23, 25 is the author of this passage also, we know that it was his mind that was renewed day by day, because his present momentary affliction was working out for him an exceeding and eternal weight of glory, see ver. 17.

Eph. iii. 16, and on to the end of the chapter is a most sublime prayer to the Father for the church at Ephesus, that he would grant them to be strengthened with might by his spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in their hearts by faith. Certainly what was the inner man to the Romans and Corinthians was the inner man to the Ephesians. Observe, the Spirit of God was to impart the strength to

But the Ephesians had to use the means to this end. Paul says elsewhere he could do all things through Christ strengthening him; he is the Lord the Spirit, we are told, and himself said that his words are spirit and they are life; and the apostle here prays that Christ may dwell in their hearts by faith; faith was the means to be used by them in order to be strengthened; faith ensured the indwelling of Christ; and this explains the strengthening of the inner man, on the same principle as Paul's mind was renewed day by day by the exceeding and eternal weight of glory in prospect; faith brought it near to him and made it real.

In coming to the last of the four Scriptures our attention was called to we anticipate little trouble, because the apostle Peter, like Paul, received his instructions and inspiration from the Lord himself, and we dare not construe what he says so as to conflict with the three passages from Paul, referred to. 1 Pet. iii. 1-4 reads in this way; "Likewise ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands, that if any obey not the word, they may without the word be won by the conversation of the wives while they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear; whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of or of putting on of apparel; but let it (the adorning) be the hidden man of the heart, (that is, the mind, disposition, affection, as explained in the words following, viz.) in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price; for after this manner in the old time the holy women also, who trusted in God adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their own husbands." The plain meaning here lies on the surface and comment would be out of place.

It would be well for our correspondent to refer to Rom. xii. 1, 2, where the apostle beseeches the brethren by the mercies of God, as the motive, to induce them not to be conformed to this world, but to be transformed by the renewing of the mind, that they may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. By doing this he will realize the force of some things we have found. The renewing of the mind is a so to speak; but as the physical system has not been reconstructed as yet the flesh wars against the spirit as the experience of Paul shows; and we are assured that the contest will only end with death, or with the change in a moment, the twinkling of an eye.

To be an overcomer means that the flesh has been conquered—it is the greatest of all enemies to godly living and the person who is supposed to be on the Lord's side without discovering that fact, has not progressed much in the divine life, and is in a dangerous position.

We do not think the apostle means that the mental transformation had not commenced, in the Romans, but that it was not complete, the bodies were not in complete subjection, they did not fully realize as they should, what a living sacrifice of them to God meant.

Col. iii. 10 may also be profitably considered in this connection, because what is termed "renewed mind" and "inner man" elsewhere, is called the "new man," the idea being that he is Christ Jesus, and is a new creature, not physically, but mentally, morally and religiously—has the mind of the Christ, and this proves him to belong to Christ, and this verse happily explains that it is a renewal in knowledge after the image of him that created him. Eph. iv. 23; i. 18; Rom. ii. 28, in connection with Matt. iii. 9 and John viii. 38, 39, would be a helpful study also.

"Whose House are We."

So read the words of the Spirit in Hebrews iii. 6; but it does not stop there, but goes on to say on what condition:—"If we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end." Employing other figures, Paul in Eph. ii. 20-22 compares the saints to a building,—built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth into an holy temple in the Lord; in whom ye also are builded together for an

HABITATION OF GOD

through the Spirit." What a beautiful and suggestive passage this is. A temple composed of living stones! "Quarried in Gentile quarries! There is a work of preparation, a work of squaring and polishing, and perfecting the living stones, and fitly framing them together; and then there is the glorious completion, when the temple is finished without flaw of any kind, and God tabernacles in it by his Spirit,—that is, changes the human to the divine, or, in other words swallowed up death with life and incorruptibility. Who would not be a stone—a pillar—in this

MOST GLORIOUS OF ALL EDIFICES?

It is what we are called to. It is what we are invited to be. But there is a work of overcoming to be done, a work of preparation on our part, as well as on the part of God and Christ. We have to put aside all evil, to cease to practice all unrighteousness, to deny ourselves all ungodliness, to stand aside from the world in all its evil and vain practices, to put our foot down upon every vicious and unclean habit and keep it down, and to live a life of faith and hope, and love, and likeness to God in the present evil world. And to him that thus overcomes we can quote the promise of Christ—"Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in and he shall go no more out; and I will write upon him the name of my God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my new name. He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." Rev. iii. 12, 13.

THE TEMPLE OF MY GOD,

Selections.

Why Preach Christ's Coming?

1. Because he said he would come again. "If I go and prepare a place for you I will come again." John xiv. 3.

2. Because he has promised to bless those who herald his coming. "Blessed is that servant whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing." Matt. xxiv. 46.

3. Because he is the greatest and most glorious person that ever proposed to visit this earth. If the coming to us of those of infinitely less note, be heralded far and wide, why not herald the coming of him whose name is above every name?

4. Because, not to proclaim his coming would prove me unworthy of his notice when he does come. Suppose McKinley should announce his coming to California, and the San Francisco Examiner should refuse to announce his coming and even contradict the fact of his coming, what claim on the favor or notice of the President would the editor of that paper have? If I, in order to retain popular favor, am silent about the Lord's return to earth, how unworthy I of his favor when he does come.

5. Because thoughts of his coming awaken a sleeping conscience, lead to closer self-examination, to a repentance toward God, to a hunger and thirst for righteousness, and consequently to a cleansing from sin. 1 Jno. iii. 3.

6. Because I would keep in touch with holy apostles and prophets and the holiest men that ever lived. Who would be out of touch with Enoch, David, Isaiah, Daniel, Jeremiah, Hosea, Malachi, Paul, Peter, John, the apostolic fathers, Luther, Melancthon, Calvin, the Wesleys, [illegible] most successful evangelists [illegible]? If I should not preach the Lord's coming, however eloquent my tongue might be, it would sweep a different harp of inspiration than that swept by these mighty men of God.

7. Because I would keep in touch with the inspiration of the Bible. That inspiration mentions the Lord's coming once in every twenty-five verses in the New Testament. Out of touch with Biblical inspiration I am out of touch with God.

8. Because the Lord's coming is the hope of our world.

(a) Physically. How impotent is medical science with all of its boasted advancements to cope with the multiplying forms of disease! The occult sciences are also as complete a failure. Scarcely a sound body can be met. What will mortal man become in fifty years if the Lord does not come! Besides, the elements, water, wind, fire, and electricity are showing their contempt for human pride, awakening fears of what is coming on the earth. Jesus' coming will end creation's groans. So I preach it.

(b) Morally. We need not go to heathen countries for atrocious acts, shameful vice, or social impurity. The heathen world, before touched with modern civilization, could have given even boastful America some lessons in decent behavior. "Evil men and seducers.....wax worse and worse, and will till Jesus comes. 2 Tim. iii. 13.

(c) Religiously. The world is full of religion, but how tangled and intertangled it is, with here and there a true worshiper of God only. When will this tangled up mess of religions give place to one pure religion that worships God in spirit and in truth? When Jesus comes. So I preach the coming.

(d) Politically. Earth needs a government whose sceptre is righteousness, yet no such government exists, nor will exist till Jesus comes. So I preach the coming.

(e) Municipally. A well governed city would be a wonder on earth. There will be one when Jesus comes. So I preach the coming.

(f) Financially. Earth abounds in gold but it is coming more and more into the power of the few, and out of the reach of the many. When Jesus comes, earth's bounties will be equally distributed. So I preach the coming.

9. Christ's coming is the hope of saints. They cannot see him till he comes. 1 John iii. 2. They cannot be with him till he comes. Col. iii. 4. There will be no judgment till he comes. 1 Cor. iv. 5; 2 Tim. iv. 1. There will be no rewards till he comes. Matt. xvi. 27; Rev. xxii. 12. There will be no crowns till he comes. 2 Tim. iv. 8; 1 Pet. v. 4. There will be no life forever till he comes. Matt. xxv. 46; Matt. x. 30. There will be no eternal home till he comes. Matt. xxv. 34. Why deify death since it gives us not the presence of Jesus, nor a right of him; since it judges no man, rewards no man, crowns no man; since it gives no man an eternal home nor any life to live anywhere? Jesus' coming gives life eternal, home eternal, crowns unfading, rewards eternal; and gives the saints his presence eternal and his glory eternal. So I preach it.

10. Because the time draws near:—
"Signs there's no mistaking Bespeak Messiah near."

11. Because I would escape the woe of an unfaithful watchman. Ezek. xxxiii. 6; Matt. xxiv. 50. "If the watchman see the sword come and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned, if the sword come and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity: but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand." "The Lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him.....and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites."—H. L. Carpenter, in Messiah's Herald.

Is Faith Becoming Extinct?

"When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Luke xviii. 8.

The time was, and that is not so far distant, when the world believed in what it was pleased to call Doomsday, the end of time, the world to come. Since those days, little by little have secularism and infidelity spread themselves, permeating society with their unrighteous leaven, while alas from the pulpits and religious press of our lands, a spirit of agnosticism and scepticism concerning some portions of truth, has stealthily shaken the faith of the strong, and deluded the mind of the simple.

Today, in well nigh all sections of the Christian church formality takes the place of faith, usurping its throne with an effrontry never before dreamed of. In proportion as the religious edifices become more costly and beautiful in their decorations and architecture, so does the vital godliness of the congregation often decrease. As the order of service becomes more elaborate in its music, more oratorical and sentimental in its preaching, more formal and ceremonious in its confessions and prayers, so in like ratio does the spiritual life of its adherents decline.

As the ministry becomes more a distinguished profession, and dignified means of livelihood, so do its representatives become less and less men of God. As fashion and worldliness are permitted to enter the house of God, so does that house become little else than a social club. As unlimited secondary agencies with excessive organization, involving tremendous strain on some, and undue energy and time on many, increase, so is the great purport and purpose of the place lost sight of, namely that it should be a house of prayer.

Outside the church it is but natural for unregenerate men to walk by sight, and not by faith, for they are strangers to its mighty power, and it is out fensible for them to believe in, and shape their life and conduct upon what they see and handle and taste; but amongst the people of the Lord, with whom he has promised to manifest his presence, his grace and glory, if form alone takes the place of faith, how then shall his glory be seen, or his power be felt amongst them, or how shall they be living witnesses to the world of the verities of things to come?

When Christianity in its first flush of beauty and vigor, after the ascension of its Lord laid hold upon its happy followers, the fundamental truth of the Lord's material return to consummate what he had accomplished was tenaciously held. Upon this expectation the church built its highest hopes. Without such a realization of its faith it looked upon the whole system of Christianity as a failure. And this for long centuries continued, nerving holy men and women to endure acute suffering and violent deaths, in the anticipation of speedy resurrection and glory. But alas! philosophic and heathenish doctrines subtly introduced corrupted its simplicity and weakened its faith, which condition has been increasing, until today how few there are either of priest or people, under-shepherd or flock, who are looking for the actual, literal return of Christ.

Well might the divine Master while still here on the earth, in anticipation of that momentous event, ask the significant question, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" It is much to be feared that while general faith in things divine shall be at a low ebb when he shall come, the particular faith as to his coming shall well-nigh have disappeared.

When he first came the world was unready and unwilling to receive him; when he shall come with power and great glory, the world, through its utter unbelief shall be taken as a bird in a snare; while many within the pale of the church, having all the form of godliness, shall have no oil of divine expectation in them, and consequently no light, which is an essential equipment wherewith to meet the Lord; and many others of the real saints shall be taken by surprise through misleading instruction in the truth which they have received. A few only shall be in possession of the living, ardent expectation of the coming of the Lord.

Happy are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find ready for his appearing!—J. C. Page in Crisis.

Signs of his Coming.

Our Master's words not only indicate that signs are given, but for us not to be able to discern them, implies guilt worthy of condemnation. God, we know, proposes no great work without apprising his people of it. It was so with ancient Israel, and it is so today. The great event to the Church is the second coming of Christ. It is ours to watch and be ready when the Bridegroom cometh. This has been the attitude of the Church ever since apostolic times. Says Maclion, "In the days of primitive Christianity it would have been deemed a kind of apostasy not to sigh for the return of the Lord." Says Calvin, "The day of Christ's coming is of all events the most auspicious."

No one who reads his Bible can fail to see the place it is given there. It is true that of "that day and hour knoweth no man," but it is also true that Christ, after saying this, immediately proceeded to give signs of his coming.

The fact of the approach is not hard to discern, if one will judge in the light of the inspired Word. It is quite obvious that we are 2,000 years nearer to it than was the apostle Paul, and yet he said that it was imminent even in his day—that is to say, it was an event likely to occur, though there were not the signs of its approach that we have.

Again, there is a spirit of expectancy and apprehension at the beginning of this new century, which is at least suggestive. Very much such a spirit as we find at the time of the first advent. When Jesus was born, we find both the Jewish and the Gentile mind were quite restless. Greek philosophy had measured its full length, and yet its conclusion did not satisfy the human heart. These wise men confessed their own failure, and some longed for a god or god-inspired man to come and save them. Many were deeply apprehensive, and said they believed that Rome rested under a great curse. Suicide was common, especially among the educated. Israel was under Roman oppression. And this fact intensified their desire for the Messiah's coming. There were Simeons and Annas, who were waiting for the consolation of Israel, and ready to receive and bless the Child when he was presented. The story of the wise men of the East would at least suggest that this spirit of expectancy had reached even to strange lands.

It is quite obvious to the most careful observers that this same spirit of expectancy is on the rise at the beginning of this century. Not that it always takes the form of looking for the Savior's return, yet men are entering upon the new century with a feeling of apprehension. It is generally believed that the new century will reveal mysteries such as the past has not known—that the providence of God is bearing us on to some great crisis. Many do not attempt to say what the crisis will be. Others hope that it means the return of our absent Lord. Whatever it may signify, this we ought to remember, that it is God's custom to do some wonderful thing about every two thousand years. Seeing, therefore, that such things are coming upon us, what manner of men ought we to be?—Dr. Sneed.

Editor Restitution:

It will no doubt be the cause for much rejoicing to the readers of the RESTITUTION to hear that four more persons have put on Christ through baptism in his name. On Sunday, August 11th, after a brief service held at the home of the writer, we proceeded to the bank of Rock River where Mr. George Lindsay, Miss Velma Thayer, Miss Bernice Phelps, and Mrs. Georgia Phelps entered into covenant relationship with God. Those who attended the Illinois Conference last year will remember Miss Bernice as the one who presided at the piano.

Permit me to make the statement that each brother or sister who has aided, financially or otherwise, in organizing the church in Oregon, has by the above account reaped a big interest on the investment. On one side of the account place the amount that you have given and then on the other side place the seven persons who have come into the light of God's truth largely through the instrumentality of the church you have helped to organize. Now look at the two as they stand together. How will they compare now? How will they compare when we sing together that great song which never man sang before if we meet them there? Let us rejoice together in the fact that these have obeyed the Master and let us pray that they may never desire to turn back, but that as Watchers on Zion they may never weary in well doing.

Conference Notice.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus for the State of Illinois will be held in Oregon, beginning Wednesday evening Sept. 18, 1901, and hold over Sunday. A programme will appear later.

The building committee will have the new building finished in which sleeping rooms [illegible] dining hall will be provided. We wish as many to attend as possible, both those who live in the State and those out of it. We expect Bros. Conner, Eychaner and Samuel Wilson to be with and assist us. Those who have attended previous meetings know what a treat it is to listen to them and should try to be with us again and endeavor to bring others with them. Let all come and have a good time, for surely no better feast was ever spread than The Word.

Poetry.

It is Time to be Holy.

It is time to be brave, it is time to be true;
It is time to be finding the thing you can do;
It is time to put by the dream and the sigh,
And work for the cause that is holy and high.

It is time to be kind; it is time to be sweet,
To be scattering roses for somebody's feet;
It is time to be sowing; it is time to be growing;
It is time for the flowers of life to be blowing.

It is time to be lowly and humble of heart;
It is time for the lilies of meekness to start;
For the heart to be white, and the steps to be right,
And the hands to be weaving a garment of light.

Phenomena of Spiritualism Accounted for. No 3.

Article No. 2. closed with the introduction of the topic as to how God communicated with man. We are told that "When God speaks to man he speaks electrically, that is by his spirit; for electricity is the term science has bestowed upon what the Bible styles spirit. All physical phenomena are produced by the spirit acting according to laws peculiar to it, a very few of which are scattered about in works of science. When the Creator wills to speak, he does it by the same spirit that shivers the sturdy oak, or rends the rocks assunder. Sometimes he communicates his mind by making direct spectral impressions on the magnetic mirror of the brain. In this case a man in his sleep sees objects, and hears sounds that have no real existence; but are representative of realities past, present, or future. These are the dreams and visions of the prophets. Sometimes he speaks mediately, but still electrically, as through Jesus Christ to his apostles, whose method we will look into briefly in connection with the principles brought out in M. Karsten and Dr. Draper's experiments, (as related in Article No. 2.)

Things, ideas, or images may exist upon the brain's tablet or sensorium, and yet be invisible (that is not recollected by the individual who received them), and consequently invisible to all other persons, from his inability to utter them. Though thus invisible, the ideas are nevertheless existent, and actually present within. They exist, however, in the state of latent spectral impressions, and in order to be evoked or made visible, they need to be breathed upon by the same principle that impressed them upon the sensorium. Now, the sensoria, or magnetic mirrors, or minds of the Apostles had been prepared (Luke i. 17), or polished by the process they had undergone by the ministry of John. They were in a state represented by the polished metal or glass, (See Article 2) in Dr. Draper's experiment, ready for the coin to be impressed upon it. Jesus came, the medium through which the Father operated in word and deed (John v. 30). He spoke the words, laying them, so to speak, like coin upon (the glass) their hearts; while the Father, who performed the miracles, passed by their effect, the electricity of his spirit, as it were, through the Word, and their sensoria, stamping impressions there, as by M. Karsten's experiment with the glass, coin and electrifying-machine. (See Article 2). 'I can of mine own self do nothing,' said the Lord Jesus; 'the Father is in me. The words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself; but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works.' This proves what we have said that Jesus was the Father's medium or channel through whom, by his Spirit, he operated on men's minds by words confirmed by miracles, in strict accordance with the laws illustrated by the experiments before us.

The Apostles saw and heard many things during their attendance upon the instructions of the Great Teacher which continued to the end of months, as hidden spectral impressions upon their sensoria, but which were afterward evoked in lines of living light. For example they saw Jesus ride into Jerusalem on an ass' colt, as predicted by Zechariah. But one of them referring to it says: 'These things understood not his disciples at the first; but when Jesus was glorified, then remembered they that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him.' John xii. 16. They knew what was written in the prophet, and they saw what the people did on the occasion referred to; but their knowledge was a latent spectre until made manifest some time after at the glorification of Jesus. But what happened then, by which these latent spectral impressions were evoked? The spirit was breathed upon them after the illustration contained in Dr. Draper's experiment. But why were they not evoked before Jesus was glorified? For the reason assigned by John, in speaking of the gift of the Spirit—'The Holy Spirit,' says he, 'was yet not given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified.' John vii. 39.

Speaking of his teachings, Jesus said unto them, 'These things have I told you, that when the time shall come, ye may remember that I told you of them. When the spirit of the truth is come, it will guide you into all the truth. It shall glorify me.' John xvi. 4, 13, 14. The glorification in this sense was the receiving things concerning Jesus, and showing them to the Apostles—evoking the impressions already existing and communicating new ones as evinced in their writings. In this way they were glorified as well as Jesus, for receiving the spirit of the truth, it became in them as a fountain of the living streams; thus, 'whom he justified them he also glorified.' Rom. viii. 30. The Lord Jesus was glorified in a sense, after his resurrection, before he was received into glory; and therefore, before he ascended he gave a measure of his spirit to his Apostles—not a full charge, as on Pentecost, but a sufficient charge, so to speak, to evoke the hidden spectral impressions, the effect of which electrification is seen in their words and actions, between the ascension and Pentecost, compared with those before his crucifixion. In bringing out these impressions, he proceeded as in Karsten and Draper's experiments with the coins, for the Apostle says, 'He breathed upon them and said, Receive ye Holy Spirit, (Labete pneuma hagion), and from that time they had authority to remit sin.

Man was made in the image and likeness of God. Or as David saith, (wathhaserehu meat mulelohim,) Thou hast made him to fall a little short of the Elohim, (Psa. viii. 5) or angels. He is, therefore, like to them in form, and capable of similar manifestations; but he falls short of their perfection and beauty, strength, and electrical or spiritual exaltation. The Elohim, gods or angels are not spectral impressions, any more than men and women are, though they can make such impressions. They are ponderables, occupying space that cannot be occupied by another body at the same time. They are not ghosts, or disembodied winged phantoms, through which you may sweep your arm as through a shadow, and, leave them undivided. They are bodies of a nature capable of corporealing a thunderbolt without deterioration, or hazzard destruction. They can walk in the glowing furnace unaffected, as they can also whom they choose to, mantle in a halo of their spirit. Dan. iii. 25; Isa. xxxiii. 14, 15. They can eat and drink, and be washed with water. Gen. xviii. 8. The popular notions about angels are mere superstition. Disembodied spirits with wings are spectral impressions, made by odic emanations from inate folly, on the unpolished sensoria of the ignorant. Winged heads of chubby babies, peeping out of clouds, on the margin of inner glory, are spectres of minds bewitched or crazed by the 'philosophy of vain deceit' of theosophical magicians, and prophets of the 'spirit world'—a world of electro-magnetic spectralia. Such angels as the people's heads are filled with flourish there; and the darker the intellect, the more vividly are they seen in all their glory."

In death bed scenes, latent spectral impressions become quite vivid, they see angels beckoning them to come up higher, hear rapturous heavenly music, etc. The death bed scene of a Mohammedan will see the spectral impressions made upon his brain. He may see his promised harem of spirit wives, and rejoice in the prospect of sensual enjoyment. These death bed experiences will vary just as much as the impressions that have been made upon the brain may differ, and one death bed scene will contradict another.

Some have agonizing death bed scenes, see a blazing hell, devils, and every vile thing if those spectral impressions have been made upon their sensoria.

A Castaway.

"I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air; but I keep under my body and bring it into subjection; lest that by any means when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." 1 Cor. ix. 26, 27.

What is a castaway? A person lost or abandoned; useless; of no value. But our lesson is speaking of a person that runs a race. We know that when several persons run for a prize, and that prize is something offered by man, but only one gets the prize. But God has offered a prize, which is eternal life through Christ, and that prize is given to every one that enters the race, and runs the race to the end, and death ends that race. Who enters that race? All that believe and obey the gospel that Christ and his followers preached, and in obeying that gospel they will be baptized into Christ. Then their names will be recorded in the book of life. Then they will commence their race for the prize eternal life, and if they continue in the race unto the end of this present life, they have the blessed assurance of eternal life when Christ comes. But those that are led away by worldly affairs, worldly organizations, or live intemperate lives have their names blotted out of the book of life and are then a castaway from the gift of God. It is a sad affair for one to live in such a way that they are cast away from God or his promises. But were if one has escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning, for it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them. 2 Pet. ii. 20-21. It seems to be better not to enter the race than to be a castaway from the gift of God. We read there is a time to weep, a time to get, and a time to lose, a time to keep and a time to cast away. The time to castaway is the time spent in serving the evil one and not serving God and his commands. The time to keep is the time that we live near to God and keep his commands. Among the commands are these, Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers, and come out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you. What agreement hath the temple of God with idols? 2 Cor. vi. 14, 17. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." And again, Pure religion, and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world. Can we keep ourselves unspotted from the world and join worldly institutions? Can we expect to belong to Christ when we bind ourselves by an oath to fellowship those that do not serve God? Paul says, let no uncleanness or covetousness, be once named among you, neither filthiness, nor foolish talking. For this, know that no unclean person, nor covetous man, nor idolater hath any inheritance in the kingdom of God. Be not ye therefore partakers with them, and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret. Eph. v. 5, 12. Each and every one is a castaway from God, that after they have known God and obey his commands, leave his commands and do the works of the flesh, for they that do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. If they had never accepted of God's plan of salvation they would never have known God, and would never have been a castaway. Let us all that have taken the name of God so run our life race, that we may not be a castaway, but be among those that receive the prize.

Report of Meetings.

By invitation of Brother Jacob Boyer, I left home on Saturday before the second Sunday in May, to attend the meetings at Maurertown, Va., it being only a few hours ride by rail. I soon found myself comfortably situated in his cosy little home, near the place of meeting, and on learning the programme, I found that Bro. C. C. Ramsay, of Philadelphia, was to speak to us the next day at our new house of worship at this place. The day following was a bright and lovely morning, and on arriving, we met the dear brethren and sisters from the different communities, and after Christian greeting, we were all soon seated in that capacious building known as the Church of Immanuel; and after the morning exercises in singing and Bible reading, we had the pleasure of hearing Bro. Ramsay deliver a very able address, which was very much enjoyed by all and especially by the brethren and sisters who had gathered around to get a crumb from the Master's table, and while the Elder does not claim to have the ability to feed five thousand with a few loaves and fishes, yet he offered the bread of life bountifully to all, and continued to speak to them during the following week, closing his services at that point on Friday night, after which he and his devoted companion took the train for Frontroyal, on Saturday, and the brethren at this place met them with conveyances and brought them up in the vacinity of Browntown, where we gave them a hearty welcome in our midst, and gladly heard him speak in our new church at Coolspring. By the solicitations of the brethren at this place they concluded to remain over Sunday. We feel as though our prayers are being answered in that the Lord of the harvest is sending forth the laborers in his vineyard. The little flock at this place as well as others, were much strengthened and built up in their most holy faith by the labors of the Elder and his faithful companion, they sowed the seed of the kingdom bountifully, and I hope, some of it at least, has fallen in good ground, and will yet bring forth fruit to the glory of our Father in heaven. After taking leave of us at this point, the brethren accompanied them back to Frontroyal, and from there they went to Stephen City to remain several days and speak for the few faithful ones at that point. They visited the Valley of Virginia by invitation, and spent the month of May with us all, and we were very loath to give them up. May the Lord reward them for such labor of love is the prayer of the writer. I will not forget to say that our much esteemed Brother B. F. Boyer, of Seven Fountains, is again restored to health, through the mercies of our heavenly Father. We are very thankful to the Giver of every good gift for this wonderful restoration. He spoke twice at our house of worship yesterday, after driving a distance of about twenty-five miles, accompanied by his son, on the day before. He has been visiting us and holding forth the Word of life, ever since the erection of our house of worship. May he yet be spared to visit us as well as to perform his many other duties, is the prayer of the little band of believers here. Done by order of the church. We ask an interest in the prayers of all of the one faith.

Your Sister waiting for the coming kingdom,

S. F. Morman.

Awakening with his Likeness.

We are not very much like unto the Father in this earth-life. Sometimes we wonder whether or not he sees the faintest semblance of himself in us. We are as weak as water, we are so foolish; our hearts are so fixed upon things which have no worth; our whole lives are so poor compared with his and with what we would like them to be.

But there is comfort in the thought that he sees not as men see; but with eyes beaming with infinite love and patience. Indeed, "he knoweth our frame, he remembereth that we are dust."

And so we go to our rest. We lie down from the cares of this earthly life as we often do after a weary day. It seems very pleasant to put off the sandals now, to brush the dust from our garments and settle down into peaceful slumber. This is the end of the journey. We have risen the last hilltop, and are now peering over into the valley beyond. Farewell now to the toil and worry of the journey!

In the morning we shall awake with him. We shall be satisfied then as our eyes behold him. Sometimes we have thought his countenance wonderfully severe to look upon. We thought we saw in his eyes nothing but displeasure, and that his frown came far oftener than his smile. Now we are satisfied. It was all right, after all. We see him as he is. And so are like him. Yes, the marks left upon our faces by the years of pain and sin and strife are all gone now. The hairs made white by the troubles of the world have passed away. We think of them all as of a disturbing dream. We know now that he meant the hard things of life only for our good. It is all beauty and light and joy with us now. We lay down the earthly and take up the heavenly. Then there was corruption, now incorruption; then dishonor, now the honor of being known as sons of God; then weakness, now power; then [illegible] of the earth, now very lord[illegible]

May we no[illegible] shout in triumph[illegible] sting? Gra[illegible]

We are go[illegible] him, for we shall see him as he is!—Christian World.

Beware!

Beware of evil thoughts! They have done a great deal of mischief in the world. They prepare the way for evil words and deeds, and for utter ruin.

Beware of evil books! They beget evil thoughts, and thus commence the process of ruin. A ruined man once said, "It was that ten minutes on the street corner, reading a bad book, that destroyed my whole life."

Beware of evil deeds! They may be small acts of evil, but they are none the less dangerous for that. "It was that penny I stole when I was a small boy," said an old man, "that sent me four times to prison, and confined me there twenty-eight years out of sixty of my life, and all for stealing less than thirty-eight dollars."

Beware of evil associates, for they have ruined thousands. You may depend upon it that he is a good man whose friends are all good, and whose enemies are all characters decidedly bad.

Caspian-Black Sea Canal.

Consul Hughes, of Coburg, informs the Department of State that a canal to unite the Caspian and Black seas is under consideration. The projected waterway will be 22 feet deep and about 150 feet broad; will begin at Astrakhan, on the Caspian, and end at the harbor of Taganrog, on the Sea of Azof. It is estimated that the cost will be about 40,000,000 rubles ($20,600,000). The center of Russian trade and manufacture, adds the consul, is gradually shifting southward, where the production of iron, coal, and petroleum is rapidly increasing. The metallurgical industries and the trade in cotton from middle Asia are also being largely developed. The railroads at times prove insufficient carriers, and the construction of other roads and the digging of this canal will be necessary in the near future to meet the growing demands of commerce.—Scientific American.

To the brethren and sisters:

If you know of any preacher who is coming to California soon, please let us know through The Restitution. Brother Steffa of Pomona, Cal., has a daughter who wishes to be baptized, and would like to attend to the order at once, and there is no one here, that we know of, who has had any experience on that line. If you know of any one that is coming please let us know at once through The Restitution, or by writing to me at Orange, Cal.

Yours awaiting the King.

Wm. Kaiser.

Correction.

Editor Restitution:

In my article in last Restitution on "the Creation of Man," at the bottom of the column, in lines two and eight, it reads, "The source of this spirit life is indicated in Gen. i. 2" etc. and "If this breath or spirit life were withdrawn," etc., which should read "The spirit of life" in both places.

Please make this correction, and oblige. Yours,

A. H. Zilmer.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Obituary.

[The following clipping is from the Coudersport, Pa., Enterprise. Bro. Quimby was one of the old supporters of this paper, having been a subscriber for many years. One by one they fall by the wayside to await the trumpet's call to awaken. Lord hasten the day.—Ed.]

L. S. Quimby, an aged resident of this place entered the sleep of eternity at about 11 o'clock Monday, when death came to him in a silent, painless manner, at a time when those about him believed that his condition was somewhat more hopeful than it had been previously. Heart disease was the cause of his death, its final inroads of the past three weeks having been positive and the ultimatum—death.

Since the '60s, when Mr. Quimby tendered his robust manhood to his country, and fought gallantly during the dark days, when thousands of the brave lads in blue offered their lives as a sacrifice, Mr. Quimby, although fortunate enough to evade the bullets of the enemy, contracted a disease which followed him to the grave.

He was a square, upright man, and fearless in his declamations against all those who deserved censure. He was a pleasant, intelligent man to converse with and generally popular with all who knew him.

Mr. Quimby was born in Caroline, Tomkins Co. N. Y. in 1824. His father died when he was a mere child, and from the time he was 18 years old he conducted his own affairs. He was one of seven children, all of whom have preceded him to the grave. Mr. Quimby once resided in Addison and Woodhull where he was engaged in various occupations.

In 1843 he married Susan Northrup and they became the parents of six children. He moved his family to a farm in Homer Tp. In 1867 his wife died and in 1869, he married Mrs. Sally M. Northrup of Oxford; and to them were born two children. In 1884 he sold his farm and moved to Coudersport and bought the old Commercial House, which he conducted till it was burned nine years ago, since then he has lived a private life.

The Nickel Plate Road will sell excursion tickets to Buffalo after Aug. 19th, at one fare plus one dollar for the round trip, good 15 days. Inquire of nearest agent or, C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind., or, R. J. Hamilton, Agent, Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Sept. 1.

Annual Meeting of the Kansas-Missouri Conference.

The Annual Meeting of the Kansas-Missouri Conference of the Church of God will be held in the public park in Severance, Kansas, beginning Friday evening, September 6th, and hold over till Sunday evening, the 15. Our audience tent, with dining tent and small living tents, and cots will be erected to accommodate all who will be in attendance. All coming will please bring all the bedding they will need for their lodging. A cook has been arranged for, and all will be boarded on the ground at the small expense of 25 cts. per day. Come prepared to remain during the meeting. The Conference work will be transacted Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. All desiring small tents will please address me at Atchison, Kansas, and so state, that we may know how many tents to order. A general attendance is desired. Let every body begin at once to get ready to attend this meeting. Severance is on the St. Joe and Grand Island Ry., 25 miles west of St. Joseph, Mo. Trains are run in connection with all regular trains into St. Joe. A regular programme will be prepare for work. G. M. Myers.

By order of Board.

Iowa State Conference.

The 14th Annual Conference of the Church of God for the State of Iowa will be held on the campground at Waterloo, August 24rd to Sept. 2nd. Programme will appear later.

All who attend the conference should observe strictly the following rules, in order to secure reduced rates:--

1. Tickets can be bought only on Aug. 21, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 26, and are good to return up to Sep. 3.

2. Do not buy round-trip tickets nor pay fare on train. You must pay full fare going—the reduction will be on return ticket providing there are 100 in attendance by rail. Last year the attendance was 150.

3. If you pass over more than one railroad, buy your ticket only to where you change cars—then buy to the next changing place, and so on, and be sure to ask each agent for a certificate wherever you buy a ticket, and bring all your certificates to Conference. Your last ticket must be to Waterloo. Those passing over one road should also obtain a certificate of the agent where they buy a ticket.

4. Look after your baggage at each change, and leave it at the depot when you arrive at Waterloo. We will bring it to camp. We would urge that all come on Friday, Aug. 23 who can as there is always difficulty in getting baggage out to camp on Saturday night.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and post-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Excursion tickets to New York, good going or returning via Buffalo with stop-over at Pan-American Exposition, go on sale July 1st at principal ticket offices of Pennsylvania Lines.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

Early Lessons, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

Phenomena of Spiritualism Accounted for. No 4.

Article No. 3 closed with remarks in regard to the visionary ideas of popular religionists relating to the nature of angels, and the varied experiences of people in death bed experiences which vary according to the different impressions made upon the sensorium. "The angels of Jehovah do his commandments, hearkening unto the voice of his Word. Psa. ciii. 20. By his spirit, through them, he shapes the course of human affairs, that they may arrive at an appointed end, when Jesus and the resurrected saints—is-angeloi—equal unto the angels—no longer falling a little short of them, will assume the government of the world. These noble and glorified men, real, not phantom spirits, cannot be evoked at the will and pleasure of railway travelers, and circles of backwoods sectarians, and consulters of the dead! How prostrate must be the human mind in this truly heathen land, to subscribe to such conceit! Honest they may be, as honesty goes, but O the inexpressible ignorance of the Divine Testimony such pagan practices display. Should not a people seek unto God? Should they seek the dead in behalf of the living? 'To the law and the testimony, if they speak not according to thy Word, it is because there is no light in them.' This is the unerring rule. The consulters of the dead do not obtain answers according to this Word, though they do according to the latent spectral impressions on the minds of their mediums, and those who consult or seek to know through them. There is therefore no divine truth to be extracted from their answers; the truth they have is only an evocation of what already exists in the mind of man. The things I advocate are matters of divine testimony and reason. They need nor demand no confirmation from spectral impressions, visible, or invisible, of mediums ignorant of the first principles of the Oracles of God. Granting that all they say they see and hear in their spirit-world, is really seen and heard, it militates not one fotn against anything proved by the testimony of God. They see and hear nothing but what begins and ends in the carnal mind. Everything they reproduce is the mere magnetic reflection of human action, and human thought, from the sensorium of the medium.

A prophet, one of the apostle John's brethren, (perhaps Enoch or Elijah), was sent as an angel to him in Patmos. He was sent to show him future things. (Rev. xxii. 8, 9; i. 19,) which had no existence, and many of them at present have none, except in the mind of God. There the underived archetypes of them exist, and no one could see them there, unless he was placed en rapport with the divine mind. When this should be effected, he could behold them there in all their wonderful symbolization glowing on the Divine sensorium. No one, however, was allowed to gaze upon this manifestation proximately, but Jesus. Hence the Apocalypse is styled 'the revelation which God gave to Jesus Christ;' that he might communicate it to his servants on earth. In doing this he sent an angel, called 'his angel,' (messenger) who was qualified to signify it to John, that he might write a description of it to Christ's servants. Now, in signifying it to John the angel had to present visible spectral impressions before the apostle to daguerreotype his sensorium in the camera obscura of his brain, with the objects transferred from the mind of the Father to the Lord Jesus, and then to the angel. This was effected by the spirit shining upon the divine scenery, and being thence reflected upon John's sensorium, 'shining into his heart, to give him the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ;' and all the angel had to do to accomplish this, was to place John en rapport with himself, so that the spirit passing from him to John, would transfer the spectral impressions to him, and make him clairvoyant. The circle being complete, the spiritual current circulated through the group; and John records the fact, saying: 'I was in the spirit, and heard behind me a great trumpet voice'—'he that hath ears to understand let him hear what the spirit saith.'

Now, man being made in the likeness of angels, can imitate them, without knowing it, in many things, only in an imperfect manner. The Quaker 'light within', can be made to shine with latent or odic light upon the sensorium of a prepared medium. 'If the light within you be darkness, how great is that darkness.' This is the character of the Quaker light, which that sect teaches, every man brings with him into the world. It is the electro-magnetic halo of the sensorium, stamped in after life with all sorts of spectral impressions, according to the teaching the pupil may happen to receive. Now take two such persons, and make one a medium, called formerly a wizard or a witch, and the other a consulter of the dead through him or her. In preparing the medium, you have preternaturally exalted, or rendered unusually sensitive, the sensorium, you have so highly polished the plate as to prepare it to receive impressions—its electro-magnetic halo is susceptible to the most delicate touches. Now place the seeker to the dead en rapport with the medium, and cause to pass from his sensorium a current of whatever you choose to call it—electricity, magnetism, od, or what not. This done, there is a connection established between them which unites the halos of the two; so that even the hidden spectral impressions of the seeker are daguerreotyped on the sensorium of the medium, and the witch sees and hears in dream-sight and dream-sound, things which the seeker may have himself forgotten. But the relationship established is not limited to the seeker and the witch; but through her it extends to all she may know, and through them to others, and re-acting upon herself, and so through the seeker to all the ramifications of his acquaintance-ship, both living and dead. He says, 'bring me up Samuel.' And Samuel vividly depicted on the sensorium of the seeker, appears also evoked as a spectral impression before the magnetic sight and hearing of the witch or medium. Saul saw nothing and heard nothing himself; but perceived by the woman's description that it was Samuel. 'What sawest thou?' said he to the woman. She told him; and 'he perceived that it was Samuel,' and made obeisance. The conversation between the spectral impression and Saul was carried on through the witch, as through a medium at this day. She heard as we hear in dreams, and what she heard she reported; and Saul's spectral forebodings became prophetic in the witch's mouth."

Scientific investigation has abundantly proven the fact that the so-called spiritual communications both begin and end with spectral impressions upon the sensorium, and are never from a higher source. Mediums are rendered peculiarly sensitive to receive and express impressions when placed en rapport with the seeker.

Not long ago, a gentleman told me that he went to consult one of these mediumistic physicians about the sickness of his wife. He said that the woman was a perfect stranger to both himself and wife. He says she did not ask him a single question about his wife, but she grasped his hand and went on and described her sickness to him, and told her size, form, complexion, color of hair, etc. She said I perceive you are in doubt of me. He said he confessed that he was. She then says to him, is it not true, all that I have told you? and he confessed that it was. But says he, how do you know all this? She replied, that when I grasped your hand, you, yourself told me everything. She did not know anything about his wife before holding his hand. They were then placed en rapport, a magnetic or electrical telegraphic communication was established, the halos of the two were united. He unconsciously told her everything. She explained that it was done in the act of taking his hand.

In the next article will give more evidence of these spectral impressions, which will conclude the series.

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

[Considering the number and length of these articles, and in view of editorial indulgence and readers' patience it might be well here to emphasize the necessity that even still exists for a strong yet kindly testimony against divisions and in favor of unity. It will not be disputed that the articles have so far carried out this purpose, as indicated in the sub-heading "Drawbacks and Hindrances," and in the motto derived from our Lord's prayer for the unity of his disciples. Repeated mention of this has been made by the writer as opportunity seemed to offer. His design has been to present certain facts and circumstances drawn from published documents such as to provide the reader with an "object-lesson" against exalting human opinions or even secondary Bible truths into fundamental elements of the "one faith." It may be hoped that some may take warning and reconsider the position they occupy. As indicated by the Apostle it requires an "endeavor" to keep the "unity of the Spirit." Several topics have been dealt with, which do not, however, exhaust the number. A little more patience is still requested.]

The endeavors of the "schoolmen" from the 11th to the 13th century to reconcile the sinless character of our Lord with his birth of Mary, formed the principal topic of the preceding paper on this subject. Mahommet's critique on the Divinity of Christ, with brief reference to the Council of Trent and Pius IX. were also given.

In the later twenties of the 19th century there arose in England a considerable controversy on this subject. In only one respect it may be said to differ from that carried on among the Christadelphians. The parties to it were decided Trinitarians. It was fully recognized on both sides that the Son of God, the second Person of the Trinity, assumed in union with himself, flesh or human nature. Otherwise the controversy proceeded on identically the same lines. It turned very much on the assumption that the nature of Adam was from its previous condition changed after his fall, and, consequently, the question whether the human nature of our Lord was from Adam fallen or unfallen, was gone into.

I may mention that there is no trace in this controversy of the question which was so much agitated among the schoolmen of the middle ages concerning the immaculate conception of the Virgin Mary herself. The reader may remember that this was dealt with in a former article.

The occasion of the controversy was certain teachings put forth by a minister of the Church of Scotland who for some ten years officiated in the Scotch church in London, England. This was Rev. Edward Irving, M. A., who is said to have had the credit of being the founder of the Catholic Apostolic Church, and to have been the advocate of the restoration of the supernatural gifts of the Holy Spirit, especially what was known as the "unknown tongues." His general preaching caused a great stir among many both in England and Scotland. Referring to some peculiarities which account for the interest he excited, one of his biographers (W. Wilks), says—"Never were the pretensions of rank more ruthlessly spurned—never the vices of the rich more sternly denounced—never the independence of the preacher's office more bravely vindicated, than by Edward Irving, when princes of the blood, and princes of the mart, swelled his audience..... every grade of society was passed in review, and its moral state graphically portrayed.....None had ever a deeper sympathy with the sorrows and degradations of his kind,—none a kindlier compassion for their frailties." For a time crowds of all classes, "besieged the doors, and were jammed together in the aisles," etc.

Irving had a strong persuasion as to the importance of the subject concerning the human nature of our Lord, and of the Scripturalness of the view of it which he held. He said—"It grieves me every day to find how unsound is the faith of almost all, in the true humanity of Christ; I mean humanity of the substance of the blessed Virgin; humanity, body and soul, under all the conditions of the fall, tempted in all points, inward, as we are tempted, and at all points triumphant over the temptation; humanity holy, yea most holy both in flesh and soul; and this not through any difference in itself, its properties, its instincts, or its propensities; but from the person of the Son of God who informed it, and the power of the Holy Ghost with which he anointed it, ever upheld it under temptation, ever kept it from sin," etc.

"To know and to understand how the Son of God took sinful flesh and yet was sinless, is the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the ending of orthodox theology."....

"I ask in all Scripture for a hint or a shadow of a reason to induce us to believe that Christ's flesh was different from ours."

His biographer mentions the following—"In a discourse given in March, 1827, Irving confesses that though only five years had he preached in London he was set down as having 'boxed the whole compass of heresy' .....In the summer he preached for a society a discourse in which strangers detected the doctrine of the 'sinful humanity of Christ'.....This was the sum of Irving's difference from the self-styled orthodox—that whereas they assert that the nature of Jesus was exempt from the taint of hereditary sin, Irving contended for his perfect oneness in nature with all mankind, his actual sinlessness being the triumphant result of incarnated Divinity. Pitiable as it may seem, on this scarcely appreciable diversity of belief volumes were to be written, and a fierce warfare of three years maintained, ending in poor Irving's censure by the Presbytery of London, expulsion from the noble edifice reared by his friends, etc.....In October of the same year the 'heresy' was brought to a head by a clergyman ascertaining through an interview with Irving that his views were as have been described. An appeal to the religious newspapers was the result."

The literature produced in the course of this controversy was considerable. Irving published six long sermons on the Incarnation, four of which were uncontroversial. On the eve of the publication of these four, "there arose," he says, "a great outcry against the doctrine which, with all orthodox churches I hold and maintain concerning the person of Christ, the doctrine, I mean, of his human nature, etc.....It was necessary to take controversial weapons in my hand, and contend earnestly.....He then wrote two additional sermons for this purpose. He afterwards published a special treatise on the subject extending to 150 pages; besides an article of 25 pages in the Morning Watch, a Quarterly Journal issued by the Catholic Apostolic Church party. Several pamphlets also appeared on the subject, besides allusions interspersed throughout his published lectures on the Apocalypse. The first number of the Morning Watch (Mch. 1829) contained an editorial article of 25 pages defending Irving's views.

A pamphlet in defence of Irving's views was published by Henry Drummond. This gentleman was a member of Parliament, and one of the founders of the Catholic Apostolic Church. He was a grandson of the first Lord Melville, a banker in London, and a great landholder in Hampshire, England. The biographer of Irving already named, says, "It was doubtless under the pressure of deep religious convictions, or at the impulse of fervent religious zeal, that he broke up his hunting establishment .....sold the estate itself, and became the munificent, laborious propagandist of Evangelical Christianity.....Irving in a Dedication of a volume of his discourses to Drummond, says, "and finally, who hath taken us poor despised interpreters of prophecy under your wing, and made the halls of your house like unto the ancient schools of the prophets." This is in allusion to certain "Conferences" held at Albury Park, the residence of Drummond. These were, says Wilks, "attended by about thirty clergymen, dissenting ministers and distinguished laymen." These were entertained and lodged for a whole week during the discussions, of which Drummond narrated the substance in a work of three volumes entitled "Dialogues on Prophecy."

It is not intended here to give a narrative of the controversy but only a few extracts from the chief parties concerned to show the "subtlety" of the subject and to give further illustration of the manner in which, in the case of the Christadelphians history repeated itself.

Christianity and Confucius.

Hear the words of Confucius:

Some one said: "What do you say concerning the principle that injury should be returned with kindness?"

The Master said: "With what, then, will you recompense kindness? Recompense injury with justice and recompense kindness with kindness."

There spoke a man who has guided thousands of millions of human beings. The great Chinese philosopher taught men to act with an eye to success and comfort on this earth. He gave advice which he thought the average man could live up to.

The vast nation which still humbly follows him is a stagnant nation. It has revered for twenty-three hundred years Confucius' memory, and for the same number of years it has known no progress. Yet, how admirably Confucius represents the view of the average mortal. One-third of all living men and women are followers of Confucius to-day because the average feeble human mind thinks with him.

Says the average man: "There spoke a most wise Chinese. Of course it is foolish to repay injury with kindness. If you are kind to those who injure you you are by implication unfair to those who treat you kindly. Save your kindness for those who are kind to you," etc.

Confucius points backward. His maxims are suited to our feeble nature. His followers must stagnate morally.

Christianity, the moral lever that has supplied progress to the world, points to the future. Its maxims are hard for men to follow. But they set a standard that raises man by compelling him to admire a perfection of character far beyond him.

"Return kindness with kindness and injury with justice," says Confucius.

What says the Founder of Christianity?

"Whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also; and if any man will sue thee at the law and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also."—Matt. v. 39-40.

"Forgive and you shall be forgiven."—Luke vi. 37.

"Be ye therefore merciful as your Father also is merciful."

"It is more blessed to give than to receive." Acts xx. 35.

"Judge not that ye be not judged." Matt. vii. 1.

"Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you."—Matt. v. 44.

"Whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased, and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted."—Matt. xxiii. 12.

One of the wisest men ever born was Confucius, and worthy of any man's study and admiration. But he stood for mental and moral petrifaction.

Not one line did he ever write in favor of women.

All of woman's progress is based on Christ's teachings and example.

"He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her."

"He who helps the human race is he who points ahead, who gives hope, inculcates high ideals, high aims.

The dying thief was transformed, despite horrible agony, by the radiant promise of future life.

"Thou shalt be with me in Paradise."—Luke xxiii. 43.

Confucius could give no hope beyond the grave.

"While you do not know life, what can you know about death?"

Four hundred and seventy-eight years before Christ was born, in the early morning, an old man, broken with age and sorrow, wandered about in front of his doorway mumbling to himself:

"The great mountain must crumble,
"The strong beam must break,
"The wise man must wither away like a plant."

That old man (how strange to think that he actually lived) was Confucius. His dismal crooning song told seven days before he died of his hopelessness beyond the grave. That old man was Confucius, forever emblematic of moral petrifaction because he taught men only how to live, for this earth and for the present, and strove for the good of the upper and not of the lower class.

This is the word that the old philosopher left behind him:

"Not more surely does the grass bend before the wind than the masses yield to the will of those above them."

For twenty-three centuries the masses in China have followed Confucius' guidance. To day they are at the mercy of European human energy born of a religious teaching that has forever brought virtue from the bottom to the top. They are cowering before the race whose brain has been guided by Christ, the great teacher of human equality of the superiority of the poor.

"Blessed are ye that hunger now; for ye shall be filled. Blessed are ye that weep now: for ye shall laugh."

"But woe unto you that are rich! For ye have received your consolation."

"Woe unto you that are full! For ye shall hunger. Woe unto you that laugh now! For ye shall mourn and weep."—Luke vi. 21, 24, 25.

"And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul. Neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things in common."

"Neither was there any among them that lacked; for as many as were possessors of houses or lands sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold."—Acts iv. 32-34.

There, unless you wilfully distort Christ's teachings, you read a threatening of the rich, and you learn that community of earthly goods as of heavenly hope existed among his followers.

Confucius taught the poor to look down, to bend to the yoke. Obeying him the Chinese have yielded to oppression through twenty-three centuries.

Christ taught the poor to look up. He gave them hope. He foretold rewards for them above, and sowed, here on earth a seed of revolt against oppression that shall last forever. The Roman slaves were his followers, and in the fullness of time he made them free.

In his own time his teachings shall raise all men and grant through equality their prayer: "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven."—Selected by Mrs. M. A. Woodward.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLEASE READ, AND THEN HEED.

WE wish to thank those who have responded to the letters we sent out some weeks ago, and to urge those who have not yet answered to do so at once. If there is some good reason for not sending now write and tell us of it, and say when you can remit. Don't neglect it any longer, for we need all—every last dollar—due us. We just must pay our obligations, and we can only do so when you pay yours. The responsibility lies with every one who owes us any money. Please attend to your part promptly.

ANY one who has a copy of THE RESTITUTION of July 10, No. 26, that they do not want to keep will confer a favor by sending it to Laura H. Perkins, Box 360, Galesburg, Mich.

"IF need be." We are poor judges of what that need be is. Is it loss of health, or loss of friends, beloved? Be still my soul; there was a needbe: and the Father will not bestow harsher correction than is needed.

ARISTOTLE says the Greek word "aion," is compounded of "aei," always, and "on," being, because "God always is." This is from De Caelo, lib. 1 chap. 9; and the thought and construction of his sentence shows that it was taken from Moses.

THERE are upwards of 300 persons in the United States who owe us sums ranging from $1.50 to $12.00. We have asked many of these persons by letter, and still they fail to send their remittances. Will you not each one that is indebted to this office, send us one dollar each within the next week? Please do this, and help us so we can satisfy our creditors. Don't disappoint us.

"The Bread of Life."

Bread is an article of food that sustains natural life. It has to be masticated, digested and assimilated; and that means that the miracle of changing inert matter into living substances has taken place. The Spirit borrows these matters of every day experience to make us understand analagous spiritual things. Grain-bread sustains the physical system. It acts physically,—sustains us physically. The bread called acts intellectually and morally, without changing the physical system at present; but it results finally in this corruptible organism being swallowed up of a life that will never end. Jesus said to the Jews, "If ye believe not Moses' writings, how shall ye believe my words?" "He wrote of ME." In Heb. viii. 5 we are told that Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make to make all things according to the pattern shown him in the Mount. And in Hebrews ix. 23 we read that "the pattern of things in the heavens had to be purified with the blood of calves, but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these." What are called patterns in this passage are called shadows in Col. ii. 17, —"the shadow of things to come, but

THE BREAD OF LIFE

THE TABERNACLE,

THE BODY IS CHRIST'S."

This explains why the pattern had to be strictly followed; every minute instruction represented something future besides its purpose in the then present; and also explains how Moses wrote of Christ. But the masses only saw what was made sensible, for we are told that the Word preached "did not profit them, not being mixed with faith." It also explains why, after his resurrection while on the way to Emmaus, it is said of Jesus, "Beginning at Moses and he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself,—saying that all things must be fulfilled, which were in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms concerning me." It must have been a wonderful sermon! No wonder it made their hearts burn within them as he talked to them by the way.

ALL THE PROPHETS

To refer to some of the things Moses wrote concerning Christ we have in Exodus xii. a minute account of the institution of the feast of the Passover. A lamb without blemish was slain. The blood of it was sprinkled on the two side posts and the upper door posts, and they ate the flesh roasted, —ate it with unleavened bread and BITTER HERBS.

They could not eat it raw, nor sodden with water (boiled); nothing of it should remain until the morning,—or if it did, it had to be burned with fire. They had to eat of it with loins girded, with shoes on the feet and staff in hand, and eat it in haste, "for it is the Lord's Passover," for says Jehovah, "I will smite all the first-born in the land of Egypt, both man and beast, and against all the gods of Egypt, I will execute judgment, and the blood shall be a TOKEN upon the houses where ye are. When I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy you when I smite the land of Egypt; and this day shall be unto you for a MEMORIAL; and ye shall keep it as a feast by an ordinance for ever." I have no doubt that every particular was a shadow or a symbol, although I may not be able to trace them all out. Many of them, however, are so clearly brought out for us in that it will help greatly in this study. What a wonderful God is he whom we serve! He knew the first-born of man and beast in all the land of Egypt,—and the very hairs of our heads are numbered! What mad recklessness to think of hiding anything from his all-seeing eye. No stranger, or foreigner, or hired servant was allowed to commemorate this Passover. It had to be eaten in one house, neither could they break a bone of it, Ex. xii. 45, 46. The New Testament application is found in 1 Cor. v., "Purge out therefore the old leaven that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened; for even is sacrificed for us; therefore, let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth. Consult the context at your leisure, to see the full meaning of the unleavened bread of the Israelites to us. A vile person had to be put out of the church at Corinth, and then they could keep the ANTITYPICAL feast of the Passover with sincerity and truth. Immediately following this we are taught the same lesson again, by being told what company to keep.

I AM JEHOVAH;

THE NEW TESTAMENT,

CHRIST OUR PASSOVER

Truly Christ our Passover has been slain for us; we have not yet been passed over; but we trust we can appropriate the language of Heb. x. 9, spoken of Jesus, to do thy will, O God. He TAKETH AWAY the first (will) that he may establish the second,—by THE WHICH WILL we are sanctified through the offering of the Body of Jesus Anointed once for all. And every priest (under the will taken away) standeth daily ministering OFTEN TIMES the same sacrifices which can never take away sins. But this man, after he had offered ONE ENDURING sacrifice for sins, sat down at the right hand of God.....for by ONE offering he has permanently perfected those being sanctified.....Now where there is forgiveness of these (sins) an offering for sin is no longer needed. Having, therefore, brothren, confidence respecting the entering of the Holiest by which way he consecrated for us, through the vail, that is, his flesh, (recently killed and yet living) through the vail, that is the flesh of himself, and having a great High Priest over the House of God, we should approach with a true heart in full conviction of faith, our hearts sprinkled from a consciousness of evil, the body also having been also bathed in pure water, we should firmly hold the confession of the hope without declining; for who promised." By strict compliance with the commands and instruction accompanying it, the destroying angel passed by the houses marked with the blood of a lamb slain in faith and obedience. They were saved from death through faith in the words of command and promise, not faith in a substitute. But there is no evidence that their faith took hold of him who away down the ages would come and once for all offer a sacrifice that should purge consciences, put away sins, obtain eternal redemption, and enter

"LO, I COME

THE BLOOD OF JESUS,

HE IS FAITHFUL

THE MOST HOLY PLACE.

This is he of whom it is our happiness to be able to say, "Even Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us." Having obtained eternal redemption from death himself [the words "for us," are supplied] he is in position and power to redeem us also. That is the purpose for which he was sacrificed on our account; a redemption from death and no return to it!! It is an everliving nature, and therefore divine!!

In Exodus xxvii, xxviii. and xxxix. there is much written concerning Christ. Prominent in all the services of the Sanctuary are those pertaining to the altar. "Seven days thou shalt make an atonement for the altar, and sanctify it, and it shall be an altar most Holy; whatsoever toucheth the altar shall be holy." Two lambs of the first year, day by day, one in the morning and the other in the evening. This was to continue throughout their generations. The fire was ever burning, and the sweet savor of the daily sacrifice ever ascending. From Is. liii. 12, we learn that the soul of Jesus was made an offering for sin," and according to Rom. iii. 25, the Father set him forth as for the remission of sins that are past through faith in his blood; and this exhibits him to the believer of the truth as an altar. The Word made flesh was at once the victim, the altar and the priest. In the sanctury service the altar was the first thing sanctified. And Ex. xxix. 12 shows that the blood was applied to the horns of the altar by the priest's fingers and the rest was poured out at the bottom of the altar. These horns of the altar are understood to represent symbolically manifested in the glorified flesh of those who have become sacrificially connected with the antitypical Altar, —Christ. The words of the Spirit in Heb. xiii. 10 says, "We have an altar whereof they have no right to eat, which serve the tabernacle." But why not? The sacrifices under the Law could not confer future life,—could not purge consciences. All it could do, it did for the flesh-and-blood life. The Tabernacle service shadowed forth

THE ETERNAL POWER

GOOD THINGS TO COME.

If faith was exercised in what was shadowed, they received remission of sins and became heirs of eternal life. Simeon and a few others were of this class, but the masses were not; and in their blindness they clung to the shadows after the substance had come; so that the tried and suffering Lord sorrowfully and plaintively said, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life."

In 1 Cor. v. 18 we are told that they who "eateth of the sacrifice are partakers of the Altar," and this proves to us that Christ is the altar spoken of, that those who serve the tabernacle have no right to eat. In a word, we do not serve the tabernacle, nor believe in it now; that that system was only to last until the time of Reformation. The Reformation has come, and that system has gone. We partake of the better,

THE ENDURING SACRIFICE, and have become identified with him as the altar that was sanctified with his own blood while on the tree, according to the type: and "if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him," and we are told that in suffering with him we fill up the sufferings of Christ remaining behind. So intimately connected with him already, are we that

WE SUFFER WITH HIM

and partake of him as the altar. And brethren and sisters, the Spirit in Moses speaking of the typical altar says, all that touch it are holy; and so, also without touching it none are holy. I trust when you search to see if these things be so, you will notice that the sacrifice was bound to the horns of the altar, and from this point of view, the magnitude of the Altar is seen. Jesus and all his saints, —the whole of

THE ONE BODY

of which Jesus is the Head, constitute the One Altar. All who are in him partake of the altar as they will partake of his throne, but the suffering, i. e. the altar, comes first. Why all this? Because they eat the sacrifice. The one body of Christ never literally partook of the sacrifice. The typical sacrifices were literally eaten as other food is eaten. The Antitypical is not so partaken of; and it seems strange that hundreds of millions of so-called Christians should believe that they literally partake of

HIS LITERAL FLESH.

What a stupendous religious fraud this is, in view of the announcement of that same Jesus, that he who was dead is living. He had not been eaten before laid in the tomb,—for the angel declared that he had risen, and made an appointment for him to meet his disciples at Nazareth; and hundreds of others were witnesses of the fact of his resurrection. If a miracle were constantly performed, and common bread were turned to flesh, it would NOT BE HIS FLESH.

His mortal body was changed to a glorious, immortal one; and it is charging God with deception and fraud to palm it off for the truth, as the priests do. It is the apostasy that so teaches! Sticklers for the real flesh should read a little further where the Lord himself says the flesh profiteth nothing! Then what would be the use of eating it, if it profiteth nothing? If any question this construction let them read the whole verse, remembering that what above all things we need, is the eternal life promised. And I ask, if the blood of the Son of Man, or the flesh of the Son of Man can quicken our mortal bodies and fashion them like to his glorious body? If that were the case how would the Lord himself ever have and ever-living, seeing he himself says the flesh profiteth nothing? I will let the Lord explain this to you:—He says, "It is the Spirit that quickeneth, the flesh profiteth nothing." And let us thank God, that he immediately tells us what the Spirit that quickens is —"The words that I speak unto you, they are SPIRIT, and they are LIFE. And to illustrate by what process his words impart life I quote his words in John vi. 40: "And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one that seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may

BECOME GLORIOUS

HAVE EVERLASTING LIFE,

and I will raise him up at the last day: that is, raise him up to everlasting life. The Father wills, plans, arranges that all who accept the words from God delivered by Jesus shall have everlasting life. These words, when believed and obeyed, are every way equal to the task assigned them. The great commission says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." It is settled, then,— the words he spoke are life-imparting words. Returning to the eating of bread, I would remark that the simple, natural processes and conditions are frequently borrowed to express spiritual things, because we have but the language of men. Jesus in John xxi. 15 says and "Feed my lambs," and Prov. x. 21, says the lips of the righteous feed many. When the disciples said to the Lord, "Master, eat," he said, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of..... my meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work." "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." It means a craving to be righteous. In Amos viii. 11 we read, "Behold the days comes saith the Lord that I will send a famine in the land,—not a famine of bread, nor but of the words of the Lord." Said Jesus to the woman at the well, "Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst,"—can you doubt what kind of water he referred to? At the great day of the feast, he stood and cried, "If any one thirst let him come unto me and drink," and then, bless his dear name, he explains what he was ready to quench their thirst with:—"He that believeth into me.....out of him shall flow rivers of living water." Again we read of the eating of the tree of life,— that the gold of the rich shall eat their flesh as a canker,—and "as the hart panteth after the waterbrook, so panteth my soul after thee, O God;" and Jeremiah says, "Thy words were found and I did eat them," and John took the little book and ate it up,— and in all this to us and accommodates himself to our capacities and to our languages

"FEED MY SHEEP"

A THIRST FOR WATER

GOD IS STOOPING DOWN

I see that my time has expired, but I will just take you into my confidence, by saying that I purpose, the Lord willing, to give a brief exposition of the 6th chapter of John's gospel next Sunday morning, and my aim today was to set forth a few things necessary to be known before one can understand some of the startling announcements made by Jesus to the crowd that followed him to the other side of the Sea of Galilee. I hope the chapter mentioned, John vi. will receive attention from you during the week and so be prepared the better to enter into the subject of "What it is to eat of the flesh of the Son of Man, and to drink his blood;" and also to profit by the practical lessons it contains.

Signs in the Orient.

The opening up of the Orient is one of the most instructive of the signs of the times. Too many observers have of late been distracted from the near to the far east. Whatever may be the course of events in China, Manchuria, Japan, Mongolia, Tibet, Burmah or Siberia, it still remains that the pivot on which the international history of the near future will turn, is situated in the Turkish empire and its tributary dependencies.

The recent announcement from Palestine respecting coming railway development is full of interest to keen observers of incident after incident in the East. It appears that the always recalcitrant Sultan has absolutely refused to give an English company the concession for the railway from Acera to Damascus. This concession was formerly given to the same company, but run out before the line was built. The Turkish government is willing to pay for the milenge actually completed, and it will itself construct the rest of the line, which it is intended to carry on to Mecca.

Two things gleam forth in this Oriental incident. One is the bitter hostility of the Sultan to England, which has been intermittently displayed ever since the agitation on behalf of the Armenians. The other is the steady preparation for the surely approaching crisis in the Turkish empire. Arabia is in chronic unrest. Macedonia, Servia, Albania and Bulgaria are all fermenting with the elements of revolution. And the Sultan has only one friend. Unfortunately, that friend is the Kaiser. The close and servile friendship of the German emperor for the cruel obstructionist of all reforms in the East is the one blot on the policy of that enlightened ruler of the mighty nation which has, in its resurrection from mediævalism, astonished the world.

The opinion is current all over the continent that Lord Salisbury desired the deposition of the Sultan at the time of the Armenian massacres, but that he was thwarted by the Kaiser. England is not likely to be forgiven. All her enterprises in the Sultan's dominions are blocked, while German schemes are being favored. The idea that the Turkish government will finish the railway is farcical. Turkey is dependent on other sources. But the important point is that such enterprises are to be pushed forward, no matter who may be behind them.

The party whose purposes are most affected by these undertakings is Russia. The whole Russian nation is set on the possession of the holy places at Jerusalem, and this object is never lost sight of. But Britain cannot, and will not allow control of the highways to India, of which there are several, to pass into the grip of any other power. Thus complications are just ahead, of which no man can predict the course or issue.—Christian Commonwealth, London.

One of the greatest thoroughfares in Palestine, according to Consul Merrill, at Jerusalem, is that between Jerusalem and Nablous, in ancient Shechem. For centuries it has been only a camel path, in many places rough and stony, and in spite of the vast amount of traffic it was not until 1900 that an effort was made to connect the two cities by a carriage road. Early in that year the route was surveyed and the specifications sent to Constantinople, whence orders for the construction of the roads must emanate. Work was begun the following autumn, and in March of the present year the first carriage passed over the completed section between Jerusalem and Bireh. Carriages go from Jericho to the Dead Sea and the River Jordan, but there is no road, the carriages driving across the plains.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

The Rapid Growth of Siberia.

Siberia is growing with wonderful rapidity. The Russian government is kind to its emigrants. This summer I met a train in Siberia. It was taking fourth-class passengers a distance of 2,500 miles for $2.25, giving each person a sleeping berth, and feeding some of the poorer ones at the many feeding stations along the Siberian railroad. Over 600,000 emigrants have crossed the Urals into Siberia in five years. Siberia today looks just about as Dakota did twenty-five years ago. To give you an idea of the increase of traffic in Siberia the following figures, given me by Prince Khilkoff may be interesting: "The West Siberian road (that is, the section of 2,000 miles from the Urals to Irkutsk) in 1896 carried 160,000 passengers, 169,000 emigrants, and 10,500,000 puds of of goods. (Pud is forty pounds.) In 1898 it carried 379,000 passengers, 195,000 emigrants, and 30,000,000 puds of goods."—The Rev. Peter MacQueen in Leslie's Weekly.

The dome of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, is badly cracked and the damage is serious. The immense weight resting upon the eight piers upholding the dome has caused the foundations under the dome to settle more than elsewhere. This has broken eight arches and the windows of the clerestory over them in the nave of the choir, and in the north and south transepts where they abut on the dome piers. The great weight of the western towers has caused them to sink, and in sinking they have cracked the west front vertically through the great door, and the window above and the vaulted ceiling and portico. Minor cracks have been noticed. The architect in charge of the edifice is of the opinion that the damage was first caused by the settlement induced by the building of two underground railways and a large sewer. The vibration of trains is considered particularly harmful.

Conference Notice.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus for the State of Illinois will be held in Oregon, beginning Wednesday evening Sept. 18, 1901, and hold over Sundy. A programme will appear later.

The building committee will have the new building finished in which sleeping rooms and dining hall will be provided. We wish as many to attend as possible, both those who live in the State and those out of it. We expect Bros. Conner, Eychaner and Samuel Wilson to be with and assist us. Those who have attended previous meetings know what a treat it is to listen to them and should try to be with us again and endeavor to bring others with them. Let all come and have a good time, for surely no better feast was ever spread than The Word.

JAS. W. WILSON, Pres.
L. BOOTH, Sec'y.

To brethren who attend the Illinois Conference at Oregon, Illinois, Sept. 18th. The Committee just informed me that the new Conference building is about completed and that the brethren should be informed that it will be necessary to bring with them a couple of blankets and a pillow. As many as can should bring or send a cot, as it is not thought advisable at this present time that ticks or bedding be put there to remain in the building. For further information concerning board, lodging, etc., address, J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Ill.

S. J. LINDSAY.

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

I will be at Bosworth, Mo., Sept. 22 to 29 and hold meetings over two Sundays. At Pleasantown, Kan., Sept. 1 and continue to the 6th. All are invited to these meetings.

Poetry.

Are You Waiting for the Lord?

Are you ready for the kingdom,
In its beauty bright and fair;
Are you waiting for his coming,
And to meet him in the air?

O could I but see him coming,
Could I meet him at the door;
Could I throw my arms around him,
And never leave him any more.

O dear Savior keep us ready,
And dear Jesus lead us right;
O dear Jesus be our guide-post,
Keep us ever day and night.

Sin and its Results.

What is sin? Sin is defined by Webster as "a voluntary departure of a moral agent from a known rule of rectitude and duty, prescribed by God." In the Scriptures, it is said to be "the transgression of the law" (1 John iii. 4); or, more literally, "Sin is lawlessness." Transgression of law, or lawlessness, implies a law or rule of action; and this requires a law-giver. "There is one Law-giver, who is able to save or destroy"—God. Jas. iv. 12. He is able to preserve those who fulfil his requirements, or bring them to life, and to destroy the transgressors. Without this provision God's government would be a farce and fail of the end it has in view.

We have seen in former articles that God made man capable of bearing the penalty of disobedience, should he decide on such a course; which, we are told, is that he can be destroyed. In what sense are we to understand God when he says he is "able" and "will destroy" the sinner? In its natural sense, or must we read some mysterious meaning into this term that is foreign to it when used in every-day life? One thing is certain: God was able to create man; and this being true, he is able to destroy him if it becomes necessary to do so. Timothy Dwight, an eminent theologian, says, "Whatever has been created, can certainly be annihilated." God's requirements to man are righteous, because they minister to man's highest good. It is wrong to refuse obedience because this will bring injury to man.

Next we enquire, Was it possible for man to sin; to "voluntarily depart from a known rule of right and duty?" It must have been; otherwise what reason, what excuse, would there be for speaking of sin? It is certainly true that sin has been committed, and man is suffering its temporal consequences. Now, since there is sin and consequent suffering, there must be, in the nature of the case, a sinner, which is man; and hence it was possible for man to sin. And this brings us to the question of free agency. If man could not, or can not, do otherwise than act contrary to a proper rule of action, then there can be no such thing as responsibility attaching to him, and no justice in threatening him with death or causing him to suffer for wrong doing. If, however, he can decide between two opposite courses of action, provided he has been apprised of the results of either; if he has "a known rule of action," and is a responsible being, then we can see the justice of causing or allowing him to suffer. Otherwise (and there is no evading the conclusion) we make God responsible for sin; sin exists because he wills it to be. If God is not its Author, then how did sin come into the world? "BY ONE MAN sin entered into the world." Rom. v. 12. He, then is the party responsible for the advent of sin into the world, and not God. But let us trace sin from its incipiency to the finished act. Man was tempted—but what is this? "Every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed." Jas. i. 14. This lust is caused by some inducement to act contrary to a right rule of conduct. Then lust, when it is finished, "brings forth sin," the contrary act. This was exactly the case with the "one man," by whom sin came. God had given him permission to eat of all the trees in the garden, "but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil," said he, "thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day thou eatest thereof, dying thou shalt surely die." Gen. ii. 17. Here we have:

1. God giving a law: "The Lord commanded."

2. This law is given to man to govern his actions: "Commanded the man."

3. Man is informed as to the consequences resulting from its non-observance: "Thou shalt surely die."

4. Thus man is directly responsible for the results following. The sequel shows that man did eat of the forbidden fruit, and in this disobeyed God's command. Hence the apostle, in further speaking of this subject, ascribes the entrance of sin into the world to "one man's disobedience." Rom. v. 19. What was the result? What else could it be but what was threatened in the penalty: "In the day thou eatest thereof, dying thou shalt surely die." "And death (came) by sin" Rom. v. 12. But what is death, or what is it to die? It is said that in this case death was "spiritual death." But what is this? We are still in the dark. "Separation from communion with God." And is that all that involved in the threat, "thou shalt surely die?" According to this view we are led to believe that Adam rather enjoyed death in this sense, for we are told that he "hid," and thus he endeavored to remain "separated from God." Gen. iii. 7-10. Is this all there is of the threatened penalty? We can not think it is, as it is impossible to conceive how Adam could so understand this threat. "Thou shalt die"—what did that mean? Nothing short of the forfeiture of the life that had been given him, and his return to the element from which he had been taken; as we see in the execution of the penalty: "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. iii. 19. "Lest he eat of the tree of life, and live forever." iii. 22-24 To live is to be in that condition in which the organs are capable of performing their functions; and not to live, is not to be in that condition. This is what Adam entailed upon himself by his disobedience; and hence the inspired record very pertinently says, "And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years. AND HE DIED." Gen. v. 5. Did he live one minute before those 930 years began? Certainly not: did he live one minute after they were ended? Will some one rise to answer.

But what is death? We are informed by theology—and Plato!—that it is the "separation of soul and body." What is the body? All are agreed to that. It is that called "man, a living soul," in the Bible. But what is the "soul:" It is said, "The immortal part of man." But, pray, what is this? We read nothing of the kind in the Bible, which treats man as wholly mortal. "Thou shalt die; to dust shalt thou return; lest he live forever." "Shall mortal man be more just than God." Job iv. 17. This inquiry can not be settled by an appeal to Plato, or even theology, for even here we do not find uniform testimony; and therefore we appeal to the Scriptures. What do they say about dead persons? "The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything." Eccl. ix. 5. Why is it that "the dead know not anything?" Because the organs, including the organ of thought, the brain, are no longer capable of performing their functions; therefore unconsciousness. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his dust; in that very day his thoughts perish." Psa. cxlvi. 4. He ceases to think, and while in this condition, "his sons (may) come to honor, and he knoweth it not; they are brought low, and he perceiveth it not of them." Job xiv. 21. In death he does not see God (Isa. xxxviii. 11), nor remember him (Psa. xxx. 9), nor praise him (Psa. cxv. 17); for all his powers are now in suspense; he has returned to his earth, and the breath or spirit—the vitalizing element—to God who gave it. This is true of all the dead, good and bad, without distinction. There in the dust lies the man created by God to walk erect, to rule over the earth, stricken down by the hand of death, cold, rigid, and decaying, a prey to the worms, having in death "no preeminence above the beast." Eccl. iii. 19-21. This is the shame and humiliation of sin. And this condition was not confined to Adam, by whom sin came, but "death has passed upon all men, because all have sinned." Rom. v. 12. Is there no hope? Yes, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Signs of His Coming.

When the disciples, with pride, called Jesus' attention to the goodly adornment of the temple building, and the great stones entering into its construction, and when he told them that there should not be one stone left on another, but all should be thrown down, Peter, James, John and Andrew asked him privately when these things should come to pass, and what should be the sign of his coming, and the end of the age.

Jesus, in reply to this two-fold question entered into quite a lengthy discourse of warning, instruction and predictions. It is evident that our Lord did not frame his reply in strict chronological sequence. By reason of this, it is difficult to place the several events in their chronological order. The annexed statement is probably approximately correct in its arrangement, and may be of benefit to some who are perplexed in regard to said discourse, as found in Mat. xxiv. Mark xiii. and Luke xxi.

Mat. xxiv. 3; Mark xiii. 4, Luke xxi. 7: Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the age?

Mat. xxiv. 6-8; Mark xiii. 7, 8, Luke xxi. 9-11: Wars, insurrections, famines, pestilences, earthquakes: are but the beginning of sorrows, and do not indicate the end. These are past and present.

Mat. xxiv. 9-23; Mark xiii. 9; Luke xxi. 12-18: The saints persecuted for Christ's sake. Stability will result in salvation—eternal life.

Mat. xxiv. 14; Mark xiii. 10: The gospel preached to all nations for a witness before the end comes. The two sections extend from the then present until he shall send forth his angels, and gather his elect ones.

Mat. xxiv. 15-28; Mark xiii. 14-23, Luke xxi. 20-24: Jerusalem besieged and destroyed, and the Jews scattered among the nations. Past.

Luke xxi. 24: Jerusalem will be trodden down by the Gentiles till the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. This is present and on to the indefinite future.

Mat. xxiv. 29, 30; Mark xiii. 24-28; Luke xxi. 25, 26: Immediately after the tribulation of those days (when Jerusalem shall cease to be trodden down of the Gentiles) will occur the signs indicating the near approach of the end of the present dispensation. Yet future.

Mat. xxiv. 30, 31; Mark xiii. 26, 27; Luke xxi. 27; 1 Thes. iv. 13-17: Then, (at the time of these signs) shall they see the Son of Man coming in clouds with great power and glory, and then shall he send his angels, with a sound of a great trumpet and gather his elect. Future.

Mat. xxiv. 31; Mark xiii. 30 Luke xxi. 32: Verily I say unto you that this generation shall not pass till all these things shall be accomplished. Past and future.

The destruction of Jerusalem was within the lifetime of the generation living when Jesus proclaimed these things; and doubtless the generation witnessing Jerusalem freed from Gentile rule, will also see the second coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead, and the gathering of the saints.

As is the case in many other prophecies, some of the items in this discourse may have a double fulfilment. In Mat. xxiv. 29, Jesus said "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened." This may apply, first to the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus in 70, when the Jewish sun (state) was darkened, the Jewish moon (the church) ceased to give her light, and the Jewish stars (rulers and dignitaries) fell from the (Jewish) heavens.

But the destruction of Jerusalem and the Jewish commonwealth did not end the tribulation: for from that day to this the Jews have continued in tribulation, as witness the persecution in all nations from then till now, and wheresoever they are resident. Only in England and America do they enjoy anything like political freedom, and freedom from persecution by both church and state. This will continue until they are gathered again to the land of their fathers, and Gentile supremacy over Jerusalem ceases.

When the Jewish nationality is restored in Palestine, and their rulers be of themselves, then we may look for the signs that indicate the speedy coming of the Son of Man.

While there has been no great progress in the actual returning of the Jews to Palestine in the past few years because of obstacles by the Sultan's government, yet the Zionist movement has made great headway. It is confidently expected that the Sultan's policy will shortly be changed in this respect, and that he will favor immigration of the Jews to the land, and grant them self government.

The Zionist movement has stirred Judaism from center to circumference. In all countries where there are Jews, and in nearly all of the larger cities, there are Zion clubs advocating Zionism.

In this we surely hear distinctly the noise of the shaking of the dry bones, and see the gathering of bone to his bone. The sinews are being formed by "The Jewish Colonial Trust" fund. When the organization is complete, no doubt breath from the Almighty will quicken into an exceeding great army, and they will go up to possess the land.

Surely we have cause to lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption draweth nigh.

S. T. BLESSING.

Genesis. Chap. 30.

1. And when Rhacheel saw that she did not bring forth for Jakoob, she became envious of her sister, and said unto Jakoob, Give me children, and if not I shall come to my end.

2. And Jakoob was angry with Rhacheel and said unto her, Am I in God's stead who hath deprived thee of fruit of the womb?

3. And Rhacheel said unto Jakoob, Lo my hand maid Balla; Go in unto her, and she shall bring forth on my knees, and I shall produce offspring from her.

4. And she gave Balla her hand-maid unto him for a wife and he went in unto her.

5. And Balla, the hand-maid of Rhacheel, conceived and brought forth a son for Jakoob.

6. And Rhacheel said, God hath judged me and hearkened to my voice and given me a son; therefore she called his name Dan.

7. And Balla the hand-maid of Rhacheel, conceived again, and brought forth a second son for Jakoob.

8. And Rhacheel said, God hath interceded for me, and I have restored myself to a place along with my sister and have asserted my ability; and she called his name Nephthalei.

9. And Leia saw that she had stopped bringing forth, and she took Zelpha her hand-maid, and gave her unto Jakoob for a wife.

10. And he entered in unto her; and Zelpha, the hand-maid of Leia conceived and brought forth a son for Jakoob.

11. And Leia said, I am in luck; and she named his name Gad.

12. And Zelpha the hand-maid of Leia conceived again and brought forth a second son for Jakoob.

13. And Leia said, Blessed-happy am I, because the women will account me blessed-happy; and she called his name Aseer.

14. And Hreubeen went his way on a day of summer-harvest of wheat and found fruit of mandrakes in the field, and brought them unto Leia, his mother; and Hrachael said unto her sister Leia, Give me of thy son's mandrakes.

15. And Leia said, No, no, doth it not suffice thee that thou hast taken my husband. Wilt thou also take my son's mandrakes? And Rhacheel said, No, not so: Let him lie with thee this night in return for thy son's mandrakes.

16. And Jakoob came in from the field at evening, and Leia went out to meet him, and said unto him, Thou wilt come in unto me today; for I have hired thee with my son's mandrakes; and he lay with her that night.

17. And God hearkened unto Leia, and she conceived and brought forth for Jakoob a fifth son.

18. Leia said, God hath given unto me my wages because I gave my hand-maid unto my husband: and she called his name Issachar, which is wages.

19. And Leia conceived again and brought forth a sixth son for Jakoob.

20. And Leia said, God hath given me a good votive-gift in the present season; my husband will prefer me; for I have borne him six sons; and she called his name Zabouloon.

21. And after that she brought forth a daughter and called her name Deina.

22. And God remembered Rhacheel, and God hearkened unto her, and opened her womb.

23. And she conceived and brought forth for Jakoob a son. And Rhacheel said, God hath taken away my reproach.

24. And she called his name Jooseeph, saying, May God have added unto me another son.

25. And it came to pass when Rhacheel had brought forth Jooseeph, Jakoob said unto Laban, Send me away, so that I may go into my place and unto my land.

26. Give me my wives and my children for whom I have served thee as a bond-servant, that I may depart; for thou knowest the bond-service with which I have served thee.

27. And Laban said unto him, If I have found favor in thy sight I would consult the flight of the birds for an omen: for God hath blessed me for thy coming in.

28. Make known thy wages to me and I will give them.

29. And Jakoob said, Thou knowest the bond-service I have rendered thee, and all thy flocks that were with me.

30. For all thine were small in my sight and they have increased to a multitude; and the Lord God hath blessed thee by my foot; now then when shall I make a house for myself also?

31. And Laban said unto him, What shall I give thee? And Jakoob said unto him, Thou shalt give me nothing, if thou wilt do for me this that I say, I will shepherd thy flocks again and watch to guard them.

32. Let all thy flocks pass by today, and separate therefrom every dun-colored sheep among the lambs and every partly white and spotted among the goats; they shall be my wages.

33. My righteousness will hearken on the morrow because my wages are in thy sight; every spotted and partly white among the goats and every dun-colored among the lambs shall be called mine.

34. And Laban said, Let it be according to thy word.

35. And he separated that day the spotted and partly white he-goats, even all the spotted and partly white she-goats, and everything that was dun-colored among the lambs, and everything that was white among them, and gave at the hand of his sons.

36. And he stood off a journey of three days between them and those of Jakoob, and Jakoob shepherded the rest of the flocks of Laban.

37. And Jakoob took for himself a green storax rod and one of mett-wood and one of the plane-tree; and Jakoob peeled them with white stripes, and stripping off the green the white which he had peeled appeared upon the rods variegated.

38. And he placed the rods which he had peeled in the watering-troughs, so that when the flocks came to drink, having come in sight of the rods in the act of drinking, the flocks might conceive towards the rods.

39. And the flocks did conceive towards the rods and brought forth partly white and variegated and pale dun-colored.

40. And Jakoob separated the lambs and stood before the sheep every partly-white and variegated ram among the lambs; and he separated his own flocks by themselves, and did not mix them up with the flocks of Laban.

41. And it came to pass in the season when the flocks were conceiving that Jakoob placed the rods before the flocks in the watering-troughs that they might conceive according to the rods.

42. And whenever the flocks were bringing forth he did not place them; and the unmarked ones became Laban's, and the marked ones Jakoob's.

43. And the man became very, very rich; and many chattels became his and cattle and men-servants and maid-servants, and camels and asses.

COMMENT.

The "producing offspring" by proxy as it were was an incident of polygamy and concubinage and was strictly legal according to the laws of those days even among the "sons of God" or "the children of the covenant" or "the covenant people" or the sons of Seem which are all synonymous terms for God's people as distinguished from "the heathen world" or the rest of "the nations" or "the Gentiles" as denominated in the versions. The word "Gentile" is of Latin origin and a translation of a translation merely or rather a failure to translate, and an adoption into English of a Latin word. The covenant of grace is as broad as the human race. For it rests upon the promise to the mother of the whole race. While the covenant of law is as narrow as one nation, the one nation namely for whom Moousees mediated it; and as God told Moousees would, though a perfect law, perfect nothing, because of its inefficiency to give life, and even God's people either were dead or would all die amenable to its perfect requirement; and as summed up by Paul, God's beneficent purpose in giving the law was that it should serve as a "Child-Leader" (not "a schoolmaster") to lead them as well as us all to the Christ, the Life-giver. And this but illustrates a great principle that is coming more and more to the front in sociology every day, namely that law or laws however good in the abstract, or on the statute-book are utterly inefficient unless embodied in the concrete life of the individual or the community for whom they are made; and that which embodies them is education and enlightenment. In this way the enlightened become "the light of the world."

Having commented before upon the names in this chapter I will simply repeat their meaning, "Balla" "a dancer." See "ballet" in the French "ball" in English having the same primitive origin.

"Dan" "a loan" "Daniel" a loan of mercy. "Nephthalei" "a flourishing cloud." "Zelpha" "shining life." "Gad" "a treasure." "Aseer." "Fatness" or "abundance." "Issachar" strong-satisfaction" or "fulness." "Zabuloon" "living desires." "Deina" "a what's-her-name." "Jooseeph" "a wise healer." "Laban" "a grasper."

Jakoob in his endeavor to get even, as we should say now, with his grasping father-in-law, simply availed himself of a profounder knowledge of generative laws than was prevalent in his day and followed out in simple practical ways the application of this knowledge to accomplish his desired end. We do not need to account the results or the acquisition of the knowledge miraculous at all, although we recognize God's hand and guidance in the whole matter.

Annual Meeting of the Kansas-Missouri Conference.

The Annual Meeting of the Kansas-Missouri Conference of the Church of God will be held in the public park in Severance, Kansas, beginning Friday evening, September 6th, and hold over till Sunday evening, the 15. Our audience tent, with dining tent and small living tents, and cots will be erected to accommodate all who will be in attendance. All coming will please bring all the bedding they will need for their lodging. A cook has been arranged for, and all will be boarded on the ground at the small expense of 25 cts. per day. Come prepared to remain during the meeting. The Conference work will be transacted Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. All desiring small tents will please address me at Atchison, Kansas, and so state, that we may know how many tents to order. A general attendance is desired. Let every body begin at once to get ready to attend this meeting. Severance is on the St. Joe and Grand Island Ry., 25 miles west of St. Joseph, Mo. Trains are run in connection with all regular trains into St. Joe. A regular programme will be prepare for work.

G. M. MYERS,
By order of Board.

Iowa State Conference.

The 14th Annual Conference of the Church of God for the State of Iowa will be held on the campground at Waterloo, August 24rd to Sept. 2nd. Programme will appear later.

All who attend the conference should observe strictly the following rules, in order to secure reduced rates:--

1. Tickets can be bought only on Aug. 21, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 26, and are good to return up to Sep. 3.

2. Do not buy round-trip tickets nor pay fare on train. You must pay full fare going—the reduction will be on return ticket providing there are 100 in attendance by rail. Last year the attendance was 150.

3. If you pass over more than one railroad, buy your ticket only to where you change cars—then buy to the next changing place, and so on, and be sure to ask each agent for a certificate wherever you buy a ticket, and bring all your certificates to Conference. Your last ticket must be to Waterloo. Those passing over one road should also obtain a certificate of the agent where they buy a ticket.

4. Look after your baggage at each change, and leave it at the depot when you arrive at Waterloo. We will bring it to camp. We would urge that all come on Friday, Aug. 23 who can as there is always difficulty in getting baggage out to camp on Saturday night.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Excursion tickets to New York, good going or returning via Buffalo with stop-over at Pan-American Exposition, go on sale July 1st at principal ticket offices of Pennsylvania Lines.

Address, THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 80 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

[Selected by J. H. Willey.]

Not Understood.

Not understood. We move along asunder,
Our paths grow wider as the seasons creep
Along the years: we marvel and we wonder
Why life is life . . and then we fall asleep.
Not understood.

Not understood. We get but few impressions,
And hug them closer as the years go by.
Till virtue oft is seen to be transgression,
And thus men live and toil, and live and die.
Not understood.

Not understood. Poor souls with stunted vision
Oft measure giants by their narrow gauge.
The poisoned shafts of falsehood and derision
Are oft impelled 'gainst those who would the age.
Not understood.

Not understood. The secret springs of action,
Which lie beneath the surface and the show,
Are disregarded, with self-satisfaction
We judge our neighbors, and they often go,
Not understood.

Not understood. How trifles often change us!
The thoughtless sentence or the fancied slight
Destroy long years of friendship and estrange us,
And on our souls there falls a withering blight;
Not understood.

Not understood. How many hearts are aching
For lack of sympathy! Ah! day by day,
How many cheerless, lonely hearts are breaking!
How many noble spirits pass away
Not understood!

Oh, God! that men would see a little clearer,
Or judge less harshly where they cannot see;
Oh, God! that men would draw a little nearer
To one another, they'd be nearer thee,
And understood.

Phenomena of Spiritualism Accounted for. No. 5.

In the close of Article No. 4, I called attention to some cases of spectral impressions conveyed to mediums by being placed en rapport, through magnetic or electrical connection, and that by this means the medium could possess herself of all the information of the party she is placed en rapport with. It is also said that she could further extend the same through him to all his acquaintances both living and dead.

We are further told that "spectral impressions may be made in divers ways upon the sensorium. Irritation of the stomach will do it. A gentleman in Edinburgh, said that for six weeks he had the appearance of a pig's head sitting upon his left shoulder, so that whenever he looked to that side he saw it staring him in the face. He was suffering from dyspepsia. It was as much the disembodied spirit of a pig, as the spectres seen by mediums are the disembodied spirits of dead men and women, boys and girls, infants and sucklings. When his stomach was restored to healthy action, the pig's ghost vanished from the sensorium, and was consequently dethroned from the gentleman's shoulder; so when the excitation of the medium's sensory from another cause ceases, the disembodied spirits and all the angels vanish in a trice.

Reasoning from the facts presented in the experiments of the coin, we might argue that the actions of men cause hidden spectral impressions to be made on the external magnetic halo of the earth, which remain after they are dead and long forgotten; so that were the Almighty to breathe upon it with his spirit a man's history (from this book of remembrance) would be evoked like the hand-writing on Belshazzar's palace wall. Even these exterior spectral impressions may be discerned by mediums of peculiar sensibility, so that they may perceive scenes after the actors have become quiet. Clairvoyants have seen many things upon this principle. Elisha's is a case in point here. The king of Syria warred against Israel, and devised ambuscades for his enemy; but Elisha, who was in Dothan, afar off, warned the king of Israel several times of these ambuscades. The king of Syria suspected treason in his own camp; but he was told by one of his followers that Elisha, the prophet, in Israel, told the king of Israel the words that were spoken in his (the king of Syria's) bed-chamber (2 Kings vi. 8) while Elisha at this time was in Dothan. Here the spectral impressions made upon the universal magnetic mirror by the Syrian's words, were breathed or shined upon by God, and evoked by God upon the sensorium of the prophet by the daguerreotypism of his spirit, which gave wings to the matter. This is 'the bird of the air' that reveals even the inmost thoughts of men. Therefore, 'curse not the king; no, not in thy thought; and curse not the rich in thy bed chamber; for a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter.' Eccl. x. 20. Let no man do wrong, and say, 'No eye sees me, therefore the offence shall be hid.' Sooner or later his sin may find him out. The impressions of his deeds upon the earth's magnetic halo, may happen to be reproduced upon the sensorium of some sleeping or walking medium; or even stare him in his own face when he shall rise from the dead, and behold his actions written like Belshazzar's doom, on the magnetic page in words of living light. Unless God thinks fit to infatuate a people by their own folly and presumption, and so create spectral impressions of things upon the sensoria of their wizards, beyond the range of their own sphere, the second sight of mediums never contemplates ideas, or images, or shadowy forms, which are not purely of human origin. All things they have seen are but the spectral impressions of human thoughts, words or actions. The doctrine they utter is always traceable to some sectarian theosophism—some double-distilled theological foolery, always at variance with the Scriptures. From what I have read of spirit-worldism, I have no hesitation in saying that it is a mere lying divination. Their divinations are not borrowed from the Bible. They are lying rhapsodies—the dark and malarious thinkings of nervous flesh, rioting in the spectralia of musty theosophisms, talked into it by gospel nullifiers and pulpit mar-texts, of the chairs and sacred desks of Christendom. They talk of separate spirits, which are mere spectral impressions on magnetic haloes, hidden indeed from light-stimulated optics, but disclosed to electro-magnetically excited brains. Such is the phantom-soul, for whose salvation from Pluto's realm of fire and brimstone, the whole machinery of clerical superstition has been erected. A stupendous fabric of moonshine—a pious cheat, for the salvation of a magnetic spectre, and nothing more real.

If by a spirit is to be understood no more than a spectral impression on a medium's sensorium, mesmerically evoked by the thinking of a dead-seeker, I grant that such spirits do exist separately from the persons they represent, even as the spectral impression of the coin exists on the glass separately from the coin itself. All the phenomena observed belong to spirits of this class, and only prove their existence under mesmeric citations. I can now see before my recollecting faculty a child of three years old, standing with a ruler in his hand with which he had just struck me over the head. The child, a little brother, has been dead thirty years. I see his image, and if I were placed en rapport with a medium, I could make him see the child's appearance; but would it be logical to conclude that he saw the child himself, or the real individual, which a spirit is supposed to be?

The Word of God gives such teaching the lie. It testifies that the 'dead know not anything;' and that 'there is neither knowledge nor wisdom in Sheol,' whither we go. Now divines make this word sheol equivalent to hades, which they say, is the 'place of departed spirits.' Well, let us accept their definition for the present; how then reads the latter text? Even thus: "There is neither knowledge nor wisdom in the place of departed spirits,' which theologicel mesmerists term 'the spirit-world.' This is with me, authority outweighing the testimony of all the spectres in creation, with all the opinions to boot of the many thousand of simpletons—judges, lawyers, doctors and preachers, and less distinguished dupes—who vainly imagine they converse with living spirits from the vasty deep.

The clerico-priestly dogmata of immortal disembodied ghosts; heaven in a spirit-world; hell somewhere; and the necessity of faith in these wares, as administered by an ordained ministry, or sacred order, on pain of the soul's exclusion from the joys of one, and eternal fiery torment in the other—are the stuff of the spiritual police, which co-operating with the civil authority, keeps the world in awe."

To my mind the phenomena of spiritualism is more satisfactorily explained by spectral impressions on the sensorium as given in the series of articles just concluded, than it possibly can be under the old idea of attributing the phenomena to supernatural devils, which seems to me too closely allied with the prevalent theological quackery of our day, built upon the theory of disembodied-spiritism, and all the theological rubbish which clusters about it, set forth in their psychological theosophisms by theosophical magicians, whose eyes are blinded to the light of God's glory as revealed in Holy Scripture. Indeed if you sift matters a little you will find them enveloped in darkness almost as dense as that which enveloped the prophets of Baal.

Stand close to the old Book, and then there will be no danger of being led astray by any one of the multitude of religious delusions which now deluge the people. Being perplexed many are becoming skeptical. God's Word is true, it has stood the fiery test of ages, and will guide you safely to the consummation.

The phenomena of spiritualism is explainable on the ground of spectral impressions on the sensorium which has its beginning and ending in the flesh. Disembodied spirits, or supernatural devils have nothing whatever to do with the matter. The scarecrow of a big omnipresent supernatural devil, with his army of lesser supernatural devils, is a relic of superstition and the dark ages of ignorance, and is a companion of the dogma of the supposed existence of dead men's ghosts. Bundle up all the devils and ghosts and relegate them to the dark ages of ignorant superstition where they belong.

This concludes the series, and if our readers will now carefully read the entire series from one to five, they will find clear evidence the phenomena is traceable to spectral impressions which are afterward evoked, and not to disembodied spirits or supernatural devils.

W. H. WILSON.

Selections.

The Everlasting Nation.

The apostle of the Gentiles combines in his own person the most lucid illustration of Israel's past history, ending with the rejection of Jesus the Messiah, and of Israel's future conversion by self-manifestation of Christ, and subsequently unbroken devotedness and service to their divine Lord. The intermediate period between Israel's rejection and restoration is ushered in by his apostolate, and its character is most fully explained by his teaching. For it is in his epistles only that the mystery of the Church is explained as well as the end of the Church dispensation, and the reinstatement of Israel as a nation believing in Jesus. Thus the whole plan of God in Christ concerning Israel, the Church and the ultimate kingdom of which Israel is the center, stood before his mind and lived in his heart, intimately connected with his own experience, and interwoven with his apostolic teachings and practice.

For he himself had experienced that Israel, although entrusted with the oracles of God, although in possession of his holy law, and although animated with zeal for God, still rejected the salvation of God as appeared in Jesus. But he had also experienced that such was the grace of God and the power of his love, that even to the murderer of Stephen mercy was shown, and that the persecutor of the church was converted into an apostle of the gospel. And, thirdly, he had experienced personally that the temporary rejection of Israel as a nation was made, according to the divine wisdom and grace, the occasion to bring the gospel to the Gentiles; and unto him was committed the knowledge of the mystery of the church in which Jew and Gentile were united into one body.

But, lastly, the deep and inextinguishable love to his nation, of which his conscience bore witness in the Holy Ghost, that it was not merely of nature, but in communion with Christ, gave an intense earnestness to his testimony, that according to the promises given to the fathers, which were confirmed by Jesus himself, "all Israel shall be saved," and the whole nation, chosen and formed by God for his glory, will in the latter days acknowledge Jesus, and be the center of the divine kingdom on earth all these four points, 1 Tim. i. 12-14; Phil. iii.; Rom. ix., xi.; Eph. iii.—facts rooted in the Word of God—were embodied, as it were in the person of the apostle Paul, and were organically connected with his apostolic teaching. Hence we find in that epistle, which contains more than any other a systematic exposition of the whole counsel of God, as it is to be made known to all the nations of the earth—the world-wide epistle to the Romans—the apostle not merely explains righteousness and life in Christ to every believer, but also the mystery of Israel. For this mystery cannot be omitted without injuring the integrity and affecting the character of testimony.

The apostle is most anxious that the Gentile Christians should not be ignorant of this mystery; and this for a twofold reason. If Israel is to be totally and finally rejected, the very foundations on which our salvation rests are obscured and endangered. The unconditional covenant of works through Moses, is the ground of Israel's salvation, of Israel's position, for they are the children, not of Moses, but of Abraham. The sovereignty, the faithfulness, the power and wisdom of God are all illustrated, in this, that nothing, not even Israel's sin, can frustrate the counsel of God, who has chosen and formed this nation for himself. The depth of mercy to the chief of sinners, as well as the principle that the gifts and callings of God are without repentance, would not be seen unless a national conversion and restoration are to be expected. That nation, which God called an everlasting nation, and concerning which the sun and the audiences of the moon and of the stars are a pledge that it shall never cease from being a nation before Jehovah for ever, must have yet this wonderful future before it. Isa. xliv. 1 (see the original) Jer. xxxi. 35-37. The root is the eternal election of God; the foundation the covenant of grace; the channel Jesus the Messiah, of the seed of David, the minister of the circumcision, and the center the cross, over which was written, "Jesus Christ, the King of the Jews," and to which ultimately the tear-filled eyes of repentant Israel will turn.

But the second reason why the apostle is anxious that the Gentiles should not be ignorant of this mystery is because in this ignorance they will become wise in their own conceits, and, appropriating to themselves the promises given unto Israel as a nation, assume an unscriptural attitude in the world, and forget to fix all their hopes on the return of Jesus according to the Scripture.

As our Lord, when he appeared to Ananias, said of the apostle, "He is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel," so we may expect that the apostle of the Gentiles will yet lift up his voice to the children of Abraham and explain to them the Scriptures in the light of the cross of Jesus; while unto the Gentile Christians there will be revealed through him in these latter days the mystery of Israel, which at the time of the reformation was not understood.

Jesus came to the whole nation. Throughout Scripture Israel is frequently spoken of as "all Israel" acting as one man. The distinction between the remnant and "all Israel" runs through Romans xi. Compare on the other side the "some" in Rom. iii. 3. Israel as a nation rejected him. "Then answered all the people, and said, his blood be on us and on our children." Matt xxvii. 25. Jesus, as we read in the gospel of Matthew (xii. 15; xxii.), was taking leave of the whole nation. He spoke to the Pharisees; he spoke to the Herodians; he spoke to the Sadducees; and after having given, as it were, the last word unto each representative part of the Jewish nation, he sums up all in that heart-rending farewell: "Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children"—the whole nation as a nation—"under my wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house shall be left unto you desolate." But the farewell is not forever. It is a farewell only for a given and definite period. "Ye shall not see me till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." The Savior, ere he was crucified upon Golgotha, had in his own loving and sorrowing heart the living and assured hope that that same nation, which as a nation had rejected him, would again as a nation welcome him as the Messiah that cometh in the name of the Lord. And after he had died upon the cross, and appeared again to his disciples, before he ascended up into heaven, he ratified to the apostles the promise that was given of old, that he would come and restore the kingdom to Israel; only not at the present time, because the dispensation of the Church had to intervene. Thus it is in harmony with the testimony of Jesus, which is the spirit of prophecy, that the apostle Paul declares that "all Israel shall be saved."

But as all Israel shall be saved finally, in the meantime God has not totally rejected his people, the prayer of Jesus on the Cross, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," would not have been answered. The prayer of Stephen before his death, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge," would have remained without a divine response. Paul himself is the most striking illustration that God had not totally rejected his people; for God had mercy on him, and revealed unto him his Son. We read of three thousand at Jerusalem, and afterward five thousand, and afterward many myriads or ten thousand of Jews who had come to the knowledge of Christ, and during the first centuries the number and importance of Jewish Christian congregations, who, to a certain extent, still observed the law of Moses, and in whom there lived the vivid consciousness of their connection with the Old Testament were considerable. This point has again been illustrated by the recent discovery of the "Doctrine of the Twelve Apostles" (through the labors of the Metropolitan Bryennios), a document most probably written as early as 150 A. D. Finally all Israel shall be saved, and during the intermediate period of the Church God has not totally rejected his people.

Two points are thus given to us in the apostolic teaching—Israel's rejection of the Messiah, and Israel's future restoration. In the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple, and in the dispersion of Israel among the nations, was manifested in actual history what to the eye of faith appeared already at the crucifixion of our Lord, when the veil of the temple was rent in twain. The arch of Titus, still to be seen at Rome, declares to the whole world what believers know from the written word—that divine judgment has fallen upon the nation on account of their unbelief. If we ask what connection subsists between unbelieving Israel of the future, between Jerusalem given into the hands of the Gentiles and Jerusalem restored, there are three facts which, according to the Divine Word, bridge over this interval.

In the first place, according to the Word of God, it is obviously necessary that the Jewish nation should remain in existence as a nation until these latter days. Their enemies must not succeed in destroying them; their Gentile friends must not succeed in so favoring them that they amalgamate through indifference and worldliness with the other nationalities. The profound word of a Spanish Rabbi, uttered during the fearful persecutions of Ferdinand, deserves to be remembered: "We are a nation, on whom rest both blessing and curse; now you Christians wish to exterminate us, but you shall not succeed; for there is a blessing resting on us, and a time is coming when you shall try to elevate us, and you shall not succeed, for we are under a curse." And also it is necessary that they should not be absorbed by the Christian Churches so as to cease to exist as a separate community. How marvellously has all this been fulfilled every one can see, in the countries of Europe and of the whole world where God has scattered his people.

Co-existent with Israel's continuance, as a nation we are to expect, secondly, that throughout the whole of this period there will always be a "remnant according to the election of grace." And thus it has been in the ancient, the mediæval and the reformed churches to this day. And, lastly, that the Gospel of the kingdom will be preached among all nations; as a witness, the apostasy of Christendom will be fully developed and become universal. And while the faith of the true children of God will be intensified in the earnest waiting for the return of their Savior, the times of the Gentiles will thus draw to a close and restored Israel become the center of the kingdom of God on earth.

How marvellous are God's w[illegible] As at the first advent through the rejection of Jesus the gospel came to the Gentiles, so at the second advent of Jesus he will be received by Israel when he brings judgment upon apostate Christendom. And as at the tower of Babel the whole human race was scattered by the judgment of God, and thus was divided into nations, so by the mercy of God, immediately after the tower of Babel, through the election of Abraham, there was laid the foundation of that nation through which as a nation all nations shall be blest. Through the church individuals are gathered out from among all nations to believe in Jesus; but it is through the nation of Israel that national Christianity will be established upon the whole of the earth.

Such, I believe, are the outlines of what is clearly taught us in connection with the gospel and the mystery of the Church by the apostle Paul.—Adolph Saphir in People, Land and Book.

The Kind Needed.

Mr. Gladstone once wrote very strongly upon the subject of sermons. He said:—

"One thing I have against the clergy, both of this country and the town. I think they are not severe enough on their congregations. They do not sufficiently lay upon the souls and consciences of their hearers their moral obligations, and probe their hearts, and bring up their whole lives and actions to the bar of conscience. The class of sermons which, I think, are most needed are of the class which offended Lord Melbourne long ago. Lord Melbourne was seen one day coming from a church in the country in a fine fume. Finding a friend he exclaimed, 'It is too bad! I have always been a supporter of the church, and I have always upheld the clergy. But it is really too bad to have to listen to a sermon like we had this morning. Why, the preacher actually insisted upon applying religion to a man's private life.' But that is the kind of preaching I like best—the kind of preaching which men need most; but it is also the kind of which they get the least."

The estimate is made that now over 400,000 Jews reside in New York city, more than one-third of the entire number that reside in the entire United States.

Sermon.

"Except ye eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Son of Man, ye have no life in you." John vi. 53.

By the favor of God I am before you to give a brief exposition of the chapter containing these remarkable words, and with special reference to them. In the first chapter of this book we find John entering on his mission. Priests and Levites ask him who he is; and if not the Christ, why he baptized? He answered that he was the one Essaias predicted, "crying in the wilderness, make straight the way of the Lord....."There standeth one among you, he it is, who, coming after me, is preferred before me, whose shoe latchet I am not worthy to unloose." The next day John pointed him out to them, saying, "Behold which taketh away the sin of the world." We learn from Matthew that Jesus had come from Galilee to be baptized of John; and that the heavens opened and that the spirit of God descended upon him as he went up out of the water, and a voice from heaven said, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." For forty days after this he was tempted in the wilderness. Then, on hearing that John was cast into prison, he departed into Galilee; later he went to Capernaum on the sea coast and began to preach is at hand," and called Simon Peter and Andrew his brother to follow him, —and soon after he saw James and John, sons of Zebedee and called them also. He is next found going all about Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and healing all manner of diseases, and multitudes following him; then it would appear it was that he delivered the wonderful sermon on the Mount, as it is called. Soon after this he sent out the twelve to preach "The kingdom of heaven is at hand;" and also himself started out on through all their cities. From the 5th of John we learn that Jesus left Galilee and attended the feast of the Jews at Jerusalem, where he performed the miraculous cure of a man at the pool on the Sabbath, and was found fault with by the Jews, who sought to kill him; so he went over to the Sea of Galilee and the multitude followed him. The first verse of our chapter says the feast of the Passover was nigh, and came to him on a mountain and he fed 5000 with five loaves and two fishes, and this caused them to say, "Of a truth this is that prophet that should come." Perceiving that they would take him by force and make him a king he departed again into a mountain alone, and in the evening his disciples took ship and sailed for Capernaum, but the sea became stormy, and after rowing a few miles Jesus came to their rescue.

THE LAMB OF GOD

"THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN

A PREACHING TOUR

A GREAT MULTITUDE

WALKING ON THE WATER,

but they were afraid. The next day the people followed him over the water, but he gave them a very cool reception. To their question, "Rabbi, when camest thou thither?" he answered, "Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because of the loaves, and were filled. Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto which the Son of Man shall give unto you." This does not forbid toil for bread that perishes, but is a Hebrew comparison—labor not alone or so much for bread to sustain this life, as for that which procures an imperishable life, is the meaning, or else other Scriptures would be contradicted. What follows makes it clear that the gospel is compared to bread, just as he compared the gospel to water to the woman at the well. They next asked, "What shall we do that we might work

EVERLASTING LIFE,

THE WORKS OF GOD?"

Jesus answered, "This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he has sent;" that is, believe his words, —his gospel. They were nettled at this (v. 28) and wanted a sign that they may SEE and believe. "What doest thou?" said they, and boasted that their fathers ate manna in the desert. Jesus told them that Moses did not give them the enduring bread which would give them if they believed him: they ate manna, it is true, but they died after eating it! "This bread (I speak of) comes down from heaven that a man may eat and not die.....For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven and giveth life unto the world." "Then said they unto him, Lord, evermore

THE SON OF MAN

GIVE US THIS BREAD.

Jesus said unto them, (v. 35) "I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." He came to announce the life everlasting in the kingdom of God that was coming. If they believed it, it would

SATISFY A HUNGER

and quench a thirst that nothing else would. In v. 36 we find him saying in answer to their request to evermore give them that bread, "But I said unto you that ye also have seen me, and believed not;" showing they only had an appetite for NATURAL food and drink, and not the appetite which is the product of faith in him as

THE MESSIAH OF GOD.

In v. 37 he says, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me. And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out; for I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." He came to announce the glad tidings and kindle a flame of love and trust, by saying it was the Father's will that all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up at the last day. "And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one that sees the Son and believeth on him may and I will raise him up at the last day." To see the Son is not literal: it means the opportunity to hear, understand, and obey the GOSPEL preached by the Son, (as we have)—see the truth and embrace it. In v. 40 he for the third time asserts that faith in himself is the means of obtaining everlasting life, in explanation of the statement, "I am

HAVE EVERLASTING LIFE,

THE BREAD OF LIFE."

In v. 41 the Jews are said to have murmured. But why? Because they understood of his PERSON, what referred to his DOCTRINE, his teaching, his gospel. They took a literal sense out of his figurative language. By reading from the beginning again you will see that he knew he had read his audience through,—knew why they had followed him; knew they had no faith and could not inherit the kindom. They rejected the announcement that he came from heaven to do God's will, and said, "Is not this Jesus the Son of Joseph?" This doubtless accounts for his use of figurative language to them. We find him saying that no one could come to him except the Father draw him, and them he would raise up at

WHAT WAS IN MAN:

THE LAST DAY.

But HOW does the Father draw men? I answer, love is the drawing power; and that love is manifested in the message from him that Jesus delivered to them. But the good message has no drawing power with them. Quoting from the prophets Jesus said, "And they shall be all taught of God." But they would not be

TAUGHT OF GOD,

and so he added, "Every man, therefore, that hath heard and hath learned of the Father cometh unto me." In v. 47 he says, "He that believeth on me, hath everlasting life. I am that bread of life. Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven that a man may eat thereof and not die." Here for the 5th time he says, "He that BELIEVETH in me hath everlasting life." The GOSPEL of life was the BREAD of life. From Matt. xvi. 5-12 we find that when his disciples were come to the other side of the Sea of Galilee they had forgotten to take bread; and Jesus said unto them and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees." And they reasoned among themselves, saying, "It is because we have no bread:" which, when Jesus perceived, he said unto them, "O ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves because ye have brought no bread? Do ye NOT YET understand that I spake it not to you concerning bread, but that ye should of the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees?" Then understood they how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the DOCTRINE of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees. It was his habit to speak of doctrine or teaching as bread or leaven. At v. 51 Jesus says,

"TAKE HEED

I AM THE LIVING BREAD

which came down from heaven. How man eat of this bread he shall live forever; and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I give for the life of the world." "The Jews therefore strove among themselves, saying, how can this man give his

FLESH TO EAT?"

At v. 53 Jesus said to them, "Verily, verily I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you." This additional turn to the imagery he employed staggered them more than ever. Having no spiritual discernment,—instead of softening down the offensive expressions he uses more violent figures and bolder paradoxes. He did not want to be followed by such earthly minded and mercenary people, and this was the way

HE SIFTED THEM OFF.

It was not for them to know the mysteries of the kingdom. I understand and believe that the Lord meant, that unless they partake of the blessings he was about to procure by the violent death he would suffer, they could not be saved,—could not have in them, is the idea; because again and again is the Truth, the words, the doctrine, given as keys to his figures. The gospel believed and obeyed ensures eternal life. It has to be understood, believed, and obeyed. It has to be inwardly digested, assimilated, mingled with, and imbue the whole moral or spiritual constitution, just as material nourishment enters every vessel and pore of

THE GOSPEL

THE PHYSICAL FRAME.

"He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood dwelleth in me, and I in him." This portrays the most intimate union between himself and the believer, —a union resembling that of himself and his Father. "This is that bread which came down from heaven, not as your fathers did eat manna and are dead,—he that eateth of this bread shall LIVE FOR EVER."

This caused many of his disciples to say, "This is an hard saying, who can hear it? And when Jesus knew in himself that his disciples murmured at it, he said unto them, 'Does this offend you? What if ye see the Son of Man ascend up where he was before? As if he said, "You think I have been saying because you do not understand me. I have told you that I will give my flesh for the life of the world. I will be dead then,—but what if ye see me ascend out of the grave and be with you again where I was before my death? Is THIS, too, incredible to you?" I will explain (v. 63). "It is the SPIRIT that quickeneth (into life); the flesh profiteth nothing," because it is mortal,—corruptible and cannot inherit the kingdom.

IMPOSSIBLE THINGS,

IT WILL DIE:

but I have told you that he that believeth on me shall have everlasting life: and I repeat what I said: "It is the spirit that quickeneth,—the flesh profiteth nothing; and to this I add, that the WORDS that I speak unto you are Spirit and they are life. But there are some of you (even) that do not believe these words which are to those who believe them." For Jesus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and "who is he who would betray him." (Young's Trans.) "And therefore said I unto you, that no man can come unto me except it were given unto me of my Father. From that time many of his disciples went back and walked no more with him." The whole discourse seems to have been aimed at

SPIRIT AND LIFE

THE WEEDING OUT

of useless material: and when he let them know that he knew what was in them, he the cloak ever so thick, it was more than they could stand; and they seceded in a body, and only left Jesus and the twelve. Turning to them, he most pathetically said, "Will ye also go away?" "Peter answered, Lord, to whom shall we go,—thou hast THE WORDS of not flesh nor blood of eternal life. This is the confession of those who stood by him,—and it was accepted as a good confession. Yes; words of eternal life,—rich and ravishing words to the believer, but staggering to natural minds and human wisdom. I can imagine what thoughts may have rushed through Peter's mind. "To whom shall we go? shall we go to the formalism and traditions of the elders? Shall we go to the Gods many and Lords many of the Gentiles, or to Dlank unbelief?

SAY, LORD,—

they have none of that eternal life we have learned to crave as a necessity, therefore we will stay with thee, Lord: we must, for we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God." As the twelve are mentioned by John for the first time in this chapter it would appear as if the incidents recorded in it happened before the crucifixion. And by reference to Dr. Adam Clark I find that he says it can be shown chronologically, to have taken place a year before the last Passover. Having, as I humbly conceive, proven by divine testimony that to eat of Christ's flesh and drink of his blood, is to eat, or partake of his words,—his gospel, I will now try to explain HOW we are to feed upon the slain Lamb.

AT LEAST A YEAR

Conference Notice.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God of Indiana will be held (D. V.) at Burr Oak, Marshall Co. Ind., commencing Thursday A. M. September 5th and continue over the following Sunday.

As this is the time for election of officers and other important business, it is urgently requested that each congregation be represented by delegates, one delegate for every ten members.

The brethren of Burr Oak will put forth every effort to entertain the visiting brethren, and are desirous of a large representation.

Burr Oak is on the Nickel Plate R. R. one and one-half mile west of Hibbard, the crossing of the Nickel Plate and Vandalia R. R. and about three miles north of Culver. Please consult time tables in RESTITUTION for time of trains allowing on the Vandalia about one-half hour for time between Plymouth and Hibbard.

By notifying brothers G. A. Maxey at Burr Oak or Samuel Osborne at Culver, brethren from a distance will find conveyance at Hibbard.

D. T. HALSTEAD, Pres.
E. K. BARNHILL, Sec'y.

The only real and Christian way of purity is to live in the open world and not be of it, and keep the soul unspotted from it. There are no fires that will melt out our drossy and corrupt particles like God's refining fires of duty and trial, living, as he sends us to live, in the open field of the world's sins and sorrows, its plausibilities and lies, its persecutions, animosities and fears, its eager delights and bitter wants.—Horace Bushnell.

Preach to the People.

Said Froude, the English essayist and historian, "Many hundred sermons have I heard in England on many subjects: on the mysteries of faith, on the divine mission of the clergy, on apostolic succession, on verbal inspiration, and on the efficacy of the sacraments; but not one during thirty years can I recollect hearing a sermon on honesty of life, or upon those primitive commandments. "Thou shalt not lie, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not commit adultery." Full well did the English author know that in every congregation throughout the whole kingdom where preachers were preaching, there were liars, and thieves, and adulterers; but the preacher did not seem to know it, for they never uncovered their sins. Preachers made the mistake of preaching for the people. There is too much "glittering generality" in pulpit deliverances in these time-serving days, and too little of the "Thou-art-the-man" style of preaching. We seem to have fallen upon the Balaam age of sermonizing. We need more Daniels, Elijahs, and John the Baptists. Hugh Latimer once offended Henry VIII., in preaching. The wanton monarch commanded him to preach again on the next Sabbath, and to retract. But instead of retracting, Latimer still re-affirmed with still more pointed emphasis what he had preached before. "How darest thou to do me such insult?" asked the infuriated monarch. Said the interrupted preacher, "I am a servant of heaven's King as well as your majesty's servant; I owe to him my first allegiance, and to you who art my earthly Sovereign next." What resulted? The king commended him saying, "I am glad there is one minister in England that will tell his sovereign the truth." But God is greater than any earthly sovereign. Preachers should not preach for people, but for God. They should preach to sinners. They should preach so definitely that the sinners will feel that every word is preached in dead earnest and is meant for him personally. Such preaching will produce results that will stand in the judgment.

Miss Barlee, of the London Jews' Society, who commenced work at Jerusalem about ten years ago, thus describes the changes which have taken place during her residence there: "Innumerable houses have been built outside the city walls; and new colonies formed. Rows of new houses are to be seen in places where, when I first came, I used to pick wild flowers among the rocks and stones. Progress is written upon everything. The Jaffa Railway, now an established thing, ceases to be an object of wonder to the native population. New lines will soon be open in other parts of the country. A boat now crosses the Dead Sea, and lately I received a letter from Kerak, in Moab, where postal communication with Jerusalem has been established. In Jerusalem itself, civilization has made rapid strides, carriages of every description are now plying to and fro in the different new roads. Missionaries, too, are multiplied. It would seem that the Lord's time to favor Zion is at hand."—London Christian.

Here are some interesting figures showing the distribution of the Jews throughout the world. Out of 9,000,000 Jews, 5,000,000 are found in Russia, 1,500,000 in Eastern Europe, 1,000,000 in Western Europe, 1,000,000 in America, 200,000 in North Africa, and 120,000 in Palestine. The balance of 180,000 includes the Jews of Turkey proper, Persia, Arabia and the scattered residents of South Africa, India, etc. Outside Russia the congestion of Jews is now on the borders of the adjoining states. While in Roumania there are 250,000 Jews, in Great Britain there are only 101,186, as follows: in London, 64,280; provinces, 33,070; Scotland, 2,060; Ireland, 1,779. Of these British-born number 20 per cent; German, 7 per cent; Dutch, 5 per cent; Russo-Polish, 58 per cent; others 10 per cent.—Immanuel's Witness.

Frightened at a Blessing.

How we do shrink back from our best blessings! It has always been so. When the Lord sent his angel to tell the shepherds of Bethlehem of the greatest gift ever sent to men, they were "sore afraid," and shrank from the light of his glory. When the disciples of Jesus were in a fierce storm on the wild lake in the darkness of the night, they were most troubled when they saw Jesus coming to them. An old clergyman was preaching his fortieth anniversary sermon. He said that, as he looked back, he could see that the very things for which he had most reason to be grateful were those things at which he cried out as they came, "O Lord, spare me from this! I am unable to bear it!" What foolish children of a wise and loving Father we are! Why should we ever shrink from any gift he sends us? His gifts are all and always good.—Sunday School Times.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and post-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

I will be at Bosworth, Mo., Sept. 22 to 29 and hold meetings over two Sundays. At Pleasantown, Kan., Sept. 1 and continue to the 6th. All are invited to these meetings.

WILL YOU TRY IT?

Poetry.

Why Not?

Why not leave them all with Jesus,
All thy cares,
All the things that fret thee daily,
Earth's affairs?
Pour out to Thy sin and longings;
He has felt
Need of human love as thou hast,
And has knelt
At his Father's feet imploring,
For the day,
Strength to guard against temptation
By the way.

Why not leave them all with Jesus,
On his breast
Find a balm for all earth's suffering,
Peace and rest?
He knows that thou hast striven
To walk right;
Longs to make the thorny pathway
Clear and bright.
See, he bathes thy feet all bleeding,
With his tears!
Give to him thyself, thy burden
And thy fears.

Genesis. Chap. 31.

1. And Jakoob heard the words of the sons of Laban who were saying, Jakoob hath taken all our father's things and hath made all this glory out of our father's property.

2. And Jakoob saw the face of Laban and lo, it was not toward him as yesterday and third day.

3. And the Lord said unto Jakoob, Return into thy land and unto thy race and I will be with thee.

4. And Jakoob sent and called Leia and Hracheel to the plain where the flocks were.

5. And said unto them, I see the face of your father is not toward me as yesterday and third day; and the God of my father was with me.

6. And ye yourselves know that with all my strength I have served your father as a bond-servant.

7. And your father hath cheated me and changed my wages ten lambs, and God hath not allowed him to do me evil.

8. If he said the parti-colored shall be thy wages all the flocks would bring forth parti colored also; and if he said the white shall be thy wages, all the flocks would bring forth white.

9. And God hath taken away all the flocks of your father and given them to me.

10. And it came to pass when the flocks were rutting to conceive I also saw with my eyes in sleep, and lo, the he-goats and the rams mounting the sheep and female-goats were partly white and parti-colored and sprinkled with ash color.

11. And the angel of God said unto me in sleep, Jakoob; And I said, What is it?

12. And he said, Look with thine eyes and see the he goats and the rams mounting the sheep and female-goats that are partly white and parti-colored and sprinkled with ash color; for I have seen all that Laban is doing to thee.

13. I am the God who was seen thee in God's place, where thou didst anoint for me a votive pillar and vow a vow. Now then arise and go out of this land and return into the land of thy birth and I will be with thee.

14. And Hracheel and Leia answered and said unto him, Have we any longer a portion or inheritance in the house of our father?

15. No, no, as aliens are we not accounted by him? For he hath sold us and devoured the money paid for us.

16. All the wealth and the glory which the God of our father took from him shall be for us and our children. Now then do all that God hath said unto thee.

17. And Jakoob arose and took his wives and his children upon the camels.

18. And led away all the property and all the outfit he had acquired in Mesopotamia, and all the things that were his to go back to Isaak, his father, in a land of Chanaan.

19. And Laban had gone to shear his sheep; and Hracheel took her father's idols.

20. And Jakoob hid from telling Laban, the Surian, that he was running away.

21. And he ran away he and all his, and crossed the river, and pushed for Mount Galaad.

22. And it was told Laban, the Surian, the third day that Jakoob had run away.

23. And taking his brethren with him he pursued after him a journey of seven days and overtook him in Mount Galaad.

24. And God came unto Laban, the Surian, in sleep that night, and said unto him, Be on thy guard not to say wicked things to Jakoob.

25. And Laban overtook Jakoob; and Jakoob had pitched his tent in the mountain. And Laban had stationed his brethren in Mount Galaad.

26. And Laban said to Jakoob, What hast thou done? Why didst thou run away secretly and steal from me and lead my daughters away like captives with a sword?

27. And if thou hadst told I would have sent thee away with rejoicing and with music, and trinpona and cithera.

28. And I was not accounted worthy to kiss farewell to my children and my daughters; and now thou hast acted thoughtlessly.

29. And now my hand is strong to do thee harm; but the God of thy father yesterday spake to me saying, Be on thy guard not to say anything wicked to Jakoob.

30. Now then go thy way; for with desire hast thou longed to go back to the house of thy father; why though didst thou steal my gods?

31. And Jakoob answered and said unto Laban, because I was afraid; for I said, Perchance thou wilt take away from me thy daughters and all my things.

32. And Jakoob said, With whomsoever thou shalt find thy gods, he shall not live in the sight of our brethren. Recognize and take whatever of thine there is with me; and he was not aware of there being anything with him; and Jakoob did not know that Hracheel his wife had stolen them.

33. And Laban went into the house of Leia and searched and did not find, and he came out of the house of Leia, and searched the house of Jakoob and in the house of the two hand-maids, and did not find, and he entered into the house of Hracheel.

34. And Hracheel had taken the idols and put them into the camel's saddle pockets and sat upon them.

35. And she said unto her father, Do not bear heavily, my lord, I am unable to arise in thy presence, because it is with me as is the custom of women; Laban sought in all the house, and did not find the idols.

36. And Jakoob became wrathful and fought with Laban; and Jakoob answering, said unto Laban, What is my wrong doing? And what is my sin, that thou hast pursued after me?

37. And hast thou searched all the furniture of my house? What hast thou found of all the utensils of thy house. Place it here before thy brethren and my brethren, and let them convict between us two.

38. These twenty years am I with thee; thy sheep and thy goats have not lost their offspring; the rams of thy sheep I have not devoured.

39. One killed by wild-beasts I have not troubled thee with, I have exacted from myself things stolen by day and things stolen by night.

40. I have been burned by the scorching heat by day and the frost at night, and sleep has stood away from mine eyes.

41. This has been my experience for the twenty years I am in thy house; I served thee as a bond-servant fourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years in thy flocks, and thou didst cheat me in my wages ten lambs,

42. If the God of my father Habraam and the fear of Isaak had not been mine, now wouldst thou have sent me away empty; my humiliation and the weary toil of my hands God saw, and he convicted thee yesterday.

43. And Laban said unto Jakoob, the daughters are my daughters and the sons are my sons, and the domestic animals are my domestic animals, and all the things thou seest are my things and my daughters. What shall I do today for them and for the children which they have brought forth?

44. Now then come I will make a covenant, I and thou, and it shall be for testimony between me and thee; and he said unto him, Lo, there is no one with us, God the witness between me and thee hath seen.

45. And Jakoob taking a stone stood it for a votive-pillar.

46. And Jakoob said unto his brethren, Gather together stones, and they gathered together stones and made a little hill; and they ate then upon the little hill; and Laban said unto him, This hill testifies today between me and thee.

47. And Laban called it "Hill of the testimony," and Jakoob called it "Hill a witness."

48. And Laban said unto Jakoob, Lo, this hill and votive-pillar which I have stood between me and thee; this hill testifieth and this votive-pillar testifieth; therefore the name was called "Hill testifieth."

49. And the vision which he spake was, May God have seen between me and thee, that we are to stand away from one another.

50. If thou shalt humiliate my daughters, if thou shalt take wives in addition to my daughters, see, there is no one with us who saith, God is witness between me and thee.

51. And Laban said unto Jakoob, Lo, this hill is a witness.

52. That I may not cross over to thee nor thou cross over to me over this hill and this votive-pillar for harm.

53. May the God of Habraam and the God of Nachoor have judged between us.

54. And Jakoob swore by the fear of his father Isaak and sacrificed a sacrifice on the mountain; and called his brethren and they ate and drank and lay down to sleep on the mountain.

55. And Laban arose at dawn and kissed his sons and his daughters and blessed them, and Laban turned away and returned to his place.

COMMENT.

This chapter in the biography of Jakoob the man of God, giving as it does an important crisis in his significant life is full of suggestive thought and practical instruction. We are permitted to see not only the drama presented on the stage of life: but enough of God's thought and infinite purpose behind the scenes to enable us in a measure to see as God sees. It is as though the great Author had condescended to be interviewed and had revealed to us an outline sketch of this individual work of his while he was working it out in his divine studio. As I have previously said I shall refrain from such particular comment upon textual variations and differences of translation now as I proceed with my work, leaving the reader to compare and note these for himself; I would however call the reader's special attention to the reading of the 47th, 48th and 49th verses in the C. V. and R. V. and in this translation. For the term "mezpah" has been so emphasized in the Christian Endeavor societies and work as meaning that God watches between the individual members while separated to bring them together again, that it has become a mystic invocation understood to mean this. The reader will observe that the thought of the whole passage and especially of the 49th verse is that God is a witness to their covenant and oath that they Laban and Jakoob separate and keep separated for good and all and not that he watch over them to keep them from harm while separated. It was lest they get together and fight. This well illustrates a thousand and one other false interpretations and misapplication of Scripture. Most of Ingersol's "Mistakes of Moses" could be answered by showing that they were the mistakes of men's interpretations of what Moonsees wrote the record of which has come down to us, partly due to ignorance and partly to design and priestcraft. I have failed to find any mistakes in the original record of Moonsees, that are of any importance and not easily accounted for as slight errors of transcription, and the wisdom of God which he recorded stands as it will continue to stand to the end of time like an adamantine foundation in the earth.

The reader will notice the perversion of the record in the R. V. which says that God commands Laban in sleep "not to say anything to Jakoob good or bad" is utterly inconsistent with fact in the narrative. For he does have a great deal to say to Jakoob; but I maintain that he intended to be obedient to the divine mandate and not say anything wicked. He wanted the pound of flesh which was characteristic of his hard and grasping nature as already shown in the earlier part of the narrative, and he intended to assert all his legal rights; but finally yielded to an awakened sense of justice and equity which now seems becomes embodied in the covenant which he suggests and which was finally accepted and ratified by Jakoob. It was true that Jakoob in his fear and dire necessity had originally sold himself as a bond-servant to Laban, and vainly trusted to his generosity to ultimately free him and do the fair thing especially when he had given him his two daughters in marriage; and he did not realize until he had learned by experience how hard and crafty and over-reaching the heart of a father-in-law could be; but by the terms of the bond Laban truly and legally did not only own him, but his wives and the sons they had borne him, and everything that he had earned or could earn during his mortal life. Therefore the significance of Jakoob's appeal to the higher court of equity, and the divine stay of proceedings and the final decree for the plaintiff under the mortgage and the heavenly release from the terms of the bond on the grounds of no consideration and usury.

I think Laban conducted himself fairly well when he saw the case had gone against him in the Higher Court. It was he who took the initiative and proposed the new covenant to say, Quits and each go his own way with the results of the divine verdict and have no further dealings with each other. It was a humiliating but wonderfully instructive lesson to both of them, and especially encouraging to Jakoob in view of the great struggle that was before him. He badly needed this divine encouragement just at this time. It was truly a character crisis with him; and he came out of it a new man or he never could have faced his brother Heesaw whom he had so grievously wronged. The crucial experience is yet to come in the following chapter.

Programme

For the 4th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus, an association of Bible Christians, to be held at Oregon, Ill. beginning on Wednesday evening, Sep. 18, and continue over Sunday following.

All services will be opened with singing, prayer and the reading of Scripture.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 18.

7:45 p. m. Bible reading by James W. Wilson, Pres. of the Conference. Topic, The coming and mission of the Christ. Is the second advent near?

Text: "When shall these things be, and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world." Mat. xxiv. 3.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 19.

10 a. m. Formal opening of the Conference. Appointment of committee on programme and entertainment.

Following this the morning service will be devoted to a study of the book of the Revelation. Much ignorance prevails as to the meaning of the wonderful symbols of this the last and the greatest prophecy of the Bible. The committee on programme appointed by the Conference board has therefore thought it wise to devote a portion of the time of this conference to its study. The brief time will not permit of an exhaustive study, which would take months, but will suffice merely for an outline to be followed up by further home study.

Those coming to the Conference are requested to read and think over the chapters of this book, especially from the 1st to the 12th, so that they may come prepared to take active part in the discussion, or to ask questions.

Suggestion Text: "We have a more sure word of prophecy whereunto you will do well to take heed, as unto a lamp shining in a dark place, until the day dawn." 2 Pet. i. 19.

A brief outline of the study.

1. Introduction. Can the Book be understood? Object and scope of the revelation. Is it a revelation of events yet wholly in the future, or of mighty world forces, political and ecclesiastical, as they affect Christian people and of the persecution and triumph of Christianity beginning immediately after the writing of the book and ending with the eternal ages. How shall we interpret symbols? The symbolic numbers 7, 144 and 144, etc. Lord's day.

2. The seven churches. Are they in their characteristics symbolic of seven periods in the history of the Church, or are they rather symbolic of the church universal in all ages of its existence? The characteristics outlined being prototypes of churches or individual Christians to be found at any period and designed as a mirror for self-examination, encouragement and warning. Are the promises and warnings prophetic of the career of the churches and of the cities in which they are located?

3. A peep into heaven. The four beasts (living creatures); of what are they symbolic? The 24 elders and the heavenly hosts. Seven spirits, 7 horns of the lamb. What is the lesson taught by this introduction to the opening of the seals? To whom is the promise made that they shall be kings and priests unto God and reign on the earth?

4. The openings of the seals. The white horse and its rider. What period does it symbolize? The red horse and its rider. The black horse and its rider. The dark horse and its rider. The souls under the altar. The great earthquake and triumph of Christianity. The seventh seal: what is embraced in it?

5. The seven trumpets. What is signified by the angel with the golden censer and his performances? The first trumpet: what does it signify? What is the meaning of the symbols: trumpet, hail, blood, fire, destruction of trees and grass, etc? Second, third and fourth trumpet.

Woe trumpets. First woe trumpet. Symbols, fallen star, key, bottomless pit, smoke from pit, the army of locusts and their peculiarities. Why forbidden to destroy trees or grass, or any green thing, the natural food of locusts? Seal of God in the forehead. The five months. The King Apoliyon, etc.

Second woe trumpet. Four bound angels. The Euphratean power. The hour, day, month and year. Preparation to slay third part of men. The number and character of the destroying army. The agent of destruction. Fire, smoke and brimstone. Of what are they symbolic?

The rest of men who failed to take warning and repent. Who are they?

The magnificent angel from heaven. His attitude. The book in his hand. The seven thunders. The oath of the angel. Eating of the little book and the bitterness that followed. Command to prophesy. What do all these signify?

The angel's measuring rod and the things measured. The forty and two months. The angel's two witnesses. Their attributes, powers, persecution, etc.

The seventh trumpet. The kingdom of God established. The resurrection and rewarding of the faithful.

It is doubtful if the time set apart for this study will suffice for work beyond this stage. If it should do so, the studies will be continued.

12:00 m. Adjournment for dinner.

2:00 p. m. Prompt reassembling of the Conference. All sessions will begin promptly at the time set.

Continuation of the study of Revelations.

3:00 p. m. Sermon by L. E. Conner. Topic: What Christianity has lost. A contrast between teachings held essential by the majority of the present day churches and the primitive Bible faith.

Text: "Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrines. Continue in them, for in so doing thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee." 1 Tim. iv. 16.

4:00 p. m. Recess.

7:00 p. m. Social meeting. Topic: What is it to be faithful? Ten minutes opening and five minutes talks.

Text: "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. ii. 10.

7:45 p. m. Sermon by A. J. Eychaner. Topic: Why are we Christians?

Text: "We have forsaken all and followed thee. What shall we have therefore?" Mat. xix. 27.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 20.

10:00 a. m. Continuation of studies in Revelations.

12:00 m. Adjourn for dinner.

2:00 p. m. Completion of studies in Revelations.

3:00 p. m. Sermon by Samuel Wilson. Topic: The fountain of life.

Text: "Let him that is athirst come, and let him whosoever will partake of the fountain of life freely." Revelation xxii. 17.

7:00 p. m. Social meeting. Topic: Bible mathematics.

Texts: Subtraction. "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us."

Addition. "And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, etc. 2 Pet. i. 5.

Multiplication. "Any one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father or mother, or wife or children, or lands for my name's sake shall receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life." Mat. xix. 29.

7:45 p. m. Sermon by L. E. Conner. Topic: The overcomer's rich reward.

Texts: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life." Rev. ii. 7. "And he that overcometh and keepeth my works to the end, to him I will give power over the nations. Rev. ii. 26.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 21.

10:00 a. m. Business session of the Conference.

Order of business:

1. Reports of officers, committees, evangelists, churches and auxiliary societies.

2. Election of board of managers, president and vice president for the ensuing year.

3. New business.

4. Resolutions.

2:00 p. m. Continuation of business session. Discussion led by Miss Lelia Whitehead, on "Work and mission of auxiliary societies."

Address on Sunday School work by Martin Aslakson.

3:00 p. m. Sermon by A. J. Eychaner. Topic: Our hope in Jesus.

Text: "But now hath Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept." 1st Cor. xv. 20.

6:00 p. m. Social meeting, led by Mrs. Mary Wilson. Topic: Laid up treasures.

Text: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal." Mat. iv. 19.

7:45 p. m. Sermon by Sam't Wilson. Topic: The mustard seed kingdom.

Text: "The kingdom is like unto a grain of mustard seed," etc. Matthew xiii. 31.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 22.

9:30 a. m. Sunday School and Bible class. Topic for Bible class, "Who is the man of sin?" 2 Thes. ii.

10:30 a. m. Regular church service with sermon by L. E. Conner. Topic: "The Christian who shall never fall."

Text, "Let him that standeth take heed lest he fall."

12:00 p. m. Celebration of the Lord's Supper.

12:30 p. m. Adjourn for dinner.

2:30 p. m. Young Peoples' Society services.

3:30 p. m. Sermon by S. J. Lindsay, topic: Our Royal Inheritance.

Text: "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Mat. xxv. 34.

7:00 p. m. Prayer and song service, followed by a sermon by A. J. Eychaner, topic: Why not be an heir?

Text: For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 27.29.

Farewells.

While this is a conference of the churches and the brothers and sisters in Christ scattered abroad through Illinois, an earnest invitation is extended to the brothers and sisters everywhere to attend and participate in the services and studies of the conference. It promises to be one of the most refreshing and instructive meetings we have held in the state. We hope for a large attendance.

The Conference Board, acting on the resolution adopted by the conference a year ago, have erected a building, with dining hall and sleeping apartments for all who come, so that during the continuance of the conference we shall be as one family.

Oregon is on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad. Several trains daily pass through the city each way. Those intending to come should write in advance to S. J. Lindsay, Oregon, notifying him that they will be present and provision will be made to meet them at the train and escort them to the place where the meeting is held.

Conference Notice.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus for the State of Illinois will be held in Oregon, beginning Wednesday evening Sept. 18, 1901, and hold over Sundy. A programme will appear later.

The building committee will have the new building finished in which sleeping rooms and dining hall will be provided. We wish as many to attend as possible, both those who live in the State and those out of it. We expect Bros. Conner, Eychaner and Samuel Wilson to be with and assist us. Those who have attended previous meetings know what a treat it is to listen to them and should try to be with us again and endeavor to bring others with them. Let all come and have a good time, for surely no better feast was ever spread than The Word.

JAS. W. WILSON, Pres.
L. BOOTH, Sec'y.

To brethren who attend the Illinois Conference at Oregon, Illinois, Sept. 18th. The Committee just informed me that the new Conference building is about completed and that the brethren should be informed that it will be necessary to bring with them a couple of blankets and a pillow. As many as can should bring or send a cot, as it is not thought advisable at this present time that ticks or bedding be put there to remain in the building. For further information concerning board, lodging, etc., address, J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Ill.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 824 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. B. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

You can take in the Pan-American Exposition on excursion tickets to New York over the Pennsylvania Lines. This arrangement goes into effect July 1st on excursion tickets to New York to be placed on sale that date.

The correct population of cities and towns in the northwest, located along the line of the Chicago and North-Western Railway, is shown in a booklet just issued by that Company. A copy may be obtained by sending a stamp to W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth ave. Chicago.—aug31

Excursion trains to Lake Maxenenckee via Vandalia Line on June 2nd and on each Sunday thereafter during June, July and August, the Vandalia will run a train to Lake Maxenenckee and return. A New York trip with stop-over privilege at the Pan-American Exposition, may be made on low fare excursion tickets obtainable at Pennsylvania Lines ticket offices after July 1st.

The Nickel Plate Road offers low excursion rates to Denver, Colorado Springs, Glenwood Springs, Col.; Ogden and Salt Lake City, Utah; Hot Springs, S. D.; St. Paul and Duluth, Minn. Tickets on sale from June 18th to Sept. 10th, good to return until Oct. 31st. Write, wire, 'phone or call on nearest agent, or C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Sept. 10.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind.'

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized to that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Invitation.

Come to me all ye that labor,
Come and I will give you rest;
Cast on me your every burden,
And in me ye shall be blessed.

Come and take my yoke upon you,
Learn of me, trust and obey,
For my yoke is light and easy,
Come, oh, come, make no delay.

Come ye needy, weak and helpless,
Come my grace your strength shall be;
Come for you my life was given,
Come be cleansed and follow me.

Come ye fallen and forsaken,
Come and ye my love shall know;
Though your sins shall be as scarlet,
I will make you white as snow.

Everlasting Life.

Though all have wandered from the path of rectitude and are under just condemnation to death, yet God is "not pleased in the death of the sinner, but rather that he turn from his evil way and live." And we are told that "God loved the world." Jno iii. 16.

"Amazing pity, grace unknown;
And love beyond degree."

"God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we are yet sinners, Christ died for us." Rom. ix. 5. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son;" gave him to live among men, to become acquainted with grief," to die in the path of duty and obedience; and so gave him endless life, as the First of those who are made perfect through suffering, "the Author of eternal salvation unto all that obey him." Heb. v. 9.

"The Father hath life in himself." John v. 26. He can lift up his hand and say, "I live forever." Deut. xxxii. 40. But, as we have seen, man was excluded from the means of prolonging life, "lest he... ...eat and live forever." Gen. iii. 22. Therefore the Scriptures very properly term him "mortal man." Job iv. 17. It follows from the above citations and statements that man does not now have everlasting life, and if he is to possess it, something must be done either by God or man himself in order that he may obtain this blessing.

Now, we are told that "as the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself." John v. 26. But how "given to the Son?" By raising him from the dead, because he "loved righteousness and hated iniquity." Heb. i. 9. It may be very properly said of him: "He asked life of thee (God), and thou gavest it him, even length of days forever and ever." Psa. xxi. 4. Thus, through his loyalty and devotion to God, he established a new covenant of life, of which he himself became the first beneficiary; for we are told that "the God of peace.....brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus,..... through the blood of the everlasting covenant," (Heb. xiii. 20); and so he was constituted a High Priest, and Mediator between God and men, "after the power of an endless life." Heb. vii. 16.

And not only this, but God gave him "power over all flesh," that he might give eternal life to as many as the Father had given him. John xvii. 2. Thus was he made the Repository and Giver to man of eternal life; and it will be necessary to see what man must do to receive eternal life. I wish to emphasize the fact that Jesus is the One through whom to obtain this blessing. "This is the record that God hath given to us eternal life." "Yes," you say, "therefore we now have that life." But let us see. The writer further says, "and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." 1 John v. 11, 12. "These things are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." John xx. 31. Now, we are to receive this witness or record as true, inasmuch as non-belief is making God a liar "because he hath not believed the record that God gave of his Son." v. 10. Notice carefully a few things:

1. God hath given us eternal life.

2. This life is in the Son; not now in us.

3. It will be given to those who believe the record of God.

4. It will "appear," or be given "when Christ, who is our life, shall appear." Col. iii. 4.

5. Therefore to obtain the life, we must "have the Son." What does this mean? To have the Son is, as John says, "He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son." 2 John ix. It means that "Christ may dwell by faith in our hearts." Eph. iii. 17. In short that we may believe his words and in his mission to secure for us eternal life.

Does the believer at present possess eternal life? He does by faith, but not actually. Receiving it depends on his conduct during the present life. The life he now lives is to be one of faith in the Son of God. Gal. ii. 20. Even Paul did not claim present possession of eternal life, but expressed himself as being "in hope of eternal life which God that cannot lie, promised before aionian times." Titus i. 2. And John, in like manner, says, "This is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life." 1 John ii. 25. Thus, where something has been "promised," there can be hope of obtaining it.

But when is it to be given? Jesus says, "in the world to come." Mark x. 30; Luke xviii. 30. A close inspection of the context of these Scriptures will disclose that "the world to come" is placed in contrast with "now in this time" or "present time." Accordingly eternal life will not be given until "the world to come" is reached. We often hear of "a better world," and that when some one has died they have "gone to the better world." If this is correct, the conclusion would be that eternal life is received or enjoyed as soon as a good person has died. But it must be apparent to the careful student that this conclusion is based on a wrong premise, which in turn is based on a wrong understanding of the term "world to come." There is no thought of locality in the original of this term, as if one had to "go to" this "world;" but it is an "age," or period of time, differing from the present one, that is "coming." And in that age eternal life will be dispensed to those who shall be deserving of the honor of living forever. This "age" and its blessings are not attained in the death state, but by passing beyond and out of death through the resurrection from the dead; neither will it be the lot of men indiscriminately, but to those who shall be "counted worthy of that age and the resurrection from the dead." Luke xx. 34-36. This being "counted worthy" will depend upon their "walking worthy" (Eph. iv. 1), which means a life of faith in the Son of God. Gal. ii. 20. Then, after they have so "walked worthy of God" (1 Thes. ii. 12), when that age shall be introduced by the coming of the Lord from heaven and the resurrection from the dead, they shall be indeed "children of God, being the children of the resurrection," and can henceforth "die no more," even as "death hath no more dominion" over Christ (Rom. vi. 9), who is "the first-fruit of them that slept" (1 Cor. xv. 20), and the "first-born among many brethren." Rom. viii. 29. This is the divine order of bestowing everlasting life upon those who put faith in Jesus Christ. According to this plan immortality is not within the man, as with the Platonic and theological immortal soul, so that even the vilest sinner—the thief, the murderer—is as immortal as God and no more liable to death than he; but the quality of incorruption and deathlessness is "put on" as a garment when "the dead are raised incorruptible" and the living "changed" (1 Cor. xv. 51-55); when "mortality is swallowed up of life." 2 Cor. v. 4.

"THEN shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up of victory. O death (whose "sting" reaches even the most devout believer. John xi. 25), where is now thy sting? O Hades (into whose silent and dreamless enclosure even godly souls must go as the common lot of mankind; O Hades, within whose gates we lay, as did our Lord before us. Acts ii. 25-31), where is now thy victory?.....But thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

A. H. ZILMER.

What is the Blessing That Is Promised?

Mr. H. Wilson:

Dear Brother, I have a question I desire to ask through THE RESTITUTION. My ——— cannot see any blessings for mortal men, or the nations, after the Lord comes to rule the world. He contends that the blessing of the nations as foretold in Genesis, and elsewhere, is now being fulfilled in this gospel age. He wants some one to tell him the nature of the blessings of the nations, or in what will they consist? Give Bible for every assertion. I shall expect and look for a hearty response. The question is a fundamental one—a life and death question.

T. E. ADAMS.

The promised blessing of the nations cannot possibly come as long as the curse prevails. The Bible description of the state of the world at the second coming of Jesus, is truly distressing to read. It shall be "as the days of Noah were," (Matt. xxiv. 37); that is, that the earth was filled with violence," (Gen. vi. 13), and surely if the earth is "filled" with violence and corruption, it cannot in any view you may take of it be blessed. It will also be "as Sodom" (Luke xvii. 29), a more revolting, disgusting, and abominable condition of affairs could not be named. Is that blessed? Remember that the earth is found to be "filled" with this condition of things. Furthermore, this is the express declaration of the Spirit: "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly (1 Tim. iv. 1, 2), that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils (the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, etc.) speaking lies in hypocrisy." Very few are left of "the faith on the earth." Luke xvii. 26-30; xviii. 8; Matt. xiii. 30. Darkness covers the earth, and gross darkness the people. Isa. lx. 2. In place of all nations being blessed in the preaching of the (modern) gospel, we find "a vail is spread over all nations." Isa. xxv. 7. The modern gospel of a kingdom in the skies, filled with winged ghosts, is not the gospel preached to Abraham, by and through which all nations are to be blessed. A large majority of the earth's inhabitants has never even heard of the modern gospel. It is estimated "that about eight hundred millions of people are now bowing down to stocks and stones." The modern gospel is a flat failure in blessing all nations.

THE COVENANT WITH ABRAHAM.

In this covenant God names four items, which are the channels through which all nations shall be blessed.

1. "I will make of thee a great nation." Gen. xii. 2.

2. "I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, * * * all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession." Gen. xvii. 8.

3. "Thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies." Gen. xxiii. 17.

4. "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. xxii. 18.

I will briefly examine each one of these channels separately, and show their connection with the contemplated blessing of the nations. There is enough matter in each item to make a long article in itself, therefore, the evidence must of necessity be abreviated to get all into one article.

1. "I will make of thee a great nation." There can be no dispute, but what that "great nation" is Israel. Passing over entirely the birth and history of this "great nation," we find them dispersed among all nations. In this dispersion they are being qualified in a practical manner to become God's missionaries to all nations. They become quite familiar with the manners, customs, religions and languages of all nations, and when they are born again as a nation, "in one day" (Isa. lxvi. 7-12), they will at once become efficient messengers to carry to Gentile nations God's glory. God has decreed that this great nation shall be a blessing to the nations. We read, and it shall come to pass that as we were a curse among the heathen (Gentile nations), O house of Judah, and house of Israel; so will I save you, and ye shall be a blessing," among the same nations.

This "great nation" is being prepared for that work, and when a third part of them can fulfill the prophecy of Zech. xii. 10-14; xiii. 6-9, they will be commissioned, and sown among these nations to scatter God's blessing with a liberal hand. The prophecy reads: "They shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn. * * * And they shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hand? Then shall he answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends." "I will bring the third part of them through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried; (and the effect of the trial will be) and they shall call on my name, and I will hear them, and I will say, It is my people: and they shall say, The Lord is my God." This is a most beautiful, touching and mutual recognition of each other.

They are now ready for their mission. See Isa. lxvi. 19: "I will set a sign among them (Luke ii. 34) and I will send those that escape of them (the disciplined remnant) unto the nations, to Tarshish, Pul and Lud that draw the bow, to Tubal and Javan, to the Isles afar off, that have not heard my fame, neither have seen my glory; and they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles." See also, Zech. x. 9; Hos. ii. 23, Jer. xxxi. 27; Eeek. xxxvi. 9-11.

THE LAND.

2. "I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession." Gen. xvii. 8.

This covenant land is designed by God to be the center, or base of operations from which God's blessings will flow to "all nations," not only the blessing of salvation, but that also of a political character. Not only is a third part of the "great nation" of Israel being prepared as the coming missionaries of the world, but the land also is being fitted to carry out the provisions of the gospel preached to Abraham. The nations will never experience those blessings as long as the usurper treads down that land, or Israel shall remain in exile, or the seed of Abraham tarries in a "far country."

The Zionistic movement is preparing to gather back a remnant of Israel to the covenant land. It is the remnant who will first behold the seed of Abraham, when he returns from "the far country," and will receive him whom their fathers "pierced," and say, "What are these wounds in thy hands?" It is after this, that they go out as missionaries to the Gentiles. The world's coming missionary enterprise for the conversion of the nations, cannot possibly be inaugurated until a remnant of Israel shall return to the covenant land, and until the seed of Abraham returns to claim his promised inheritance, and take possession of "the gate of his enemies." The land is an important feature in the covenant, and God does not forget it. He says:

1. "My covenant with Abraham will I remember; I will remember the land."

2. "The eyes of the Lord are always upon it." Deut. xi. 12.

3. "Then will the Lord be jealous for his land." Joel ii. 18; Hos. xi. 9.

4. "For ye shall be a delightsome land." Mal. iii. 12.

5. "Neither shall thy land any more be termed desolate." Isa. lxii. 8.

He will also remember Jerusalem, the coming seat of the universal empire.

1. Jerusalem shall be pleasant unto the Lord." Mal. iii. 12; iv. 1.

2. "I will not forget thee." Isa. xlix. 15, 16.

3. "Put on thy beautiful garments O Jerusalem." Isa. lii. 1, 2.

4. "Glorious things are spoken of thee, O city of God." Psa. lxxxvii. 3.

5. "Thou shalt be a crown of glory." Isa. lxii. 3.

THY SEED.

"Thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies." Gen. xxii. 17.

This is a very important part of the Abrahamic covenant, and until this is accomplished, the nations will never experience the civil and religious blessings involved in that covenant. This part of the covenant pictures the seed of Abraham, as a priest after the order of Melchisedec. He shall sit as a priestly-king upon his throne. Many who believe in the second coming of Jesus (like the Adventists) cannot comprehend him as a priest upon his throne, they look upon him as ceasing to act as a priest, when he ascends the throne as a king; but not so, the nations as a whole will never seek after God until after Abraham's seed sits as a priest upon his throne. He will "possess the gate" of both his civil and religious "enemies." To "possess the gate of his enemies," pictures him as a successful conqueror. There can be no doubt as to his success. See Psa. lxxii. 9: "His enemies shall lick the dust." Again, "He shall break in pieces the oppressor." It will be the most absolute folly for any one to challenge his power. He will "possess the gate of his enemies."

This presents the seed of Abraham as the center figure both of the Abrahamic and the Davidic covenants styled (Eph. ii. 12) as the "covenants of promise," both of which covenants relate to (Eph. ii. 12) the "commonwealth of Israel," and those who are "strangers to" these covenants are (Eph. ii. 11, 12) in fact "without Christ."

The covenant with David is but a development of the covenant with Abraham. To "possess the gate of his enemies," presents the Seed in his [illegible] covenant. Psa. lxxxix. 27, shows who the Davidic Seed is: "I will make him my firstborn higher than the (mortal) kings of the earth." Compare with Rev. ix. 16: "He hath on his vesture, and on his thigh a name written, King of kings, and Lord of lords." Psa. lxxxix. says: "My covenant shall stand fast with him." "And his throne as the days of heaven." "My covenant I will not break, nor alter the thing which has gone out of my lips." "Once have I sworn by my holiness, that I will not lie unto David," nor unto Abraham either, for that also he confirmed by an oath. The outcome will be that "the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth," but "but his enemies shall lick the dust."

NATIONS BLESSED.

4. "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. xxii. 18.

In order to understand this, we must first have knowledge as to what is the seed of Abraham.

In Gal. iii. 16, we read: "Not to seeds, as of many, but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ." This is Abraham's primal seed, but very closely associated with him, are those who are of the "the faith of Abraham," who are also counted as the seed, and joint-heirs. See Gal. iii. 29: "And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." The heirs are in figure presented to us as one man. See 1 Cor. xii. 14-27: "Ye are the body of Christ." "For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones." Eph. v. 30. A nearer relationship could not exist. This is the seed which is to bless all nations. The Christ man or "body" is not yet complete, and until it is, the nations cannot receive the blessing the Abrahamic covenant comprehends. Who are the members of his "body," "flesh" and "bones?" Certainly not those people who are "without (Eph. ii. 12) Christ." Who are "without Christ?" "Strangers from the covenants of promise?" Eph. ii. 12. A person is a "stranger," to the covenants who is not acquainted with them, or is a "stranger" in not having an heir's interest in them. Heb. vi. 17, says: "God willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel confirmed it by an oath."

The Christ—the seed of Abraham, also confirmed the promises. See Rom. xv. 8: "Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God to confirm the promises made unto the fathers." We have learned from Eph. ii. 12, that a stranger to these doubly confirmed promises is "without Christ.

How can we get acquainted with or have an interest in these promises? See Rom. iv. 16: "Therefore it is of faith, to the end that the promise may be sure to all the seed." What faith? See Rom. iv. 16: "To that also which is the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all." Rom. iv. 12: "Who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham." To walk in the footsteps of another we must step carefully, or we will be apt to miss his footsteps. So he who attempts to walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, must be acquainted with the faith of our father Abraham, if not, we will not be able to recognize his steps.

Having this faith of Abraham, the next step is to form a union with the Christ, the Seed of Abraham, and thus become members of his "body," his "flesh" and his "bones." Eph. v. 30. See Gal. iii. 27-29: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ, and if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." None else are so related.

The Christ, and the members of his "body," "flesh" and "bones" constitute the unit seed of Abraham through whom all nations are to be blessed.

Now see Acts xv. 14: "Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name." This people are the members of his "body," "flesh"

See verse 16: "After this (after the selection of the seed) I (Jesus) will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down; (the work of restitution) and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up; (for what purpose) that the residue of men might seek after the Lord."

Now what does this Scripture teach? It teaches

1. The selection of the seed, or the "people for his name."

2. "I (Jesus) will return," and "will build," etc.

3. The work of restitution.

4. That "the residue (remainder) of men might seek after the Lord."

All that is being accomplished by the gospel of the kingdom, is the selection of the "people for his name." It is not for the conversion of the world. The work of salvation which is now being carried on, is merely a preparatory work, both with regard to Israel, and the Gentiles, they will be the instruments in God's hands to bless all nations. With regard to the purpose of the selection of the Gentiles, it is specifically stated Acts xv. 14-16) that the "residue (remainder) of men might seek after the Lord." God is also sealing a remnant of Israel (Rev. vii. 2-8) and the result of following "after" that sealing, is given in Rev. vii. 9-17.

When God attempts to bless the nations through his disciplined and trained agents, the work will be accomplished. The efforts of men to bless the nations by means of preaching a gospel of a kingdom of winged ghosts, will ever be a most complete failure.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPT. 4, 1901.

IT was impossible to get the continuation of Bro. Joblin's sermon in type for this issue. Will give it next week.

IF our friends who are in arrears on subscriptions could only realize that our money is out in the hands of several hundred persons, and that it is necessary to collect in the small amounts from each, and get it into shape to meet our calls, we certainly think you would not hold back a day longer. We have obligations to meet, and they are pressing too, and we can only hope to pay by your being prompt with us. You who owe a small amount should not think because it is small that it can make no difference. It is just that little sum you owe that we need. Think of this brethren and sisters who are behind in payments, and let us have the money this week.

A LETTER from Sister Sarah F. Morgan of Browntown, Va., enclosing a clipping from a local paper, tells of a pleasant birthday party given Aug. 9, by Brother and Sister Ashby Updike for their little daughter Flossie, she being nine years old. The company was mostly children, but some older relatives and friends were there to assist in making the day one of pleasure for the little ones. Miss Flossie had learned a short poem composed by a friend, that served as a "welcome address" to all and as an invitation to the dinner table which was loaded with the good things that children like to eat. Amon Updike, the grandfather of many of the children present, sat at the head of the table, and all did ample justice to the bounteous repast set before them. After dinner the playing and singing with the laugh and shout filled the air with melody. From the account given it was a very enjoyable occasion, and will long be remembered by those in attendance. Such bright spots in the lives of the little folks cannot be too frequent. Trouble and care come soon enough, so give the children pleasure while you can.

"What Must We Know?"

[illegible] request lies before us, and reads as follows:—

"What must a person know in order to be a Christian?"

As we hold that to be a Christian is to be an heir of the salvation which is in Christ Jesus, we will treat this question as if it read, "What must a person do to be saved?" because all the knowledge of Jehovah's saving purposes it is possible for mortals to acquire will not of itself save any one. Says the Apostle, "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand ALL MYSTERIES and ALL KNOWLEDGE; and though I have ALL FAITH, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity I am nothing; and though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity (love) it profiteth me nothing." But by no means, however, would we discount knowledge.

1. We must know the gospel. This was what Jesus commissioned his apostles to preach. Mark xvi. 16. To preach the gospel is to teach the gospel; it is to make people know the gospel, because (1) they could not believe it without knowing it, and (2) because believers of it are to be saved, and unbelievers of it are to be condemned, whether Jews or Gentiles,—there being but one gospel for all, only one power employed to save.

2. It is essential to know that the gospel is something in particular: and is comprised of definite proposition, not vague generalities.

3. It is essential to know what those definite propositions or promises are.

4. It is essential to know that mere INTELLECTUAL assent to the truth of the gospel promises, is not belief of the gospel, in the Bible sense. In the words of the Spirit, Rom. x. 10, we read, "For with the HEART man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."

SCORES OF DUTIES

and responsibilities confront the believer, and many of them are unpleasant in some respects; and cause more or less persecution. These things would not be submitted to by those who only give intellectual assent to the truth. The reason is obvious. It is with "the heart man believeth unto righteousness,"—making it clear that when the heart, mind, will and affection go with the intellect, they, on being baptized, are justified from all past sin, are accounted as

RIGHTEOUS BY GOD,

and as heirs of God have something grand and glorious in prospect, and therefore joyously suffer with Christ now in order to reign with him by and by. Those with an intellectual faith only are not justified from sin,—have no justified standing before God, are not accounted righteous, are not adopted children of God, nor heirs of God; and having no hope of sharing

THE GREAT SALVATION

they have no inducement to suffer with Christ. It is folly to expect them to suffer for Christ when they have no interest in him; or to expect them to perform the duties devolving upon the members of the household of faith. As the Master of the House has said, "By their fruit shall ye know them," we know what ails those who have to be urged and pleaded with to do what should be deemed a privilege to do or suffer with or for Christ. As we pen these lines we confess to respecting many who seem to rest on their oars after baptism, as if they had gotten into the current and would drift into the haven of rest because they certainly know, and admit the truth of the fundamental truths of the gospel, and have been immersed. Alas for such,—baptism has not helped their case if they cannot say with Rom. vi. 17, "But God be thanked, that" we "were the servants of sin, but" we "have obeyed from the heart, that form of doctrine which was delivered" us. In the next place, then,

5. It is essential to know that a Christian is one who from the heart believes the gospel of Christ and obeys its precepts, see Matt. xxviii. 19, 20.

6. It is essential to know that the word gospel means glad tidings,—or good news or information about things we were not before acquainted with, either of a religious or secular nature. In the Scriptures it is chiefly used in reference to spiritual things but not exclusively so.

7. It is essential to know that Jesus brought the good news: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly," (John x. 10, 11) or as Diaglott, Have abundance,—of life; "even length of days for ever and ever," Ps. xxi. 4. This shows (1) that man needs the life Jesus came to procure and bestow; and (2) that only Jesus is able to bestow

ABUNDANCE OF LIFE;

because he as the good Shepherd gave his own life for the sheep. If we correctly read between the lines the party for whom we write has the idea that it is not necessary to understand the nature of man in order to be a Christian. But do not Christ's words above show that in order to be saved, his gospel must be believed? Are not the words "I am come that they might have life," glad tidings to mortal, corruptible men? Does this friend want immortality and incorruptibility in place of mortality and corruptibility? If so this is his opportunity, surely,—and he should hail it as the gladest of

GLAD TIDINGS.

But if he is immortal by nature, there is no good news in it for him, thinking he has all the life he knows what to do with; and we will put him down among those who consider themselves whole,—not sick, and not needing the great Physician. But if he admits man to be altogether mortal, and admits that only enduring life can be bestowed by Jesus, and yet holds that a man can be a Christian without understanding the he must think that Jesus will bestow life upon men whether they come for it or not; whether they believe the good news about it or not; and this too in face of the fact that Jesus sorrowfully said, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." How could he stultify his own word and bestow life on those who refused to believe his gospel of abundant life?

8. It is, then, essential to know that the ETERNAL LIFE Jesus came to procure and bestow, is the very CAPITAL PRIZE offered in the gospel of Christ. The words quoted from John x. 10 prove this. It was the great object of his advent. The words "I am come that they might have life," can mean nothing else! A thousand things things are included in the logos. What else could the Spirit in Paul mean when he said (Rom. v. 28) "The gift of God is eternal life," but that it included in that instance, the kingdom of God and all its because without it nothing else could be inherited. And the reflective mind will see it would be supremely ridiculous to admit that the words "I am come that they might have life" were gospel, and then argue it was not necessary to believe them. If is worth having, it is surely worth believing in. If not believed in the need of it is not felt. And if the need is not felt, it is because of the delusion that they have it already,—and the idea that they have it already grows out of the fact that they believe the serpent's lie, that man should [illegible]ly die, in preference to that he should surely die. Let us be candid,—If the belief of that lie in the garden brought death and the thousands of ills humanity is subject to, is it any the less wicked to believe it now? If not, is not the person in a God-dishonoring business,—sin, and a soul-destroying business, too, who teaches that man can be a Christian who believes it,—Bible in hand? Is it thinkable that a Christian should encourage the rejection of the crowning item of the gospel of the grace of God,—the sum of all the riches of God's grace stored up in Christ for believers? And that, too, after Christ laid down his life to procure it?

GLORIES AND HONORS,

ETERNAL LIFE

We earnestly trust that any to whom this may apply will prayerfully consider what those do, who do not believe the record God gives of his Son, 1 John v. 10-12. They make God a liar, when they claim to have a never-dying soul as part of their natural outfit. Will God bestow as a gift what they claim to have by nature?

9. It is essential to know that there is only one faith because there is only one set of promises to believe,—as we have said, these promises go to make up the gospel, and must be believed in order to be saved. Paul says Rom. x. 17 faith cometh by hearing the Word of God. If there were no promises there could be no faith.

10. It is essential to know that there is only one hope because in the nature of things one is obliged to hope for what he believes in. And so Heb. vi. 18 we learn that the one hope adverted to, is set before us. That is, what we are to hope for, has been set before us in promises, and these, we see by the preceding verse, have been confirmed by the oath of God to give us

STRONG CONFIDENCE.

A hope thus founded must be valid; but we will emphasize this point by showing that the lack of this hope based upon the covenants of promise just referred to, left the Ephesians without any hope at all,—left them and without Christ, see Eph. ii. 12. The idea is this,—to hope for anything not promised is a vain hope because it will never be realized. From this point of view what would a person's hope be worth who thinks he will live for ever some where independently of Christ?

WITHOUT GOD

11. It is essential to know that sincerity will not save without the Word of the truth of the gospel; but the contrary is almost universally taught and believed. God is not a respecter of persons, and hence, when we find a principle of the divine economy once strictly enforced, we do well to expect it always. Well, the case of Cornelius, the centurion at Caesarea, is in point. He was a devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people and prayed to God always, and his alms and prayers came up as a memorial. This was a man of most exemplary character, and certainly if goodness and sincerity would save any one it would have saved him. The word had gone forth, "by favor are ye saved, through faith." Salvation was not to be earned in that or any other way. His character showed however that he was and that was all. In order to be saved by faith he had to know what to have faith in,—and he was miraculously instructed to send to Joppa for Peter to come and preach the gospel of Christ to him, and to baptize him into the name of Jesus for the remission of past sin after believing the truth. This was the new and living way whereby men must be saved.

About 7 weeks after the crucifixion, and about one week after the ascension of our Lord, Peter preached the first sermon under the great commission to preach the gospel in all the world, beginning at Jerusalem. It is found in the 2nd chapter of Acts,—and brief as the report of it is, we find these salient points of the gospel.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS

whom they by wicked hands had recently crucified and slain. That this resurrection was predicted by David (a thousand years before) as also was his ascension to the right hand of God; and that David's heart rejoiced in hope of a resurrection also and his flesh would rest in hope because God had shown him the way of life. Peter then says that at that time, although dead a thousand years, David had not ascended to heaven, but was still in his grave. He then spake of God's oath to David that he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne, as the angel promised his mother in Luke i. 32, and in this way he complied with

THE LORD'S PROMISE

Matt. xxiv. 14 to preach the gospel of the kingdom in all the world. Then he shows that Jesus will sit at the Father's right hand until it is time for his foes in earth to be put down,—and when he assured the house of Israel that God had made that same Jesus Lord and Messiah,—they were pricked in their hearts, and cried out, Men and brethren,

WHAT SHALL WE DO?

Peter's answer was, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." And they that gladly received his Word were baptized. In the 19th and 20th verses of the second chapter it says God shall send Jesus again when the time arrives for restoring all the prophets have predicted. And in Acts xv. 16 it says Jesus will return and build again and set it up that the residue of men may seek after the Lord. In this way they preached the kingdom coming. We see too, from Acts viii. 12 when Philip preached to the Samaritans he baptized them when they believed the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, the latter part showed them how by baptism into Jesus' name and thus obtain a resurrection like Christ's that would enable them to inherit the kingdom and glory covenanted in the Old Testament. Do some claim that this is too troublesome and laborious a way to be saved? Would it be considered too much trouble to secure a quarter-section of land in Oklahoma, just for a mortal life time, by complying with the conditions set forth in this paper? It is the kingdom under the whole heavens for ever, even for ever and ever that is offered.

DAVID'S TABERNACLE

TO GET RID OF THEIR SINS

Selections.

John III. 16.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John iii. 16.

This is the most comprehensive sentence in all the Bible. It has in it the basis of the scheme of redemption on the divine side, and the essence of the plan of salvation on the human side. It reveals to us the principles in the giving of salvation on the divine side—God, the Creator, and his Son, Jesus Christ, and gives us the reason for the great plan—love. It tells who may be the recipients of the salvation that is offered: "Whosoever," "the world."

It then unfolds to us the part man has to perform in the plan: believe. It tells us what he is saved from: perishing; and the final reward of those who comply with the conditions: "everlasting life."

God's part is now fulfilled so far as the plan is concerned. Christ has fulfilled his part of the work which was laid on him, and now, as a finished work, it is offered to "the world," and "whosoever" will may be benefitted by accepting. Divine love has followed rebellious men through all the scenes of a sinful life, and still says, Here is life, will you take it?

Our part is to believe God, accept his Word, his message, and honor him by a simple faith. The great question with us, is not, Have any of the rulers believed on him? but, have I, and do I now believe on him?

Perhaps a few questions just here may help us to determine if we are truly believers, in the full sense of the word, or whether we may not be classed as unbelievers. It seems to me that a believer must be one that believes the gospel, and the question in my mind is whether we can be a believer and an unbeliever at the same time, and on the same topic.

Is it possible to believe that Christ died, and to believe that he never died, but went to paradise with the thief?

Can we believe in the resurrection of Christ, and fail to believe he died?

Can a man believe Christ only has immortality, and believe man has it at the same time?

Can he believe "the dead know not any thing," and believe they are alive and in the sujoyment of heaven?

Can a man believe "that the hour is coming in the which all that are in their graves shall come forth," and believe that none of the wicked dead shall ever come forth?

Can a man believe "that whosoever believeth and is baptized shall be saved," and then believe that whosoever doubts, and is baptized if he feels like it, will be saved?

Can a man believe "the soul that sinneth it shall die," and then believe [illegible] never dies?

These are only [illegible] of the way a great many people try to believe, but I must confess that if this be faith, then I have the wrong kind of a Bible. Brethren, let us urge the importance of truth; a great many people say, Yes, I believe what you preach; but the trouble is, they believe more. It is just like giving a medicine of one kind and then giving another kind to counteract the first; or like the man who, wanting a white house, gets a painter. He paints it white, then he has such a fascination for black that he paints it black on top of the white. The man comes to see his house, and lo, it is black instead of white. He begins to upbraid the painter for his job, tells him, "I told you to paint my house white." He answers, "I painted it the most beautiful white you ever saw." Of course this does not satisfy the owner, for he wanted the house to be white.

So it may be with our theology; we may believe many good things but they may be so covered in black as to defy all attempts to discover the truth underneath the black. Let's try to have the truth in its virgin purity, in its lovely simplicity, that "commends itself to every man's conscience." "Buy the truth and sell it not," for we "are chosen unto salvation through belief of the truth," and one hundred errors cannot make one truth.—W. M. Stuckey in Messiah's Advocate.

Singing Away Pain.

A party of tourists were driving along the country road leading to Killarney, that fine old town among the Irish lakes. As they came within sight of a cottage standing back from the road, with a lovely garden of flowers in front, there reached them the sound of singing.

The voice was full of sweetness rich and strong, now and then rising into such lofty strains it seemed like an angel's song, then dropping to the mellow softness of a mother soothing her babe to sleep.

The little company was entranced. What genius in obscurity was here? Some one, surely, born to win fame and fortune when brought forward by suitable teachers.

"If I could ever hope to sing like that!" exclaimed the young man who was driving, himself a student of music; and then, stopping his horses, he said: "Let us find who he is; perhaps I might be of help;" but here he paused as a young girl came out of the garden gate toward them. She had a basket on her arm, as if going to market. As she was passing, dropping a slight courtesy as she did so, he asked, "Will you please tell me who is singing so sweetly in the cottage?"

"Yes, indeed," said the girl, turning a bright face toward them. "It is only my Uncle Tim, sir; he's after having a bad turn with his leg, and so he's just singing the pain away the while."

For an instant the company was speechless; then the young man asked, "Is he young? Can he ever get over the trouble? Tell these ladies about it, please."

"O, he is getting a bit old now," was the answer. "No, the doctors say he'll never be the better of it in this world, but"—and her voice dropped into tender pathos—"he's that heavenly good, it would come nigh to making you cry sometimes to see him, with the tears running down his cheeks with the pain, and then it is that he sings the loudest."

"Amen," said the young man, reverently; and with a "Thank you, dear," from the ladies, they drove slowly on.

"And there shall be no pain, and all tears shall be wiped away," said Aunt Myra, softly.—Christian Life.

Be Consistent.

Friday morning you go to a merchant's store and buy a bill of hosiery. How his face lit up! How fascinating he is while he is selling the bill of goods! You go away, saying: "That is one of the most agreeable men I ever met in all my life." That very Friday evening you go into the prayer-meeting where that same Christian merchant worships, and you find him getting up and recommending the religion of Jesus Christ with a funeral countenance and a doleful phraseology, enough to make an undertaker burst into tears. How few people there are who talk cheerfully about the religion of Jesus! In other words, that man of whom I spoke had more exhilaration when he was selling a bill of goods than in recommending the religion which makes all heaven ring with anthems of the free. Now ought that so to be? How many are driven from the doors of the churches for the simple reason that they do not want such a repulsive religion. They are afraid to shake hands with a Christian man, lest they shall be religiously assaulted. I remember very well how it was when I was a boy. I hid one hour and a half under the raspberry bushes in the garden, to escape from the minister and the elder who came to my father's house on a family visit; and my father came out on the back steps and cried: "DeWitt, where are you?" DeWitt made no answer. Ought our religion to repel or attract? —Talmage.

Are You a Watcher?

We are all on the watch for something. Most people are watching for chances to make money or get a little pleasure. Others are watching for their Lord to return. But that does not mean they are neglecting their business or their studies or their recreations. Jesus said that servant would be wonderfully blessed who was found doing. Luke xii. 42, 43. Do not forget that doing is a part of watching. Doing what? Doing your duty, whatever it is, whether preaching, teaching, learning, selling goods, cooking meals, washing dishes, helping mother or brother, or anything else that the Lord has given you to do. But, remember, also, that watching for the Lord means reading about his coming, listening about it, thinking about it, and testifying to others about it. Boys and girls can be watchers as well as older folks.—Messiah's Advocate.

All Said But Not Done.

A pious Scotch woman, returning home from church a little earlier than usual, was asked by her husband if "the sermon was all done." Nay, Donald, it is all said, but it is not begun to be done." Dalli, an old French Protestant preacher of more than two hundred years ago, closing one of his sermons, says: "The text is not, as you see, brethren, very difficult to understand. The principle point is that you should put it into practice, and that this excellent instruction of the apostle, should be read in your lives as well as in his epistles."

PLEASE READ, AND THEN HEED.

WE wish to thank those who have responded to the letters we sent out some weeks ago, and to urge those who have not yet answered to do so at once. If there is some good reason for not sending now write and tell us of it, and say when you can remit. Don't neglect it any longer, for we need all—every last dollar—due us. We just must pay our obligations, and we can only do so when you pay yours. The responsibility lies with every one who owes us any money. Please attend to your part promptly.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Confession.

"If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." 1 John i. 9.

I am so weary and so weak tonight, dear Savior,
So tired of striving and sick of sin,
That were I worthy of a place in thy fair dwelling
I'd ask that I just now might enter in.

Here let me kneel in sorrowful contrition,
And lean my head against thy wounded side,
And kiss thy hands and feet all torn and bleeding,
And whisper to myself, "for me he died."

And I have grieved him since; Oh shame to say it!
Such base ingratitude it seemeth to me now;
How could I pierce again the heart that loved me,
And bind the thorns again upon that brow

I did not mean it Lord! some sudden goat o passion,
Some snare the tempter laid with wily art,
Entrapped my thoughtless feet, and ere I knew it,
[illegible] and thine were lying wide apart.

[illegible] my death, O how can [illegible]
[illegible] cease at thee,
No wrong hid kindness and no faithless proved

And falling at thy feet I plead for pardon,
Amid such bitter tears of grief and shame;
While thou hast only loving words of comfort for me.
Not one reproach, not one just word of blame.

Thou knowest I love thee, Lord! though in my weakness,
Tempted and tried, thy love I often grieve,
Thou knowest I love thee! stay thou ever near me,
That from thy heart my heart may strength receive.

Strength to overcome, to conquer every failing,
That mars my life and makes it incomplete;
Strength that shall keep me safe from sin and wandering,
Faithful and pure, forever at thy feet.

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

In the preceding article was offered an illustration of history repeating itself in connection with the doctrine concerning the nature of Christ. A controversy on this subject arose in England in the later twenties of the 19th century. The case was that of Rev. Edward Irving. There are a few brief extracts pro and con from the literature published. These will show how the matter was viewed by different minds, and how similar the discussion was to past and subsequent times.

It might be well for the reader to keep in mind the subtlety of the subject. While certain facts are plain, their reconciliation may be impossible. Jesus was immaculate, was truly human, and was being supernaturally conceived, born of a woman. The tendency to be wise above what is written, leads many to exercise the utmost ingenuity to solve points on which probably revelation is silent.

Mr. Irving, then, expressed himself in this way:—"Whenever I attribute sinful properties and dispositions to our Lord's human nature, I am speaking of it as apart from him, in itself. I am defining the qualities of that nature which he took upon him, and demonstrating it to be the very same in substance with that which we possess." Preface to work entitled "Human Nature of Christ."

"If it be said that our Lord's human nature differed in any of its properties from ours, that it was as Adam's before it fell; or as ours shall be in the resurrection.....then that may be called a supposititious, or hypothetical, or imaginary humanity; but the humanity which I understand and know, it is not." Human Nature of Christ. p. 1.

"As man's nature after regeneration is the same sinful nature as before, though restrained from power by the indwelling of the Spirit of Christ; so was Christ's substance after his regeneration of the Holy Ghost, the same as before, very substance of his mother." p. 8.

"Christ came to death in order to prove himself to be of the seed of Adam, of the seed of Abraham, of the seed of David, and of the substance of the Virgin; 'bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh.'"

"I utterly reject the notion that there was any part of Christ's nature unholy. It was all holy by sanctification of the Spirit; and without that sanctification it never existed in him."

Mr. Irving then proceeds to maintain his position from Scripture. He quotes such passages as Rom. i. 3; 1 Tim. iii. 16; Heb. v. 7; 1 Pet. iii. 18; Heb. ii. 14; 2 Cor. v. 21. He says, "If Christ be common with Adam unfallen he is not common with us. Whether seed of Abraham be flesh ordinary or flesh extraordinary; be human nature fallen or unfallen; judge all men." p. 5.

Quoting Rom. viii. 3, he says, "He sent his Son in likeness of flesh of sin, not in likeness of flesh without sin, nor yet in flesh without sin." p. 12.

"He hath taken part with the children: but he came by that part, not through connection with Adam, but by his own free will, and his Father's free will, and the free will of the Holy Ghost; and thus original sin is avoided, though yet the body he took is in the fallen state, and liable to all temptations."

Mr. Henry Drummond, mentioned in preceding article, published a pamphlet entitled "A Candid Examination of the Controversy between Mr. James A. Haldane and Rev. Dr. A Thomson, and Rev. Edward Irving. A few extracts will show how the subject was treated by the combatants.

Drummond says, "It is necessary to premise that upon the perfect immaculateness of the [illegible] God and man in Christ, there is not the smallest difference of opinion between Irving, Mr. Haldane and Dr. Thomson." He emphasizes the metaphysics of the subject in this way, "The Creator and the creature making but one person in Christ, it requires the greatest delicacy and precision to avoid asserting that of the whole person which is only true of one nature in that person"..... "The questions involved are deeply metaphysical and extremely subtle, so that many persons in these days could see no difference between the statements of disputants who were waging hottest war against each other".....The subject on which Mr. Haldane's ire is roused is one of those 'Technical windings in Divinity' that requires the clearest head and the coolest of tempers."

He says—"The difference between the two being this; that Mr. Irving with all the orthodox church holds that the manhood was exactly like our manhood, only preserved sinless by the power of the Holy Ghost; while Dr. Thomson and Mr. Haldane have broached the new doctrine that the manhood was holy, immortal; and incorruptible, per se, without the necessity of the Holy Ghost to make it so.

Drummond also puts the matter this way. "One of the persons of the Godhead united himself to a creature; in which creature form the Holy Ghost took up his abode, and thereby prevented it from exercising any act of its will other than in conformity with the will of its Creator and Lord .....the Creator and the creature making but one person in Christ."

He quotes Mr. Haldane who affirms —"To speak of a being possessed of a sinful nature, yet without sin, is a contradiction in terms." Drummond replies, "There is no contradiction whatever; any more than to say that the bush which was burning and yet not consumed, possessed a combustible nature, and yet did not burn."

Again, "Mr. Haldane quotes Heb. ix. 13, 14, and prints the words 'without spot' in italics as if the force of his argument.....lay there; whereas the real hinge on which it all turns lies in the words 'who through the eternal spirit offered himself without spot to God.'"

Speaking of the phrase "sinful flesh," Drummond deals with it in what seems a reasonable way thus—"Sinful flesh is not the flesh of a sinner, but flesh which, asking gratification, tempts the wearer to sin; and this flesh is what Mr. Haldane and Dr. Thomson deny that Christ took, and which all the orthodox affirm that he took."

Referring to Adam unfallen, he says, "No sooner was he left to himself than he gratified the desires of the flesh and of the mind, and ate the fruit; the act of eating was that which constituted him a sinner; the flesh which he had before he sinned prompted him to do so; it was his sinful flesh, that is flesh as well as mind, always ready to be gratified, and to call for gratification without reference to God. God left him to himself and he sinned."

Drummond quotes Mr. Haldane as saying, "Adam's nature was originally holy; but he fell.....the human nature of Christ was also created holy and it remained untainted by sin." Drummond remarks, "If Mr. Haldane uses the word holy in the same sense when applied to both.....he should have informed us how the devil was able to destroy it in Adam but not in Jesus."

Drummond quotes Pearson on the Creed, an eminent authority:—"As he was truly and properly man, in the same mortal nature which we the sons of Adam have, so did he undergo a true and proper death in the same manner as we die." "Christ [illegible] in his nature not only the possibility and aptitude, but also a necessity of dying."

Leaving these extracts for the consideration of the reader, I shall, with the editor's permission, try to illustrate the Drawbacks and Hindrances to the Gospel Recovered, with a subject totally different from that which has in these later articles, engaged our attention.

Programme

For the 4th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus, an association of Bible Christians, to be held at Oregon, Ill. beginning on Wednesday evening, Sep. 18, and continue over Sunday following.

All services will be opened with singing, prayer and the reading of Scripture.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 18.

7:45 p. m. Bible reading by James W. Wilson, Pres. of the Conference. Topic, The coming and mission of Christ. Is the second [illegible]

Text: "When shall these things be, and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world." Mat. xxiv. 3.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 19.

10 a. m. Formal opening of the Conference. Appointment of committee on programme and entertainment.

Following this the morning service will be devoted to a study of the book of the Revelation. Much ignorance prevails as to the meaning of the wonderful symbols of this the last and the greatest prophecy of the Bible. The committee on programme appointed by the Conference board has therefore thought it wise to devote a portion of the time of this conference to its study. The brief time will not permit of an exhaustive study, which would take months, but will suffice merely for an outline to be followed up by further home study.

Those coming to the Conference are requested to read and think over the chapters of this book, especially from the 1st to the 12th, so that they may come prepared to take active part in the discussion, or to ask questions.

Suggestion Text: "We have a more sure word of prophecy whereunto you will do well to take heed, as unto a lamp shining in a dark place, until the day dawn." 2 Pet. i. 19.

A brief outline of the study:

1. Introduction. Can the Book be understood? Object and scope of the revelation. Is it a revelation of events yet wholly in the future, or of mighty world forces, political and ecclesiastical, as they affect Christian people and of the persecution and triumph of Christianity beginning immediately after the writing of the book and ending with the eternal ages. How shall we interpret symbols? The symbolic numbers 7, 144 and 144, etc. Lord's day.

2. The seven churches. Are they in their characteristics symbolic of seven periods in the history of the Church, or are they rather symbolic of the church universal in all ages of its existence? The characteristics outlined being prototypes of churches or individual Christians to be found at any period and designed as a mirror for self-examination, encouragement and warning. Are the promises and warnings prophetic of the career of the churches and of the cities in which they are located?

3. A peep into heaven. The four beasts (living creatures); of what are they symbolic? The 24 elders and the heavenly hosts. Seven spirits, 7 horns of the lamb. What is the lesson taught by this introduction to the opening of the seals? To whom is the promise made that they shall be kings and priests unto God and reign on the earth?

4. The openings of the seals. The white horse and its rider. What period does it symbolize? The red horse and its rider. The black horse and its rider. The dark horse and its rider. The souls under the altar. The great earthquake and triumph of Christianity. The seventh seal: what is embraced in it?

5. The seven trumpets. What is signified by the angel with the golden censer and his performances? The first trumpet: what does it signify? What is the meaning of the symbols, trumpet, hail, blood, fire, destruction of trees and grass, etc? Second, third and fourth trumpet.

Woe trumpets. First woe trumpet. Symbols, fallen star, key, bottomless pit, smoke from pit, the army of locusts and their peculiarities. Why forbidden to destroy trees or grass, or any green thing, the natural food of locusts? Seal of God in the forehead. The five months. The King Apollyon, etc.

[illegible] ye trumpet. Four bound [illegible] The Euphratean power. The [illegible] day, month and year. Preparation to slay third part of men. The number and character of the destroying army. The agent of destruction. Fire, smoke and brimstone. Of what are they symbolic?

The rest of men who failed to take warning and repent. Who are they? The magnificent angel from heaven. His attitude. The book in his hand. The seven thunders. The oath of the angel. Eating of the little book and the bitterness that followed. Command to propheay. What do all these signify?

The angel's measuring rod and the things measured. The forty and two months. The angel's two witnesses. Their attributes, powers, persecution, [illegible]

The seventh trumpet. The kingdom of God established. The resurrection and rewarding of the faithful.

It is doubtful if the time set apart for this study will suffice for work beyond this stage. If it should do so, the studies will be continued.

12:00 m. Adjournment for dinner.

2:00 p. m. Prompt reassembling of the Conference. All sessions will begin promptly at the time set.

Continuation of the study of Revelations.

3:00 p. m. Sermon by L. E. Conner. Topic: What Christianity has lost. A contrast between teachings held essential by the majority of the present day churches and the primitive Bible faith.

Text: "Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrines. Continue in them, for in so doing thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee." 1 Tim. iv. 16.

4:00 p. m. Recess.

7:00 p. m. Social meeting. Topic: What is it to be faithful? Ten minutes opening and five minutes talks.

Text: "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. ii. 10.

7:45 p. m. Sermon by A. J. Eychaner. Topic: Why are we Christians? Text: "We have forsaken all and followed thee. What shall we have therefore?" Mat. xix. 27.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 20.

10:00 a. m. Continuation of studies in Revelations.

12:00 m. Adjourn for dinner.

2:00 p. m. Completion of studies in Revelations.

7:00 p. m. Sermon by Samuel Wilson. Topic: The fountain of life.

Text: "Let him that is athirst come, and he him whosoever will partake of the fountain of life freely." Revelation xxii. 17.

7:00 p. m. Social meeting. Topic: Bible mathematics.

Texts: Subtraction. "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us."

Addition. "And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, etc. 2 Pet. i. 5.

Multiplication. "Any one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father or mother, or wife or children, or lands for my name's sake shall receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life." Mat. xix. 29.

7:45 p. m. Sermon by L. E. Conner. Topic: The overcomer's rich reward. Texts: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life." Rev. ii. 7. "And he that overcometh and keepeth my works to the end, to him I will give power over the nations. Rev. ii. 26.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 21.

10:00 a. m. Business session of the Conference.

Order of business:

1. Reports of officers, committees, evangelists, churches and auxiliary societies.

2. Election of board of managers, president and vice president for the coming year.

3. New business.

4. Resolutions.

12:00 m. Adjourn for dinner.

2:00 p. m. Continuation of business session. Discussion led by Miss Lelia Whitehead, on "Work and mission of auxiliary societies."

Address on Sunday School work by Martin Anlaksen.

8:00 p. m. Sermon by A. J. Eychaner. Topic: Our hope in Jesus.

Text: "But now hath Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept." 1st Cor. xv. 20.

6:00 p. m. Social meeting, led by Mrs. Mary Wilson. Topic: Laid up treasures.

Text: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal." Mat. iv. 19.

7:45 p. m. Sermon by Saul'l Wilson, Topic: The mustard seed kingdom.

Text: "The kingdom is like unto a grain of mustard seed," etc. Matthew xiii. 31.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 22.

9:30 a. m. Sunday School and Bible class. Topic for Bible class, "Who is the man of sin?" 2 Thes. ii.

10:30 a. m. Regular church service with sermon by L. E. Conner. Topic: "The Christian who shall never fall."

Text, "Let him that standeth take heed lest he fall."

12:00 p. m. Celebration of the Lord's Supper.

12:30 p. m. Adjourn for dinner.

2:30 p. m. Young Peoples' Society services.

3:30 p. m. Sermon by S. J. Lindsay, topic: Our Royal inheritance.

Text: "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Mat. xxv. 34.

7:00 p. m. Prayer and song service, followed by a sermon by A. J. Eychaner, topic: Why not be an heir?

Text: For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 27-29.

Farewells.

While this is a conference of the churches and the brothers and sisters in Christ scattered abroad through Illinois, an earnest invitation is extended to the brothers and sisters everywhere to attend and participate in the services and studies of the conference. It promises to be one of the most refreshing and instructive meetings we have held in the state. We hope for a large attendance.

The Conference Board, acting on the resolution adopted by the conference a year ago, have erected a building, with dining hall and sleeping apartments for all who come, so that during the continuance of the conference we shall be as one family.

Oregon is on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad. Several trains daily pass through the city each way. Those intending to come should write in advance to S. J. Lindsay, Oregon, notifying him that they will be present and provision will be made to meet them at the train and escort them to the place where the meeting is held.

Advice to Young Men.

Save a part of your weekly earnings, even if it be no more than a quarter-dollar, and put your savings monthly in a savings bank.

Buy nothing till you can pay for it and buy nothing that you do not need.

A young man who has grit enough to follow these rules will have taken the first step upward to success in business. He may be compelled to wear a coat a year longer, even if it be unfashionable; he may have to live a little longer in a smaller house than some of his young acquaintances; his wife may not sparkle with diamonds, nor be resplendent in silk or satin, just yet; his children may not be dressed as dolls or popinjays; his table may be plain, but wholesome, and the whiz of the beer or champagne cork may never be heard in his dwelling; he may have to get along without the earliest fruits or vegetables; he may have to abjure the club-room, the theatre and the gambling-hell and to reverence the Sabbath day and to read and follow the precepts of the Bible instead—but he will be the better off in every way for his self-discipline. Yes, he may do all these without detriment to his manhood, or health, or character. True, empty-headed folks may sneer at him, but he will find that he has grown strong-hearted and brave enough to stand the laugh of the foolish. He has become an independent man. He never owes anybody and so he is no man's slave. He has become master of himself and a master of himself will become a leader among men and prosperity will crown his every enterprise.

Young man! life's discipline and life's success come from hard work and self-denial; and hard earned success is all the sweeter at the time when old years climb upon your shoulders and you need propping up.

A novel parade illustrating methods of transportation for centuries will be one of the features of Railroad Day, Sept. 14th, at the Pan-American Exposition. Tickets to Buffalo over the Pennsylvania Lines for the occasion may be obtained at special fares. See Ticket Agent J. E. Hanes.

Big Time at Buffalo.

The second Saturday in September—the 14th—will be Railroad Day at the Pan-American Exposition. It promises to be one of the most interesting days of the great show at Buffalo. Elaborate arrangements have been completed for an interesting and novel demonstration. The grand parade on the Exposition grounds that day will be extremely unique and interesting. It will illustrate the different methods of transportation in use since Adam and Eve moved out of the Garden of Eden. There will be many striking novelties in the way of special features. Hon. Chauncey Depew will be one of the distinguished orators. The night illuminations and fireworks will be on a magnificent scale. The day and night festivities will be highly enjoyable for Pan-American Exposition visitors. Special low fares in effect over the Pennsylvania Lines will permit every body to attend at small expense. For particulars about the cost of tickets, through time to Buffalo, etc., apply to nearest ticket Agent of the Pennsylvania Lines.

Excursion tickets to Valparaiso for the Porter County Fair will be sold Sept. 10th to 13th, inclusive, from Chicago, Plymouth and intermediate ticket stations on the Pennsylvania Lines. For particulars see local agents.

The day of days at the Pan-American Exposition will be Saturday, Sept. 14th, to be observed as Railroad Day. It will be a good time to take in the Exposition. A good route to take to Buffalo is the Pennsylvania, over which low fares are in effect. See the nearest Ticket Agent of the Pennsylvania Lines about the cost and comfort of the trip. J. E. Hanes Ticket Agent.

Special low rate [illegible] San Francisco, account General Convention Episcopal Church, will be sold via Pennsylvania Lines Sept. 18th to 20th, inclusive, also on Sept. 27th for trains reaching Chicago or St. Louis that date. For further information see Ticket Agents of Pennsylvania Lines.—Sept 26

"Something every second" is the programme for Railroad Day at the Pan-American Exposition Saturday, September 14th. Low fares via Pennsylvania Lines.

Annual Meeting of the Kansas-Missouri Conference.

The Annual Meeting of the Kansas-Missouri Conference of the Church of God will be held in the public park in Severance, Kansas, beginning Friday evening, September 6th, and hold over till Sunday evening, the 15. Our audience tent, with dining tent and small living tents, and cots will be erected to accommodate all who will be in attendance. All coming will please bring all the bedding they will need for their lodging. A cook has been arranged for, and all will be boarded on the ground at the small expense of 25 cts. per day. Come prepared to remain during the meeting. The Conference work will be transacted Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. All desiring small tents will please address me at Atchison, Kansas, and so state, that we may know how many tents to order. A general attendance is desired. Let every body begin at once to get ready to attend this meeting. Severance is on the St. Joe and Grand Island Ry., 25 miles west of St. Joseph, Mo. Trains are run in connection with all regular trains into St. Joe. A regular programme will be prepare for work.

G. M. Wymss,
By order of Board.

Conference Notice.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus for the State of Illinois will be held in Oregon, beginning Wednesday evening Sept. 18, 1901, and hold over Sundy. A programme will appear later.

The building committee will have the new building finished in which sleeping rooms and dining hall will be provided. We wish as many to attend as possible, both those who live in the State and those out of it. We expect Bros. Conner, Eychaner and Samuel Wilson to be with and assist us. Those who have attended previous meetings know what a treat it is to listen to them and should try to be with us again and endeavor to bring others with them. Let all come and have a good time, for surely no better feast was ever spread than The Word.

Jas. W. Wilson, Pres.
L. Booth, Sec'y.

To brethren who attend the Illinois Conference at Oregon, Illinois, Sept. 18th. The Committee just informed me that the new Conference building is about completed and that the brethren should be informed that it will be necessary to bring with them a couple of blankets and a pillow. As many as can should bring or send a cot, as it is not thought advisable at this present time that ticks or bedding be put there to remain in the building. For further information concerning board, lodging, etc., address, J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Ill.

S. J. Lindsay.

Conference Notice.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God of Indiana will be held (D. V.) at Burr Oak, Marshall Co. Ind., commencing Thursday A. M. September 5th and continue over the following Sunday.

As this is the time for election of officers and other important business, it is urgently requested that each congregation be represented by delegates, one delegate for every ten members.

The brethren of Burr Oak will put forth every effort to entertain the visiting brethren, and are desirous of a large representation.

Burr Oak is on the Nickel Plate R. R. one and one-half mile west of Hibbard, the crossing of the Nickel Plate and Vandalia R. R. and about three miles north of Culver. Please consult time tables in Restitution for time of trains allowing on the Vandalia about one-half hour for time between Plymouth and Hibbard.

By notifying brothers G. A. Maxey at Burr Oak or Samuel Osborne at Culver, brethren from a distance will find conveyance at Hibbard.

D. T. Halstead, Pres.
E. K. Barnhill, Sec'y.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

The Nickel Plate Road offers low excursion rates to Denver, Colorado Springs, Glenwood Springs, Col.; Ogden and Salt Lake City, Utah; Hot Springs, S. D.; St. Paul and Duluth, Minn. Tickets on sale from June 18th to Sept. 10th, good to return until Oct. 31st. Write, wire, 'phone or call on nearest agent, or C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Sept. 10.

Longer Time at Buffalo.

The return limit on ten day excursion tickets to Buffalo over the Akron Route for the Pan-American Exposition sold at one fare plus one dollar will be fifteen days, and the limit on fifteen day tickets sold at one and one-third fare will be twenty days. These extensions will be effective on and after August 20th. For information about specific fares, through time, etc., consult nearest ticket agent of the Pennsylvania Lines.—Sept. 14.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover with what was done by Jesus and his apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters as can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of the work is in the unanswerable arguments [illegible] against the Seventh day section, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully covered on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Excursion trains to Lake Maxenckee via Vandalia Line on June 2nd and on each Sunday thereafter during June, July and August, the Vandalia will run a train to Lake Maxenckee and return. Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

Early Lessons, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

Anticipation.

Jesus, thou joy of loving hearts!
Thou source of sweetest thoughts!
From the best bliss that earth imparts,
We turn unfilled to thee again.

We taste thee, O thou living Bread,
And long to feast upon thee still;
We drink of thee, the Fountain Head,
And thirst our souls from thee to fill!

The Story of Israel. No. 102.

DEUT. XXVII. AND XXVIII.

The Israelites are still in the land of Moab, or rather in the land that Sihon, king of the Amorites took from the Moabites. They have been here ever since they defeated Sihon and Og, the great king of Bashan. They were here when Balak, the son of Zippor, king of the Moabites, sent to Balaam, the Midianite prophet, to come and "curse the people that had come up out of Egypt that he might overcome them and drive them out." They were here when the treacherous Balaam drew their young men into idolatrous marriages with the daughters of Moab and Midian, and here it was that 24,000 of them died of the plague, because of their sin.

They were encamped on this desert plateau, east of the Jordan, and opposite Jericho, when the Midianites were smitten and Balaam slain. Here Moses and Eleazar, the son of Aaron, took another census of the tribes, "wrote down their goings out, according to their journeys by the commandment of the Lord;" gave promise of everlasting priesthood to Phinehas, the son of Eleazar; apportioned [illegible] God and the half tribe of Manasseh, a place in "a land for cattle," in the kingdoms of Sihon and of Og; fixed the borders of the land which they were to inherit by lot in the promised Canaan; enacted that the daughters of Zelophad should have the inheritance of their father; repeated the statutes and counsels of the Lord, that had been spoken to their fathers in Horeb; appointed three cities of refuge on the side of Jordan, named Bezer, Ramoth and Golan; added new laws, and gave the covenant of blessing and cursing. It was here that "Moses spake in the ears of all the congregation of Israel the words" of the wonderful song recorded in Deut. xxxii.; blessed the children of Israel before his death; went up to the top of Pisgah and died, leaving Joshua to be his successor.

All of Numbers, from the 21st chapter to the close of the book, and all of Deuteronomy happened while Israel lay encamped in the land of Moab. It was another school, like to that at Sinai, taught for the children of those who had died in the wilderness.

But where are we? I think Neva chose the 27th and 28th chapters of Deut. for this lesson. It will be a hard lesson, too long for one time. And all my young friends will have to dive into history; will they like that? Some of them will, I am sure. How is it Clarence? Neva? Cleo?

"Nothing could please us better, but what history shall we take up?"

"Milman's history of the Jews. It will show you how the curses, pronounced upon Ebal, have come upon them. But we will not anticipate. Let us read the 27th chapter the first thing. What is meant by the expressions 'this day' and 'on the day?' Not twenty-four hours, surely. Day is often put for time, our commentary says. It may stand therefore for weeks and months. 'This day' refers to the period spent in the land of Moab; 'on the day' to the time that would elapse in crossing the Jordan; in taking Jericho and Ai, and in reaching Gerizim and Ebal."

"You are right, Cleo, what were the people to do when they had come to these mountains?"

"Set up great stones and plaster them with plaster. They were also to build an altar to the Lord their God, an altar of stones, and no iron tool was to be lifted up upon either: the stones were to be left whole.

"Where was the plaster pillar to be set?"

"On Mount Ebal where the altar was also to be built. Burnt offerings and peace offerings were to be offered here, and here the people were to eat and rejoice before the Lord. On the plastered surface of the stone pillar, all the words of the law were to be written very plainly. Does it mean that the whole Mosaic law, as recapitulated in the plains of Moab, was to be written on these stones?"

Dr. Kitto thinks an abridgement of the whole law was to be written; others, that it was only the ten commandments, while Jamieson, Faussett and Brown, say "a greater probability is, that it was the blessings and curses which comprised in fact an epitome of the law."

After weighing all the evidence pro and con, we think Jamieson, Faussett and Brown are correct.

"But it says in Joshua ix. 32, that Joshua 'wrote there a copy of the law of Moses, which he wrote in the presence of the children of Israel.' If it was 'a copy of the law of Moses,' how could it be a copy of 'the blessings and curses?'"

"Read a little farther Herbert, and you will see that after the people had arranged themselves as they had been commanded to do; half of them over against Mt. Gerizim and half of them over against Mount Ebal, that Joshua 'read all the words of the law, the blessings and the cursings according to all that is written in the book of the law.' It was the law of blessing and cursing that he read, and not the whole law, for in the first verse of the 25th chapter it says, referring to this law, 'These are the words of the covenant which the Lord commanded Moses to make with the children of Israel in the land of Moab, beside the covenant which he made with them in Horeb.' 'Moses wrote this law and delivered it to the priests, the sons of Levi.' And it was this that was written on the pillar, 'This covenant and this oath;' 'made' Moses says, 'with him that standeth with us this day before the Lord, and also with him that is not here with us this day,' was something so very solemn, and had so much to do with the future destiny of God's people, that he in his wisdom decided to have it engraved in a prominent position, where it would stand like an accusing angel, to witness against that tribe or family who should commit the sins therein recorded."

But that question decided, what point shall we take up next?

"I want to know something about those mountains; where were they, Auntie?"

"In the northern part of the country that was afterward given to Ephraim, Edna. They form the sides of a beautiful valley, sometimes called the 'valley of the cornfields,' from the abundance of wheat that is raised here. In Abraham's time the whole district was called Moriah, (Gen. xxii 2) or plains of Moreh, meaning, 'the land of vision,' 'the land of adoration' or 'religious worship.' Abraham built here the first altar that was ever consecrated to God in the land of Canaan, and Jacob also built an altar here. Another name for the valley is Nabulous. It is one of the loveliest spots in all Palestine. A fine stream dashes through it, and everywhere are spread out luxuriant fields of grass and grain. The rounded hills are covered with orchards of olive, fig, pomegranate and other trees; while the same trees, with the mulberry and orange, 'mingle in with the houses' of the many villages that dot the plain, especially is this the case in the city of Nabulous, the Shechem of the Old Testament, but not, according to Thompson, Sychar of the New, as some think. Nabulous or Shechem is one of the oldest cities in the world. Abraham 'came to the place of Shechem, unto the plain of Moreh,' Gen. xii. 6, after he left Haran, and here promise was first made of the land of Canaan to his seed.

Gerizim is a round-topped mountain and lies on the north side of the valley; Ebal lies on the south side, and is sullen looking and bold and rough. Just at the opening between them is Jacob's well, ninety feet deep, cut out of the solid lime stone rock. It was here that Jesus sat to rest, while he told the Samaritan woman all that she ever did, and in so doing convinced her that he was the Christ, the Savior of men.

"But is not Mr. Thompson wrong in saying that Sychar, near to Jacob's well, is not Shechem or Nabulous? It says it is, in our dictionaries, and Mr. Randall, who visited the Holy Land in 1861, also says so."

"Nabulous is two miles from the well, and has delicious fountains of its own. The Samaritan, if she lived near that city, would not have left it to walk two miles for water, Neva. So, Mr. Thompson concludes that the little village of Asehar, just north of the well is probably the Sychar of the times of Jesus.

How sweet the song of the bilbul sounds in the valley? And there are thousands of other birds singing in the flowering trees. No more delightful spot could have been chosen wherein to gather the tribes of Israel and bind them anew to God. Did you know that that part of this valley once belonged to Jacob? I wonder if the people stood on it when the blessings and curses were repeated? It was bought of Hamor, the father of Shechem. Joseph used to wander here, for his brethren fed their flocks at Shechem, and he was sent to see how they fared. The children of Israel have his coffined bones with them in the land of Moab. He will be buried at the base of Mount Ebal, not far from Jacob's well. The whole mountain range, Mr. Thompson says, looks as if it had been split in two and moved apart to make room for the valley between.

"Thank you for the description. I like to know the geography of our lessons. How far was Samaria from Nabulous or Shechem?"

Eight miles. It was built on a hill in the center of the valley. Omri, the king of Israel, bought this hill from a man by the name of Shemur. He paid two talents of silver for it. But I think we must stop now, Edna.

Good night to you all.

AUNTIE WISE.

The Change of Dispensations.

In a change of dispensations time seems to be an indispensable factor. When the antediluvian dispensation was to be superceded an ark had to be built and the people warned, which it seems took 120 years to accomplish and after the ark was ready it rained 40 days and 40 nights, and the water was on the earth 150 days and altogether enough time had been consumed for a man to be born, grow up and propagate the species to the third and fourth generations, under the programme without change enough in the affairs of the world to attract the attention of any one sufficiently to make a convert to Noah's preaching till the rains began to fall, when it was too late to repent, and then it was nearly a year before the new dispensation was ushered in. Of course Noah's preaching was an old story long before its truth was realized by the unbelievers and of course not much wonder that they ate and drank, married and were given in marriage, and knew not till the flood came and swept them away, but we will do well to notice that "as it was in the days of Noah so shall the coming of the Son of Man be."

When the Mosaic dispensation was about to be ushered in the child Moses was born and grew to manhood, when 40 years old he fled to the land of Midian, where he stayed 40 years, then came back to Egypt and was with the children of Israel 40 years in the wilderness, and still the new dispensation was not fully inaugurated till Joshua brought them into the promised land.

At the birth of our Savior all the world was in expectation, but 30 years elapsed before he was manifested to Israel and then 40 years more before the Mosaic rites were abolished and the Jews dispersed, making about 70 years of expectancy, forgetfulness, old story and doubt on the part of the Jews while the Gentile dispensation was being established.

So in the present dispensational change now taking place much time has already been expended in proclaiming the gospel of the soon coming kingdom. The universal sensation caused by the appearance of the first signs mentioned to take place previous to the day of the Lord, though at once recognized at the time they were seen by the whole world (darkening of sun and moon and falling of stars) has been forgotten, ignored and become an old story. The heart of the unbeliever hardened and the church lukewarm, but the work is progressing all the same and that with diligence.

The preparation commenced with Noah's chariots and the use of steam in the navigation of the great rivers as well as the mighty ocean, but it has taken many years, as we count time, to reduce that business to a state of perfection, just as it takes time to accomplish any great thing where man is used as an agent; but this industry will be indispensable in the change of the dispensations and the conquest of the world. The transportation of the Jewish nation to the land of Canaan with a mighty boom is a thing of the near future. The enemy coming in like a flood is another that follows in quick succession. Three and one-half years of drought and famine, next calls for mighty transportation facilities from all parts of the earth to Palestine. Just a little later comes the demand for the armies of all the nations to be gathered against Jerusalem to battle by sea and land, with supplies for their support; and then the continual coming and going of all flesh to worship before the Lord. All these mighty events demand a thoroughly organized transportation system all over the world, with perfect facilities for handling the most ponderous shipments of men or goods with the utmost dispatch. But this part of the preparation is fast nearing completion, and is being tested from time to time for war purposes. While electricity is already so far utilized as to render the whole world accessible to all kinds of communications back and forth almost momentarily, and as if to cap the climax the savage and idolatrous parts of the earth have been raided by civilization for the last few years until nearly all the earth has become accessible to missionary work of every sort, and free speech is becoming popular everywhere. So it seems the nations are doing their part (though prompted directly by love of conquest) to assist in the change.

J. M. FYFE.

Our Relation to the Government.

Bro. Wilson:

I trust we may all come nearer the truth on the different phases of the subject. Since writing you I have received a proving up blank, which makes the matter more clear. Among the first questions I find, "Are you a native born citizen?" This is as you have explained, and to "one who has sworn allegiance to the king of Israel," I think this question would only make him a subject. But this is not all. At the close of the questions I find the following obligations to be subscribed to, viz: "That I will bear true allegiance to the government of the United States." Will you please tell us what true allegiance to U.'s government means? Does it mean that we are a part and parcel of the government, and that we can help to make laws, and take up arms to support that for which we are praying the Lord to come and put down? These are important questions, asked from the purest motives. We only want the truth and nothing but the truth. Those who are fully persuaded that we are to make the laws, and can unhesitatingly bear allegiance to this, and the coming government, I beg of you to investigate with us, and bear with us, while we further investigate this subject. How can we take up arms when our Master says, "Thou shalt not kill?" Does this not apply to the elect, the Bride, and not to Judah, Israel or any other nation of this age, but to Christ's associate rulers? May we be able to live worthy of the "high calling in Christ Jesus." To so live that others may behold our good works and glorify our Father. To so live is no easy task. There are severe trials, and times when we are liable to give way to self, and forget to follow the meek and lowly Savior.

Your Sister waiting for the King,

NANCY BARBER.

THE ANSWER.

In answering the above questions I would say, that if our Sister had given the questions to some brother who is a lawyer, like Bro. Dwiggins, she would get a better solution of her questions. Not being a lawyer, I can only give what I conceive to be the Bible teaching of the relationship that should exist between a Christian and the government.

I find that the Bible teaches that a Christian should be loyal to the government he lives under. We read in Rom. xiii. 1-4, "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation." See also Titus i. 3: "Put them in mind to be subject to the principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to do every good work." 2 Pet. ii. 9, 10, shows that among other people who are reserved "unto the day of judgment to be punished," are those who "despise government," people who "are not afraid to speak evil of dignitaries." In Acts xxii. 25-29, we have the example of Paul standing upon his rights as a Roman citizen. The chief captain ordered Paul to be bound and scourged. Paul says: "Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman and uncondemned?" When the centurion heard that, he went and told the chief captain, saying, "Take heed what thou doest: for this man is a Roman. Then the chief captain came, and said unto him, tell me, art thou a Roman? and he said yea. And the chief captain answered, With a great sum I obtained this freedom, and Paul said, but I was free-born." "The chief captain also was afraid, after he knew that he was a Roman, and because he had bound him."

I gather from this, that a Christian should be a loyal citizen, and should speak respectfully of the "rulers of the people," and that a Christian citizen may claim his rights as an American citizen, and still be a consistent Christian.

We also find that with a Christian the divine law must be supreme, and if he finds a human law which requires the violation of divine law, then his duty would be to observe the divine in preference to the human.

We have the case in Acts iv. 18, 19, where the disciples were commanded" not to speak at all or teach in the name of Jesus. "But Peter and John answered and said unto them, whether be it right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye." See Acts v. 29: "We ought to obey God rather than men."

A case like the above could not arise in the government of the United States. We have the utmost freedom of religious conviction and worship, and besides this as bodies of worshipers we have the protection of the government, from being molested by any one.

Again, it is not considered disloyal for a citizen to condemn and endeavor to correct the errors of the government. Take for instance the licensing of the liquor traffic. As an American citizen, and a Christian, I heartily condemn this iniquitous act of the government, and yet no one would think of such a thing as charging me with being disloyal because I so esteem such an abomination. Loyal citizens are not obliged to endorse all of a government which are wrong.

If an American citizen see fit to live a quiet and retired life, and refuse to enter into political strife, run for and

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. Ready PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 11, 1901. NUMBER 34.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

hold office, and enter the legislature and help to frame the laws of the country, it is his privilege to so refuse, and is still as loyal as a man who does. If he should decline to cast a vote, he has a personal right to do so, if he shall so elect, and there is no law to compel a man to exercise his elective franchise if he shall see fit not to do so.

Again, no man is compelled to enter the army as a soldier. If he does not wish to. In the time of war when drafts are made, the government has made a provision where the conscientious convictions of non-combatants are respected. There is no government on earth which respects the conscientious convictions of a Christian as does the government of the United States.

The provision of the government in allowing loyal citizens alone to take up government claims, is right and just, and they should be made to prove their loyalty before granting a claim.

I am a loyal citizen of the commonwealth of Israel, but as yet the functions of that commonwealth are in suspension until he comes whose right it is to reign, and until then I must be loyal to the government under which I live. There is no conflict in being a citizen of the commonwealth of Israel (while in suspension), and also a loyal American citizen.

The above is what I consider to be the relationship between the government and a Christian. There are points in our sister's questions which a lawyer can handle better than I can.

Late Blooming.

We make an unfortunate mistake if we let the failures and disappointments of the past cloud our horizon. Many lives are like century plants; they burst into bloom after a long and tedious interval. The hard work, the patient endurance, the courage in bearing losses and trials, at length on some favored day bring forth their result, and the man is suddenly overwhelmed at the transformation of his life in the fruition of long-cherished hopes. No one of us can tell when we are standing on the verge of such a crisis. Many a man, like Saul at Gilgal, has become discouraged just too soon, and lo! a little after he has committed himself to a false and weak policy the prophet has come, and he finds that he has missed the prize that was almost within his grasp. No matter how dark and discouraging the outlook may be, have faith in the good providence of God, and may this year bring you the fruitage of your hopes, the transformation of life, which is as wonderful and yet as possible as the change which comes to the earth in May, when the warm rains and the mounting sun suddenly work the miracle of the spring time, when the cold and barren earth, as in response to the touch of an invisible wand, blooms with verdure. Watchman.

Sin a Telltale.

Sin is a merciless telltale. It is its own revealer. In its very effort at concealment it exhibits itself. It tells the truth without meaning to do so. It is an offense toward God, and therefore strikes no chord in the eternal harmony of truth. In its forlorn isolation it cannot but be discovered. He who is becoming entangled in evil practices will do well to remember that they cannot long consist one with another. The artifice of making them seem honest and true and straight must break down. One need not be so afraid of the glances of his fellowmen as of the inexorable telltale of his own evil deeds. Sin reveals itself in form and feature, in gait and aspect, in smile and frown, in temper and character. Sin is the detective that dogs the footsteps of the sinning. As Moses said to the disobedient children of Reuben and of Gad: "If ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the Lord: and be sure your sin will find you out."

PLEASE READ, AND THEN HEED.

WE wish to thank those who have responded to the letters we sent out some weeks ago, and to urge those who have not yet answered to do so at once. If there is some good reason for not sending now write and tell us of it, and say when you can remit. Don't neglect it any longer, for we need all—every last dollar—due us. We just must pay our obligations, and we can only do so when you pay yours. The responsibility lies with every one who owes us any money. Please attend to your part promptly.

A Cowardly Deed.

On last Friday afternoon while President McKinley was holding a public reception at the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, N. Y., a man named Leon Czolgosz passing along apparently to shake hands, shot the President with a revolver that was concealed by a handkerchief in his left hand. Two shots were fired, one striking the breast bone and glancing, doing little injury, the other entering the stomach, and lodging in the back where it has not been found. At the time of writing this the reports are to the effect that Mr. McKinley is resting quietly, though the danger period has by no means past. It seems almost impossible that he can survive such wounds, but the doctors are doing all that can be done, and are apparently hopeful of success. His assailant is a Polish Russian of the Anarchist type, and his father's family live at Cleveland, Ohio. Various rumors are afloat as to the reason for the attack, but it is not known that there was any plot, other than that this deluded man conceived it to be his duty to kill the President of the United States. He was roughly handled, but the police succeeded in getting him to prison where he is strongly guarded. He is about 25 years old.

Sermon.

"Except ye eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Son of Man ye have no life in you." Jno. vi. 53.

In answer to the question, "How are we to feed upon the slain Lamb?" I would reply, By faith, by meditation, by carrying in grateful hearts, and vivid memories, and obedient wills, the great sacrifice, out of which, and by his resurrection, our hope is built. The words of the Lord, "He that eateth ME, even he liveth by me," contain a singular expression in the original. McLaren says the word for eateth here is that which is applied to the eating of ruminant animals. That is to say, it is not or an occasional bite, but a continual meditation upon his person and work. This is essential to our drawing spiritual vigor and life from him. So that to let our minds feed upon his truth, and our love feed upon his love, and our wills feed upon his commands, and our consciences feed upon his great cleansing sacrifice,—and our hope feed upon his faithful promises to come again and that will never end,—and bring our spirits, minds, and dispositions into close contact with his spirit, and then, like Paul, the life we now live will be a life of faith upon the Son of God, and like him again, we will be able to say WE LIVE, and yet NOT WE, but CHRIST liveth in us. And now, brethren and sisters you will not be surprised to hear me say, "I would not dare to apply these words of Jesus, "Except ye eat the flesh and drink his blood, ye have no life in you," and "whoso eateth my flesh and hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day;" no; I would not dare apply these words to the bread and wine at the Lord's table in any sense whatever. And believing that you desire to know the truth on this subject as it is in Jesus, I will give you my reasons for so saying as plainly and specifically as I can:—

A HASTY SNATCH

GRANT US RESURRECTION LIFE

DRINKETH MY BLOOD,

1. Only five chapters of John's gospel precede this account.

2. Only three chapters are between this account and that of his first miracle at a marriage at Cana of Galilee.

3. There are but three chapters between this account and that of the Lord's attendance at the First Passover after his baptism.

4. The twelve are mentioned by John the first time in this 6th chapter; and I think these four facts warrant the conclusion that the Lord uttered these words near the beginning of his public ministry.

5. The account of his feeding the five thousand on five loaves and two fishes is in this chapter,—and it says, "Perceiving that they would take him by force to make him a king he secluded himself, and his disciples took boats and went to Capernaum, the crowd following him the next day. Take notice that it was to this that Jesus said, "Except ye eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Son of Man, ye have no life in you." There was no Lord's table at that time, nor for at least a year. Even the twelve did not realize that the Lord would be slain after they had gone preaching the coming of the kingdom by his command. The Lord's table was spread for the Lord's people,—not for a promiscuous crowd. I know of no instance where God's family-matters are addressed to strangers.

6. It is extremely doubtful if the death of Christ took place for a year after this was said. In the 4th chapter of John it says Jesus left Judea and departed again to Galilee, and must needs go through Samaria, (if the city was meant it was some 35 miles from Jerusalem, north and west by north. But when he approached Jerusalem the last time he came by the way of Jericho, some 16 miles somewhat east of Jerusalem, making it clear that the supper was instituted a year later than the Passover that was at hand when he addressed the multitude. And we have no evidence that the twelve knew of its institution till the moment it was done.

7. The words "Except ye eat," and "except ye drink," would make the eating and drinking at the Lord's table a part of the gospel, and a condition of salvation.

8. It was not a part of the gospel because Jesus omitted it, in giving the commission, and because Paul kept back nothing that was profitable,—but he kept that back. Peter full of Holy Spirit did not make it a condition of salvation on the Day of Pentecost. After believing he told the people to reform and be baptized into the name of Jesus Christ for t' e remission of sins, and they would receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. The reception of the gift by those addressed proves the adequacy of the instruction on the one hand and the obedience of the heart on the other. Ananias kept it back from Paul, as an essential to salvation; and Philip kept it back from the Eunuch, who, after baptism went and saw Philip no more; as if there was nothing essential lacking in his naturalization papers, so to speak,—or to his heirship to God's kingdom and glory. He went home to a heathen country and we do not know that it was ever his privilege to partake with others of like precious faith, at the Lord's table. Paul and Silas kept it back from the Philippian jailor and his house; they were told to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

ON HIS WAY REJOICING

9. If these words, "Except ye eat and drink," etc. apply to the emblems on the Lord's table they exclude those who may have from the heart believed and obeyed the gospel of Christ from the heart,—they never having an opportunity to partake.

10. No reference is made to it in the messages to the seven churches. Could it be essential to salvation?

11. It is not taught in any of the Epistles as essential to salvation.

12. Is it not proof that the words, "Except ye eat," etc., do not refer to the Lord's Supper, seeing the two grand reasons for partaking, are 1st in Remembrance of him, and 2ndly to show forth his death till he come?

13. I deem it wrong to regard the fruit of the vine as anything more than the fruit of the vine, because that is what Jesus calls it;—wrong to regard the bread as anything else, because Jesus calls it bread, as also does Paul.

14. All the faith mortals are capable of exercising could not change the bread or the wine to anything else for us. And I want to show all whom I can reach that these material articles are in no sense the object of faith! Faith looks right through these symbols to the LAMB SYMBOLIZED. It sees him in the upper room, sees him in Gethsemane in mighty conflict with himself, till he sweats as it were great drops of blood,—sees him nailed to the accursed tree,—hears him cry

MY GOD, MY GOD,

why hast thou forsaken me,—sees him die on our behalf,—sees him buried, and blessed be God, faith also hears the angelic announcement;—"He is not here, he is risen,"—hears him say, "I will come again and receive you unto myself. Faith keeps alive the hope of seeing him, and the patient waiting for him. O, beloved let nothing come between you and the Lord himself

TO DIM THE EYE OF FAITH.

Like the Father, the Son also remembers that we are but dust, and that though the Spirit be willing the flesh is weak. This was demonstrated in the garden, for while he was in an agony of prayer they were sleeping. Bless his holy name for the memorial service!!! How he tried to help our infirmities by the use of representative things and thus keep him fresh in our memories. It was another stooping down to us, an accommodation to our weakness. And the one bread and one cup reminds us of the oneness and of which Christ is the one head. It is the apostasy that magnifies the symbols to the detriment of what is symbolized, and makes it a continual sacrifice, which is an insult to the spirit of favor: for, having offered One sacrifice for sin for ever,—he sat down on the right hand of God. Rather is it a memorial of a sacrifice once for all made. The only exception being that we have been constituted a holy priesthood,

THE UNITY OF THE BODY

TO OFFER SPIRITUAL SACRIFICES

acceptable to God by Christ Jesus,—a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people to show forth the praises of him who called us out of darkness into his marvelous light.

15. The words, "Except ye eat the flesh," etc., cannot apply to the Lord's table because the apostle says, "Though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more. He gave himself,

HIS WHOLE BODY,—

flesh and blood, that we might live by him; and to live because he lives. But the flesh of him has now become spirit bodily. He lives by God now, as we hope to. The power of an endless life possesses him as we hope it will possess us. We cannot know him after the flesh now. The memorial service reminded us vividly of what he did for us when he WAS flesh and blood. He was put to death in the flesh but quickened by the Spirit,—and is now the Lord the Spirit.

16. God condemned sin in the flesh of Jesus, although personally he was without sin. But his flesh was derived from a sinful progenitor, and therefore was mortal.

17. If it be true that the words "Except ye eat," etc., refers to the emblems on the Lord's table, then it would seem that one,—just one real observance would be all sufficient, just as there is but one baptism into Christ.

18. It has been repeatedly shown that it is the words Jesus spake, which, when with the heart believed, ensures life everlasting by a resurrection from the death-state. I take this as the explanation of Jesus' words so often quoted today,—and I understand that the eating and the drinking is the acceptance of him in all his offices and work:—his sacrifice of himself, the laying down of his life that we might live, together with the gospel of the kingdom and the way of securing an interest in it on the conditions set forth.

19. The fact that the living water offered the woman at the well would have precisely the same effect as the eating of the flesh, etc., proves peradventure that those words have no reference to the Lord's Supper; and that the plain meaning is, that by his bloody death both his body and his blood were offered as a sacrifice for the sin of the world and procured pardon and reconciliation and life and the kingdom of God for all who secure an interest in that sacrifice. In a word, believe in Jesus the Anointed One.

20. It is not flesh, but spirit which imparts life to the eater of Jesus' words. Said Jesus to his disciples, "Ye are clean through the word;" and "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you;" "the truth shall make you free." It must be remembered that the words of Jesus are spirit and life, and also that he speaks of himself under the similitude of bread, and of believing, as eating.

Possibly some may wonder why our Lord spake in that obscure way to the multitude; but as my time has about run out,—I direct such to Matt. xiii. 9, 10 for the answer. It is an awful explanation, but there it stands, and the Lord proceeded to instruct the twelve still further.

Perhaps some one may ask why Jesus said, "This is my body," and "This cup is the new covenant in my blood," etc. This is held to be an impregnable fortress by some. I hope to be able to show you that it is a very much misunderstood passage. To put the words of Jesus into words which express what I understand him to mean, it would read in this way:

GOD GIVES YOU BREAD

for the sustenance of your mortal existence,—and in mercy he has given you my body to procure for you everlasting life. But the bread that perishes must be broken and masticated in order to nourish you.—so my body must be broken for you, before it can be bread of life to you. As, therefore, your present life depends upon the bread which my Father has provided for your bodies,—so depends on the sacrifice of my body on the cross." Jesus said, "This is my body." With profound reverence I ask, can any man of sense believe that when Christ took up that bread and broke it, that it was his own body that he held in his hands, and which he himself broke to pieces, and which he told his disciples to eat? I think not! The paschal Lamb was CALLED the Passover. But was it? Did not the destroying angel do the passing over, as he slew the first-born of the Egyptians? As our Lord calls the lamb they ATE, the passover, could he mean more than that the lamb was a memorial of, and represented the means used for the preservation of the Israelites from the blast of the destroying angel? The Papists say our Lord said, "Hoc est corpus meum," This is my body. But you know Jesus did not speak in Latin. If he had he would have followed the idiom or usage of the Latin language, which in English, would have been, "This bread SIGNIFIES MY BODY; this cup represents my blood." In the Chaldee—Syriac languages there is, the learned say, no term which expresses our words:—"Mean," "signify," "denote," or "represent:" hence the Hebrews use a figure, and say IT IS, instead of signifies or represents. A few of very many examples I will quote to you:—Gen. xli. 26, 27 says, Joseph in interpreting Pharaoh's dream, says, "The seven good kine ARE seven years; the seven good kine were not seven years,—they represented seven years. In Dan. vii. 24 it says, "The ten horns ARE ten kings, but they were not; they were only ten horns, but they represented ten kings. In 1 Cor. x. 4 Paul says of their fathers, they did all drink of that same spiritual drink, for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ. You know there was no Christ till Jesus was made a Christ at his baptism. Then why did Paul say that Rock was Christ? I reckon that he could not very well help it. He followed the Hebrew idiom, although he spoke in Greek. In English it would be: "And that Rock REPRESENTED Christ." In Rev. i. 20 the Hebrew idiom is also followed: "The seven stars ARE the seven angels of the churches;" but they were not, for the reason given above. In Matt. xiii. 38, 39, it says, "The field is the world;" the meaning is, the field in the parable REPRESENTS the world. It says, "The good seed ARE the children of the kingdom,—that is, they signify the seed of the kingdom. It says the tares ARE, i. e., signify the children of the wicked One. It says the enemy IS the devil,—i. e. signifies the devil. It says "The harvest IS the end of the age—signifies it. It says the reapers ARE the angels,—signifies them. In Lu. viii. it says his disciples asked him "What this parable might be." The English of this would be, explain to us what this parable signifies. In Gal. iv. 24 we read, "For these ARE the two covenants." Was that so? Did the fact that Abraham had two sons, one by a slave and the other by a free woman constitute the fact that the two covenants, one to Abraham and the other from Sinai? You all know they did not. Did Paul, then, state what was not true? By no means. He followed the usage of the language, and those addressed understood him to mean that they represented the two covenants. In view of our findings I think all should admit that the words of Jesus, "This is my body," mean that the bread represented, or was emblematic of his body about to be broken for us. Besides all this the Lord refers in the whole transaction to the Passover, and may we not safely consider him as saying: "This bread is now my body in the same sense in which the Paschal Lamb has been my body up to this day, to those of faith? And this cup is my blood of the new covenant, in the same sense as the blood of bulls and goats have been my blood under the law to all who looked through the type to the Antitype by the eye of faith. Ex. xxiv.; Heb. ix. The Paschal Lamb and the sprinkling of the blood represented my sacrifice to the present time; but this Bread and wine shall represent my body and blood through the times of the Gentiles; and so, till I come, "do this in REMEMBRANCE OF ME."

YOUR ETERNAL LIFE

The fact that Paul calls it a feast makes me think it is intended to REPRESENT A FEAST UPON A SACRIFICE offered once for all by our Lord Jesus Christ.

I understand that not to discern the Lord's Body, is not to duly and deeply realize that these symbols are intended to point to the Body and Blood that were offered to God in our behalf, and not to keep the eye of faith upon the Atonement which is in Christ Jesus.

I will only tax you with one other illustration. If you go down town to a museum enriched with Grecian Sculpture, the attendant will say, "This is Hesiod, Horace, Virgil, Demosthenese, Cicero, Herodotus, Livy, Censur, Nero, Vespatian; you know this is not so,—but you are not deceived by this information. You know right well that he means that these busts represent the noted men mentioned although he does not say so.

"And now may the God of peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that Great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, makes you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for the ages of the ages." Amen.

Water Supply for Jerusalem.

London, Aug. 31.—The ancient aqueducts and reservoirs of Jerusalem testify to the abundant provision that was made for running water in the Holy City when it was the metropolis of the Jewish state. It is only within the last few weeks that they have been brought again into the service for the city, which during intervening centuries has been dependent upon the scanty accumulations of rain water. The droughts of the present summer led to distress which happily the new Governor of Jerusalem, Mohammed Djevad Pasha, had the will and energy to combat.

He secured the Sultan's consent to lay immediately a pipe from Solomon's Pools, nine miles south of the city. The pipe draws from the sealed fountain mentioned in the Song of Solomon: "My beloved is like a spring shut up in a fountain sealed."

It is a deep down, subterranean spring, which from the time of Solomon flowed through an arched channel to a distributing chamber. The tunnel is roofed with stones in the shape of an inverted V. It is one of the oldest structures in existence. It passes through the valley where the beautiful ancient gardens of Solomon are mentioned in Ecclesiastes. It passes the spot where Elijah said that he rested in his flight from Jezebel, and crosses the plains of Ephraim, where David in the heat of battle with the Philistines longed for water from the well of Bethlehem. Finally, after passing round the slopes of Zion, it enters the city through the grounds of the Mosque Omar, which is in the old temple area.

This drawing from Solomon's Pools will enable the use of twelve ancient fountains in the city. It will require twenty kilometers of piping, ten centimeters in diameter, when finally installed. The Governor has also successfully repaired the virgin's fount in the Valley of Jehoshaphat outside of the city walls. Its waters pass to the pool of Siloam through a tunnel built by Hezekiah, as workmen recorded in rough-hewn Hebrew, which is the oldest inscription extant. It was stolen but afterwards recovered, and is now in a museum at Constantinople.

Obituary.

Mrs. Elizabeth H. Grant died in Watson, Mich., Aug. 25, 1901. Elizabeth H. Rogers was born in Canterbury, England, Jan. 22, 1825; came to America with her father's family in 1832, settling in New York State. At the age of 20 she married John Grant on May 19, in Batavia, New York. They came to Michigan in the year 1854, and there in the same neighborhood they have shared their joys and sorrows, living happily together for 57 years. Six children were born to them, two dying in infancy. Frederic E., a physician in Kansas City, Mary A. Woodward, Wm. P., a physician in Lyons, Michigan, and Francis A. Wynne. Father and mother were baptized into the Christ the same year the writer accepted the truth, in 1881, although we were all members of the Christian church years before. We sorrow for the dear little mother, faithful everywhere, under all circumstances, devoted, loving, patient. In her long illness of years never complaining, but led if we are just as ready to meet the enemy as she was, there will be no doubt of a sweet reunion in God's own good time. The dear old father will miss the patient wife more than all the rest, and we pray God to give him strength to meet the few remaining years. It was mother's request that my husband preach her funeral sermon. Sad as the duty was, he granted it, choosing Ps. cxvi. 15, as the text. Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints. We thank God for prolonging her life these many years, for to be in her presence was to be bettered, encouraged, blessed. It will be so hard to go to the old home and find no mother to welcome us, but we will try and wait in patience for the better day, when the glad song of victory will be sung.

MARY A. WOODWARD.

IF IT SHOULD BE THE WILL OF SISTER GRANT.

Christ and the world to go on as before
Gone with a smile from the old homestead door,
Dear, faithful heart to come back never more,
Oh! sad nevermore.

Gone, and the seasons still to come and go,
Wreathing her grave in blossoms and snow,
Snow on the bosom that sheltered us so,
Cruel and pitiless snow!

Home is not home, for mother is not there,
Dark is her room, empty her chair,
Now will she rest from her labor and care,
Till that morning so fair.

Oft the dear eyes grew dim from sad tears,
Guiding our untried feet through the years;
Planning our future with hopes and with fears,
Drying our falling tears.

Sleep, mother, sleep, with your [illegible] breast!
Poor, weary hands they needed their rest:
Well have we loved you, but God lov'd you best!
'Tis thy God giveth rest.

—Geo. E. Lee.

Mary Elizabeth Coffin, wife of Jesse Coffin, daughter of Nathan and Nancy Rebstock, was born in Starke Co., Indiana, March 1, 1870, and departed this life Aug. 23, 1901; aged 31 years, 5 months and 23 days. She leaves a husband, four children, a mother, father, two sisters and a brother to mourn her loss. She was a kind and affectionate wife and mother, and her loss will be felt not only in her family but by all who have known her. She united with the church in Feb., 1896, when the writer was holding meetings at Eagle Creek church, and ever since has been a firm believer in the things concerning the kingdom of God. She died with that dreaded disease consumption. How earnestly she wished for the return of the Master. The funeral was preached at the home in a grove. There was a large gathering of people who listened attentively as the writer spoke from 1 Cor. xv. 19.

G. W. SMITH.

Report of Labor.

Bro. and Sister Woodward came to South Bend, Ind., Aug. 17, and commenced a series of meetings which continued till Thursday evening inclusive, Aug. 22. The meetings were the means of bringing one more into the fold of the divine Shepherd. Much interest was manifested throughout the meetings and the church in general was strengthened. A mid-week prayer meeting being established.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Poetry.

To My Brother.

Years have gone by and yet, save in my thoughts,
I know thee not. Then came a brief four months;
Then heart to heart in brotherly regard,
In close companionship we came and went.
The morn seemed brighter from your voice and smile,
The eve far dearer for your kind, good words.
I cannot call to mind except in tears,
The last handclasp, that saddening, long farewell;
That barely verification of your worth,
There as I held your hand and felt the press
You gave and your warm touch, I know not how,
but some how, from your heart to mine, there passed,
A tender impulse that our hands conveyed.
And when in looking up I saw your eyes,
Those orbs that make your noble mind
Seem all serene, above the azure blue,
How that a deeper hue they had assumed,
And were quite moist, then from your soul to mine—
I knew not just when but near then—there flows,
A tender feeling that our eyes inspired.
And from this fire, like and this feeling, new Became not passible before, the capacity
A truer friendship and a purer love
Than we had known in the long lapse of years.
Since you left home and I lost babyhood.
I love you, brother, with a love that knows
No bound . and now, in saying those true words,
My heart leaps high and through my being flows,
The sweet assurance "O God! the soul alone
Can know what reverence I hold for one,
Whom I have found so noble and so kind:
Knowing your own life is lifted up by thine,
And not only I for this brother's love
Adorns a starlier mansion for my soul.

Opening the Seals.

After the establishment of the throne and ushering in of the great day of God's wrath, brought to view at the close of chapter six, John is given in chapter seven a view of four angels holding the four winds of the earth, until another angel who ascends from the east, seals the servants of God in their foreheads. It will be noticed that they are servants of God before they are sealed; therefore they are as stated in the record "of all the tribes of the children of Israel." And a good reason is because no Gentiles are servants of God prior to the time of their enlightenment by the gospel; and no people enlightened by the gospel, would need to be sealed in their foreheads, they having been already sealed by the knowledge of God, and of his Son Jesus Christ; therefore we conclude that the sealing in the forehead is a work of enlightenment performed by messengers of the Deity, symbolized by an angel. For it will be noticed that the angel says, Hurt not the earth.....till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads. Notice the word "we" and it will be seen that the angel represents a company of messengers, performing a work for Israel, according to God's covenant with them. See Rom. xi. 26-27. The sealed ones are seen again in chapter 14 standing with the Lamb on Mount Zion, having his and his Father's name written in their foreheads. R. V. Dinglott and B. B. Union. How significant that they stand with the Lamb? Heretofore they had rejected the claims of Jesus Christ; but held firmly to the doctrine of the unity of the one living and true God. In vain did the advocates of the trinity attempt to convert the Israelites; in the forehead of the Israelite is indelibly written, "The Lord thy God is one Lord." The sealing brought to view in chapter seven being the impressing of the truth into their minds concerning their Messiah, Jesus the Son of God. Therefore let us not confound what God by his Spirit has separated—namely the 144 thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel with the company that no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and peoples, and tongues. There being no break in the chain of events, at the end of chapter six, but a continuation of the events of the sixth seal. Therefore the frequent reference to the throne as "they stand before the throne," "Salvation to our God that sitteth upon the throne," "the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne" shows conclusively that the events of the sixth seal are in the day of the Lord. And as there is a general agreement concerning the chronology of the seventh seal I will endeavor to be very brief, only noticing a few points which seem to be overlooked, or not understood by some writers on the question. In the eight chapter we come to the opening of the seventh and last of the seals. Passing over the silence in the heaven, and the angel that offers incense upon the golden altar, we come to the seven angels, with the seven trumpets, into which the seventh seal is sub-divided.

The trumpet as here used is a symbol of war, as the events that follow the sounding of each trumpet plainly indicates. But "If the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?" 1 Cor. xiv. 8. In the trumpets we have a new set of symbols. The seals were seven in number, so are the trumpets; and in order to understand the Revelation we must not forget that in number seven is symbolized, fulness, completeness, and as the seven seals extend from the time of the giving of the Revelation to the time of the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth; so do the seven trumpets extend over the same period of time, noting that class of events that naturally come under the trumpet symbol. Therefore we have a new order of events, which could be appropriately joined together. The writer going back to the place of beginning and noting all the principal events that naturally come under the new set of symbols. The view taken by many that the events of the trumpets are all in succession, and come chronologically after the first six seals, is responsible for the unsymmetrical, or contortion of the periods of the seals, so that the first six seals are made to cover a period of only about 300 years. The great earthquake of the sixth seal is placed by Albert Barnes in A. D. 365 in the second year of the reign of Valentinian, that would be from the date of the Revelation A. D. 96, only about 269 years, leaving about sixteen or seventeen hundred for the period of the seventh seal. We do not expect uniformity in the periods of the seals, nor of the trumpets, but that one seal should cover some six times more time than the other six chronologically seems to spoil the construction of the revelation; and especially when we consider that it is largely constructed on the number seven.

"The first trumpet is supposed to be a symbol of the invasion of Rome by Alaric, king of the Goths, A. D. 410; the second the invasion of Attilla, king of the Huns, A. D. 447; a third was the sack of Rome by Genseric, king of the Vandals, A. D. 455; and the fourth, resulting in the final conquest of Rome by Odoacer, king of the Heruli, who assumed the title of King of Italy, A. D. 476." Barne's Notes p. 229.

Now an angel appears and pronounces, "Woe, woe, woe to the inhabitants of the earth by reason of the other voices of the trumpet of the three angels, which are yet to sound. Rev. viii. 13." The last three trumpets are generally designated as woe trumpets, and why so? The reason is not hard to be seen, the invasion of the empire under the sounding of the first four trumpets was by men of the Christian faith, so that the results were not so dreadful as when the followers of Mahomet came like locusts from the Arabian desert, devouring and destroying every green thing. Requiring on pain of death that the inhabitants turn Mahometan, pay tribute, or be put to the sword. But we learn from Rev. ix. 4, that their commander gave them orders to hurt only those men, "which have not the seal of God in their foreheads." Unfortunately for the inhabitants but few had the seal referred to, the seal being the knowledge of God, as said the Master, "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." John xvii. 3. None of the followers of Corinthus of the first century, nor the framers of the doctrine of the trinity in the time of Constantine. The Councils of Ephesus and that of Chalcedon affirmed the same doctrine of three persons in the God-head. Now Mahomed, or Mahomet, "declared that he was commissioned of God to destroy polytheism and idolatry." Mosheim p. 147.

Therefore their rallying cry, "There is one God, and Mahomet is his prophet." Now keeping in mind the faith of the Christians in the doctrine of the trinity, and the unity of the Deity as held by Mahomed, we can see the significance of a passage in Mosheim p. 148, referring to the followers, of the prophet he says: "For some time these enthusiastic invaders used their prosperity with moderation, and treated the Christians, particularly those who rejected the decrees of the Councils of Ephesus and Chalcedon, with the utmost indulgence and lenity." The logical deduction from the foregoing is that those Christians who held to the unity of God, and rejected the dogma of the trinity, are the ones having the seal of God in the forehead. Under the sounding of the sixth, or second woe trumpet, the number of the horsemen are said to be "Two hundred thousand thousand."

Mr. Gibbon says, "The myriads of the Turkish horse overspread a frontier of six hundred miles from Taurus to Arzeroum." A. D. 1050. In this ninth chapter of the Revelation and 15th verse, we learn that these hordes of invaders were prepared for "an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, for to slay the third part of men." This period reckoned at a day for a year, amounts to 391 years; add this 391 to 1050 when they started on their mission, and we come to A. D. 1441, near the time of the fall of Constantinople A. D. 1453, when their mission to destroy the third part of men was ended. But we learn from the last verses of this ix. chapter, that the men that were not killed by the plague, repented not of the worship of idols, fornication, nor of their thefts.

Now what is the next great event in the history of the world, after the fall of Constantinople? The answer is, the Reformation in the time of Martin Luther, Melancthon, and others; the account of which we have in symbol in the tenth chapter. It comes in the proper place, under the sounding of the sixth trumpet. And I saw another mighty angel (messenger) come down from heaven." Chap. x. i. (another angel) showing his relation to the seven angels having the seven trumpets. They are all engaged in the work of God, in opposition to the teaching, and work of the apostasy, and in this instance the pen appears to be mightier than the sword of Mahomed. "Clothed with a cloud"—symbol of majesty. "Rainbow was upon his head"—in line with God's covenant to enlighten the world. "And his face as it were the sun, and his feet as pillars of fire"—the light from the angel's face emanated from the open book, the Bible in the hands of the reformers, symbolized by the angel. "And his feet as pillars of fire," fire being a consuming element, is here used so aptly to represent what the apostle predicted should come to pass, when he says, "Whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming." 2 Thes. ii. 8. The spirit of his (Christ's) mouth comes from the open book in the hands of the reformers. One foot on the sea, and the other on the land, teaches us that the message proclaimed by the angel would go by sea and land. In Germany what is known as the confession of Augsburg, which did such honor to the acute judgment and the eloquent pen of Melancthon, aided mightily in the consumption of the Papacy. "During these transactions in Germany, the dawn of truth arose upon other nations. The light of the reformation spread itself far and wide; and almost all the European states welcomed its salutary beams, and exulted in the prospect of an approaching deliverance from the yoke of superstition and spiritual despotism." Sect. I. ch. ii. of Mosheim p. 103. The angel "cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth; and when he had cried, seven thunders uttered their voices." Verse 3. The cry of the reformers waked up the nations; it did what the myriads of Turkish invaders failed to do—that is to bring them to a knowledge of their darkness and superstition. Now the most natural thing in the world happened then, after the cry of the reformers—the seven thunders from the Vatican aimed at the head of Luther and his colaborers. The curses of the Pope are known in history as Papal thunder from the city of seven hills. In verse three it is written and when he had cried, "seven thunders uttered their voices." In the Dinglott it reads, The seven thunders. The article is also retained in the R. V. and in the American B. U. The retaining of the article is important as showing that the seven thunders were something that the nations had been accustomed to hear. The word thunder would appropriately denote the bulls of excommunication uttered at Rome; for the name most frequently given to the decrees of Papacy, when condemnatory, was that of Papal thunders.

In verse 6 the Common Version reads, "That there should be time no longer." A more erroneous idea it would be hard to find. It is out of harmony with the immediately succeeding context, which speaks of the days of the seventh angel as future. The American B. V. reads, "That there shall be no longer delay." The Dinglott reads, "That the time shall be no longer delayed," which is in harmony with the context and with the Holy Scriptures.

One more thought and I will close. In verse xi. it reads, "And he said unto me, Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings." Now it is asked, How can John teach or prophesy, he being dead, if this chapter has its fulfilment in the latter days? Some expect John will be raised for the special work here indicated. The answer is, John individually is not the teacher in this chapter; but the angel is the teacher; and we have seen that the angel symbolized the reformers in the work of the reformation. John being the servant of the Deity to whom the messenger was sent; therefore he represents the Church or the servants of the Deity; they having received the message—the light from heaven, must not hide it under a bushel but set it on high, that it may give light to the nations, kindreds, tongues and peoples. So what John was told he must do, is in fact done by the ones which John in symbol did represent. John did not actually see the angel come down from heaven, but did see the symbol; John did not actually eat the little book; but the servants of the Deity did receive the message; and the light of the open book is yet penetrating the darkness of the Apostasy. The work will not be finished until the Master comes.

Programme

For the 4th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus, an association of Bible Christians, to be held at Oregon, Ill. beginning on Wednesday evening, Sep. 18, and continue over Sunday following.

All services will be opened with singing, prayer and the reading of Scripture.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 18.

7:45 p. m. Bible reading by James W. Wilson, Pres. of the Conference. Topic, The coming and mission of the Christ. Is the second advent near?

Text: "When shall these things be, and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world." Mat. xxiv. 3.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 19.

10 a. m. Formal opening of the Conference. Appointment of committee on programme and entertainment.

Following this the morning service will be devoted to a study of the book of the Revelation. Much ignorance prevails as to the meaning of the wonderful symbols of this the last and the greatest prophecy of the Bible. The committee on programme appointed by the Conference board has therefore thought it wise to devote a portion of the time of this conference to its study. The brief time will not permit of an exhaustive study, which would take months, but will suffice merely for an outline to be followed up by further home study.

Those coming to the Conference are requested to read and think over the chapters of this book, especially from the 1st to the 12th, so that they may come prepared to take active part in the discussion, or to ask questions.

Suggestion Text: "We have a more sure word of prophecy whereunto you will do well to take heed, as unto a lamp shining in a dark place, until the day dawn." 2 Pet. i. 19.

A brief outline of the study:

1. Introduction. Can the Book be understood? Object and scope of the revelation. Is it a revelation of events yet wholly in the future, or of mighty world forces, political and ecclesiastical, as they affect Christian people and of the persecution and triumph of Christianity beginning immediately after the writing of the book and ending with the eternal ages. How shall we interpret symbols? The symbolic numbers 7, 144 and 144, etc. Lord's day.

2. The seven churches. Are they in their characteristics symbolic of seven periods in the history of the Church, or are they rather symbolic of the church universal in all ages of its existence? The characteristics outlined being prototypes of churches or individual Christians to be found at any period and designed as a mirror for self-examination, encouragement and warning. Are the promises and warnings prophetic of the career of the churches and of the cities in which they are located?

3. A peep into heaven. The four beasts (living creatures): of what are they symbolic? The 24 elders and the heavenly hosts. Seven spirits, 7 horns of the lamb. What is the lesson taught by this introduction to the opening of the seals? To whom is the promise made that they shall be kings and priests unto God and reign on the earth?

4. The openings of the seals. The white horse and its rider. What period does it symbolize? The red horse and its rider. The black horse and its rider. The dark horse and its rider. The souls under the altar. The great earthquake and triumph of Christianity. The seventh seal: what is embraced in it?

5. The seven trumpets. What is signified by the angel with the golden censer and his performances? The first trumpet: what does it signify? What is the meaning of the symbols: trumpet, hail, blood, fire, destruction of trees and grass, etc? Second, third and fourth trumpet.

Woe trumpets. First woe trumpet. Symbols, fallen star, key, bottomless pit, smoke from pit, the army of locusts and their peculiarities. Why forbidden to destroy trees or grass, or any green thing, the natural food of locusts? Seal of God in the forehead. The five months. The King Apollyon, etc.

Second woe trumpet. Four bound angels. The Euphratean power. The hour, day, month and year. Preparation to slay third part of men. The number and character of the destroying army. The agent of destruction. Fire, smoke and brimstone. Of what are they symbolic?

The rest of men who failed to take warning and repent. Who are they?

The magnificent angel from heaven. His attitude. The book in his hand. The seven thunders. The oath of the angel. Eating of the little book and the bitterness that followed. Command to prophesy. What do all these signify?

The angel's measuring rod and the things measured. The forty and two months. The angel's two witnesses. Their attributes, powers, persecution, etc.

The seventh trumpet. The kingdom of God established. The resurrection and rewarding of the faithful.

It is doubtful if the time set apart for this study will suffice for work beyond this stage. If it should do so, the studies will be continued.

12:00 m. Adjournment for dinner.

2:00 p. m. Prompt reassembling of the Conference. All sessions will begin promptly at the time set.

Continuation of the study of Revelations.

3:00 p. m. Sermon by L. E. Conner. Topic: What Christianity has lost. A contrast between teachings held essential by the majority of the present day churches and the primitive Bible faith.

Text: "Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrines. Continue in them, for in so doing thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee." 1 Tim. iv. 16.

4:00 p. m. Recess.

7:00 p. m. Social meeting. Topic: What is it to be faithful? Ten minutes opening and five minutes talks.

Text: "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. ii. 10.

7:45 p. m. Sermon by A. J. Eychaner. Topic: Why are we Christians?

Text: "We have forsaken all and followed thee. What shall we have therefore?" Mat. xix. 27.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 20.

10:00 a. m. Continuation of studies in Revelations.

12:00 m. Adjourn for dinner.

2:00 p. m. Completion of studies in Revelations.

3:00 p. m. Sermon by Samuel Wilson. Topic: The fountain of life.

Text: "Let him that is athirst come, and let him whosoever will partake of the fountain of life freely." Revelation xxii. 17.

7:00 p. m. Social meeting. Topic: Bible mathematics.

Texts: Subtraction. "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us."

Addition. "And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, etc. 2 Pet. i. 5.

Multiplication. "Any one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father or mother, or wife or children, or lands for my name's sake shall receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life." Mat. xix. 29.

7:45 p. m. Sermon by L. E. Conner. Topic: The overcomer's rich reward.

Texts: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life." Rev. ii. 7. "And he that overcometh and keepeth my works to the end, to him I will give power over the nations. Rev. ii. 26.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 21.

10:00 a. m. Business session of the Conference.

Order of business:

1. Reports of officers, committees, evangelists, churches and auxiliary societies.

2 Election of board of managers, president and vice president for the ensuing year.

3. New business.

4. Resolutions.

12:00 m. Adjourn for dinner.

2:00 p. m. Continuation of business session. Discussion led by Miss Lelia Whitehead, on "Work and mission of auxiliary societies."

Address on Sunday School work by Martin Aalukson.

3:00 p. m. Sermon by A. J. Eychaner. Topic: Our hope in Jesus.

Text: "But now hath Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept." 1st Cor. xv. 20.

6:00 p. m. Social meeting, led by Mrs. Mary Wilson. Topic: Laid up treasures.

Text: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal." Mat. iv. 19.

7:45 p. m. Sermon by Sam'l Wilson. Topic: The mustard seed kingdom.

Text: "The kingdom is like unto a grain of mustard seed," etc. Matthew xiii. 31.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 22.

9:30 a. m. Sunday School and Bible class. Topic for Bible class, "Who is the man of sin?" 2 Thes. ii.

10:30 a. m. Regular church service with sermon by L. E. Conner. Topic: "The Christian who shall never fall."

Text, "Let him that standeth take heed lest he fall."

12:30 p. m. Celebration of the Lord's Supper.

12:30 p. m. Adjourn for dinner.

2:30 p. m. Young Peoples' Society services.

3:30 p. m. Sermon by S. J. Lindsay, topic: Our Royal inheritance.

Text: "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Mat. xxv. 34.

7:00 p. m. Prayer and song service, followed by a sermon by A. J. Eychaner, topic: Why not be an heir?

Text: For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 27-29.

Farewells.

While this is a conference of the churches and the brothers and sisters in Christ scattered abroad through Illinois, an earnest invitation is extended to the brothers and sisters everywhere to attend and participate in the services and studies of the conference. It promises to be one of the most refreshing and instructive meetings we have held in the state. We hope for a large attendance.

The Conference Board, acting on the resolution adopted by the conference a year ago, have erected a building, with dining hall and sleeping apartments for all who come, so that during the continuance of the conference we shall be as one family.

Oregon is on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad. Several trains daily pass through the city each way. Those intending to come should write in advance to S. J. Lindsay, Oregon, notifying him that they will be present and provision will be made to meet them at the train and escort them to the place where the meeting is held.

J. W. WILSON, Pres.

LYMAN BOOTH, Sec.

I will be at Bosworth, Mo., Sept. 22 to 29 and hold meetings over two Sundays. At Pleasantown, Kan., Sept. 1 and continue to the 6th. All are invited to these meetings.

JOHN POORE.

For Illinois day Celebration at Buffalo Sept. 16th, tickets may be obtained Sept. 14th and 15th via the Nickel Plate road at one cent per mile. Return limit 1:00 A. M. train after midnight Sept. 22, 1901. Address nearest ticket agent of the Nickel Plate Road.—Sept. 14

Lowest Fares to Buffalo.

The lowest fares to Buffalo yet offered for the Pan-American exposition will go into effect on the Pennsylvania Lines Sunday, Sept. 8th. On that date and on September 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th an unusual opportunity will be presented for a cheap trip to Buffalo over this route. Two forms of tickets will be sold; one good returning fifteen days and a second having a twenty day return limit may be obtained on those days. For tickets and information about the through time and service over the Pennsylvania Lines to Buffalo apply to Ticket Agents.

The Nickel Plate Road offers low excursion rates to Denver, Colorado Springs, Glenwood Springs, Colo, Ogden and Salt Lake City, Utah and Hot Springs, S. D. Tickets on sale until Sept. 10th, good returning until Oct. 31, 1901. Write, wire, 'phone or call on nearest agent or, C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Sept. 10

Conference Notice.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus for the State of Illinois will be held in Oregon, beginning Wednesday evening Sept. 18, 1901, and hold over Sundy. A programme will appear later.

The building committee will have the new building finished in which sleeping rooms and dining hall will be provided. We wish as many to attend as possible, both those who live in the State and those out of it. We expect Bros. Conner, Eychaner and Samuel Wilson to be with and assist us. Those who have attended previous meetings know what a treat it is to listen to them and should try to be with us again and endeavor to bring others with them. Let all come and have a good time, for surely no better feast was ever spread than The Word.

JAS. W. WILSON, Pres.
L. BOOTH, Sec'y.

To brethren who attend the Illinois Conference at Oregon, Illinois, Sept. 18th. The Committee just informed me that the new Conference building is about completed and that the brethren should be informed that it will be necessary to bring with them a couple of blankets and a pillow. As many as can should bring or send a cot, as it is not thought advisable at this present time that ticks or bedding be put there to remain in the building. For further information concerning board, lodging, etc., address, J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Ill.

S. J. LANDSAY.

Fourteen noted writers were sent by The Cosmopolitan Magazine to the Pan-American Exposition to study the most interesting features with a view to preparing the most beautiful souvenir of any exposition ever made, from both a literary and artistic standpoint.

Under the direction of the editors of The Cosmopolitan, 105 photographs were prepared showing every variety of architecture and every phase of life, not neglecting the Midway, at the Pan-American. These are engraved and printed in a style never surpassed even in The Cosmopolitan's high standard of art.

The Cosmopolitan's Pan-American souvenir will be an even finer number than that of the Chicago Fair. To those who have visited the Exposition it will recall vividly in days to come every feature they have seen and those who are unable to go there will secure such a comprehensive view of its main attractions as will be well worthy of preservation.

It is doubtful if any book, selling at forty times the price of the magazine, will give any description of the Fair which will approach in interest and artistic value the September Cosmopolitan. The Cosmopolitan already has the largest clientele of intelligent, thoughtful readers reached by any periodical, daily, weekly or monthly, in the world, and it aims to enter a quarter of a million new homes this year.

The edition of the Pan-American Exposition number is absolutely limited to 500,000 copies.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

"Something every second" is the programme for Railroad Day at the Pan-American Exposition Saturday, September 14th. Low fares via Pennsylvania Lines.

Longer Time at Buffalo.

The return limit on ten day excursion tickets to Buffalo over the Akron Route for the Pan-American Exposition sold at one fare plus one dollar will be fifteen days, and the limit on fifteen day tickets sold at one and one-third fare will be twenty days. These extensions will be effective on and after August 20th. For information about specific fares, through time, etc., consult nearest ticket agent of the Pennsylvania Lines.—Sept. 14.

A novel parade illustrating methods of transportation for centuries will be one of the features of Railroad Day, Sept. 14th, at the Pan-American Exposition. Tickets to Buffalo over the Pennsylvania Lines for the occasion may be obtained at special fares. See Ticket Agent J. E. Hines.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 288 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Excursion trains to Lake Maxenckuckee via Vandalia Line on June 2nd and on each Sunday thereafter during June, July and August, the Vandalia will run a train to Lake Maxenckuckee and return. Fare from Plymouth only 25 cts for round trip. The time of these trains will be published later. C. W. Hartman, Agent.

Big Time at Buffalo.

The second Saturday in September—the 14th—will be Railroad Day at the Pan-American Exposition. It promises to be one of the most interesting days of the great show at Buffalo. Elaborate arrangements have been completed for an interesting and novel demonstration. The grand parade on the Exposition grounds that day will be extremely unique and interesting. It will illustrate the different methods of transportation in use since Adam and Eve moved out of the Garden of Eden. There will be many striking novelties in the way of special features. Hon. Chauncey Depew will be one of the distinguished orators. The night illuminations and fireworks will be on a magnificent scale. The day and night festivities will be highly enjoyable for Pan-American Exposition visitors. Special low fares in effect over the Pennsylvania Lines will permit every body to attend at small expense. For particulars about the cost of tickets, through time to Buffalo, etc., apply to nearest ticket Agent of the Pennsylvania Lines.

Excursion tickets to Valparaiso for the Porter County Fair will be sold Sept. 10th to 13th, inclusive, from Chicago, Plymouth and intermediate ticket stations on the Pennsylvania Lines. For particulars see local agents.

The day of days at the Pan-American Exposition will be Saturday, Sept. 14th, to be observed as Railroad Day. It will be a good time to take in the Exposition. A good route to take to Buffalo is the Pennsylvania, over which low fares are in effect. See the nearest Ticket Agent of the Pennsylvania Lines about the cost and comfort of the trip. J. E. Hines Ticket Agent.

Special low rate tickets to San Francisco, account General Convention Episcopal Church, will be sold via Pennsylvania Lines Sept. 18th to 26th, inclusive, also on Sept. 27th for trains reaching Chicago or St. Louis that date. For further information see Ticket Agents of Pennsylvania Lines.—Sept 28.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

Poetry.

Unfinished Music.

I sat alone at the organ,
At the close of a troubled day,
When the sunset's crimson embers
On the western altar lay.
I was weary with vain endeavor,
My heart was ill at ease,
And I sought to soothe my sadness
With the voice of the sweet toned keys.

My hands were weak and trembling,
My fingers all unskilled,
To render the grand old anthem
With which my soul was filled.
Through the long day's cares and worries,
I had dreamed so that glorious strain,
And I longed to hear the organ
Repeat it to me again.

It fell from my untaught fingers
Discordant and incomplete,
I knew not how to express it,
Or to make the discord sweet;
So I toiled with patient labor
Till the last bright gleam were gone,
And the evening's purple shadows
Were gathering one by one.

Then a Master stood beside me,
And touched the noisy keys,
And lo! the discord vanished
And melted in perfect peace.
I heard the great organ pealing
My tune that I could not play,
The strains of the glorious anthem
That had filled my soul all day.

Down through the dim cathedral
The tide of music swept,
And through the shadowy arches
The lingering echoes crept;
And I stood in the purple twilight
And heard my tune again,
Not my feeble, untaught rendering,
But the Master's perfect strain.

So I think, perchance, the Master,
At the close of life's weary day,
Will take from our trembling fingers
The tune that we cannot play;
He will hear through the jarring discords
The strain, although half expressed:
He will blend it in perfect measure,
And mold to it all the rest.

Flesh and Spirit.

A correspondent writing from Missouri, says: "Please give an exposition of 1 Pet. iv. 6, especially the clause "judged according to men in flesh, but live according to God in the Spirit."

So many people whose minds are befogged with ghosts, miss the real spirit of God's Word when they read the word "Spirit" in Holy Scripture. Many and diversified are the meanings of that word in Holy Writ; but among them all, we never find the "clerico-priestly dogma of immortal disembodied ghosts," the nearest approach we have to that is phantasma, which is nothing more real than a fantastical illusion of the mind. I think the Scripture under consideration has reference to men still physically alive in the flesh. The phrase "in the flesh" signifies the unchanged animal man. "In the Spirit" signifies the animal made spiritual, which is the preliminary step to the animal man receiving literally the spirit-nature, which is just as real and tangible as the animal man; it is by no means a mere phantasma.

Now, until the animal (fleshly) man does so change the flesh nature as to become so spiritually minded, that it becomes superior to the flesh nature, he can never rise higher than flesh, he will never be changed to the spirit-nature. A spiritual life is an essential fore-runner to the spirit-nature. Even an obedience to the one true faith, will not profit you anything if the spiritual life does not follow it. We can so far subdue the flesh, as to be said not to be in the flesh. See Rom. viii. 8, 9: "So then they that are in the flesh, cannot please God. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Verses 5, 6 and 7, show that the word "spirit" in this text, relates to a condition of mind. "For this cause was the gospel preached to them that are dead," (to sin in the flesh) yet alive in a physical sense.

As a preliminary step to "living according to God in the spirit," or to "walking after the spirit," a person must make a change. We must cease to be "Gentiles in the flesh," which is our natural condition. Eph. ii. 11, 12: Wherefore remember that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh," and while bearing that relationship, "at that time ye were without Christ," and as a consequence, "having no hope, and without God in the world." Hence, "Gentiles in the flesh" cannot "live according to God in the Spirit," the flesh must be "judged (or condemned) according to men in the flesh." Rom. viii. 3: "God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned (judged) sin in the flesh." Verse 13: "If ye live after the flesh ye shall die (because the flesh is judged), but if ye through the spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live," yes, "live according to God in the spirit." But previous to this change in the personal life of the individual, the "Gentile" relationship must cease. We find in Eph. ii. 11, 12, that all who are "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants," are "Gentiles in the flesh." The "Gentile relationship" is changed when we become "children of Abraham." By what means is this change effected? See Rom. iv. 16. "Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end that the promise (the covenants of promise) might be sure to all the seed: not only to that which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all," that is, of all who are "of the faith of Abraham." See verse 12: "Who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham." Abraham cannot be the father of those who know not that faith, such an one could not recognize his "steps" to "walk" in them. The final step which effects the change is found in Gal. iii. 27-29: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ, and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Such people are no longer "strangers to the covenants of promise." A "stranger" is a person who is not acquainted with them.

The flesh must be subdued, must be crucified. See 1 Pet. iv. 1: "Forasmuch then as Christ suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves with the same mind, for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin." Now, as Christ was physically crucified in the flesh, so also all those who "come to be in the flesh," must also be crucified with him in "mind." "Arm yourselves therefore with the same mind." See Gal. ii. 20: "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." The flesh having been crucified, it is supposed to be dead, which is evidenced by the fact that "Christ liveth in me." In such a person the life of Christ is discerned in his acts and daily walk in life.

Again, see Rom. vi. 6: "Knowing this that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin (flesh) might be destroyed." The flesh has been judged, condemned, crucified, and thus destroyed," and if this has been accomplished in us, the inclination to a sinful, fleshly life will not be predominant; but we will "live according to God in the Spirit." Those who have been "crucified" are supposed to be dead, and the dead must be buried and rise again before they can "live according to God in the Spirit."

See Rom. vi. 4, "Therefore we (having been crucified with Christ) are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so, we also should walk in newness of life." "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above." Col. ii. 1. In order to be "risen with Christ," we must of necessity first be "buried with him."

The Scriptures are very emphatic in insisting that all who walk according to God's order must accomplish in figure exactly what Christ accomplished in fact, must die, be buried and rise again. Until these things are accomplished in us, we are counted as being in the flesh. See Rom. viii. 8: "So they that are in the flesh (Gentiles in the flesh) cannot please God." Why not? Why simply for the reason that all such are "without Christ." Eph. ii. 11, 12. From this Scripture we learn that "strangers from the covenants of promise," are not only "Gentiles in the flesh," but are "without Christ," because, when "fulfilling the desires of the flesh, and of the mind; they were by nature the children of wrath, even as others." Eph. ii. 3. And not only were they "children of wrath," but they were also "alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them." Eph. iv. 18. "The life of God" can only be obtained by the knowledge of God's revealed plan, and by strictly complying with the conditions God imposes upon those who ardently desire "the life of God."

In order that the people may secure this precious blessing, we read (Heb. xiii. 12) "Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify (set apart) the people with his own blood suffered without the gate. So likewise let us go forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach." The cross was the ignominy and shame which he endured, (Heb. xii. 2) "enduring the cross, despising the shame." Are we willing to share in "bearing his reproach?" If so, then we must "go forth unto him without the camp," and be crucified. See Gal. v. 24: "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with its affections and lusts."

The object of Jesus suffering "without the gate," was that he might sanctify (set apart) the people "with his own blood." In Heb. x. 29, his blood is called "the blood of the covenant." The blood of a covenant is blood that is used in sealing covenants. Now, what covenant did the blood of Jesus seal? See Heb. xiii. 20: "The blood of the everlasting covenant." The everlasting covenant thus sealed, is the covenant made with Abraham, and that with David. That with David, is in fact, but the unfolding of the covenant made with Abraham and his Seed. The object of a seal affixed to any covenant is to confirm or make sure the covenant. See Rom. xv. 8: "Jesus Christ was the minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm (seal) the promises made unto the fathers," and this was done by "the (Heb. xiii. 20) blood of the everlasting covenant." It is only as people enter into "the everlasting covenant," that "the blood of the everlasting covenant sanctifies, sets apart, and seals the covenant they enter into.

"Wherefore be not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord is." Eph. v. 17. The flesh must be judged, condemned, and crucified, before any one can "live according to God in the Spirit." "The flesh with its affections and lusts," (Gal. v. 24) must be made subservient to the spiritual. "For he that hath suffered in the flesh (been crucified) hath ceased from sin; that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but the will of God." 1 Pet, v. 1, 2.

We must not forget that any amount of the crucifixion of the flesh, apart from entering into "the everlasting covenant," will not save us. "The blood of the everlasting covenant" (Heb. xiii. 20), can only be used as a seal to those who enter into that covenant.

When a person fully understands the relation the covenants of promise sustain to the plan of salvation he finds something that there is real satisfaction in, he feels that he has a real, solid foundation to rest upon. He is assured that neither his time or money is spent in vain. See Isa. lv. 3: "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price. Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness. Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David."

I praise God that he has given us something which there is real, solid satisfaction in. And I am assured that if my fellow covenantors were to bear testimony as to the satisfaction they have experienced since they entered into the "everlasting covenant" they would all speak the same thing.

Wont some of you be kind enough to testify for the benefit of those who have not entered into covenant relationship?

W. H. WILSON.

The Second Advent.

"And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts i. 9-11.

The second advent of Christ. Are you ready for that event?

If you think you are, try yourself by the following teaching of the coming One.

"You have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor, and hate thine enemy; but I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven; for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust; for if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same? And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? do not even the publicans so? Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." Matt. v. 43-48.

Here is a sentence which comes from the mouth of him, "Who shall judge the living and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." 2 Tim. iv. 1.

If we love not our enemies, we are to have no reward; we are no "better than the publicans," we are not "children of our Father which is in heaven;" we have not his characteristics, and have no right to expect that resurrection which constitutes one a child of God, who cannot die any more; solemn thought! Shall not all who profess to be anxious for the second coming of Christ, take heed to this standard of acceptance? Is it not possible that we may fail of a change to immortality, an undying state, for the lack of the love here set forth by the Author of life and immortality? Have we learned the lesson inculcated in the text? Have we seriously sought to understand and practice it? If not, how shall we appear in the presence of him who has so clearly set this lesson before us? Have we not neglected this wedding garment? If so, will not disappointment be our lot? Shall we not be speechless? Will not shame cover us, notwithstanding all our manifold expressions of desire for "the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ?" Ought we not to lay the subject of the text seriously to heart, and not rest till we are assured we have learned it? Can we feel Scripturally assured that we shall meet with acceptance in the day of Christ if we are not perfected in love as here taught by the Judge himself? What though we do love those who love us—our sect, our party, and do good to those who do good to us, if our love is short of the Judge's standard, what are we better than the publicans? Will our Judge alter his standard?

Let us now more minutely examine the standard itself. It is to "be perfect (in love) even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." This leads to the inquiry as to how perfect is his love?

He "loved the world;" John iii. 16; that is each and every individual of the human race. This love was not a mere profession. It was demonstrated in the highest and most self sacrificing manner by the "gift of his only begotten Son;" subjecting him to humiliation, shame, sorrow, pain and death, for the benefit of the race. This was not done for friends, but for enemies—sinners,—ungodly, Rom. v. 6, 10. Thus God commended his love toward us.

Love only can beget love; for it to do this it must be manifested, not by words only but by acts, which demonstrates the reality of its existence. Such is the love of God to men. It is impartial. He maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust. The gift of his Son was equally impartial. He gave himself a ransom for all—tasted death for every man. He is the propitiation for our sins: and not for us only, but also for the sins of the whole world. He is the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world. 1 Tim. ii. 6; Heb. ii. 9; 1 John ii. 2; St. John i. 29. Read and be convinced.

How little do men, even Christian men, comprehend the greatness of the love of God. Much of this ignorance is attributable to false conceptions and misrepresentations of the divine character and government. The evil tempers and selfish dispositions of unholy men, so ungovernable in themselves, have been supposed to exist in their Creator; and the thought that such was the case has been strengthened by some impressions found in the Bible, but more especially by the difficulty men have found in overcoming these evil dispositions in themselves. The desire for revenge for real or imaginary insults or injuries, is so strong in animal men that they conclude God is like themselves; and as unsanctified men became religious teachers they gradually incorporated the revengeful element into their ideas of the Creator, and thus began the apostacy from pure Christianity, ending in religious wars and persecutions, fancying they were doing God's service in direct opposition to the true spirit of the love of God to the world. By this means hostility to God himself has been promoted, and infidelity has spread not only of the church, but in the nominal church, till pure Christianity is driven into a corner, and those who still retain its true spirit "sigh and cry" in secret for all the abominations that be done in the name of God, representing him as anything but a desirable Ruler. The great fact that "God is love" is no longer realized, and otherwise good men talk and act as if he were the most savage tyrant and merciless Ruler that ever administered a government in the universe; so that the professedly Christian world seem to have retrograded to that Gentile state in which Paul said, the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils and not to God. 1 Cor. x. 20. They have created an imaginary God, actuated by like passions of their own; but one that has no relation to that God who is described in the text on which these comments are founded.

To restore men to the knowledge of "the only true God and Jesus Christ," who was sent into the world to redeem and deliver the race from sin and death, is the object in view in all I have to say, and thus to lead men to apply themselves to the great work of conformity to God in love. Only as the true knowledge of God's character and government is understood we ever hope to see men in earnest seeking conformity to the law of Christ in the text at the head of these remarks.

In view of this subject, is it not the duty of all professed Christians to cultivate a tolerant spirit towards such as hold sentiments adverse to their own, realizing that the best instructed know only in part, in the present state and age. Shall we not study more earnestly to understand the character of our Creator, and seek a more perfect knowledge of the principles of his government in relation to the creatures he has made or brought into being?

Love was the moving cause of creation; love in all departments of divine enactments for man's conduct, and in the administration of the laws under which man has been placed, so that corrupt as men may seem to be, love pleads the excuse of ignorance, even when there seems really no ground for excuse. See this exemplified in the case of one, whom to have seen was to see the Father, John xiv. 9.

He was in the agonies of death by the hands of those he came to bless. "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." Luke xxiii. 34. Hear that prayer of love, O ye who fear love may be so exalted as to extend to the ignorant and those who are out of the way, through unavoidible circumstances, Heb. v. 2, so that the compassion of this High Priest should extend to them beyond this present life! Go learn the agony of love for the ignorant from him who in the midst of sufferings, on which the sun refused to shine, poured out his love in strains which are enough to melt a rock; and see that he who preached the sermon in my text practiced what he preached.

Shall we, who profess to be followers of Christ, not walk in his steps? shall we shut up our bowels of compassion and love, and doctrinely shut up Jehovah's love for the world to our narrow ideas of a few short years to carry out the counsels of his love for the race to which the Son of God united himself, and for which he gave himself a ransom, which God is pledged to see is testified in due time to all men? Rather let us apply ourselves to learn the lesson of love Jesus has set us by precept and example. On the accomplishment of this work depends our heirship to the kingdom as kings and priests to God and the Lamb; and without we have no Scriptural grounds to expect to awake in the resurrection as children of God—the joint-heirs of Christ, and Bride of the Lamb.

This way of love is the strait and narrow way which few, alas, are willing to enter and walk in, and they strive to find an easier way to enter eternal life. But, saith Jesus:—"All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them, for this is the law and the prophets. Enter ye in at the strait gate." Matt. vii. 12, 13. This is the application of the law of love we have been considering. Few will accept it, others will suffer loss, yet many ultimately learn the lesson from the few; and thus the final result will be a great multitude which no man can number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues.....who have washed their robes; and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Rev. vii. 9-14.

This company cannot be the few, for they are not the little flock, but are clearly distinguished as a great multitude which no man could number.

Let us all try ourselves by this rule, and watch and be ready when Jesus comes to reward his servants, is my prayer.

JOHN FOOTE.

Conference Notice.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus for the State of Illinois will be held in Oregon, beginning Wednesday evening Sept. 18, 1901, and hold over Sunday. A programme will appear later.

The building committee will have the new building finished in which sleeping rooms and dining hall will be provided. We wish as many to attend as possible, both those who live in the State and those out of it. We expect Bros. Comer, Eychaner and Samuel Wilson to be with and assist us. Those who have attended previous meetings know what a treat it is to listen to them and should try to be with us again and endeavor to bring others with them. Let all come and have a good time, for surely no better feast was ever spread than The Word.

JAS. W. WILSON, Pres.
L. BOOTH, Sec'y.

To brethren who attend the Illinois Conference at Oregon, Illinois, Sept. 18th. The Committee just informed me that the new Conference building is about completed and that the brethren should be informed that it will be necessary to bring with them a couple of blankets and a pillow. As many as can should bring or send a cot, as it is not thought advisable at this present time that ticks or bedding be put there to remain in the building. For further information concerning board, lodging, etc., address, J. M. Glotfelty Lanark, Ill.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 18, 1901. NUMBER 35.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations, the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLEASE READ, AND THEN HEED.

WE wish to thank those who have responded to the letters we sent out some weeks ago, and to urge those who have not yet answered to do so at once. If there is some good reason for not sending now write and tell us of it, and say when you can remit. Don't neglect it any longer, for we need all—every last dollar—due us. We just must pay our obligations, and we can only do so when you pay yours. The responsibility lies with every one who owes us any money. Please attend to your part promptly.

ERRATUM—In 19th paragraph of Sermon on "Bread of Life," read "Proves without peradventure," instead of "proves peradventure."

BROTHER J. J. Cady of Corvallis, Oregon, is desirous of corresponding with any one who contemplates moving to the Pacific coast, and will gladly send such persons all the information he can relating to the section where he is located.

"IT is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth." Lam. iii. 26. It would be also good for over indulgent and careless parents to reflect that the opposite of this would read, —"it is bad for a man, if he bear not the yoke in his youth."

WE once read of an old lady, who, while maintaining that she was "open to conviction," added, that she would "like to see the person who could convince her." That old lady was the prototype of many in our day.

"A MAN seems all right to himself while he measures by conceit and self-love; but let him take God's straightedge, and lay it alongside of his faculties, and according to that test every one of them is crooked—not one of them is straight."

THE Church in Cleveland has had the pleasure of a visit from Bro. D. Robison of Martinsburg, O. We found him an earnest and able defender of the faith once delivered to the saints,—that is good enough for him, without any modern emmendations. Our intercourse was mutually profitable, and our parting would have been sorrowful but for the hope of meeting again to part no more,—ever with the Lord; may the glad day soon dawn!

"CAN two walk together, except they be agreed? Amos iii. 3. Hardly. Then how can any one walk with God, if he be not holy in all his conversation? We have as much cause to beware of him, and to obey his voice, and not provoke him who goes before us in this wilderness world, to guide us to his heavenly kingdom, as the Israelites had to beware of him who went before them to keep them in the way to Canaan.

President McKinley is Dead.

As the facilities of telegraph and telephone have already given to the whole civilized world the information conveyed in the above heading, it is only necessary to chronicle the date and a few incidents connected with the sad news.

On Sept. 6, 1901 as President McKinley was holding a reception at the Pan American exposition in Buffalo, N. Y., an anarchist named Leon Czolgosz while passing along in line to shake hands fired two shots both of which took effect. The wounded man was taken to the hospital, and later moved to the home of Mr. Milburn, where he was staying. The best of medical attention was given, and after the first day he seemed to improve, and all indications were bright for a speedy recovery; but on Friday Sept. 13, a week after the shooting, there came a turn for the worse, and he died at 2:50 A. M. Saturday, Sept. 14.

Mrs. McKinley is in very feeble health, and has little reserve strength to carry her through the trial she is called thus suddenly to bear.

Mr. Roosevelt was so confident early in the week that the President's recovery was certain, that he went on a hunting expedition in the Adirondacks, and consequently was not at the bedside of his chief. The death of Mr. McKinley makes Theodore Roosevelt now President of the United States. The nation is in an apparently settled condition, but the fact that the President was shot down at such a time, and that the detectives and police are arresting those who are called Anarchists, and hunting in every quarter for information, makes it evident that there is grave danger, and Mr. Roosevelt will have his resources taxed to the utmost to steer the country clear of the rocks that lie in the stream.

The assassin is in jail strongly guarded, and will of course pay the penalty for his crime. However, his death will not make the head of any government any safer, but more likely the reverse. The times in which we live are true to the prophetic Word regarding what will be in the last days of this dispensation. We can only say, Lord hasten the day when thy Son will come and take the reins of the governments of the world, and inaugurate the kingdom of God, that will fill the whole earth and bring peace and rest to the inhabitants thereof.

Since writing the foregoing Mr. Roosevelt has taken the oath of office as President, and has issued a proclamation requesting that all business be suspended and that throughout the country suitable memorial services be held on next Thursday, when the burial of Mr. McKinley will take place.

The "Church of God."

At times when talking with strangers we are asked, "What does your Church believe?" the questioner usually wanting to know how our Church differs from other denominations that may be mentioned. This inquiry is not confined to any one locality, but wherever we have brethren and sisters the question is up for answer. It has frequently occurred to very many that if we had some statement of our belief printed in short form, so as to enable us to hand it to any enquirer and say "This is what our church believes and teaches," it would be at least handy.

This is not a new subject. A number of years ago it was up before us, as it is today, and for this reason some of our wiser heads, in whom the brotherhood had reliance, brother S. A. Chaplin among the prominent ones, wrote out the statement that has since occupied the upper right-hand corner of this paper. When putting it there it was started "THE RESTITUTION advocates" etc., and so some have made bold to say that this was simply a statement of the beliefs of this paper, and in no way was the voice of the "Church of God."

While strictly speaking this statement of what is "advocated" by THE RESTITUTION is its own, and was never forced upon any local church organization or "Conference" of Churches, yet the same has been endorsed by a good number of churches, and by several Conferences, including the "National" Conference held several years ago at Philadelphia.

It is not the object of this writing to enter a plea for this paper, nor to lay down principles for the acceptance of others, but as the question as to what is believed, and therefore should be taught by the Church of God, has been brought up rather prominently of late, we write this with the view of unity in "faith" and "work." We therefore ask your careful consideration of the points covered in this brief "statement" at the head of our paper.

It starts out by saying we "advocate the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Simply, this means that we believe that finally, in God's own time, there will be a restitution, a restoring, a making good, a giving an equivalent, and this to be in such measure as has been "spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets." We submit to the reader then that this paper advocates just as "broad" restitution as God gave his prophets words to express. If that is not broad enough to suit we shall decline to go beyond the Word of God, and we warn you against stepping over what is written.

In this is implied the acknowledgement of God as Creator and Controller, and that the authenticity of his Word is undoubted by us. From following up the reading of our "statement" it will be found that concerning the nature of man we hold he is now sinful, mortal, fallen, and dying. To get out of this condition no other way is open but through Jesus Christ, who lived a sinless life while here among men, and who was subsequently taken to the Father's right hand in heaven, but who is to literally return to this earth, re-establish the "kingdom of God," raise to life those who have been faithful heirs and doers of His will, change their nature to immortality, incorruptibility, and deathlessness, and as joint-heirs with him they will exercise government over the nations. This means the literal resurrection of the righteous and their immortalization as saints.

As the nation of Israel is promised restoration after the coming again of our Lord Jesus Christ, and as their overthrow was a literal matter, so we believe the statements that their gathering of the tribes back to the Land of Palestine will be as literal as the scattering was.

As Jesus Christ was sinless, purebody, and the object being to have the earth finally peopled with the same sort of persons, with those who by faith and obedience, and godly life from characters that fit them for immortalization such as Jesus now has, we look forward to the time when there will be no more wickedness and sin. It being an impossibility to have such a condition so long as wicked and sinful men are on the earth, and as we reject the orthodox theory regarding "hell" where men live for eternity in misery, we state it is our belief that the Bible teaches the extinction, destruction, blotting out, of such persons who are persistently wicked.

We further gather that the writers of our heading believed the "gospel" —the good news concerning the coming of the time when the kingdom of God is to be established on the earth, with Jesus the Christ as King and the resurrected saints co-heirs with him.

It states further that as man is sinful by nature, he must of himself repent, turn from, cease to do wickedly. This step taken he must get into relationship with God, and Jesus Christ, be taken into the family of God, adopted, made one with this family. This can only be done legally, by observing the rules in such cases, the next step being a baptism, immersion, buried in water, and thus putting off the old man, and arising from the watery grave a "new man in Christ Jesus."

Following this another item is mentioned—"a holy life as essential for final salvation."

As a journal advocating any set of "principles" we submit to our readers that the ground covered is vast.

God—with all the attributes of his Being.

The Bible—its authorship, authenticity, etc.

Jesus Christ—The Son of God, our Savior, and all the attributes of his office and his life.

The kingdom of God—What was it, its condition now, and what it is to be.

Israel in the past, present and future.

Man—his nature, position, condition now and to be.

Man's hope,—resurrection from death, eternal life, etc.

Repentance from sin and wickedness.

Baptism—mode, significance,—office.

Reward for Righteousness.

Punishment for wickedness.

Duties of Christian life.

To this can be added the discussion of prophecy, its bearing on events that are in the past, and that are just up before us. Besides this the doings of the churches, ministers, letters of encouragement and cheer one to another, telling plans for work in new fields, etc.

Surely no fair-minded person will say that our paper is too "narrow," with such a range for the pen.

We have not asked for articles on the Seventh Day Sabbath question, because this paper has never "advocated" that, and for that matter, neither has the "Church of God" ever advocated it either. No one has been asked to supply articles on the question of Jesus the son of Joseph, the reason being that this paper has always advocated that he was the Son of God—and so has the "Church of God" so held. We have not opened up the paper to the question of how often —yearly, monthly or weekly—the communion shall be observed—because in the absence of a direct and conclusive statement, such discussion can only gender strife and confusion, to no good end. Besides the "Church of God" has never settled the point, either. This paper has never "advocated" Universalism, nor asked for articles on the subject, because it is not a "Universalist" paper, and the "Church of God" never said it was a "Universalist" Church either. Pollitics have been kept out for like reason —because this is not a political paper —and the "Church of God" is not a political party.

We said that no fair-minded person could accuse this paper of being "narrow," yet, because we have kept out these items we have been called bigoted, egotistical, set ourselves up as judge, arbitrary, throttling free speech, coward, afraid to investigate, and any number of like pleasant things have been said.

Now, brethren and sisters, we submit to you this—that "THE RESTITUTION advocates" the principles that are identical with what the "Church of God" advocates. On these fundamental truths it has and will stand, and ask the support of God's people who are settled and established in the faith of the gospel of the kingdom of God and the things concerning the name of Jesus the Christ.

Our columns are and have always been open for articles on the principles set forth at the head. Also practical articles that are calculated to point out our duty. We do not want articles that are made up of personal flings, and caustic, cutting expressions. If you question the correctness of a brother's position, or think he has not made it plain enough, and deem it your duty to write to correct him, just write on the subject, not against the brother. "Contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints" should be read close to the text "Let brotherly love continue." Always, at all times, write with the view of doing some one good, of building each other up in our most holy faith; never—far better never write, than take pen with the idea of tearing down—of contention and strife.

Our plea is for unity of faith and works. If you have any opinions formed on inferential testimony, let them be held as such only, and never put forward as the fundamental principles of our faith. Confessedly secondary and non-essential, they can well be left in the background, and not be introduced to make discord.

Jesus said to Peter "I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." Why not "apply" this prayer? Written in love to all.

Jewish News Items.

Immanuel's Witness says that Rabbi Bettleheim of Baltimore said: "I never mention the name of Jesus of Nazareth without uncovering my head."

It is stated that there are 75,000 Jews in Persia, and that they are openly listening to the story of Jesus, —one of their Rabbis allowing Dr. Bruce to preach in his synagogue."

A Yemenite Jew in Jerusalem asked the Rev. J. Jamal if he "could give him a book containing in detail the story of Jesus and his religion." He gave him the New Testament in Hebrew, which he at once began to read.

Rev. C. W. Flad, of Tunis, a missionary of the London Jews' society, proposes to translate the gospel of Luke and the Acts of the Apostles into Arabic Jargon, because so few North African Jews understand Hebrew.

The Jewish Rabbis are already discussing the question, "If Jewish nationality were renewed, would the temple be rebuilt? And if it were, would there be a resurrection therein of animal sacrifices, as in days of old and in ancient years."

In Medabi, on the east side of Jordan there was discovered by the Greeks in the ground adjacent to their monastery there, a Mosaic floor in which is wrought in Mosaic, a map of Palestine. From the Greek inscriptions and the style of work it is to be inferred that the work dates from the time of Justinian of the 6th century. This map will show much light upon the ancient geography and typography of Palestine, and might lead to new excavations of great interest.

The Popeleing uneasy at the extent of the Zionist movement, together with the announcement that the Sultan had made promises in their favor, has called the Apostolic Delegate, so called, at Constantinople, to Rome, to devise plans for opposing the Jewish plans, which are regarded with horror by good Catholics. In fact it interferes with his desire to collect money to redeem the land from the infidel. We hope this may fire the Jews with more zeal to carry out their prospect.

At a mass meeting of Jews at Milwaukee recently measures were taken to purchase Palestine,—and a committee of Representative Hebrews is to sail for England shortly to direct the raising of funds for that purpose. Why they oppose unite with the Zionists we do not know. At any rate it shows that Jews the world over are beginning to realize that they all look Zionward.

Although the "immigration of Jews to Palestine is restricted by the government, it seems that they are increasing in numbers, especially from Mahomedan countries, and they are bringing their money with them as the prophet has said they would. Judah's fig tree is certainly putting forth buds.

Conference Report.

Church of God in Conference assembled at Bur Oak, Ind., at 10:00 A. M. Sept. 6, 1901, and meeting was called to order by Pres. Elect D. T. Halstead.

The Secretary's report of last Conference meeting was read and on motion approved. The Secretary's report of Evangelist Fund was also read and received, the Treasurer's report being not yet handed in.

The roll of Churches was called and responded to by delegates. The hour set for preaching having arrived, the business session was adjourned to meet in the afternoon.

After a song Bro. D. T. Halstead spoke of the "Faith once delivered to the saints," which was followed by remarks from others present, after which adjournment was taken till 2:30 P. M.

The afternoon session was opened by a sermon by Bro. G. W. Smith, which occupied the time till 3:15 when the business session was called.

The committee on Revision of Constitution reported nothing done, as they thought it best to let same stand as it was.

The Committee on Ways and Means made no report, deciding to let the action of the last Conference stand.

A Committee of three, consisting of Bros. Austin, Wince and S. Osborne were appointed to nominate a solicitor of funds in place of Bro. Halstead who had resigned, and after some talk this committee was on motion raised to five by the addition of Sisters Leland and Mosier, and their duties enlarged to include nomination for all officers.

The report of the Treasurer was then read by the Secretary, and was referred together with the Secretary's report to the Auditing Committee. The Treasurer's report shows total receipts for the year $618.13 and expenses $288.32 leaving a balance on hand of $330.11.

The Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee asked regarding the collections that were asked to be taken by the churches and Sunday schools once each quarter, in order to have a fund that could be used by the Conference to pay incidental expenses, such as postage and stationary. It appeared that this matter had been neglected, and it was urged that it have attention this year. The Conference officers are obliged to do quite an amount of writing as they are not all in one place and must consult by correspondence, and there is no fund that can be drawn on to pay these expenses. It is hoped the brethren will see to this suggestion in the future. No other business coming up meeting adjourned. At the evening service Bro. F. L. Austin delivered the sermon to a good audience.

Saturday Sept. 7, at 9:30 A. M. a talk or "exhortation" by Bro. J. L. Wince was listened to, followed by a few remarks from Bro. Halstead.

At 10:30 the business meeting was again called, and the Secretary, Bro E. K. Barnhill, having had to return home, A. R. Underwood was appointed Sec. pro tem.

The Committee on nomination then reported, naming as President D. T. Halstead, 1 Vice Pres. A. R. Underwood, 2 Vice Pres. J. L. Wince, Sec. A. C. Roberts, Treas. T. O. Tuller, Solicitor of funds A. H. Zilmer, which report was received.

Bro. Roberts objected to his name as Secretary, as he had served 10 years, and was entitled to release. The name of Sister E. C. Railsback was proposed, and after substituting her name for Bro. Roberts on motion the above named officers were chosen for the coming year.

Bro. J. L. Wince moved the re-election of an Evangelical Board, which was carried, and on subsequent motion the old board was elected, and given the power to organize and chose its own chairman and secretary as best suited them.

The Auditing Committee reported having examined the accounts placed in their hands and found same correct. The seeming difference between Treasurer and Secretary arising from the fact that they started at different dates, caused the committee to suggest that the new officers start on even dates and so avoid this in the future.

The Committee on Literature then made report of work since last Conference which was accepted and approved.

On motion being passed the President re-appointed the same committees on Ways and Means, Literature, and Accounts as were chosen last year.

Certificates were given to the following named Brethren, J. F. Wagoner, A. H. Zilmer, J. L. Wince, F. L. Austin, R. C. Railsback, Geo. Smith, H. F. Corbill, D. E. Vanvactor, S. T. Brook, Clarence Corbaley, J. S. Hatch, and D. T. Halstead.

Meeting adjourned to 2:30 P. M. Roll call was made for a re-reading of the Secretary's report and changes so as to include the individual donations credited to C. C. Austin in the amount contributed by the Argos church. Business session adjourned and a sermon given by Bro. D. T. Halstead.

7:15 P. M. paper "Christ's Mission" Mrs. Georgie Osborne, and 7:45 sermon by Bro. A. H. Zilmer.

Sunday, Sept. 8, 9:30 A. M. Social meeting led by Bro. G. W. Smith, followed at 10:30 by sermon by Bro. F. L. Austin.

2:00 P. M. Sermon by Bro. D. T. Halstead, followed by Communion service conducted by Bro. J. L. Wince.

7:30 P. M. Social meeting led by Sister Leland, followed by a sermon by Bro. A. H. Zilmer.

The services throughout were well attended considering the busy time, and a good degree of interest was manifested. The people were kindly disposed toward the visiting brethren, and those in attendance can testify to the generous and hearty hospitality of the Bur Oak Church. The new building is finished and is a credit to the energy manifested by this little band of workers. It is to be dedicated in the near future, and we trust harmony and good will may prevail among the members, and love and charity rule in each heart, as they labor on toward the coming kingdom of God, and one prayer is that each may gain the prize at the end of the race.

Announcement.

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Michigan, will convene [D. V.] at Watson, Allegan Co., Michigan, Friday evening, Oct. 18th, 1901, and continue over the following Sunday.

Though few in number at this place [Watson] we hope and feel assured that we will have the hearty co-operation of all interested, and look forward to an interesting and profitable meeting.

Let none remain away through fear of being a burden to those that entertain the conference, as arrangements will be made to accommodate all that come, and all who come will receive a hearty welcome.

People coming from the north or south will change cars at Monticth for Fisk Station, where some one will be ready to convey them to the different homes.

Those coming from the north will tell the conductor to telegraph the conductor on the Cincinnatti and Northern Railroad, to hold the train for passengers to Fisk Station.

There will be one or more good speakers to preach the Word.

Let us remember the words of Paul, Heb. x. 25.

L. D. DECKER, Pres.
EMMA JACKMAN, Sec'y.

I will be at Bosworth, Mo., Sept. 22 to 29 and hold meetings over two Sundays. At Pleasantown, Kan., Sept. 1 and continue to the 6th. All are invited to these meetings.

JOHN FOORE.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Communicated.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

It has been a long time since you heard from me through the dear old paper. I love the faith and have been studying to find out what it is to have that faith. It is certainly the duty of mortals to believe God and to seek to understand his exceeding great and precious promises.

With this introduction we now prepare to carefully examine a few of the many promises which declare plainly a real, tangible, beautiful and eternal home of the saints of God.

After that Lot was separated from Abraham God made a covenant with him. "And the Lord said unto Abram, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward and southward, and eastward and westward; for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered. Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee." Gen. xiii. 14–17.

This promise and others of the same import, in Genesis, are usually read, if read at all, and passed over as of no significance to the Christian Church, as it is supposed to refer to Abram and his natural descendants occupying the land of Canaan in their mortal state. But all should learn to study and compare Scripture with Scripture, and when we do this we readily find that this promise is an important part of the foundation of the Christian hope of an eternal home. This may look strange to some, but please follow me along the path of light laid down in God's Word, and you can see a grand and glorious inheritance that most Christians never anticipated. Let us look further and the light will be clearer. "Fear not Abram, I am thy shield and thy exceeding great reward." Gen. xv. 1. Then Abram inquires of the Lord about his seed, for he had no heir, and could not understand the nature of the promise to thee and to thy seed. So the Lord told him that he should have a Son of his own flesh to be his heir and that his seed should be numberless as the stars, and he believed in the Lord, and he counted it to him for righteousness. And he said unto him, "I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit." Now see, it is to inherit it. And he said, "Lord God, whereby shall I know that I inherit it?" Abram wants assurance that this promise can and will be fulfilled. Then the Lord entered into solemn covenant with him to give him full assurance that he will fulfill the promise. So he instructed Abram to make an offering to the Lord, which he did. Now watch for the evidence that the Lord would give the seed and the land promised.

Abram watched his offering until the going down of the sun, then a deep sleep fell upon him, and lo, an horror of great darkness, a type of death that must intervene before he would inherit the land, also a smoking furnace and a burning lamp that passed between those pieces of meat on the altar. This was the symbol of God passing through the altar, to ratify the covenant that he had made with Abram in Gen. xvi. The Lord says, "And I will establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee, in their generations, for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, and I will be their God."

Up to this time Abram has no heir, but God had promised him a son and a numerous family and gave him the covenant of circumcision to distinguish them from all the families of the earth, and changed his name to Abraham, and Sarai's name to Sarah, and promised Abraham to give him a son of her when she was ninety years old, and he an hundred years old. This would be a miracle if it should occur but God had promised it and said, Sarah, thy wife, shall bear thee a son indeed, and thou shalt call his name Isaac, and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant and with his seed after him. Gen. xvii. 15–21.

This covenant was made according to [illegible] promise of things [illegible] have I sworn, saith the Lord, for because thou hast done this thing and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven and as the sand which is upon the sea shore. Thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies, and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed, because thou hast obeyed my voice." Gen. xxii. 15–18.

The former promise and covenant with Abraham include Christ as his Seed, of whom Isaac was the type produced by a miracle from parents past the age of generating children, hence, a figure of the resurrection of the dead, so Abraham believed, for when called to offer up Isaac he counted that God was able to raise him up even from the dead from whence also he received him in a figure when he was born of Sarah when she was past age. But this last promise quoted includes not only his victory over death—the gate of his enemies. This miraculous gift of a child from him as good as dead, and from Sarah when she was past age, together with the miraculous deliverance of Isaac, when he offered him in sacrifice confirming Abraham in the fact that God's covenant embraced the resurrection of the dead and that the land promised him for an everlasting possession was to be possessed in an immortal state. When Abraham was dead and Isaac was head of the family, the Lord said unto him, Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee and will bless thee; for unto thee and unto thy seed I will give all of these countries, and I will perform the oath which I swear unto Abraham thy Father, in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Gen. xxvi. 3.

In Gen. xxviii. 13, 14, this same promise is renewed to Jacob. The reader should keep in mind this is a faith covenant, and was counted to Abraham for righteousness. It includes all the elements of the new covenant as it includes Christ its Author, his victory over death and the gift of the earth for an everlasting possession and the resurrection of all the family to eternal life, to possess the land forever. See Psa. xxviii. God promises Christ the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession. This is the same possession. Some who have never searched the Scriptures as they should, think this a strange view of the Scriptures, and without investigation, say these promises were all fulfilled by the natural descendants of Abraham occupying the land of Canaan. But this cannot be true. The explanations of Paul in the New Testament are better. The covenant promises the land to Abraham personally and to his seed. It is to be without conditions and he was to have it for an everlasting possession. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were each personal heirs in this covenant; yet we are informed that they were strangers in it, and that when Sarah died Abraham did not own land enough to bury her in, so he bought a field of the sons of Heth and paid for a burying place, and we are told by the faithful martyr, Stephen, in his last sermon, which cost him his life while preaching to show the Jews that Jesus was the Christ, and as he refers to God's promise to Abraham, he says, "And he gave him (Abraham) none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on, yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.

Abraham died without possessing the land, Isaac and Jacob also died without possessing it. Let us hear what Paul says about it. We can believe him. "By faith Abraham when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed, and he went out not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob the heirs with him of the same promise; for he looked for a city which hath foundations whose Builder and Maker is God. Through faith also Sara herself received strength to conceive seed and he delivered of a child when she was past age because she judged him faithful who had promised; therefore, sprang there even of one and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable. These all died in faith not having [illegible] the promises [illegible] might have had opportunity to have returned, but now they desire a better, that is, an heavenly, wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God, for he has prepared for them a city.

By faith Abraham when he was tried offered up Isaac, and he that had received the promises offered up his only son, of whom it was said that in Isaac shall thy seed be called, accounting that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead from whence also he received him in a figure." Heb. xi. 7–19. That is, this family as numerous as the stars and as the sand is not the natural descendants of Abraham—the nation of Israel, which occupied for a time the land of Canaan, on condition of obedience to the law, is too clear to be claimed. These all died in faith. But few of natural Israel had faith. Of this family God is not ashamed, but he was ashamed of carnal Israel and banished them from the land of Canaan as he declared he would when they rebelled. See Gen. xv. 18, and Deut. xxviii. This was another covenant with another people, and it has had a wonderful fulfillment, but this covenant through faith embraced Christ as Abraham's seed, and the plan of redemption through his death and resurrection, and takes hold of the future and eternal home. Moses, the law-giver, so understood it for Paul tells us, "By faith Moses when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt, for he had respect unto the recompense of reward."

Thus, Moses must have seen that family covenant included Christ as a Savior and a Redeemer of the land from the curse, for an eternal home. These comments shed new light upon the covenant as they show how the family of the faithful understood it, but we have other New Testament truths on the same point.

Paul, to the Romans, while discussing the law of faith and what it secures to all who believe God, uses this promise to Abraham to show that all believing Gentiles are heirs with him and members of the household of faith and inheritors of the land, for we say that faith was accounted to Abraham for righteousness. How was it then reckoned, when he was in circumcision or in uncircumcision, not in circumcision but in uncircumcision, and he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had yet being circumcised that he might be the father of all them that believe though they be not circumcised (Gentiles) that righteousness might be imputed to them also and the fathers of circumcision to them who are not of the circumcision (Jew) only, but who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham which he had being yet uncircumcised, for the promise that he should be the heir of the world was not to Abraham or his seed through the law but through the righteousness of faith. This argument of Paul on this promise was to meet the claim of the Jews under the law who claimed to be the children of God and entitled to all the promises of God to Abraham, as their father, while they did not believe in Christ, the true Seed of Abraham in whom all the families of the earth should be blessed with the offers of salvation through faith, and Paul continues to teach; for if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void and the promise of none effect, because the law worketh wrath, for where there is no law there is no transgression, therefore it is of faith that it might be by grace to the end the promise (earth) might be sure to all the seed, not to that only which is of the law (Jews) but to that also which is of the faith, Abraham (Gentiles) who is the father of us all, who believe both Jews and Gentiles as it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations before him whom he believed, even God who quickened thee and calleth those things which be not as though they were.....therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness.

Now it was written for his sake alone, it was imputed to him, but for us also to whom it shall be imputed if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead, who was delivered for our offences and was raised again for our justification. But we [illegible] and to all believers through his Seed, —which is Christ, whom God raised from the dead for our justification and salvation. But we have yet another Scripture. "Know ye therefore, that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham, and the Scripture foreseeing that God would justify the heathen (Gentiles) through faith, preached the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed, so then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham, but that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God it is evident, for the just shall live by faith, and the law is not of faith but the man that doeth them shall live in them. Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us, that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ, that we might receive the promise of the spirit through faith. Brethren, I speak after the manner of men, though it be a man covenant yet if it be confirmed no man disannulleth or addeth thereto. Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made, he says not to seeds as of many but as of one, and to thy seed which is Christ. And this I say, that the covenant that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law which was four hundred and thirty years after cannot disannul that it should make the promise of none effect, for if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise, but God gave it to Abraham by promise, wherefore, then serveth the law. It was added because of transgressions till the Seed should come to whom the promise was made, and it was ordained by angels in the hand of a Mediator. Wherefore, the law was our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ that we might be justified by faith, but after that (the object of) faith is come we are now no longer under a schoolmaster for ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus, for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female for ye are all one in Christ Jesus, and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. Gal. iii. 1–29.

Here we are shown that the covenant with our father Abraham is a faith covenant through Isaac a child of promise, begotten in the dead womb of Sarah by Abraham who staggered not at the promise of God, and being not weak in the faith he considered not his own body now dead when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb. Rom. iv. 19–20.

There are many other Scriptures we could bring forth on this same subject, both out of the Old and New Testament, but as this article is longer than usual I will leave it for the consideration of our many readers.

Your Sister, in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

Programme

For the 4th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus, an association of Bible Christians, to be held at Oregon, Ill. beginning on Wednesday evening, Sep. 18, and continue over Sunday following.

All services will be opened with singing, prayer and the reading of Scripture.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 18.

7:45 p. m. Bible reading by James W. Wilson, Pres. of the Conference. Topic, The coming and mission of the Christ. Is the second advent near?

Text: "When shall these things be, and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world." Mat. xxiv. 3.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 19.

10 a. m. Formal opening of the Conference. Appointment of committee on programme and entertainment.

Following this the morning service will be devoted to a study of the book of the Revelation. Much ignorance prevails as to the meaning of the wonderful symbols of this the last and the greatest prophecy of the Bible. The committee on programme appointed by the Conference board has therefore thought it wise to devote a portion of the time of this conference to its study. The brief time will not permit of an exhaustive study, which would take months, but will suffice merely for an outline to be followed up by further home study.

sure word of prophecy whereunto you will do well to take heed, as unto a lamp shining in a dark place, until the day dawn." 2 Pet. i. 19.

A brief outline of the study:

1. Introduction. Can the Book be understood? Object and scope of the revelation. Is it a revelation of events yet wholly in the future, or of mighty world forces, political and ecclesiastical, as they affect Christian people and of the persecution and triumph of Christianity beginning immediately after the writing of the book and ending with the eternal ages. How shall we interpret symbols? The symbolic numbers 7, 144 and 144, etc. Lord's day.

2. The seven churches. Are they in their characteristics symbolic of seven periods in the history of the Church, or are they rather symbolic of the church universal in all ages of its existence? The characteristics outlined being prototypes of churches or individual Christians to be found at any period and designed as a mirror for self-examination, encouragement and warning. Are the promises and warnings prophetic of the career of the churches and of the cities in which they are located?

3. A peep into heaven. The four beasts (living creatures); of what are they symbolic? The 24 elders and the heavenly hosts. Seven spirits, 7 horns of the lamb. What is the lesson taught by this introduction to the opening of the seals? To whom is the promise made that they shall be kings and priests unto God and reign on the earth?

4. The openings of the seals. The white horse and its rider. What period does it symbolize? The red horse and its rider. The black horse and its rider. The dark horse and its rider. The souls under the altar. The great earthquake and triumph of Christianity. The seventh seal: what is embraced in it?

5. The seven trumpets. What is signified by the angel with the golden censer and his performances? The first trumpet: what does it signify? What is the meaning of the symbols: trumpet, hail, blood, fire, destruction of trees and grass, etc? Second, third and fourth trumpet.

Woe trumpets. First woe trumpet. Symbols, fallen star, key, bottomless pit, smoke from pit, the army of locusts and their peculiarities. Why forbidden to destroy trees or grass, or any green thing, the natural food of locusts? Seal of God in the forehead. The five months. The King Apollyon, etc.

Second woe trumpet. Four-bound angels. The Euphratean power. The hour, day, month and year. Preparation to slay third part of men. The number and character of the destroying army. The agent of destruction. Fire, smoke and brimstone. Of what are they symbolic?

The rest of men who failed to take warning and repent. Who are they?

The magnificent angel from heaven. His attitude. The book in his hand. The seven thunders. The oath of the angel. Eating of the little book and the bitterness that followed. Command to prophesy. What do all these signify?

The angel's measuring rod and the things measured. The forty and two months. The angel's two witnesses. Their attributes, powers, persecution, etc.

The seventh trumpet. The kingdom of God established. The resurrection and rewarding of the faithful.

It is doubtful if the time set apart for this study will suffice for work beyond this stage. If it should do so, the studies will be continued.

12:00 m. Adjournment for dinner.

2:00 p. m. Prompt reassembling of the Conference. All sessions will begin promptly at the time set.

Continuation of the study of Revelations.

3:00 p. m. Sermon by L. E. Conner. Topic: What Christianity has lost. A contrast between teachings held essential by the majority of the present day churches and the primitive Bible faith.

Text: "Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrines. Continue in them, for in so doing thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee." 1 Tim. iv. 16.

4:00 p. m. Recess.

7:00 p. m. Social meeting. Topic: What is it to be faithful? Ten minutes opening and five minutes talks.

Text: "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. ii. 10.

7:45 p. m. Sermon by A. J. Eychaner.

12:00 m. Adjourn for dinner.

2:00 p. m. Completion of studies in Revelations.

3:00 p. m. Sermon by Samuel Wilson. Topic: The fountain of life.

Text: "Let him that is athirst come, and let him whosoever will partake of the waters of life freely." Revelation xxii. 17; Psalm xxxvi. 9.

7:00 p. m. Social meeting. Topic: Bible mathematics.

Texts: Subtraction. "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us."

Addition. "And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, etc. 2 Pet. i. 5.

Multiplication. "Any one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father or mother, or wife or children, or lands for my name's sake shall receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life." Mat. xix. 20.

7:45 p. m. Sermon by L. E. Conner. Topic: The overcomer's rich reward.

Texts: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life." Rev. ii. 7. "And he that overcometh and keepeth my works to the end, to him I will give power over the nations. Rev. ii. 26.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 21.

10:00 a. m. Business session of the Conference.

Order of business:

1. Reports of officers, committees, evangelists, churches and auxiliary societies.

2. Election of board of managers, president and vice president for the ensuing year.

3. New business.

4. Resolutions.

12:00 m. Adjourn for dinner.

2:00 p. m. Continuation of business session. Discussion led by Miss Lelia Whitehead, on "Work and mission of auxiliary societies."

Address on Sunday School work by Martin Aslaksen.

3:00 p. m. Sermon by A. J. Eychaner. Topic: Our hope in Jesus.

Text: "But now hath Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept." 1st Cor. xv. 20.

6:00 p. m. Social meeting. Topic: Laid up treasures.

Text: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal." Mat. iv. 19.

7:45 p. m. Sermon by Sam'l Wilson, Topic: The mustard seed kingdom.

Text: "The kingdom is like unto a grain of mustard seed," etc. Matthew xiii. 31.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 22.

9:30 a. m. Sunday School and Bible class. Topic for Bible class, "Who is the man of sin?" 2 Thes. ii.

10:30 a. m. Regular church service with sermon by L. E. Conner. Topic: "The Christian who shall never fall."

Text, "Let him that standeth take heed lest he fall."

12:00 p. m. Celebration of the Lord's Supper.

12:30 p. m. Adjourn for dinner.

2:30 p. m. Young Peoples' Society services.

3:30 p. m. Sermon by S. J. Lindsay, topic: Our Royal inheritance.

Text: "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Mat. xxv. 34.

7:00 p. m. Prayer and song service, followed by a sermon by A. J. Eychaner, topic: Why not be an heir?

Text: For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 27-29.

Farewells.

While this is a conference of the churches and the brothers and sisters in Christ scattered abroad through Illinois, an earnest invitation is extended to the brothers and sisters everywhere to attend and participate in the services and studies of the conference. It promises to be one of the most refreshing and instructive meetings we have held in the state. We hope for a large attendance.

The Conference Board, acting on the resolution adopted by the conference a year ago, have erected a building, with dining hall and sleeping apartments for all who come, so that during the continuance of the conference we shall be as one family.

Oregon is on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad. Several trains daily pass through the city each way. The [illegible] should write [illegible]

Communicated.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

Is it well with you? or do the perplexities of life weigh too heavily upon you, almost overcoming you? Have you forgotten the Garden of Gethsemane, and its bowed form? Do you forget, "It is through much tribulation we enter the kingdom?" When we are almost entirely discouraged let us go to some home where poverty, sad faces, weary lives, overtaxed nerves, desperate, rigid lines tell the tale of every day life for them; they have never seen the "come unto me and live," no everlasting arms for them to lean upon, no hopes built high upon the rock Christ Jesus, bright with immortality. Look beyond, dear ones, up, up, above the Gethsemanies of life, beyond the hills of crosses, up where the light is, to him from whom a life will come that is free from toil, pain, hardships, death, to the resurrection morning. There are bright rays all along and a few weeks ago one threw its brightness across our path in the shape of a visit from our dear Brother and Sister O. R. L. Crozier, and Sunday morning though in very feeble health, he gave us in a few words a picture of the glorious future that sent a thrill through every heart; may his life be preserved to do more work in the way of truth. After their visit we went to South Bend and held a week of meetings in their hall, baptizing one into the all-saving name, Bro. Shuoke, a very intelligent, earnest brother. We could almost feel we were back in the little hall at Plymouth so many of the dear believers from there have moved into South Bend, and just as earnestly working for the cause of truth as when we first met them. We have promised to meet with them again in the near future. From here we went to Vicksburg, where the brethren are still clinging to the promises (save one, who became dissatisfied with the dear old gospel, and has bound a yoke upon his neck which none yet had been really able to bear, namely, the law). From here I was called by telephone to the bedside of my dying mother. And so the sunshine and the shadow chase each other in quick succession, and still we must fight on, for overhead is the faithful God, and in his own time the gift of life awaiting us, if true to the trust committed to us. I am glad to say the Elder is improving in health and hopes to be at work very soon now; calls are already coming from many. O for more workers. Yours doing what we can.

Obituary.

John R. Corbaley died August 23, 1901, at his residence near San-Miguel, California, after an illness of several weeks of congestion of the lungs. He was born Aug. 18, 1827, near Indianapolis, Ind.; aged 74 years and 5 days. He united with the Church of God at Old Union, Marion County, Indiana, when about twenty years of age and lived a consistent Christian life till death came. He was married twice; his first wife's maiden name was Eliza Pendergast. By this marriage he had two sons. His second wife's maiden name was Priscilla Smith, by whom there were four children, and there are 15 grand children. His wife and children all survive him. The widow and two children live in California. One is living in Illinois and the others in Iowa.

John commenced preaching in a few years after uniting with the church, and he continued presenting the gospel privately and publicly as he had opportunity until his health failed him.

His family and friends mourn his loss, but they sorrow not as others who have no hope. He fully believed that very soon the Lord will come and gather his jewels and give the reward of immortality and eternal life, and establish the kingdom of God. The writer of this is the only surviving member of our father's family of ten children. I now have passed my 81st natal day, and was the eldest of the family. May it be our happy lot to meet in the kingdom of God. May my brother's family look forward to a happy re-union in the future is my prayer. Separations must come in the present world. In hope,

Richard Corbaley.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 280 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Excursion trains to Lake Maxinckuckee via Vandalia Line on June 2nd and on each Sunday thereafter during June, July and August, the Vandalia will run a train to Lake Maxinckuckee and return. Fare from Plymouth only 25 cts for round trip. The time of these trains will be published later. C. W. Hartman, Agent.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution

ON TRIAL

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

Early Lessons, suitable for young or old, 80 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

Poetry.

God Knows.

O restless heart! Why murmur?
The sun is shining still,
Though clouds seem very near you,
God knows, it is his will.

He knows the weary heart ache,
The longing and unrest.
"Come unto me," he whispers,
"And lean upon my breast."

What most you wish and long for,
Might only bring you pain.
You cannot see the future,
God's purpose to explain.

So trust, faint heart, thy Master,
He doeth all things well.
He loveth more than heart can guess,
And more than tongue can tell.

"What Must I Do to Be Saved."

The above question is or ought to be the most important that man has ever propounded. And how careful ought we to be in seeking a truthful answer to the question. But if the answer is sought in the right direction the search will be richly rewarded: for the question has been answered by the highest authority, viz: that of the Author of the plan of salvation. Plain as the answer is that inspiration has given to this question it has been so obscured by the tradition of man that instead of answering it briefly as the inspired writers have done it becomes necessary to separate the truth from the human errors that have been so interwoven with the truth that the work of separation seems almost like a work of destruction, for when the truth is thus separated it bears scarcely a resemblance to the error in its popular form. To avoid confusion in considering this question it will be well to remark that salvation is a process that requires a beginning, a progress and a final completion. Those err who think our salvation is perfected when we shall have complied with the terms on our part. This will be readily seen by the statement that says "Now is our own salvation nearer than when we believed." Evidently not completed, as it then could not be "nearer" but actually present. Man's relation to salvation is shown by three acts expressed in Scriptural language by the words faith, repentance and baptism. The first is intellectual, the second is moral and the third a physical act. A person could have faith and yet the moral condition remain unchanged, for it is said "the devils believe and tremble" yet they remain morally unchanged. Repentance is the mighty moral solvent that changes man's nature from sin to righteousness, it affects man's moral relation to his Creator. Baptism works a legal change by placing the subject in a position where by a course of moral training he (continuing to walk in newness of life, or the new life) is legally entitled to all the benefits that belong to this new order of things. Faith then being the first thing required in God's plan of salvation it becomes necessary to know just what is meant by the word faith. A very simple and also a correct definition of faith is belief, and belief is defined to be "the assent of the mind to the truth of any given statement or proposition." But this still leaves the question "What must I believe?" vague and undefined.

Belief of any statement or proposition however absurd or even untrue would produce in the mind of the person accepting it, what has already been defined as faith. But would this "faith" be a proper basis to prompt the next act, repentance? Certainly not unless the things stated as a basis for faith were true. Just here it seems that the faith that is to be the basis of acceptable action toward God ought to be definitely stated. An error here would certainly be as disastrous in the general result as would the act of a surveyor who should start a line at the wrong point. The surveyor might run in the right direction, he might run the proper distance, yet a fatal error would be committed.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 25, 1901. NUMBER 36.

And now to all who love the truth let me implore you in God's name let us who "profess to survey the line of God's truth" start right. And in order that no mistake may be made let each make use of the "field notes" that have been officially given by the authority of Jesus Christ the "Great Surveyor."

Referring to the "field notes" we find this "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be condemned." To tell us that God has suspended the destiny of human beings upon their belief of (and subsequent action in relation to) a proposition that they cannot easily understand is to do violence to all the noble attributes of God that are recorded in the Bible. No! I cannot, I will not believe such an ungracious charge. The language quoted makes the "gospel" the basis of faith, and now shall we conclude that the gospel is some vague and indefinite statement susceptible of almost any meaning, or is it a perfectly definite proposition that can be expressed in simple language? Fortunately for the student of the Bible the words employed to instruct have a meaning, and the word gospel can be defined and then the definition can be substituted for the word and it will make clear the meaning. The word gospel literally means "good news." Then we are warranted in saying that the "good news" was to be proclaimed as the basis of faith. The necessity of definiteness becomes imperative, for there might be a great many statements each of which contained good news, but how shall we determine what particular statement is intended. That one particular statement is meant is shown by the definite article that is used to express it. This idea is thus expressed "this gospel (good news) of the kingdom of God," etc. The examination thus far has resulted in this; that good news of God's kingdom was to be proclaimed as a basis for faith, and now only one doubt could remain, and that is what is meant by the phrase "kingdom of God?" It may simplify this last inquiry by stating a simple Bible truth, viz: that the terms "kingdom of God," kingdom of heaven, kingdom of Israel, and kingdom of the Lord are all used to express the same idea, they all refer to God's divine government upon the earth whether in the past or the future. That God did set up a divine government on the earth called the kingdom of the Lord or the kingdom of Israel is clearly shown by the Scriptures. That this kingdom was overturned is also declared by the sure Word of God. And it is as plainly taught that this kingdom will be restored and given to Jesus Christ as it is taught it once was given to David. Hear the testimony of the angel of God. "And the Lord God shall give unto him (Christ) the throne of his father David and he (Christ) shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." One passage alone tells us where Christ was born and all Bible students accept it as true, while many passages tell us where he will reign, only one is here presented, for it is clear and to the point. Belief will accept it with this proof while unbelief would reject a hundred were they offered. Now we ask, is it possible that any other faith could be substituted for this? Thousands believe in a "sky kingdom," will it please God to make that faith a basis of action? Others are taught the church is the kingdom, is that faith that would please God? It is said that "without faith it is impossible to please him." Again we hear of the "reign of Christ in the heart." Can it be possible that these absurdities, though honestly believed, will save people?

Was this faith required at the beginning of the gospel dispensation? Here is a direct and positive proof that it was: "And when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ they were baptized, both men and women." Could there be "another gospel" preached that would save those who do not believe and obey the gospel that Paul preached? Here is Paul's answer to this very important question, "Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel than that which we have preached let him be accursed." I envy not the person who holds out inducements to others that they may hope for salvation that is not based on faith in and obedience to the gospel that Paul said was "the power (not "a power") of God unto salvation to every one that believeth it."

Can we be loyal to Christ my brethren, if we seek to lower or change the standard? Can we hope to hear the Master's approval "Well done, thou hast been faithful over a few things" unless we have taught as the sacred oracles speak? "He that hath my Word let him speak my Word faithfully."

Let us remember that it is our duty to preach the truth, God will take care of the consequences. We are not held responsible for those who disbelieve the truth when it is preached, but "preach the word" is a plainly written command. Following the command to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, or to believe the gospel, or to believe the things concerning the kingdom of God, or to believe the word of the Lord, these being equivalent terms, in regular order comes the command to repent. And if the simplicity of the Bible had been followed there would be no trouble in determining what we must do in order to repent. But here tradition has been busy at work obscuring the simple meaning of the word. By some it is made to mean a state of mental agony on account of sins that have been committed, or as sometimes said that "a Godly sorrow" for our sins is repentance. That a godly sorrow is connected with repentance is certainly Scriptural doctrine, but it is said that "Godly sorrow worketh repentance" which is a very different thing. To repent is to turn away from one course of action or conduct to another. Then for a sinner to repent is to turn from the evil of his way and walk in the way of truth, or in Scriptural words to "cease to do evil" and thus learn to do good by acting in obedience to the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus.

These two steps, faith and repentance, having been taken, the person is now Scripturally ready to be baptized. But through false teaching the simplicity of the gospel has been so perverted that even the act of baptism has been made to mean at least four different things. That this question can be definitely settled by the Scriptures will be readily seen when a little attention is paid to the subject. First let us start this investigation by a very plain Scriptural statement. "There is one baptism." Now the words used to describe this one baptism must determine what kind of an act it requires to constitute baptism. The frequent allusions to the baptisms recorded in the Scripture would of themselves leave a strong inference that the act was performed by dipping the candidates into the water. This aside from other considerations would be perhaps only strong inferential proof, and upon such proof a subject of such vast importance should never rest. As the word baptize is not a translated word, but simply transferred with slight alteration, its meaning as a word must be gathered from the original language from whence it has been taken.

Taking a standard Greek Lexicon the meaning will be readily found, it is given in these words, dip, plunge, bury, sink, overwhelm, and similar definitions. It is a very significant fact that no translator has ever dared to render the word by the words pour or sprinkle, yet both these words are claimed to express the act of baptism. Wherever the word has been translated the most convenient English word that can be found to express the original idea is the word dip. If the translators of the Bible had instead of transferring translated the word, there could be no more dispute as to the mode of baptism than exists as to the mode of punishment by the act of beheading. The word used in the translation would have forever settled the dispute. We than would read "John the dipper" where we now read "John the baptist," and then have no dispute about the meaning of "baptize."

Does the honest searcher after truth ask why was not the word translated? I suppose answer who translated the Scriptures, for they certainly had a reason for not translating a word of such vast importance in the plan of salvation.

Now if we add to the overwhelming testimony already given, the fact that baptism as an act is represented Scripturally by four symbols each of which demonstrates the mode, the proof will be sufficient to settle the question in the light of Holy Scriptures.

The four symbols that inspiration selected by which to illustrate the mode of baptism were no doubt employed in view of the shameful abuse of the holy ordinance of baptism, for they are simply unanswerable arguments as to the mode of baptism by immersion. The four symbols are, Burial, Planting, Birth, Resurrection. Burial by land or sea by all civilized nations is a very suitable symbol to represent the act of dipping or burying the candidate in water.

Planting beautifully symbolizes the act of covering the candidate by literally planting in the water. As the act of birth brings from concealment the subject of the birth so the candidate by a single act is brought forth from the watery confinement. And as Christ came forth from the rock hewn tomb with a change from mortal to immortal life so the person baptized comes forth from the watery tomb to walk in newness of life, the old man is put off, the new man is put on, thus a new life begins at the watery grave and continues while the subject runs with patience the race that terminates at death. Why then ask "is baptism a saving ordinance?" Why not with equal propriety ask "is repentance a saving ordinance?" or "is faith a saving ordinance?" A man on shore casts a rope to a drowning man, the drowning man seizes the rope and is drawn ashore and thus saved. Now what saved the man? was it the man on shore, or the rope that was thrown, or was it the act of taking hold of the rope? Were they not all necessary to accomplish the man's salvation? Then let us "keep the ordinances as they are delivered" by divine authority, and recognize the fact that one ordinance is just as binding as another, for no more importance is attached to one than to another in the plan of salvation.

J. F. WAGONER.

[The foregoing was written some years ago, but we reprint it here, as it is worthy of careful consideration just now, when so many are teaching that "it makes no difference what we believe so long as we are sincere."—ED.]

Genesis. Chap. 32.

1. And Jakoob departed on his own way; and looking up he saw God's camp pitched, and the angels of God met him.

2. And Jakoob said when he saw them, This is God's camp; and he called the name of that place "Camps."

3. And Jakoob sent messengers on before him into the land of Seeir into the province of Edoom, unto his brother Heesau;

4. And he commanded them saying, In this wise shall ye say unto my lord Heesau, In this wise saith thy servant (house servant) Jakoob I have been sojourning with Laban and spending time until now.

5. And cattle and asses and small flocks, and men-servants and maid-servants have become mine: and I have sent to tell the news to my lord Heesau, that thy servant may have found favor in thy sight.

6. And the messengers returned unto Jakoob saying, We went unto thy brother Heesau and lo, he is coming to meet thee and four hundred men with him.

7. And Jakoob was exceedingly afraid and perplexed, and he separated the laity with himself and the cattle and camels and small flocks into two camps.

8. And Jakoob said, If Heesau cometh against one camp and smiteth it, then will he the second in which to be saved.

9. And Jakoob said, O God of my father Habraam and God of my father Isaak, O Lord, thou who didst say unto me, Return into the land of thy origin and I will do thee good,

10. I should be satisfied with all the righteousness and truth which thou hast done unto thy servant; for with this my scepter (shepherd's crook in this case) I crossed this Jordan and just now I have become two camps.

11. Deliver me out of the hand of my brother out of the hand of Heesau, because I fear him lest he come and smite me and a mother over children.

12. But thou didst say, I will do thee good and dispose thy seed like the sand of the sea as it were, which will not have been numbered by reason of multitude.

13. And he lay down to sleep there that night, and he took votive gifts that he had brought and sent them to Heesau his brother.

14. Namely two hundred she-goats, twenty he-goats, two hundred sheep, twenty rams,

15. Nursing camels and thirty of their young, forty cattle and ten bulls, twenty asses and ten asses' colts.

16. And gave them to his servants each flock or herd by itself; and he said unto his servants: Go your way on before me and make an interval between flock and flock and herd and herd.

17. And he directed the first, saying, If Heesau my brother meeteth thee and asketh thee saying Whose art thou and where art thou going? And whose are these going on before thee?

18. Thou shalt say, Thy servant Jakoob's votive-gifts he hath sent to my lord Heesau, and lo, he is behind us.

19. And he directed the first and the second and the third and all those going their way on before after these flocks and herds saying, According to this word shall ye talk to Heesau when ye find him.

20. And ye shall say, Thy servant Jakoob is coming behind us. For he said I will make his face favorable with the votive gifts that are going on before him, and after that I will see his face; for perchance he will accept my face.

21. And the votive-gifts went their way on before his face, and he lay down to sleep that night in the camp.

22. And he arose that night and took his two wives and his two house-maids and his eleven children and crossed the ford of the Jabook.

23. And he took them and crossed the brook and took all his things across.

24. And Jakoob was left alone, and a man wrestled with him, until dawn.

25. And he saw that he was not prevailing against him, and he touched the broad part of his thigh, and the broad part of Jakoob's thigh became relaxed in his wrestling with him.

26. And he said, Send me away; for the dawn hath arisen; and he said I will not send thee away unless thou wilt bless me.

27. And he said unto him, What is thy name? And he said Jakoob.

28. And he said, Thy name shall no more be called Jakoob, but Israel shall be thy name, because thou hast become strong with God, and thou wilt be able with men.

29. And Jakoob asked and said, Tell me thy name; and he said, Why dost thou ask this, thou ask my name? And he blessed him there.

30. And Jakoob called the name of that place "A sight of God," for I saw God face to face, and my soul was saved.

31. And the sun arose for him, when he had passed by "Sight of God;" but he halted on his thigh.

32. For this reason sons of Israel may not eat the sinew that was weakened, that is on the broad part of the thigh unto this day, because he touched the sinew of the broad part of Jakoob's thigh, which became weak.

COMMENT.

In 2nd verse "host" R. V. should be "camp" and "Mahanaim" "camps" 3d verse "field" should be "province" —"Edoom" was something more than a field when it became a kingdom later, I think.

In the 7th verse "companies" should be "camps" again.

In the 13th verse R. V. "lodged" should be "lay down to sleep." There were no houses nor hotels there to lodge in.

In the 29th verse when Jakoob asks the angel's name why do you suppose he makes him the equivocal answer he does? My idea is that he ought to have known who this particular angel was as there is no doubt now that he was "the angel of the covenant" who appears to Moseses and David and Daniel later and who had figured in the covenant with Habraam earlier.

In the 30th verse R. V. "Peniel" should be "A sight of God."

To make confusion worse confounded we have "Penuel" in the 31st verse R. V. Of course it is the same place and same name as in the 30th verse, and should read "passed by" instead of "passed over." The 32nd verse R. V. says "the sinew of his hip." Now the sinew that was "touched" and "weakened" was the one on the inside of the thigh or "the broad part" of the thigh as it is here called and not the hip at all. The sinew of the hip would properly be on the outside of the thigh and running over the socket of the hip. The old version had his "hip out of joint" "Israel" "strong rout of mercy."

Treatment of the Fallen.

For twenty centuries this road from Jerusalem to Jericho has been infested by robbers, who lurk in the innumerable caverns, or behind the inaccessible cliffs that line the difficult way. In April, 1888, the writer was one of a party of ten or twelve Americans who passed over this same road in an opposite direction—from Jericho up to Jerusalem—and we were obliged to hire an armed escort to protect us from the robbers who before had despoiled a similar party.

The story is simplest told in Scripture language. The priest returning from official service, in which he had perhaps taught others a thousand times that God would have mercy rather than sacrifice, looks at his poor, wounded brother, unwilling to risk his own precious life, or even to soil with blood his sacred robes, crosses the road and passes on, leaving his bruised and bleeding countryman to his fate.

A Levite too, another temple official, draws near, perceives the critical condition of the sufferer, and with a cool and calculating selfishness, like the priest, crosses to the other side and passes on.

A despised, hated Samaritan appears. He might have had a thousand excuses for passing by where the priest and Levite had one; for was not the wounded man his hereditary enemy, who perhaps that very morning in the synagogue had invoked the curses of God upon this hated race, and would have passed him by as if he had been a dog? But hasees in the wounded man a brother who is in a desperate case and needs help, and at once he stops and gives it.

"Which of these three was neighbor to him that fell among the thieves?" Jesus asked. With true national instinct which would not allow him to utter the hated name of Samaritan, the lawyer answered, "He that showed mercy on him." "Go and do thou likewise," said Jesus. And so let us learn, as the heathen Pliny has well said: "It is not precepts we want so much as examples."—Prof. Fleet, in B. T.

I will be at Bosworth, Mo., Sept. 22 to 29 and hold meetings over two Sundays. At Pleasantown, Kan., Sept. 1 and continue to the 6th. All are invited to these meetings.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A Serious Loss.

We have met with quite a serious loss. Some weeks ago we sent out several hundred letters to persons who were owing us various sums of money. Who will help us find these letters that have been no doubt laid away and forgotten? If you did not get one, and you have not sent your renewal, don't wait for the letter to come, but send now and save us the expense of writing to you. It is a task we dislike very much anyway, and we will be rejoiced if no occasion existed for doing so. Brethren, this is a serious matter indeed. We can not meet our obligations unless you do yours. Think of this carefully and calmly, and act as your conscience and Christianity dictate. If each will do this we will have several hundreds of dollars within a weeks time. Will you help to make good our loss?

READER, do you believe in a death that never dies? If so, why do you not believe in "a life that never lives?" One is as sensible as the other."

"THE principle of all true giving is to give self to God. Then all other gifts will flow forth from the heart, and we shall not measure them out to the Giver of all."

"DIVINE knowledge is not like the light of the moon to sleep by, but as the light of the sun to work by. It is not a loiterer in the market place, but a laborer in the vineyard."

"IN the Bible we have the central line of the world's history. It is a book that from beginning to end contends for righteousness. And it is made glorious by the illuminating centrality of the Great Person, Jesus Christ."

DEBURGH says, "If there be one blessing more than another which the [illegible] as its Author, and for which the believer is taught that he is wholly indebted to redemption, it is Immortality."

"WHEN a religious man is so wrapped up in business, or study, or pleasure, that he will not allow himself time to think of or visit the suffering and the poor and the needy, but quiets his conscience by giving money contributions to some one that calls upon him in behalf of another, he utterly deceives himself if he concludes he is kind. He may give all his goods to feed the poor, but if he be without love he is nothing. The heart is only strengthened in compassionate love or in the love of what is great and good by being in actual, frequent, and meditative contact with the object that calls it forth."

LISTEN to Luther a moment;—he says: "The Word of God is not my word; I therefore cannot abandon it; but in all things short of that I am ready to be docile and obedient. You shall have my blood, my life, rather than a single word of retraction; for it is better to obey God rather than to obey man. It is no fault of mine that this matter creates confusion among you. I cannot prevent the Word of God becoming a stumbling-block to men. I know well that we must pay obedience to the civil magistrate, even though he be not a man after God's own heart, and I am quite ready to pay that obedience in any matter that does not shut out the Word of God."

WHAT seems like a big step toward Catholicism was taken at Milwaukee last week by the Wisconsin State Conference of the Protestant Episcopal Church. A memorial was passed by their body to be sent to the National Conference of this Church to be held in San Francisco soon, asking that the church name be changed to "The American Catholic Church." The memorial was adopted by a large majority, but some expressed themselves as fearful of the consequences. One clergyman "felt there was danger in multiplying branches of the Catholic Church," and another said "It was but voicing a movement under way for many years." It may not pass the National body, and so fall to the ground, but it is a straw, showing the "way the wind blows."

HENRY WARD BEECHER once said in a Sunday morning sermon:—"Since I have been trying to talk here this morning, young men have been thinking about where they spent last evening, and where they are going to spend tomorrow evening; and young ladies have been planning how to array themselves, and what will be the next article of apparel they are to purchase. They are not thinking of Jesus. How shall the Word of life reach them?"

DR. J. ADAM BEET says, "The doctrine of the immortality of the soul is a curious example of an opinion destitute of any foundation in the Bible, and in some measure (full measure *) contradicting it. It is derived only from Greek philosophy, yet held firmly by large numbers of educated and intelligent Christians and Christian teachers" (?) and writers on the mistaken supposition that it is taught in the Bible. Its prevalence proves how uncertain is the relation between popular religious opinion and the actual teaching of Christ and the evangelists and apostles."

Papers for the Poor.

This office receives many calls for papers from those who are not able to pay for them. It is sometimes from one part of the land, and again from another. They are not all in one locality. We know there are some who contend that there is no one so poor but he can at some time during the year pay the price of the paper. We are not here to argue that matter. It is enough for us to be told by an aged brother or sister who has perhaps taken the RESTITUTION for years, that income is cut off, not able to labor, dependent on charity of others, perhaps of unbelieving children. Cannot get out to meetings any more, all they have is the old Bible and the paper. Perhaps sickness of self, wife or children, makes it impossible to be out and earn money. Every cent that can be had will not suffice to pay doctor's bills, groceries, rent, fuel, clothing. In very many cases it is impossible to "make even" each year, let alone paying for any papers or books. Yet such are usually the ones who get the most out of our paper. They have time to read every word. Even the long articles are not skipped by these readers.

We have a fund called "Our Helping [illegible]" to supply these cases. Not a cent of this money is used for any other purpose. An account is kept separately from all else. We will say that at this time the fund is largely overdrawn, and has been for over a year.

Brethren, you who have a few dollars over actual need, and you who sometimes make a sacrifice, do you esteem this a worthy cause? This supplying the aged and infirm, the sick and distressed, the poor and needy—is it worth while considering? What answer do you give? It is not yours any more than mine, nor mine than yours. It seems to us that it is our duty to supply these calls. What do you think?

What is Jesus Now Doing?

"The visions which the apostle John saw, and the letters which Jesus instructed the apostles to write to the seven churches in Asia Minor, show us what Jesus is doing while seated at the right hand of the majesty in the heavens. He is now, as he has been for nearly 1900 years preparing his people for their glorious destiny, by watching over them, and acting as their Advocate with the Father (John ii. 1;) for he is the Mediator between GOD AND MAN."

And he is also developing a state of things among the nations of the earth which will prepare the way for his return. One of the scenes which John saw in Patmos, is to this effect: Three political signs were to be given; "I saw," says John, "three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of demons working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth, and the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that

GREAT DAY OF GOD

Almighty." The next event that follows these political signs is Christ's return,—for he adds,—"Behold I come as a thief." Without entering into the exposition of these signs, the nature of their work is seen to be to gather the kings of the earth to the battle of that great day of God Almighty. Only one great battle is spoken of as taking place at

THE COMING OF CHRIST.

Nearly all the prophets speak of that day; and to enable us to identify it as the one referred to, we are informed that immediately Christ comes as a thief, he gathers the kings together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue, "Armageddon." Rev. xvi 13–16.

2ndly, He is proving every candidate for immortality. He said to the church at Thyatira, "I am he which searcheth the reins and hearts; and I will give unto every one of you according to your works." Rev ii. 58. He represented himself as walking in the midst of the seven which he explained to be the seven churches. He has given the Rules for directing all the steps of his brethren, and he says to them,—"Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I have commanded you." Those who do not obey him he will treat as his enemies when he comes,—for he is "to be revealed from heaven with the angels of his power in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus the Christ, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the GLORY OF HIS POWER."

2 Thess. i. 7–9. The Spirit foretold a great falling away from the truth during Christ's absence, and would be so extensive that there would be but a few who would remain faithful, and those are termed "the remnant of the woman's seed, who keep the commandments of Jesus and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." The system of apostasy from the true faith has an outward semblance to the true Bride of Christ that vast numbers are deceived. It is only those who take and examine it for themselves that can see its deformity,—and in consequence of the great delusion it is styled the "Mystery of Iniquity." For a short time after Jesus left the earth, the cause of Truth prospered; many flocked to its standard, and everything looked fair for the extermination of sin in the earth. It is gloriously true that the Mighty One who is destined to destroy it in so far as his own person is concerned. He can suffer no more pain or death, but his affianced Bride has had a great deal to suffer, and their blood has been shed like water on account of their faith, and their testimony against sin in all its forms. It has been [illegible] GOD'S Word that, in its ordinary manifestations, it needed only to be seen in order to be known and avoided. Therefore it had to change its tactics in order to succeed.

THE WORD OF GOD

IS NOW A CONQUEROR

NO ENLIGHTENED PERSON

in the truth would be deceived by it in its true colors. It has to assume disguise in order to deceive the unwary, and seduce them from their allegiance to Christ. The seducers must so deceive the saints that when they have fallen away from the truth in its purity they will think they are still true to their Master. It was in that manner that iniquity entered and made sad havoc in the Church of God.

THE VOICE OF GOD

warned them of coming evil. He said, "Take heed, therefore unto yourselves, and all the flock over which the Holy Spirit hath made you overseers, to feed the church of the Lord, which he hath purchased with his own blood. For I know this, that after my departure shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. Therefore watch, and remember that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one, night and day with tears." Acts xx. 28–31. In 2 Thess. ii. 7, 8 the apostle says, "The mystery doth already work; till only the one restraining for the present shall be out of the way, and then the lawless one whom the Lord Jesus will consume with the breath of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his presence." The system of iniquity is also termed and the Spirit in John said, "Many false prophets are gone out into the world. Hereby know ye the Spirit of God; every spirit that confesseth that Jesus the Christ is come in the flesh is of God;.....and this is the spirit of anti-christ, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world," 1 John iv. 1–3. Again, "Little Children, it is the last time; and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there

"ANTI-CHRIST;"

MANY ANTI-CHRISTS."

1 John ii. 18. This shows what the antichrist is, viz., a system of error which undermines the doctrine of the Christ. Paul said, "That day (of the Lord) will not come except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God, (or as a God,) sitteth in

THE TEMPLE OF GOD,

showing himself that he is a God," (in his own estimation) 2 Thess. ii. 3, 4. This is the mystery of iniquity in its perfect form,—a deep-seated and wide-spreading system of sin. The enemy had come in like a flood, and Messiah, at God's right hand had lifted up a standard against it, and the few who had not defiled their garments rallied round it and were faithful until death. The history of the Papacy shows a picture which exactly meets the requirements of these predictions. The Head of the Church sits in the temple of God and shows himself to be a god upon the earth, and claims to be worshipped as such. And in the light of 2 Cor. vi. 16, which says, "Ye are the temple of

THE LIVING GOD,

and the Spirit of God dwelleth in you. If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." 1 Cor. iii. 16, 17; yes; in the light of these Scriptures we conclude that the Church of Rome is the temple he sits in. This temple has been defiled by the abomination of error in doctrine and corruption in practice. The temple of God will be reared upon an indestructible basis when the Great Architect returns to the earth; and we understand his chief work while away is for that house for God to dwell in. The apostle say: "And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the Chief Corner Stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord." Eph. ii. 20, 21. The apostasy is almost world-wide; but the messenger of the covenant shall suddenly come to his temple, and then the scene will change!

PREPARING THE STONES

"HE WILL DESTROY,"

(says Isa. xxv. 6,) in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the veil which is spread over all nations. And while he is viewing "abounding iniquity," he shows his compassionate heart even to those who have sunk so low in the Laodicean [illegible] addresses them in these heart-stirring words; "I counsel you to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayst be rich," Rev. iii. 18-21.

Obituary.

Hulett West was born in New York State, and in early childhood moved with his parents to Ontario, where he grew to manhood. He with his brothers moved to Lenawee Co. Mich. in an early day, living and dying in the same locality. Later in life he was united in marriage to Eliza Coffin, oldest child of Levi and Anna Chase. He learned and embraced the "good news" of the second coming of the Christ, and kindred truths, became obedient to the same, ever endeavoring to lead a consistent Christian life. He was honest, good and kind as was remarked by a neighbor the day of the burial. He fell asleep Sunday, Sept. 15th, after only a few hours illness with pneumonia. Elder Woodward spoke to a very large congregation from Psa. cxvi. 15. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." He leaves a wife and several step-children. Another good and faithful man has fallen. May the comfort of the resurrection hope sustain the aged widow in her loneliness, is the prayer of her friends.

B. W. WOODWARD.

Dear Restitution!

We wish to inform the household of faith of our joy, as a few of us assembled on the shore of the Pacific Ocean at Long Beach, Cal., and witnessed the burial in the liquid wave to rise to walk in newness of life, of Ethel Steffa, of Pomona, Cal. She is the eldest daughter of Bro. and Sister W. O. Steffa. Our prayer is that she may be an ornament to the cause she has identified herself with and that her beautiful Christian life may be such as shall win others to Christ. Bro. Willoughby of Los Angeles assisted her in putting on the sin covering name. We are glad that the gospel of Christ has not lost its power to save. Greatly desiring the return of our Lord to take his great power and reign I remain your Brother in Christ,

C. E. HATCH.

Signs of his Coming.

There are two extreme views respecting our attitude towards the return of our Lord from heaven. One class of persons press to extremes the parenthetic nature of this dispensation, and hold that Jesus might be expected to return "any moment" after the day he ascended to the right hand of the Father. They hold that there should not be "the distance of a sheet of tissue paper" between our hearts and the Lord's advent. This position is firmly held in the face of the facts that the promise of the Holy Spirit, the obligation and opportunity of being witnesses for Christ to the uttermost parts of the earth, the destruction of Jerusalem, the dispersion of the Jews amongst all nations, and "the apostasy" out of the midst of the church, were all clearly indicated by the Lord himself as events intervening between his ascension and his advent.

On the other hand, then, are those who have the whole church period so completely mapped out chronologically, nationally and ethically, that they affirm with unqualified confidence what events, what spiritual changes, and how many years must elapse before the Lord can be expected. To our mind there is a happy medium between these extremes, and in this medium alone the truth can be found. Much of the confusion grows out of preconceived notions, to which the Scriptures are made to bend, and much of it to a lack of careful observation of the environments of each statement respecting the advent. As examples of both errors indicated, we note the following: On the one side, the exhortations to watch, for in such an hour as we think not the Lord will come; it is not noticed that all of these sayings are in connection with conditions that immediately precede the advent. It is also not observed that the very connection in which "watch" is used compels us to put a meaning quite different from a constant peering into the heavens for some token that the rupture of the saints is at hand. So also with the statement that the "day of the Lord" will come as a thief. The very next verse gives the comfortable assurance that because we are not of the night but of the day, that event shall not come to us as a thief. But the men who are so sure about events preceding, and the time appointed for the advent, do not give due consideration to the fact that no man or angel has any knowledge of the day or the hour of that stupendous event.....

We all know, in spite of our theories, that Christendom, and the nations, and Israel had a course to run before the Lord would come back. We also know that prophetic light clearly indicates the course and crisis of these three circles of humanity. Knowing and believing this, we cannot help looking at the signs that indicate the nearness of the end. And it may also be added, that never before were there so many indications of the rapid approach of this blessed hope as are seen on every hand today. As we enter into these multiplying "signs" more fully, no doubt there will come a more scriptural conception of the advent, and an attitude of heart and mind more pleasing to the Lord than that which has been the outcome of theories to which many hearts have been wedded.—Watchword and Truth.

Seek Personal Revival.

It is very common to hear Christians express the opinion that the church needs a revival. This may be true enough. But what is of far greater moment is a recognition of the need of being personally revived. The very ones who greatly need reviving are often blindly unconscious of their need, but are quick to see that others need it. It is quite possible that they themselves need a renewal of heart much more than do those whom they suppose require it. If each professing Christian would make diligent search into his own heart, invoking the light of God to aid him in discovering its defects, and would then pray "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me," there would be no occasion of bemoaning the condition of the church generally.

Concernment for Zion should always commence with concernment for our own personal selves. When this is thoroughly done, then the whole church is alive to its highest privileges and is alertly sensitive to its many obligations. But the great difficulty with which pastors generally have to contend is to get each member of their church to make Christianity an intensely personal matter. This was always Christ's great anxiety. He aimed to make "the tree good"—not trees, but each single one—knowing that if one were good the others would not need to be concerned for it. See that you are in a revived state before troubling yourself about others, and the whole will be right.

Beauty in Spirit.

The people who win their way into the innermost recesses of others' hearts are not usually the most brilliant and gifted, but those who have sympathy, patience, self-forgetfulness, and that indefinable faculty of eliciting the better natures of others. Most of us know persons who have appealed to us in this way. We have many friends who are beautiful and gifted, but there is not one of them whose companionship we enjoy better than that of the plain-faced man or woman who never makes a witty or profound remark, but whose quality of human goodness makes up every other deficiency.

And if it came to the time of real stress, when we felt that we needed the support of real friendship, we should choose, above all, to go to this plain-faced man or woman, certain that we should find intelligent sympathy, a charitable construction of our position and difficulties, and a readiness to assist us beyond what we ought to take. If you could look into human hearts, you would be surprised at faces they enshrine there, because beauty of spirit more than beauty of face or form, and remarkable intellectual qualities are not to be compared with unaffected human goodness and sympathy.—The Watchman.

How to Read.

When a boy, I began to read very earnestly, but, at the foot of every page I read, I stopped and obliged myself to give an account of what I had read on that page. At first I had to read it three or four times before I got my mind fixed. But I compelled myself to comply with the plan, until now, after I have read a book through once, I can almost recite it from the beginning to the end. It is a very simple habit to form early in life, and is valuable as a means of making our reading serve the best purpose.—Macaulay.

Enjoy the blessings of this day, if God sends them, and the ills of it bear patiently and sweetly; for this day only is ours; we are dead to yesterday, and we are not yet born to tomorrow.

Love cannot be hid any more than light, and least of all when it shines forth in action, when you exercise yourselves in the labor of love, in beneficence of every kind.

"The Lord wants us to live in a high atmosphere."

Editor Restitution:

Our Annual meeting will be held at Slush, Mo., commencing on Saturday, October 19th and continue until the 25th. Bro. John Foore has promised to be with us again to conduct our meetings. That old soldier of the cross has been fighting thick and heavy battles for the Lord for about forty years; he has traveled thousands of miles through cold and heat, suffering the ills and privations of life almost without money or price (or at least it has been that way with us), preaching the kingdom of God to the poor. Brethren, is it not our duty, those of us who are not public speakers, to be a little more free with the contents of our pocket-books to send out such great men and women to proclaim the good news of the soon coming kingdom to the whole world? If so, why not? Now brothers and sisters, we invite you again to attend our meetings; you need not bring your tent-bedding or provision as we will furnish them. You may not fare as well as you do at home, but I'll assure you one thing, you will get the best we have, and we will be made happy with your presence. Now come and help us to have a good time. Yours in hope,

P. J. GRAHAM.

Editor Restitution:

I am still trying to serve my Master to the best of my ability, and by God's help to form such a character that he will accept of me when he comes. I often am lonely, but Christ said, "I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." I am looking forward to that grand and glorious time when we shall all be gathered in that beautiful home of the Christ, where sickness and sorrow, pain and death can never enter. As ever your sister in the one hope of the gospel.

Poetry.

Damascus.

I have dreamed of the wonderful city,
The Syrian's glory and pride,
Of her beautiful gardens of roses,
Of her palaces fair and wide;
Of the tall and feathery palm-trees,
Where the heat-mist flickers and gleams;
Of the vines, with their purple clusters,
O'erhanging the crystal streams—
The streams, from the snow-capped mountains
Which spring at the cedar's roots,
And bring to the thirsty valley
Its treasures of blossoms and fruits.

Damascus, the oldest of cities,
Through the centuries ever the same;
The past, with her story enwoven,
Comes at the thought of her name!
Here patriarchs and prophets have tarried,
To rest in the shade of her palms;
And kings, with their conquering legions,
Have shaken her walls with their arms.
They drank of the crystalline waters;
But the patriarchs and prophets are gone,
The kings and their armies have perished,—
Yet still the Abana flows on.

On the road that leads to Judea,
I took for that sacred place
Where the Syrian sun, at noon-day,
Was dimmed by the Lord Christ's face.
I see as the day declineth,
A blind man led through the gate,
And lodged in the house of Judas,
On the street that is still called Straight.
He came in sorrow and darkness,
Low bowing beneath the rod;
But forth from that hallowed chamber
He went, the anointed of God.

Damascus! Again shall the glory
Of Christ's face out-rival her sun,
And the East shall arise to exhale him,
As he looms on the lands he has won.
The blossoms his coming will nurture
Are sweeter than lily or rose;
And the desert will sing and rejoice,
When the fountain he opens o'erflows.
The night-boding Crescent shall vanish,
O'erwhelmed in his life-giving rays;
And Damascus, the oldest of cities,
Shall crown him with honor and praise.

Editor Restitution:

I have been asked by a number of the brethren to write on another phase of the subject which Bro. Wilson's able articles on the Phenomena of Spiritualism accounted for brings out. He has shown in those articles that in human beings, and for that matter in all living beings, there is a force variably called magnetism, vital electricity, etc. It is that life-giving force which is at the bottom of all the claims now being made by so many [illegible] that they have the apostolic power of working miracles. The following extract is from an article of mine in the Glasgow Messenger for September, one of a series of articles giving the evidence of how and by whom the gospel was perverted in the early centuries: "At the present time we have many bodies all in opposition to each other, all denouncing each other, and all claiming the power of working miracles. Foremost comes the Roman Catholic, then follows a vast multitude of denominations too numerous to mention, each one claiming to be specially sent of God because of their power of curing the sick. I am not aware of any of them of recent years who claim to be the successors of the apostles professing to raise the dead, yet this was one of the powers given to the apostles. The fact is, since at least the middle of the second century, these extraordinary powers of working miracles was withdrawn by God. There is not the slightest doubt that God hears and answers prayer; the prayers of God's servants, we can be sure, have been and will be answered in all ages when they are according to his will, but this is a very different thing from the gift that was given by God on the day of Pentecost to Cornelius and later direct to Paul, which gave them the power to speak with tongues they had never learned, to cure the sick and even to raise the dead. We have no evidence that any one after this received this power direct from God after those mentioned. Those who received it afterwards received it by the laying on of the hands of some one who had received it direct from God. Paul desired to go to Rome, which he did later, that he might confer some spiritual gift upon them. When all those who had received this special gift direct from God had died there was no one left who could impart it to others; and that power, that special miraculous power died out consequently some time in the second century. It was given only for special conditions in the beginning. I know that many strenuously claim at the present time that this power is still in existence, and has been with God's people in all ages; when any of them can substantiate their claim by speaking with tongues they have had no means of learning, or raising the dead, we will believe them. There are two natural God-given powers in man that have led to the cure often of very serious diseases in all ages, and it is the fact of these powers not being understood, which has led to the belief in miracles being worked by various denominations who are in bitter opposition to each other. One is the electric and brain conditions of the sufferer which can be powerfully stimulated for good, sometimes by self, but more generally by outside influences. The other is, that many persons have a powerful magnetic influence apart altogether from religion of any kind, but if a powerful religious influence is brought to bear at the same time along with it on the sufferer, so much greater will be the effect. I have cured very many persons for a great number of years by simply laying my hand upon them. The first person I ever saw doing this was Bro. George Dowie of Edinburgh about thirty-five years ago, and he made no claim to miraculous powers of any kind. These two factors were brought to bear with a wild fanaticism, on an ignorant and superstitious people in the third century; the result was that many miracles were claimed to have been worked by the desert saints whose lives and characters were not in harmony with the "Spirit of Christ." Christ gives us the touch-stone to try all such pretensions "by their fruit shall ye know them." The question which will settle all claims to special divine power so extensively and loudly made is, Do they believe the simple elements of the gospel as preached by Christ and his apostles without any adulteration of heathen philosophy? Are they who make the claim of having miraculous powers like Christ in humility of character and self-denial? If they claim like the Roman Catholics, the Mormons or Latter Day Saints, etc., to be the only true successors of the apostles let them manifest all the apostolic powers given to them by God and not stop at simply curing the sick, which can be done by many who lay no claim to religion of any kind. Some persons have this magnetic power in a much greater degree than others; the Spiritualists claim of course that this is spiritual manifestations. I have been told by Spiritualists who professed to be able to communicate with these dead men's ghosts that I have twelve spirits constantly attending me, but I have found that when I cure or relieve sufferers that I am much, very much more exhausted than in performing the same amount of physical work. I knew a most successful so-called healing medium who died from the result of an excessive use of this power and there are many such cases. The fact is there are electric currents flowing in every living being, the defect of this fluid, if we may so call it, causes debility or pain, and when one is full of vigor the system is well charged with it. God says, "If I withdraw my spirit and my breath all flesh die and return to the dust." These two powers, breath and electricity, if we may so call it, both belong to God. The atmosphere is full of them both, some have the power of taking them up better than others, their lack means debility.

Futurism.

I see in the programme for the Illinois Conference a topic for Bible class, "Who is the Man of Sin?" 2 Thes. ii. The thought struck me very forcibly, where are we drifting, as I supposed every intelligent Protestant Christian had this important question all settled. "Who is the man of sin," or in other words, "who is the anti-Christ?" I would not for a moment rest my faith on my own frail opinion; but the "Church of God" has the verdict of the best men that have ever lived, who gave their lives for defending a pure gospel, and brethren I ask you to listen patiently to historical facts, which should be convincing and help us to decide this very important question. Martin Luther on Dec. 10th, A. D. 1520 called together the professors and students in the town of Wittemberg, and publicly burned the Papal Bull. Along with it he burned the canon law, the decretals, the Clementines, and the extravagants of the popes. The die was cast. "Luther had declared war against the Roman pontiff." He had "boldly denominated him the man of sin, and exhorted all Christian princes to shake off his usurpations." In this "manner was the Reformation inaugurated." Melanchthon was clear in his convictions that Rome is the Babylon of the Apocalypse, and the Pope the man of sin. All the English reformers, including Latimer, Crannar, Ridley, Bradford, Jewell, all held the Pope of Rome to be the man of sin. And John Knox in Scotland, with wonderful power, hurled into the face of Rome the same words. He says, "I no more doubt but that it is the synagogue of Satan, and the head thereof, called the Pope, to be the man of sin of whom the Apostle speaketh, than that I doubt that Jesus Christ suffered by the procurement of the visible church of Jerusalem." Cranmer, Ridley, Latimer, and Bradford were burned for their testimony against the Papal anti-christ, just as Huss and Jerome and Cobham had been before. And we have the testimony of more modern reformers such as Calvin, who took the position that the Papacy or pope, was the man of sin, and Alexander Campbell who in discussion with the learned Roman bishop said, "It was as certain that the Pope was the man of sin, or the anti-christ as that two and two made four." Remember all the holy martyrs, or nearly all gave their lives for this belief, that the "pope is the man of sin."

Can we find the origin of the futurists theory. Let us see. Rome's reply to the reformation in the 16th century included an answer to the prophetic teachings of the reformers. Through the Jesuits Ribera and Bellarmine Rome put forth her futurist interpretation of prophecy. Ribera was a Jesuit priest of Salamanca. In 1585 he published a commentary on the Apocalypse, denying the application of the prophecies concerning antichrist to the existing Church of Rome. He was followed by Cardinal Bellarmine, a nephew of Pope Marcellus II., who was born in Tuscany in 1542, and died in Rome in 1621. Bellarmine was not only a man of great learning, but "the most powerful controversialist in defence of Popery that the Roman church ever produced." Clement VIII. used these remarkable words on his nomination: "We choose him because the church of God does not possess his equal in learning." Bellarmine like Ribera, advocated the futurist interpretation of prophecy. He taught that antichrist would be one particular man, that he would be a Jew, that he would be preceded by the re-appearance of the literal Enoch and Elias, that he would re-build the Jewish temple at Jerusalem, compel circumcision, abolish the Christian sacraments, abolish every other form of religion, would assume to be Christ, and would be received by the Jews as their Messiah, would pretend to be God, would make a literal image speak, would feign himself dead and rise again, and would conquer the whole world—Christian, Mahomedan, and heathen; and all this in the space of three and a half years. Heinsisted that the prophecies of Daniel, Paul and John, with reference to the antichrist, had no application whatever to the Papal power. I would appeal to every Protestant which line of interpretation are we ready to accept. "Those proud, cruel inquisitors, those inhuman monsters who mangled the bodies of holy men and women in their torture chambers, those sanctimonious murderers who stirred up all the might of Christendom, from century to century, against the gospel and against the faithful witnesses of Jesus; or those pure and persecuted saints, those faithful Waldenses and Wicliffites, those earnest Hussites and Lollards, those self-sacrificing Lutherans and Huguenots, those noble confessors, reformers, and martyrs? With one mind and mouth all these Protestants agreed in the substance of their protest. To them Rome was Babylon, and its proud head the "man of sin" or antichrist. Were they all mistaken, deluded, and their tyrannical oppressors and persecutors correct? Rivers were choked with the bodies of the slain, fans of thousands perished in cold dark dungeons, millions were burned at the stake, multitudes rawn asunder and tortured in every conceivable manner. What for? Because they believed and taught the Pope to the "man of sin" or antichrist.

Now in the face of all this suffering for nearly fifteen hundred years, should we try to shield the greatest criminals the world ever knew, shift the whole responsibility upon one infidel Jew? Are all those centuries of butchery and torture to be fulfilled in one person in the brief space of three and one-half years? Rivers of blood count nothing, the dungeon, the fagot, all the suffering counted nothing because they mis-applied Scripture. To reject the evidence of those martyrs is to strike at the bedrock of the reformation and Protestantism. If I should accept the futurist's views, I should fear the blood of all God's faithful witnesses, like the blood of good old Abel would cry from the ground against me at the day of judgment. Rome fills the prophecy in every particular. The idea of crowding the wholesale butchery of 1500 years into three and a half years is to my mind not to be thought of.

Yours for the truth.

The New Military Railways of Russia.

Railroads are constantly gaining importance for war purposes, and this is especially true in a country of such vast distances as Russia. As soon as Russia gained a firm foothold in central and eastern Asia, the necessity for a railroad to connect these distant domains with the motherland became evident and brought into being the trans-Caspian road, which has been extended to the Afghanistan and Chinese borders. The great Siberian road was commenced to reach Vladivostok, the most important strategic point in eastern Asia. Finally, Russia obtained from China permission to build the trans-Manchurian branch of the China road, which has been extended to Kwanton, Russia's latest acquisition, on the Liau-tung peninsula, and to Port Arthur and Talienwan, now the Russian town of Dalnyi.

The trans-Caspian road had originally a purely military object. The first expedition against the Teke-Turkomans proved the necessity for a railroad to transport the enormous train required; a road was built to carry supplies and material for the troops of the second expedition to the Akhal at Bami. It fulfilled its purpose completely, but Russia soon saw that, aside from the commercial advantages, it was absolutely essential for the maintenance of her supremacy in central Asia that the road be still further extended.

Steadily and surely Russia has advanced in central Asia, and has made herself mistress of Turkestan; in 1865 Tashkent fell, in 1868 Samarkand and the Chanat Kokan ceased to exist, in 1873 followed the expedition against China, in 1880 the Teke-Turkomans were overthrown, in 1884 Merv was absorbed, and in 1885 the Afghans were defeated, and the Russians established a military station at Kushk on the river of the same name, extending the railroad to that point. The last advance is especially important in case of war with England. Herat, the strategic key point of Afghanistan is only eighty miles from the Russian border. By the extension of the trans-Caspian road to Kushk, as well as through the central Asia roads, Russia can concentrate at this point all her troops in Turkestan, for an advance on Herat, and can bring re-enforcements from the Caucasus and European Russia. The railroads available for this purpose are the Batum or Poti, on the Black Sea; the line from Tiflis to Baku on the Caspian Sea and the line from Rostov, on the Sea of Azov, to Petrovsk. From Baku transports connect with Krasnovodsk; thence troops can be sent on over the central Asian route.

It was shown by actual trial in 1899 that the advance guard of an army corps can be shipped in eight days from Tiflis to the Afghanistan border. An army corps can be sent in about a month. England can hardly bring up an equal force in that time. As soon as the Orenburg-Tashkent road is completed there will be another means of transporting troops from the interior of Russia to central Asia. The Merv-Andishan or Marghilan route is directed against Chinese Turkestan.

The Central Asian road, also, has an important bearing on Russia's relations with Persia. Russia desires a route to the open sea, and is planning the construction of a railroad from Resht, near the southwest coast of the Caspian Sea, over Teheran to Bender-Abbas, a port on the Persian coast. Should this road ever be constructed, the central Asia road, passing as it does close to the Persian border, will be of even greater military significance than at present. The fact that it passes through Bokhara has already made the Ameer practically a vassal of Russia. By these railroads Russia's forces in Turkestan thus front on western China, on Afghanistan and on Persia.

Turning now to the trans-Siberian road, we see that it, too, has a high military value, especially in connection with the east China road and its branch to the south, which is also practically Russian. In the Far East the advance of Russia has been similar to her progress in central Asia; the strategic points of Vladivostok, Port Arthur and Talienwan are all connected by rail with the interior of Russia. During the troubles in China this road did important service, although it left much to be desired. The recent appropriation of eight and a half million rubles will, however, put it in condition for all that will be required of it. The sea route by way of Odessa to the Far East is easily impeded by an enemy at the Dardanelles, consequently this land route, when once in good condition, will become all the more important.

In Manchuria the road from Mukden to Tientsin and Pekin, with a branch from Kinkhan to Niuchwang, whereit strikes the road to Port Arthur, is of great importance. By these railroads, Russia encloses China on the west, north and east. The strategic importance of her net work of railroads is thus evident. The system enables her to concentrate troops from all parts of the empire either against China in the far east, or against Afghanistan and Persia on the south.—Evangelical Messenger.

Helpers or Hinderers.

Perhaps few of us think enough of our influence over others in the way of helping or hindering their life. Are those about us made braver, stronger and truer, by what we do and say and are? or are they made less courageous, less hopeful, less faithful to duty? None of us would purposely add to another's load, make his path rougher, or inject into the atmosphere he breathes any enervating element. This would be the work of an adversary, not that of a brother. The law of love must have sway in all our life. This teaches us to do good and not evil to all men. We understand this, and most of us are restrained from doing any positive hurt to others.

But there is a sphere of life in which we are not always as careful of our influence as we might be. It is as really a sin against another to discourage him, to make life harder for him, as it would be to wound him or put obstructions in his path. If you meet a friend in the morning and say something which has a depressing effect on him throughout the day, you have sinned against him. If even your silent influence over another is against Christlikeness in character and disposition and tends to chill ardor and enthusiasm, you are failing in your duty of love.

One of the most suggestive incidents in The Acts is the little story of Peter's shadow. The people laid their sick along the streets on which the apostle was to pass, that his shadow, as he walked by, might fall upon them and heal them. Our shadow should always have healing in it. It ought to be easier for people to do right, to live sweetly and purely for knowing us, and harder for them to do wrong and live selfishly. We cannot help affecting other lives in some way, either helpfully or hurtfully. We are either encouragers or discouragers. We either start hope or cheer, and inspire in those we meet better things, or we cast shadows of gloom over them and repress the good in them.

There are many ways in which life is made harder for others. Some people's conversation is all about themselves and not about the pleasant, cheerful things in their life, but the ills, the miseries, the disheartening things, real or imaginary. This is wretchedly selfish. It is also a grievous sin against one's neighbors. We have no right to unload our woes on any other in this promiscuous, thoughtless way. It is not in accord with the law of love which requires us to be helpful to others, never to add to their burdens.

"Talk happiness. The world is sad enough
Without your woes. No path is wholly rough;
Look for the places that are smooth and clear,
And speak of those to rest the weary ear
Of human discontent, and grief, and pain.

Talk health. The dreary, never-changing tale
Of mortal maladies is worn and stale,
You cannot charm, or interest, or please,
By harping on that minor chord, disease.
Say you are well, or all is well with you,
And God shall hear your words and make them true."

The Supreme Thing.

The supreme thing for us in this world is to be ready to tell the good news—not to be rich or famous, or happy, but to have something to say and be able to say it for Christ. He is working for us, not to make saints and angels, but first of all mouthpieces of the gospel. A miner goes down the shaft and brings up a rough and useless lump of iron. Other workmen come, toss it into the fire, pound it with hammers, draw it through rollers, refine and refine it again till it trembles to a touch, and is sensitive enough to yield to a breath and give expression to the thought of a Beethoven. Then is the ministry of the lump of iron complete. For the last results the silence and darkness of the unexplored vein in the mountain—the discipline of furnace, of anvils and rollers—all are ordained. And if God puts you into the fire and draws you through the rollers it is to make you vocally fit, not first to pitch the anthems of heaven, but to give utterance to the good news of earth; and to be ready for that, whether in pulpit, Sabbath School or family circle, I count it some what grander than to be ready to join the choir of glory and sing the song of Moses and the Lamb. —C. L. Thompson, D. D.

Feeling.

If many professing Christians depended upon Christ as much as they do upon their feelings, they would be better Christians. It is poor policy to be governed by the feelings; they cannot be trusted. The Christian life is not a matter of feeling, but of Christ, and an active faith in him. Nowhere in the Bible are we taught to do a thing because we "feel like it," and yet feeling seems to be the foundation of the religion of a vast multitude.

Christ never told his disciples, "Watch and pray," when you feel like it. Neither did he say, "Follow me," when you feel like it. The only feeling that entered into his teaching was—feeling for others. He lived to help them.

To be led by your feelings is to be led away from Christ. You must turn from them, as you would from other evils of the flesh. Some do not attend the church unless "they feel like it." Others do not testify unless they "feel like it." Some will not join in the singing unless they "feel like it." In fact, the one great excuse for failure in Christian duty is feeling, and it is a poor excuse.

Reader, does your service spring from feeling? If it does, it is certainly unreliable and worthless. Do you work for Christ continually, or only when you feel like it? Christianity is a life of service, and not a series of spasmodic sparts.

There is something to do all the time, regardless of feelings, and you are expected to do your share, be it waiting upon, waiting for, or working for God; and you cannot shirk your responsibility without injury to yourself. Carelessness leads from Christ to unrighteousness. Beware of it.—C. F. Ladd.

The Advent: Its Value.

Some one is sure to ask concerning the practical value of this doctrine and its relation to other truth. Why do we emphasize it? Because the Word of God emphasizes it. From the promise in Eden to the end of the Book, prophecy occupies a most important place. Enoch, according to Jude, was a prophet of the kingdom, and so became a sample of those who will be alive and ready to meet the Lord in the air. The tabernacle service was full of kingly types that can only have their fulfilment in the coming days. Many of the Psalms are but pictures of the judgment of the nations, or Christ's peaceful reign as king. All the prophetic books of the Old Testament are filled with graphic descriptions of events that are yet future. As for the New Testament, one verse in every twenty-five relates to the second coming of Jesus and accompanying events. If God has seen fit to include all this in his revelation to man, and if it "is profitable for doctrine—for instruction in righteousness—that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. iii. 16, 17), then we do well to search the Scriptures.

[illegible] importance to the Christian. It is called the "blessed hope," making its possession a spiritual blessing, because the believer sets his eyes on the glory of the future rather than on that of the present. It is a motive to watchfulness. "Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." Matt. xxiv. 42. The consciousness of the possibility of the Master's return at any time has kept many awake when the world's temptation was to spiritual slumber. It is a motive to faithfulness.

"Our Master has taken his journey
To a country that's far away,
And has left us the care of the vineyard
To work for him day by day."

Communicated.

To the Church of God that assembled in Conference at Burr Oak, Marshall Co., Ind.:

Although we live many miles apart, I desire to become one with you and ask for membership in your body. I believe in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the things concerning Jesus the Christ, that Jesus will come again, that all the righteous will be resurrected to eternal life, and be given an inheritance in the kingdom of God when it is established in answer to the prayer as taught by Matt. vi. 10. I have been in this faith for more than twenty years, and have taught it privately and publicly here in Arkansas for a number of years. I have worship in my house evening and morning when at home. I understand that a man to be a Christian must be a gentleman at home and abroad; must be reformed from all wickedness; must be completely converted and entirely consecrated to God and his Son Jesus Christ. Must walk in the commandments and statutes of his Maker, must in meek submission comply with his Master's will in the Spirit of our Savior, asking and begging for help daily, and Spirit life when Jesus comes the second time. This kind of devotion is required of all those anticipating and hoping for that position which Jesus has brought to light and is offering to the overcomer. I give as references R. C. Railsback, South Bend, Ind., Nathan Railsback, Hot Spring, Ark., Daniel Howard, Beaver Dam, Wis. May the Lord bless you all in your noble work for man. I am your brother in hope of life in the glorious age coming.

JAS. S. MUNCRIEF.

[The foregoing letter is sent by Bro. R. C. Railsback. It came too late to be presented to the Indiana Conference, and as the Brother is outside the State it could not come before them properly. Bro. Railsback is acquainted with Bro. Muncrief, and esteems him as a worthy Brother, and has sent him a personal letter of commendation. Bro. Railsback's recommendation ought to be good, and we trust the brethren will receive Bro. Muncrief kindly wherever he may visit them.—ED.]

Announcement.

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Michigan, will convene [D. V.] at Watson, Allegan Co., Michigan, Friday evening, Oct. 18th, 1901, and continue over the following Sunday.

Though few in number at this place [Watson] we hope and feel assured that we will have the hearty co-operation of all interested, and look forward to an interesting and profitable meeting.

Let none remain away through fear of being a burden to those that entertain the conference, as arrangements will be made to accommodate all that come, and all who come will receive a hearty welcome.

People coming from the north or south will change cars at Monfleth for Fisk Station, where some one will be ready to convey them to the different homes.

Those coming from the north will tell the conductor to telegraph the conductor on the Cincinnatti and Northern Railroad, to hold the train for passengers to Fisk Station.

There will be one or more good speakers to preach the Word.

Let us remember the words of Paul, Heb. x. 25.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and post-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 5 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 288 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Excursion trains to Lake Maxinckuckee via Vandalia Line on June 2nd and on each Sunday thereafter during June, July and August, the Vandalia will run a train to Lake Maxinckuckee and return. Fare from Plymouth only 25 cts for round trip. The time of these trains will be published later. C. W. Hartman, Agent.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hope of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature or who think they are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

ON TRIAL

Three Months for Twenty-five Cents.

WILL YOU TRY IT?

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and he dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money not known in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Quickly Come.

Oh quickly come, true Life of all;
For death is mighty all around:
On every home his shadows fall,
On every heart his mark is found.
Oh, quickly come, for grief and pain
Can never cloud thy glorious reign.

What is the Blessing? No 2.

Is it not clearly evident that our Adventist friends are somewhat superficial in their study of Holy Scripture when they fail to discover the differences which the sacred Book so specifically draws between the "saints" and the "nations"? or what it otherwise speaks of as the "first fruits" and the "harvest"?

The Bible speaks of each of them as having different functions to perform, and that they will also sustain very different relations toward each other. But our friends can see nothing but total extinction of being for every person among all the living nations of the earth who have not accepted Christ at his second advent. If they had been more thorough in their examinations of the Holy Oracles, they would have discovered that the work of salvation on this side of the second advent, is merely preparatory to the conversion of the world, when the Lord shall be the governor among the nations.

The "saints" will be constituted the royal priesthood after the order of Melchisedec, which priesthood is "after the power of an endless life." This priesthood would be a nullity if all who need the kindly ministrations of a priesthood are exterminated when Jesus, as the seed of Abraham shall come to reign. See 1 Pet. ii. 9: "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood," etc. Rev. i. 6: "Hath made us kings and priests unto our God." Rev. v. 10: "Hath made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." A "priest" must stand between God and the sinner who needs the intercession of a priest. If all sinners are destroyed when Jesus comes, of what service could the office of a priest be? And furthermore of what use would a king be, if all who need the restraint of law, and the governing power of a king, have all ceased to exist, when King Jesus, and those whom he will grant to sit with him on his throne (Rev. iii. 21) shall come to reign?

The distinction which must exist between the governor and the governed would cease to exist, if all were made immortal and equal at the coming of Jesus. But Jesus says, (Rev. ii. 26): "He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations." The equality is not shown here, that which is subject to power, could not be equal to that which exercises the power. This is further evident, as will be seen when we consider the 27th verse: "He shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter (if rebellious) shall they be broken to shivers." It would not be reasonable to expect immortal saints to break immortal saints to "shivers," which would be the case if the teachings of our Adventist friends were true.

Psa. lxxii. is descriptive of the time when the Lord "shall have dominion also from sea to sea, (verse 8) and from the river unto the ends of the earth." If all sinners are destroyed before he exercises the sceptre of universal empire, we would naturally suppose that all his enemies would have ceased to be with their extinction. Yet we find (verse 9) he has still some enemies left to subdue, the text reads as follows: "They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him; and his enemies shall lick the dust." It could not possibly be that he has got some rebellious immortal saints left, whom he will find it necessary to make them "lick the dust."

It is also evident from verse 4, that there will still be some of those heartless oppressors of the poor left. He will make a quick end of them. It

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 2, 1901. NUMBER 37.

Walter Tomlinson
35 Kinman St

The Restitution.

The Restitution advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

save, he "shall break in pieces the oppressor." That kind of language could not apply to immortal saints. None of that character will ever receive the blessing of an immortal life. Our Adventist friends teach manifest error when they assert that the work of redemption ceases at the second coming of Jesus. At that time he will have harvested only the "firstfruits." See Rev. xiv. 1, and here you will find a pen picture of Jesus having returned. He is standing upon Mount Zion, and clustered about him we see an hundred and forty-four thousand redeemed ones. Now verse 4, says these redeemed ones are only "the firstfruits unto God and the Lamb." Common sense and experience teaches us that the "firstfruits" of a crop is but a sample of the harvest yet to be reaped.

The object of the preaching of the Word of the truth of the gospel on this side of the second advent, is for the sole purpose of selecting the "firstfruits," which are seen with Jesus on Mount Zion, when he comes to reign. See James i. 18: "Of his own will begat he us with the Word of truth, (for what purpose?) that we should be a kind of firstfruits of his creatures." It requires nothing but the simplest common sense and reason to discern that the "firstfruits of his creatures," could not be the completed harvest of "his creatures."

How would our friends harmonize declarations of Scripture in some places that say only a "few" are saved, and yet in others they amount to "a great multitude which no man could number," with their teaching that the work of redemption ceases with the "few"—the "firstfruits," that are seen with Jesus upon Mount Zion, when he comes to reign? The declarations that only a "few" are saved, are found in Matt. vii. 14; Luke xiii. 23: "Narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be which find it." "Lord, are there few that be saved? And he said unto them, strive to enter in at the strait gate; (the covenants of promise which relate to the commonwealth of Israel) for many (a large number) I say unto you will seek to enter in and shall not be able." Why not "able?" Because they do not know the "narrow way" along the "covenants of promise," or in other words "the gospel preached unto Abraham." Our Adventist friends do not know this because they refuse to believe that Jesus will "restore again the kingdom unto Israel," (Acts i. 6), and say that Jesus will never "reign over the (literal) house of Jacob (Lu. i. 32, 33) forever," they refuse to believe the message through Ezek. (xxi. 25, 26, 27), to the last "wicked prince of Israel," concerning the kingdom of Israel. We read: "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: (the kingdom of Israel) and it (the aforesaid kingdom) shall be no more until he come whose right it is; (even him who was born, King of the Jews) and I will give it (the kingdom of Israel to) him." They stumble over this "narrow way," and though they may "seek to enter in" they will "not be able." This is the way the "firstfruits" the "few" travel, and at the end of which way they find the life everlasting.

In the Hebrews we read that the law was "a shadow of good things to come." Among those types we have "the feast of Pentecost," and "the feast of tabernacles." The feast of pentecost was the feast of the firstfruits, which came before the feast of tabernacles—the harvest feast. The feast of pentecost doubtless foreshadowed the dispensation of the Spirit. See Acts ii. 1-18: "When the day of Pentecost was was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place," etc. "And they were filled with the Holy Spirit," etc. Then was inaugurated our pentecost for bringing in the firstfruits. After this will follow that which the feast of tabernacles foreshadowed—the harvest. See Rev. vii. 9: "After this I beheld, and lo, a great multitude (the harvest) which no man could number (a bountiful harvest) of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands, and cried with a loud voice, saying salvation to our God, which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb." These feasts signify nothing to our Adventist friends.

Both these antitypical feasts come before us in Acts xv. 14-17: "Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name." (This is the pentecost or firstfruit, feast.) "After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up: that the residue (remainder) of men might seek after the Lord." This is the feast of tabernacles, or the harvest.

The types and shadows teach very important lessons indeed. The Old Testament is the base of all essential gospel truth. The matter of firstfruits and harvest are ever distinct in both the Old and New. The beginning of the firstfruits is Christ. See 1 Cor. xv. 20. "But now has Christ been raised, and become the firstfruit of those having fallen asleep." (Diaglott) See Col. i. 15, 18, quoted from Diaglott: "He is the likeness of the invisible God—the firstborn of all creation." "Who is the beginning the firstborn from the dead, (why first?) that he might become pre-eminent among all," —the firstfruits. Rom. viii. 29: "Firstborn among many brethren." These "many brethren" constitute the assembly ecclesia or congregation of firstborns or firstfruits. See Heb. xii. 22, 23: "But you have approached to Zion, (Rev. xiv. 1) a mountain and a city of the living God—the heavenly Jerusalem; and to myriads of angels, —a full assembly, and to a congregation of firstborns, having been enrolled in the heavens."

This "congregation of firstborns," seen on the mountain and city of Zion, is the same congregation seen on Mount Zion, in Rev. xiv. 1-4: "And I saw, and behold the Lamb, standing on the Mount Zion. * * * "These are those who follow the Lamb wherever he goes. These were redeemed from among men (a selection) a firstfruit to God and to the Lamb." The "saints," "firstborns," or "firstfruits," alone are seen on Mount Zion, with the Lord, when his feet shall touch that sacred spot. See Zech. xiv. 1-5: "His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives which is before Jerusalem on the east." * * * "And the Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with thee."

Up to this time, the selection of the "congregation of firstborns" is as far as the work of redemption has progressed, and any one who is conscientious, and honest, in handling God's Word must admit this. Now, this being the case, the harvest must be reaped after the second advent. This order is shown in Rev. xiv. Verses 1-5, gives the account of the redemption of the "firstfruit." After this is completed, verse 6, announces the world-wide proclamation of the gospel for the ingathering of the harvest: "I saw an angel flying in mid-heaven having aionion glad tidings to announce to those who dwell on the earth, even to every nation, and tribe, and language and people."

Whatever "the aionian glad tidings" may be, we must not forget that the "congregation of firstborns" are set apart by the "blood of the everlasting covenant," and that the "everlasting covenant," is the "gospel preached unto Abraham," called in Eph. ii. 11, 12, "the covenants of promise," and that the mission of Jesus was to confirm those promises, in his capacity as the minister of circumcision. See Rom. xv. 8: "Jesus Christ was the minister of circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm (or seal) the promises made unto the fathers," even Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and further extended to David, who reigned over "the commonwealth of Israel."

Reader, have you an interest in these covenants of promise? Peter says (2 Pet. i. 4): "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, (why so great and precious? because) by these (promises) ye might be partakers of the divine nature." It is no use of any one deceiving him or herself, for it is only along the line of these promises that you can obtain the "divine nature," and stand with the Lamb upon Mount Zion as a member of the "congregation of firstborns."

Since I have learned these grand truths, and entered into the bonds of the covenant, I have a real solid satisfaction, that I would not exchange for the wealth of the world. I would like to see the testimonies along this line in THE RESTITUTION, not only from able writers, but also from those who write short letters in THE RESTITUTION. Tell us how precious and satisfying they are to you personally. Your little testimony may perhaps lead some one else to enter into covenant relationship. I believe in short, earnest testimonies, I know they do good. I request this from every one who reads these words, and do it at once. I know the publisher could not print them all at once, but he will put them in succeeding numbers.

Russia's Designs.

A correspondent under the name of "Ex-Attache" writing to the Chicago Tribune has the following to say concerning the late Franco-Turkish rupture and the design of the recent visit of the Czar to France. Reports are current that a compact has been made by Kaiser and Czar looking to the maintaining of peace in Europe for a period of ten years. That neither will voluntarily engage in war for that time. Of course either might be forced into a war. Besides each one is known to have a sponge ready to wipe out any part that may not be convenient. The article says:—

However much the political testament of Peter the Great may be denounced as mythical by students of history there is no doubt that the directions which it contains constitute the keynote of the national policy of Russia and the foundation as well as the inspiration of the patriotic aspirations of the vast majority of the subjects of the Czar. Coupled with the recommendations to extend the Muscovite Empire in the direction of Germany and of India there is the command to keep Constantinople in view as the chief object of Russian aims, since its possession would give to the great White Czar the mastery of the world.

The first Napoleon professed the same ideas about Stamboul, and while we may hesitate to believe that the acquisition of the Turkish capital and of the control of the entrance to the Black Sea will endow Nicholas II. with the universal supremacy predicted by Napoleon and Peter the Great, yet we must face the fact that it is an article of absolute faith and obstinate conviction to the entire Slav race.

It is this traditional dogma, which has become almost a matter of religious principle in Russia, that has been the cause of each of the latter's wars with Turkey—wars which have been forced upon Czar and government by a popular sentiment, which, despite the much-vaunted autocracy of the crown, is so strong as to be practically irresistible. Every one of these conflicts with Turkey have been inaugurated by Russia on the most frivolous pretexts, and in each instance there has been evidence to show that the inauguration of hostilities was forced upon the government at St. Petersburg against its wishes and without due preparation.

These wars have succeeded one another at intervals from twenty to twenty-five years throughout the past century. In 1806 the non-execution of the treaty of Jassy, concluded in 1792, was put forward as a reason for carrying Muscovite fire and sword into the Ottoman Empire. In 1838 the Greek struggle for independence provided Russia with another cause for the invasion of the Sultan's dominions.

Then came the war of the Crimea, which originated with a demand made by Nicholas I. upon the Padishah for special privileges in connection with the holy places in Palestine, which could not have been granted without involving Turkey in conflicts with the other great powers, notably France and England. Nicholas deplored the Crimean war, which, with all his despotism, he was powerless to prevent, and it is a matter of history that it ended by breaking his proud spirit, and that he succumbed to the distress caused by the disastrous consequences which he had foreseen.

In 1877, his son, Alexander II., a champion of peace and a most enlightened man, who realized that war would arrest the economic development of Russia and prevent the fulfilment of the reforms which he had already inaugurated as well as of those which he had in view, was literally driven by public feeling in Russia into once more invading the Ottoman Empire under the pretext of coming to the rescue of those Christian lieges of the Sultan in Servia and Bulgaria, who had risen in rebellion against the rule of the Sublime Porte. Russia was in no sense of the word prepared for this war, and in its earlier stages suffered a number of cruel and humiliating reverses, while she was eventually robbed by the international congress at Berlin of the fruits of victory purchased at a terrible cost.

And now the time has come around for another move upon Constantinople. Nearly a quarter of a century has elapsed since the last attempt made to fulfil the instructions contained in the will of Peter the Great —an attempt which so nearly succeeded that the Russian army was actually encamped at San Stefano, within sight of Constantinople, when forced to halt by the English fleet, and compelled to withdraw by the concert of great powers assembled in conference at Berlin in 1878.

As was the case with Alexander II. and with Nicholas I., the present Czar is strongly averse to war. In fact, it may be questioned whether there is in all the world a ruler more sincerely anxious for peace than the present Muscovite Emperor, who came to the throne a few years ago with strong hopes and firm belief that it would be possible, by means of an international system of arbitration, to put an end to all war. There has always been a disposition to question the good faith of Nicholas in connection with the Peace congress at The Hague, owing to numerous contradictions between the pacific views which he professed and the aggressive policy of his government. But those who have any personal knowledge of him and his character are firmly imbued that he meant and still means all that he has said on the subject of peace and of his horror for war; that Russia's aggressive policy in China, especially in connection with the military occupation of Manchuria, has been forced upon him against his will, and that he will, in the same way, be compelled by public sentiment, and by inexorable fate, to embark upon another war against Turkey.

Before giving a brief enumeration of the indications of the imminence of a conflict between Turkey and Russia, it may be as well to point out that matters have reached such a stage, economically speaking, in the dominions of the Czar, that, ruinous as such a struggle is certain to prove to Muscovite industry and trade, as well as to the entire fiscal system of the government, it may, nevertheless, serve to avert a worse evil in the shape of civil war and revolution within.

Now with famine raging over the greater portion of European Russia, and Siberia as yet unproductive, agriculturally speaking, it naturally follows that there will be more difficulty than ever in securing the payment of taxes and the collection of revenue. Heroic measures will have to be adopted in order to force the starving masses to pay their dues, and there are many signs that the hour is at hand when the Moujik, goaded to desperation, will at length turn like the traditional worm.

Add to this the fact that financial and commercial crises are taking place just now all over Russia—banks and old established houses of business are toppling over one after another, involving stockholders and depositors in ruin, and infuriated with the government for not coming to the rescue of the institution concerned—and it is easy to see how desperate is the condition by which the Czar is confronted, and how that critical stage has been reached when a war without constitutes the only alternative to a war within.

The treasury is empty—though not the war chest—and the government unable to collect its revenues, is not only lacking the funds necessary to continue and complete the public works that it has in hand, such as, for instance, the Transsiberian railroad, but even finds difficulty in obtaining the money necessary to carry on the administration and to pay the interest on its foreign debt. It is doubtful whether the people in this country realize the extent of the latter. That portion of it created by loans obtained in France amounts to over a billion dollars, and under the circumstances it is not astonishing that Count Witte's endeavors to raise another and badly needed loan have met with ignominious failure on all the money markets of the old and of the new world, and that the main purpose of the Czar's visit to France is to secure the support of its government to the issue at Paris of a new loan, which no Parisian house would dream of undertaking without the good will and backing of the French treasury.

But it is not the want of money alone that takes the Czar and his Minister of Finance to France at the present juncture. It is something more—namely: the imminence of another move by Russia on Constantinople, and the association of France in the enterprise. In fact, there is much ground for believing that the Franco-Turkish imbroglio on the subject of the quays at Constantinople has been deliberately provoked by the Paris government as the result of an understanding with the authorities at St. Petersburg, and that the hostilities between the Sultan and France, which are almost certain to prove the outcome of the present severance of the diplomatic relations between the two countries, will furnish Russia with the opportunity for invading the Ottoman empire.

Russia realizes that if it had undertaken any hostile action against Turkey by itself on the strength of the non-payment of the war indemnity of 1877, or the non-fulfilment of the pledges of administrative reforms in the Turkish provinces occupied by Christians, it might have found itself face to face with the European concert, which is bent upon putting off the break-up of the Turkish empire as far as possible. But France's quarrel with the Sultan is Russia's opportunity, and it is now able to tackle the infidel with the assured support of at any rate, one of the great powers of Europe. Whether England will intervene once more to protect the Turkish empire from disintegration and Constantinople from Russian capture is a matter for question.

It is well-nigh certain that England would not care to confront Russia and France single-handed in the matter, especially with the Boer war still unfinished. But it would doubtless join in any combination with Austria and Germany to prevent the Czar from obtaining control of the entrance to the Black Sea and France from the acquisition of Syria, and ipso facto of the overland railroad route to India.

The appearance of Russian warships in Roumanian waters on the Danube, in defiance of treaty regulations, the military activity in Roumania along the Austro-Hungarian frontier of Russia, the increased political agitation in the Balkans, the menaces exchanged by the semi-official press of the Russian and the Austrian governments, and, above all, the preparations which are being made for war by all the great powers of Europe, indicate that the eventualities predicted by Joseph Chamberlin last summer are near at hand.

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

A Serious Loss.

We have met with quite a serious loss. Some weeks ago we sent out several hundred letters to persons who were owing us various sums of money. Who will help us find these letters that have been no doubt laid away and forgotten? If you did not get one, and you have not sent your renewal, don't wait for the letter to come, but send now and save us the expense of writing to you. It is a task we dislike very much anyway, and we will be rejoiced if no occasion existed for doing so. Brethren, this is a serious matter indeed. We can not meet our obligations unless you do yours. Think of this carefully and calmly, and act as your conscience and Christianity dictate. If each will do this we will have several hundreds of dollars within a weeks time. Will you help to make good our loss?

"THE true worth of a man is to be measured by the objects he pursues."

To be totally indifferent to praise or censure is a real defect in character.

"NOTHING that is of human origin and due to human achievement can be capable of improvement."

"THE divine teachings of the Bible are designed to fashion man into the grander manhood of righteousness."

DEEDS are better than thoughts or words. Let others think religion, or talk religion, be it ours to live religion, —bring forth fruit abundantly.

FOR the past two weeks we have had a pleasant visit from Sister Wilson, daughter of the well-known Bro. W. H. and Sister Wilson of Chicago, and we trust our intercourse has been mutually helpful.

CERTAIN things seem common to all; one of these is discontent. Some seem to feed upon it. The best way to rid one's self of this affection is to cultivate the habit of thinking with gratitude and praise to God for the many blessings and comforts that are enjoyed—or should be enjoyed.

"WHERE ridicule has its sway, religion is in exile. Ridicule is not the test of truth. He who attempts to use it against the cause of truth should be held to account for the grievous results which may accrue. Ridicule may satisfy the ignorant, but the intelligent man will abhor the weapon that regards neither age nor sex,—exposing the most sacred objects to derision and contempt—while religion claims consideration and respect for the opinions and sentiments of all men."

IT were as foolish to deny reason as to deny appetite. One is the appetite of the mind, the other of the body. To learn to despise and deny our natural faculties is to reverse God's order of things. The presumption in establishing the vile institutions as monkery and nunnery, in such imbecile decrees as human infallibility and the stopping of free inquiry, and the like proves this. But while we abhor these monster abominations it is quite possible for us to shackle ourselves in other directions. Whatever jars on reason's ear should be thoroughly examined. The Christian reasons upon a divine basis.

SOME one has said: "If you want to drive a wedge into a lock, you do not want a hole as big as the but-end of the wedge. Let there be a hole just large enough to get the sharp edge in, and that is sufficient. When the little end is once entered, then, with rap upon rap, the wedge will make way for itself, and at last the lock will split open. And when a man wants to be rent asunder, he does not need to begin with anything but a little lie," about as thin as a sheet of paper. If there is room to get temptations in, you may be sure that battering will open a passage for all the rest. And so men are deceived. It is a small sin is it, smaller than the sharp side of an axe? But it is large enough for a cutting edge. The smaller it is the worse it is."

WHO can give us the present address of Stanley Bowdle late of 502 Cooper Bdg, Denver, Colo.? We also want the address of Martha A. Overman, late of Cimarron, Okla.

"LIKE our first parents, mankind fear God, but it is a fear unhallowed by love. It is engendered by guilt, real or imaginary; and instead of seeking our heavenly Father as children, anxious to bask in a parent's great love, they shun him and strive by all sorts of devices prescribed by priestcraft to while themselves from the omniscience of the power they dread."

THERE is a growing demand—yes, we will say a demand,—as it is more than a request simply for articles that set forth the "faith once delivered to the saints." One writer says to "invite those who contend for the faith once delivered to the saints to keep up a steady stream of straight, old-fashioned truth." Brother W. H. Wilson at the end of his article in this paper mentions the same, and we invite, request, urge, that our brethren and sisters write on the line proposed. We have very many who are able to write just what the brotherhood want, and what those without need. The body wants to be built up and strengthened anew, and the world needs to be told what to do to be saved—what the gospel is. The minister feels this, or he would not go out and preach. It is to arouse this within you, and urge the importance of helping each other by a rehearsal of what we are looking forward to, and thus encouraging each other to still press on in the work, and at the same time give such instruction to outsiders as will interest them and cause them to inquire the way of life. Come brethren and sisters, many of your pens have been idle for years. Have you abandoned the faith? We trust not. Then let the brotherhood hear from you once again. It used to be the way at meetings to "call out" speakers, and now the mind runs to Gellety, Blessing, Wagoner, Meyer, Perrine, Corbaley, Bouk, Haupt, Eshelman, Prime, Rails-back, Francis, Dwiggins, Eychaner, Tomkins, Crozier, Woodward, Lindsay, Chase, Reed, Fahrney, Curtis, Elton, Wilson, Woodruff, Barnhill, Thompson, Austin, Halstead, Zilmer, Wince, Cordill, and scores of others whose ability is not at fault. You each have in days gone by had a message that was pleasant and profitable to the church and to the world. Will you not repeat it again? It is not simply "we" asking this. Not alone —for the "Church of God" wants you to comply with its entreaty. The Church does not care for your "hobby," your "side issue," your "non-essential." It wants the foundation principles, the fundamental doctrines, of our most precious faith. The recounting of the things that portend His coming near. The way to live to attain the "well done" in that day. Will you heed this call? Don't you realize it as a duty you owe to mankind, to the Brotherhood, to God? Send a few lines right away, and keep coming as you have opportunity.

Passing Events.

According to the Times correspondent at Vienna, the last additions to the series of conflicts arising from the repeated efforts of the Sultan to restrict the rights and privileges secured to Europeans in the Ottoman dominions, excite perhaps more irritation than anxiety in Vienna, although the bitter feeling is not quite absent. The growing apprehensions of the Sultan for his personal safety, and his obvious desire to shake off the limited European control to which his administration is subjected, are regarded as symptoms anything but calculated to increase confidence in the tranquility of the near east.

The financial troubles of Turkey are every day becoming more acute, and all sorts of financial shifts have to be resorted to. These may to some extent explain the friendliness of the Sultan toward the leaders of the Zionist movement. His pecuniary embarrassments may induce him to grant concessions to them which in more favorable circumstances he would never dream of doing. A little time will probably show.

Under the title of "Tottering Thrones" an article recently appeared in the Metropolitan Magazine from which the following is culled: "That Europe is on the verge of a general disintegration, that almost every throne is tottering to its fall, and that the map of that continent within the next decade will be so changed as to be scarcely recognizable, from our point of view, may be a series of assumptions which will appear to the ordinary observer as highly improbable. The present political situation in Europe is full of interest, for the signs of the times indicate that the process of disintegration has already commenced, and it cannot be long before it will extend from the most northern to the most southern borders of the continent. Even now twelve empires are trembling at the fate which seems inevitable. If one should be required to produce tangible evidence in proof of such a startling assertion, it would not be necessary to seek far for illustrations, for there is scarcely a spot upon the map of Europe, where there is not some form of disturbance of a sufficiently serious character to make the governmental power tremble for its safety. From one end of the continent to the other there is no nation which is at present upon a more secure foundation than Germany and yet it was but yesterday that its Emperor deemed it expedient to warn his army of the possibility of revolution. The possibility which seems too remote to be regarded seriously in Germany, in Russia has become a very evident fact. Revolution is not a new experience for Russia, but never since the days of the Decembrists, has the revolutionary spirit assumed such formidable proportions. Today the Czar has enemies in every grade of society, and for the first time since 1824 the masses are against their rulers." The writer then deals with other European nations, showing the causes which are at work, and the growing antipathy of the masses, from some cause or another, towards their rulers.

The writer looks "at things as they appear to be," and probably takes too pessimistic a view, but there is a good deal of truth in what he says. From the Bible standpoint we know that trouble is brewing, and undoubtedly to the prophetic student, "the political situation in Europe is full of interest."

Apart from the growth of the democratic animosity towards the ruling classes (whether under the names of socialism, anarchism, or nihilism,) the restlessness of the Frog Power and the intriguing of the Russian Bear are important in the political situation. One of the latest of these is the revival of Russian activity in the Balkans. The Times correspondent at Vienna says that this is attracting considerable attention in Austria. It is well known that Russia and Austria have conflicting interests there and elsewhere. The renewed activity on the part of the former, like a straw, shows the direction in which the wind is blowing.

The ministerial edict, limiting the number of Jewish students in the Russian universities to three percent has now been authoritatively confirmed. The new regulation applies to all the Imperial universities, except that of Moscow, to which no Jew is admissible. It is easy to understand why, in the face of such disabilities, so many Russian Jews, unable on the one hand, to give their sons a foreign university education, and loth, on the other, to mar the boys' careers, are constrained to apostacize by adopting against their consciences, the Greek orthodox faith.

Another new ministerial edict will affect the Jews more especially, is the abrogation of what are known as frontier passes. Nearly all the petty trades carried on along the German and Austrian frontiers are in the hands of the Jews. The new regulation is tantamount to a direct prohibition of the petty trade on the frontier, and it is undoubtedly aimed specially at the Jews. Odessa correspondent of London Standard.

The Hope of the Prophets.

We never read of the prophets and Old Testament worthies expressing a desire to go to heaven, or of singing a song like this:—

"There's a beautiful land on high,
To its glories I fain would fly,
When by sorrow pressed down I long for my crown
In that beautiful land on high."

They earnestly longed, and prayed, and struggled for a heaven-like country, (Heb. ii. 16); but when we enquire what land it was they hoped to inherit we find it was the earth made beautiful, sinless, pure, heavenly. Abram was called to go to a place which he should afterwards receive for an inheritance. He went into

THE LAND OF PROMISE

(Canaan) as in a strange country. Let us take our minds back to the time when the Lord communicated the promise to him. "Lift up thine eyes, Abram, look from the place where thou art north, south, east and west." Do you not see the glorious land, far away as the eye can reach, with its lofty mountains, its streams and valleys, its fertile soil? Look again Abram, "For the land which thou seest to thee will I give it, and to thy seed (Christ, Gal. iii. 16) forever." Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and the breadth of it for I will give it unto thee. Could Abram see heaven when he was told to look north, east, south and west? Did he walk through the length and above the stars? Did he, Isaac or Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise, have it? "No," says Stephen, Acts vii. 3, 5, he (God) gave him none inheritance in it. No, not so much as to set his foot on." "No," says Paul, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us, should not be made perfect." Heb. xi. 13, 40. "Yes; but," says one, "is seed settled in the Land of Promise, and this was a fulfilment of it."

BREADTH OF HEAVEN

WAIT A MOMENT,

friend, and you will find you are mistaken. They settled there under the law, which provided that IF they were obedient, they should remain there until the seed (Christ) should come, but if disobedient they should be scattered in every country under heaven. Deut. xxviii. History tells its own tale; just look around and see where God's once favored nation is!

"Outcasts from thee, and scattered wide
Through every nation under heaven."

And the Word says plainly that the covenant (made with Abram) that was confirmed before of God in Christ (the seed) cannot be disannulled by the law, which was 430 years after, "that it should make the promise of none effect. For if the inheritance (promised to Abram) be of the law it is

NO MORE OF PROMISE,

but God gave it to Abram by promise.' Gal. iii. 17, 18. No, Abram was yet to rise from the dead when he with the faithful of all ages who have had Abrahamic faith, will receive the long-promised inheritance which he saw afar off. And when not only the Jewish race, but all nations shall be blessed in him. Let us each ask ourselves the question, Where shall we ever be? The Scriptural answer is,—either with Christ, Abraham, the prophets and those who come from the north, south, east, and west, and sit down with them in the KINGDOM OF GOD,

or be everlastingly in the grave. There is no reason, reader, why you should be in the latter, there is a great and magnificent reward held out for the future, if we will but grasp it. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." How foolish it would be to

LET PLEASURE OR BUSINESS, or anything stand in the way of gaining the prize held out to us. It is a prize that seems too good to be true, at first sight, until we read it in the grand old Book. We see around us mortal men aspiring to positions of honor or trust, but Christ will give overcomers higher positions than any in the gift of men. The saints are to judge (rule) the world. 1 Cor. vi. 6. The Lord speaks from heaven to say that those who keep his works unto the end will be given

POWER OVER THE NATIONS,

etc. On one occasion the twelve asked their Master what their reward would be. Matt. xix. 28. Did he say, "Dear brethren, I am going to heaven, and when you die, you shall come to me, and be with me eternally? Let the Lord's own words answer the question: "Ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit upon the throne of his glory, ye shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." How impossible this would be

IN HEAVEN ABOVE?

How delightful to know that the twelve tribes of Israel are to be brought back to the land of their fathers, (Ezek. xxxvii. 21); that the seed (Jesus Christ) will sit on the throne of his father David in Jerusalem, (Luke i. 30-33) that the disciples are to rule over the regathered tribes in Palestine, and all the redeemed hosts will have authority or five, or two, according to the work done. Do we sometimes get weary with these painful bodies, and see our friends around us cut down by the reaper, Death? Then let us believe these glorious truths; let us be baptized into Christ for the remission of sins, let us walk in newness of life, and then we shall find the words of Jesus realized, when at his appearing "the meek shall inherit the earth."

OVER TEN CITIES,

Lonely in a Crowd!

We occasionally stand in a crowd whose faces are radiant with joy as they seem to drink in the accents of pleasure that grow out of some glad occasion,—but a lonely feeling creeps over us. Ten thousand different faces lit up with love or gratitude is a moving spectacle, even if we do not fully enter into their joy. When a large body of people are animated by one idea or object or principle,—they exert an almost irresistible influence, and their voice is as the voice of many waters. But, as we said, we have sometimes felt very lonely in such a crowd. To realize that the vast and joyful assembly know neither where they came from or where they are going or how to get there; that their attention cannot be gained to the life-giving truth of God; or their love drawn out by the wonderful love of Christ who died in their behalf, or the riches of God's grace stored up in him for distribution in the ages to come,—we are glad to get away where we can muse on the good time prophetically proclaimed, when we shall see him who has promised to come again and receive us to himself, restore disordered nature, and fill the earth with God's love.

Papers for the Poor.

This office receives many calls for papers from those who are not able to pay for them. It is sometimes from one part of the land, and again from another. They are not all in one locality. We know there are some who contend that there is no one so poor but he can at some time during the year pay the price of the paper. We are not here to argue that matter. It is enough for us to be told by an aged brother or sister who has perhaps taken the RESTITUTION for years, that income is cut off, not able to labor, dependent on charity of others, perhaps of unbelieving children. Cannot get out to meetings any more, all they have is the old Bible and the paper. Perhaps sickness of self, wife or children, makes it impossible to be out and earn money. Every cent that can be had will not suffice to pay doctor's bills, groceries, rent, fuel, clothing. In very many cases it is impossible to "make even" each year, let alone paying for any papers or books. Yet such are usually the ones who get the most out of our paper. They have time to read every word. Even the long articles are not skipped by these readers.

We have a fund called "Our Helping Fund" to draw on to supply these cases. Not a cent of this money is used for any other purpose. An account is kept separately from all else. We will say that at this time the fund is largely overdrawn, and has been for over a year.

Brethren, you who have a few dollars over actual need, and you who sometimes make a sacrifice, do you esteem this a worthy cause? This supplying the aged and infirm, the sick and distressed, the poor and needy—is it worth while considering? What answer do you give? It is not yours any more than mine, nor mine than yours. It seems to us that it is our duty to supply these calls. What do you think?

Communicated.

Report was given of church and Sunday School work at Jessup, Alden, Marathon, Hickory Grove, Urbana, Sac City, Eagle Grove, Stratford, Gladbrook and Ames.

Officers elected: President, O. J Allard; Secretary, Sadie Clark; Treasurer A. J. Eychaner; Corresponding Secretary, P. B. Stauffer; Sunday School Superintendant, Hester V. Berry.

Ministerial certificates issued: John Carton, J. M. Pemmer, P. B. Stauffer, W. L. Crowe, A. J. Eychaner, J. B. Adams, O. J. Allard, John T. Prime.

Motions and resolutions were as follows:

1. That the Corresponding Secretary write to the secretaries of all Sunday schools that have not made a report and ask for report of same and also quarterly reports hereafter.

2. That the President take measure to fix fence on the west side of camp ground.

3. That we purchase 12 tents, 9½ x 14 feet.

4. That we build a shed 18 x 12 x 7 feet for accommodation of teams.

5. That the Corresponding Secretary see those on ground, and write letters until enough money is secured to pay for tents and sheds.

6. That the tent be used in evangelist work the following year.

7. That the Corresponding Secretary be solicitor for evangelist work after Conference by writing letters.

8. That the President be instructed to place a badge upon our draymen at our next Annual Conference and advertise it to all our brethren and if drayman is not found to bring checks to camp ground.

9. That the Conference set aside one day at our next Conference for Persons.

10. That the board grant ministerial certificates to all whom they deem worthy during the coming year.

11. That a day be set aside by the Conference for the consideration of all Christian graces.

12. That Corresponding Secretary answers letters to Conference and a vote of thanks be given to them.

13. That the two Sunday school collections be turned over to the Sunday School superintendent for her use in correspondence.

RESOLUTIONS.

1. Whereas death has entered the homes of brothers W. J. Brunson of Waterloo, Ia., and W. O. Steffa of Pomona, Cal., and Sister Sarah Taylor, of Story Co.

Therefore, resolved that we as a Conference express our sympathy with them in their sorrow and recommend them to the tender mercies of Jesus and the hope of the resurrection.

Resolved, that we as a Conference extend our thanks to those who have so kindly assisted us financially and otherwise. May the blessing of God rest upon them.

It was recommended that the tithing was one of the best things for the good of the cause.

Bro. Crowe promised not to sell his lot adjoining our camp ground without consulting Conference Board.

California Brethren.

I expect to go to Oleander, Fresno Co., Cal., some time in November, and will make my home there for a time. Any brethren desiring meetings in their vicinity please address me at Scholls, Ore., until Dec. 1. We should be faithful and work while we may for the Master is soon coming.

Yours awaiting his coming.

EDWIN E. GROAT.

Little is thought and less is known by the average man concerning the lives and aims of the 400,000 men and boys who delve under the surface of the earth in places of darkness and danger, where hardly a day goes by without recording the death by falls of rock, coal or slate of more than one unfortunate miner. An article on this subject at once impartial and vitally interesting is contributed to The Cosmopolitan for October by John Mitchell, President of the United Mine Workers of America.

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

Poetry.

Let Something Good be Said?

When over the fair fame of friend or foe
The shadow of disgrace shall fall, instead
Of words of blame, or proof of thus and so,
Let something good be said.

Forget not that no fellow-being yet
May fall so low but love may lift his head;
Even the cheek of shame with tears is wet,
If something good be said.

No generous heart may vainly turn aside
In ways of sympathy; no soul so dead
But may awaken strong and glorified
If something good be said.

And so I charge ye: by the thorny crown
And by the cross on which the Savior bled,
And by your own soul's hope of fair renown,
Let something good be said!

—James Whitcomb Riley.

Thy Kingdom Come.

Thy kingdom come! From year to year
Thy waiting church uplift their prayer;
They in whose hearts thy graces has wrought
Breathe forth the cry thy lips have taught;
Thy kingdom come! let every knee
Bow down and own thy majesty.

Thy will in earth like heaven be done;
O'er every foe be victory won;
Till earth and heaven ag in shall be
One with each other and one with thee.
Our Father, let thy kingdom come!
Thy will in earth like heaven be done.

When once beneath wrath's gathering cloud
Thy sacred head in anguish bowed;
Where thou didst bear thy cross in pain,
Oh come, in glorious might to reign!
Rejoice, O earth, and hail your King!
Ye morning stars, together sing!

Thy kingdom come! from day to day
Thy loyal church shall over pray;
And wait the hour in joyful hope
When angel hands shall bear them up
Thy bliss to share, thy glory see,
And reign o'er all the earth with thee.

—H. L. Hastings.

In the Secret of thy Presence.

PSALM XXXI. 20.

I need not leave the jostling world,
Or wait till daily tasks are o'er,
To fold my palms in secret prayer,
Within the close-shut closet door.

There is a viewless cloistered room,
As high as heaven, as fair as day,
Where, though my feet ne'er join the throng,
My soul can enter in and pray.

No human step approaching breaks
The blissful silence of the place,
No shadow steals across the light
That falls from my Redeemer's face.

And never through those crystal walls
The clash of life can pierce its way,
Nor ever can a human ear
Drink in the spirit-words I say.

One hearkening even cannot know
When I have crossed the threshold o'er,
For he alone who hears my prayer
Has heard the shutting of the door.

Australian Letter. No. 10.

NEW YEARS DAY.

Our first thoughts on awakening were, What a pity! A fierce storm was raging. The vivid flashes of lightning, the deep roll of thunder, the sullen roar of the wind and the torrents of rain falling on the roof and dashing against the window-panes all convinced us that street decorations, arches and pavilions would be utterly spoiled and the procession a failure. In this we were happily mistaken for the fury of the storm abated; the sun came out and all were happy. The route of procession showed little effects of the storm, the colors being permanent and the fastenings secure. As to the populace one need not fear that Australians will allow anything in the way of weather to interfere with their chances of viewing a spectacle, as we were convinced when at 8:30 our trams turned into George Street near Redfern Station.

Thousands of people were pouring in from every direction. Suburban trains, trams, steam cars and busses were overflowing, the tops covered with boys, and men filling steps and platforms. All sorts of private conveyances imaginable were emptying their contents into the streets. Landaus, cabs, carriages, carts, and wagons were utilized. A two-wheeled cart drawn by one horse carried a whole family and a considerable part of the neighborhood. We need not mention what was achieved by the large road wagons with five or six horses attached.

The placid, aimless winding in and out of the masses which had characterized the scene on the thoroughfares during the preceding week had given place to a suppressed eagerness that denoted a fixed purpose, that of reaching some appointed place with all possible dispatch. Hundreds moving to the best points of view, found other hundreds there before them. It was no time for words. The disappointed pushed on silently to find another place. The good order that prevailed was marvelous. As we sat on top of our bus waiting for our party of fourteen to assemble, incidents, funny, ridiculous and pathetic abounded, the last named the more numerous. Mothers tired with the morning's work with children clinging to their skirts unable to board the trams were anxiously hurrying from one bus to another only to hear the same laconic answer—privately engaged.

The driver cracks his whip and away we go down unfrequented streets, through lanes and alleys, where no one is seen except the sad-faced Cinderellas left behind to do the scullery work and guard the premises.

We find the street leading to our grand stand blocked with vehicles three or four tiers deep. We dismount, go down a back street, up an alley, through a yard and we are there. That is, after climbing very steep stairs we come to a halt on the third story of the stand.

We have been informed by the manager and assured by the newspapers that every stand has been inspected, but woman like feel more comfortable after taking a surreptitious look at the sturdy supports, after which we settled ourselves for the next two hours. The hour of waiting was not tedious as it furnished a splendid study of the people. Every one was good natured. Eating lunches, extemporized concerts, friendly chaffing, surmises about the weather and sundry explanations from those who thought they knew more than the rest of us filled the time. The devices for seeing the procession and the thrift of the people along the route in selling these indulgences was brought into view from our splendid situation. We were at a turn in Oxford street which enabled us to face the procession for more than a half mile. The roofs of the lower houses were covered with little seats more ingenious than artistic in construction. Boys climbed trees and perched on the eaves of the houses hanging perilously in mid-air.

Marching of bands and detachments of soldiers taking their place along the line of march kept up the enthusiasm.

Colonial soldiers lined the five miles formed a bulwark against the masses of the people. In front of us stretched a sober wall of Kakhi to be merged into the brilliant green of the Irish Rifles.

Just as the last strains of "Soldiers of the Queen" died out from a neighboring stand, echoes of cheering away a half mile in the distance announced that the procession was nearing the bend in the street which hid it from our view. As the first detachment of mounted police heralded the coming procession, the sound of cheering rolled on and upward to us in ever increasing volume. "Old Ocean roars its welcome" had a duplicate in the united voice of the multitude, as it greeted the two hundred manly soldier-like riders, proud of their high boots, blue coats, white trousers and white helmets.

The trades people were led by the Rail Way Band, its thirty-three members impressive in black uniforms laced with silver. Following these in rapid succession came representatives from different crafts and industries upon which depends the future prosperity of the new union.

The gorgeous Eight Hours banner was followed by the allegorical car of the Shearer's Union, thirty members of the Australian Worker's Union mounted on bush horses, ten each of silver miners from Broken Hill wearing oil lamps in their hats and carrying picks; coal miners from Lithgow, Bulli, Capertee and Newcastle; gold miners from Cobar, Stuart Town, Reno, Wyolong and Captain's Flat; tin miners from Tingham; timber getters carrying their axes; dockers from Balmain, house painters with wands upon their shoulders upon the ends of which were tools; tailors with fig leaves in their button holes; slaughtermen, journeymen, butchers, the federated seamen, bakers, engineers and many others. All these dressed in appropriate garb and carrying typical emblems, such as a model steamer, a blue banner with silver lettering, miniature articles of furniture mounted on wands, tailors gooses, ring irons, pipes and many other tools.

Many of these still looking implements had the hard outlines softened by artistic decorations of flowers and ribbons.

This long section closed with the iron mongers blue banner with the silver letters: "Welcome to The Commonwealth."

Next came numerous carriages with officers of the various trades and labor associations. These were followed by the representatives of the friendly societies; all in regalia.

The eight engines of the fire brigade were resplendent in brass and shone like burnished gold. The firemen wore brass helmets glittering in newness. The beautiful horses were covered with brown netting relieved by rosettes and streamers of blue and gold, the Governor-General's colors. The tails, manes, reins and traces were also decorated in blue and gold.

There were press representatives from Great Britain, India and the Federated States taking snap shots from their drags.

Two allegorical chariots representing Italian and Canadian Australians were unique in design and elicited universal interest and admiration.

"The Italian chariot came first. It was a large square car built on a lorry, the panelling being carried down to within a foot of the ground and elevated considerably above the floor of the vehicle. The large area thus made available on all four sides being covered by canvas was painted with views of the six State capitals and Albany. Above the sides of the chariot a sort of skeleton framework was carried up another four feet, and this was festooned with greenery and coloured drapery. Two classically dressed ladies, wearing helmets and otherwise suitably costumed, sat in the front of the car, representing Brittania and Australia respectively. In the centre of the car, on a hexagonal column, was a bust of Sir Henry Parkes inscribed "One People, One Destiny." The Italian colours were freely displayed, and the whole affair was intended by the designer, Signor D. Rubbo, to represent the greeting of Independent Italy to United Australia. The car contained, besides the ladies alluded to, four bersaglieri, or Italian soldiers, picturesquely dressed in the national uniform, and holding rifles with bayonets. Two out of the four were habited as Garibaldians. A band of fifteen musicians was accommodated in the back of the car, where palm and fern fronds were so arranged that they could be protected from the sun. The car made an extremely pretty appearance, and was accepted with every sign of gratification by the public.

Drawn by six horses, all splendidly decorated, next came the Canadian car. The design of this vehicle was most graceful. It was square at the sides and draped there in pleats and festoons of sky blue. Slightly above the ordinary level of the floor of the vehicle lightly coloured woodwork appeared receding upwards in graceful curves to a dias surmounted by a light blue silk canopy under which were two ladies. One of these, dressed classically in white, with a yellow spangled body, and sitting on a throne represented Canada, and the other who was standing clothed in blue, with a white spangled body, impersonated Australia. The driver of the car occupied a charioteer's seat in front and below the ladies. He was dressed in a blanket most curiously, but appropriately enough for the bleak North-west. On his head was a Canadian boatman's cap. By the side of the driver was an armed New South Wales soldier. The car bore the words in gold letters, just below the driver, "Canada Welcomes her Sister Australia." At the four corners of the car on elevated masts were blue and red bannerets respectively bearing the word Canada. A crown appeared above the canopy. On each side of the driver were shields exhibiting the Dominion arms. The Canadian residents and merchants of Sydney subscribed for the construction of this beautiful vehicle. At all points along the route the great applause which its appearance elicited showed how appreciatively Australians received it."

These cars were succeeded by a carriage containing officers of the Salvation Army.

Then in rapid succession came carriages and carriages containing presidents of various religious unions, high dignitaries of different religious denominations throughout Australasia—Bishops, Archdeacons and Rabbis dressed in their robes; Commissioners, Mayors, Aldermen, Ministers, Councillors, Recorders, Clerks, in their robes; Chancellors in gowns; Justices in full wigs, scarlet and ermine; Premiers from the six states and New Zealand in full official dress; Mr. Barton and the Federal Ministry, Members of Parliament and noted visitors.

Cheering and words of explanation and recognition passed along the line as favorite political and social leaders were recognized by the throngs of people.

All this display was well received but after all it was the military array that the people came out to see. This was shown in their added enthusiasm when the first section of the Lancers appeared, and that it never abated while section after section passed until the Governor General's carriage disappeared.

It was difficult to tell which bodies were favorites; all were so heartily welcomed.

It was a goodly pageant if one could forget the deadly purpose which it represented.

Here under these sunny skies were assembled the representatives of all the different forces of Her Majesty, Queen Victoria. Different races, different languages, different implements of warfare, different costumes brought to the mind of the thoughtful the complex and difficult problem of the government development and vastness of the British Empire.

There were returned soldiers from the Transvaal, and a contingent from the Soudan. Both were greeted warmly.

The Australian Infantry did honor to the land of their birth. They had an air of freedom and individuality in the swing with which they marched. It was redolent of the daring of the bushman's life.

Red uniforms with white facings and white helmets gave place to the battalions of Kakhi, from the different states. The star with the black swan on the front of the caps was typical of West Australia while the cock's feather plumes distinguished South Australians.

There were artillerymen, rifles and rangers, ambulance corps, army service corps, senior cadets, naval brigades, Scotch regiments, and Royal Irish Fusiliers. All the while the bands played and the pipers piped. But we had seen these before and waited for the Imperial Troops a thousand of whom had been sent out by sanction of the Queen to honor this occasion.

We were bewildered and lost in the mazes of movement and color. We could not watch the program and the troops at the same time, for while we glanced at the card to see who had red jackets and white plumes, they would be replaced by blue coats and white plumes. There were others who learned that the Black Watch were not black neither did they appear in black uniform, but were gorgeous in scarlet, blue, diced red, with Red Hackles, and regimental Tartan. We were quite content to enjoy the shifting scene after being sure that we could identify the Queen's Own (Hussars) and the Prince of Wales Yeomanry.

The Indian Contingent was very popular. All were officers in this section, splendid men. Cavalry officers, Native Infantry officers with swords, Duffadors with lances, Havildars with rifles.

These were followed by Artillery, Household Cavalry, Life Guards, Horse Guards, Kings Dragoon Guards, Hussars, Lancers, Yeomanry, Field Artillery, Royal Engineers with guns, balloons and pontoons, Grenadier Coldstream, Scots and Irish Guards, Queens, Buffs, Somersetshire and Duke of Cornwalls' Infantry, Northumberland, Royal, Welsh and Irish Fusiliers, Scottish, Kings and Irish Rifles and the Rifle Brigade.

Then came the Highlanders, the Black Watch, Royal, Light, Seaforth and Cameron Highlanders, Medical, Army Service, Ordnance, Army Pay Department, all were represented. Then followed Battalions from Norfolk and Devon Regiments and Middlesex Volunteers.

Preceding Lord Hopetown's carriage came the officers of Highest rank, many of them distinguished visitors.

The Governor General was resplendent in the gold embroidered uniform of his office. He wore badges and medals of the different orders of which he is a member.

The whole pageant was replete with object lessons. The waving plumes of the Life Guards, the towering busbys of the Grenadiers, the gleaming helmets of the Lancers and Dragoons, the queer bonnets of the Highlanders; the gorgeous headgear of the Indians; the light flashing from rifles, lances and swords: the noble steeds with rich housings; the tartan of the Highlanders; the easy flowing robes of the Indians with their oriental coloring; all recalled such a medley of traditions forces and fancies, that one was transported to the land of King Arthur and his knights, to the days of Ivanhoe. We might almost believe these were "Scots wha' have wi' Wallace bled."

The pallrey of the fair guinevere and the waving plumes of Launcelot would not have seemed out of place.

Many a line from Campbell floated through the mind as the stately tread of the Tartans kept time with the bagpipes and rolling drum.

It was a medley, indeed, for when we looked for the battle axes we saw them replaced by Scottish rifles, instead of ancient war clubs bristled the guns of the Fusiliers.

The shield and breastplate had been discarded with the coat of mail for what could they avail in the face of cannon ball and gunpowder?

Throughout the procession the incongruous mingling of the old and effete with the new and practical showed that in spite of progress with what persistency the English people cling to the traditions of the past.

Under this burning Southern sun to see the men patiently wearing the heavy garb befitting the austerities of their northern home, while their tropical brethren were in flowing robes showed the concessions to be made in welding the English speaking people into one brotherhood, for the advancement of civilization and the "Federation of the World."

We had little time for such musings for we mounted our bus again and drove rapidly to Centennial Park to see the swearing in ceremonial. When we reached the knoll where seats had been provided for us on the top of another bus the scene that met our view was imposing in the extreme.

The great white dome of the pavilion was decorated with the colors of the British Empire. Its position in the center of a natural amphitheatre which stretched away for miles in gently rising slopes to the crested ridge on one side and to the vast rolling plains of the park on the other, afforded the best possible means for the quarter of a million people assembled to witness the great historical event. The picture was perfect when we first beheld it. Mr. Barton, Sir William Lyne and the ministers elect were in the pavilion ready to receive the Governor General. Judges and ministers of New South Wales were present, and also the Archbishop of Sydney.

Around the pavilion were seated the foreign and especially honored guests. As we looked toward the pavilion, on our left rows upon rows of soldiers were in attention. This mass of uniforms presented a brilliancy of color unsurpassed. In front were the various musical organizations, comprising the massed choir, while to the left were fifteen thousand school children, the white dresses and gay sashes somewhat relieving the gaudiness of the military uniforms.

Away beyond the pavilion on the hillsides, seated on grassy knolls, in carriages, and standing were the people. There was no crowding as there was unlimited room for all.

We had just time to view this picturesque gathering before a movement in the crowds announced that the ceremonies had begun. Lord Hopetown was ascending the steps of the pavilion. At the top he was welcomed by Mr. Barton and the Archbishop of Sydney.

As the Governor General took his place beside the table where the declarations were lying, a cheer began with the visitors around the pavilion which was taken up by the soldiers, the choirs, the school children and passed on to the multitudes on the hill slopes and sent re-echoing over the whole vast assembly. Then came faintly, because of the distance, the voices of the choir in the grand old hymn:

"O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Be thou our guard while life shall last,
And our eternal home."

We could not hear the prayers and reading of the proclamations, but the booming of the guns announced the taking of the triple oaths, namely: the judicial oath, the oath of allegience and the oath of office. After this the oath of office was taken by the ministers.

We did not wish to see the picture vanish and as we looked back upon the scene from Paddington ridge the voices of the choir and the children mingled with the music of the bands rolled up to us. The whole concourse had arisen with one impulse and were singing the national anthem.

Editor Restitution:

I wish to occupy a small space in our paper. I took advantage of cheap rates during the G. A. R. National Encampment held at Cleveland, Ohio, during the second week of September, to visit the church of the Blessed Hope of that City. I arranged to arrive in Cleveland on Sunday morning in time to attend Sunday School and church. I was very cordially received by Brother and Sister Joblin at their home near the church. I was introduced to each brother and sister at the close of the morning service. The afternoon was spent very pleasantly with our dear Brother and Sister Joblin in speaking of our hope which is the "Blessed Hope." Evening came too soon but it found us at evening preaching. I am so glad to know that I have held the truth, seemingly alone, for years but find that Brother Joblin and I have had access to the same words as spoken by Christ and his Apostles. The services closed with many hand shakes and a God bless you. On Tuesday evening we met with a number of the brothers and sisters at the pleasant home of Brother and Sister Neal. The meeting was opened with singing and prayer. Each was asked to relate his experience in receiving the truth. It is remarkable how each related the same kind of an experience only under different circumstances. How a grain of truth was received and how each met with opposition. Again how we tried to reason that the faith of our father or mother was good enough but how finally we gained the victory and were obedient to that mould of doctrine. I cannot express in words my enjoyment while visiting with these brethren and sisters of the Church of the Blessed Hope. In parting we said good night with the thought that the night is far spent and the day is nigh at hand. If any of the "like precious faith" who are isolated will arrange to visit with these brethren they will return to their home built up in the precious truth. My prayer is that Brother Joblin may be spared many years to the church in Cleveland and the readers of THE RESTITUTION.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Communicated.

Dear Restitution:

We have been quiet for some time, but not idle. On last Sunday, Sept. 8, we dedicated our church building at Wenatchee, Wash., which has been in progress of erection for some time. Elder Richard Corbaley, the father of the faith in this region of country, and the one, who no doubt, had as much to do with the sowing of the seed that resulted in the organization of a church at this place as any other man, was invited to preach the dedicatory sermon. The Elder, now 83 years of age, together with his estimable wife, his son Alle, who also preaches the gospel, and his wife, and Bro. Nym Tichenal, who has lately begun heralding to a judgment bound world, drove from Waterville, a distance of some 30 miles, and landed here on Saturday eve. Our hearts were cheered, not only by the presence of these, but a number of other brethren and sisters from our sister church at Waterville. Though not able to see to read, the Elder fairly outdid himself in the preaching of the sermon, his extraordinary schooling in the Scriptures in days gone by, standing him in good stead, and he preached an able sermon, there was no lack of Scripture to back up his every statement.

In the evening Bro. Alle Corbaley preached us a sermon on "The Signs of the Times," which stirred up the church and we were wonderfully refreshed and blessed. It always does us good to mix and mingle with those of like precious faith from other places.

Our church building is a commodious, nicely finished building, 28 x 40 with entry room besides and belfry, and Bro. Mills will soon be on his way from Andover, South Dakota, with a bell to occupy it, the same bell that served us so faithfully since 1885 at Andover, and which formerly rang for them so many years in Indiana. The building is completed and ready to do its work, thanks to the unselfish and generous efforts of Brother Patterson and the brothers and sisters in general, as they all pulled together at the end.

But the important thing, the church, what is the condition? Have they on those robes of righteousness without spot or wrinkle or any such thing? Now will we get into the harness and work? Are we ready for any sacrifice? These are the important questions. The love of many is waxing cold, some are departing from the faith. Some of the evidences that we are living in the last days, "Wherefore awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee light;" "let us not sleep as do others," but let us be alive to the interests of the things that pertain to God's eternal kingdom. Oh how our religion seems to drag sometimes. Brethren these things ought not so to be. Let us hold fast that which we have that no man take—our crown. Have been holding forth the Word of life as best we could at this place for the past two years. Sister Myrtle Patterson and Bro. Nym Tichenal have aided from time to time in the proclamation of it, God bless and prosper them, and all the faithful workers and we have a number of them. Your Brother in the faith and hope of the gospel.

WALKER PERRINE.

Announcement.

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Michigan, will convene [D. V.] at Watson, Allegan Co., Michigan, Friday evening, Oct. 18th, 1901, and continue over the following Sunday.

Though few in number at this place [Watson] we hope and feel assured that we will have the hearty co-operation of all interested, and look forward to an interesting and profitable meeting.

Let none remain away through fear of being a burden to those that entertain the conference, as arrangements will be made to accommodate all that come, and all who come will receive a hearty welcome.

People coming from the north or south will change cars at Montlet's for Fisk Station, where some one will be ready to convey them to the different homes.

Those coming from the north will tell the conductor to telegraph the conductor on the Cincinnatti and Northern Railroad, to hold the train for passengers to Fisk Station.

There will be one or more good speakers to preach the Word.

Let us remember the words of Paul, Heb. x. 25.

ON TRIAL

Three Months for Twenty-Five Cents.

WILL YOU TRY IT?

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and post-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth. N. J.

Christian Church Convention.

The officers of the Christian Missionary Societies have issued a circular informing members and friends about the arrangements made for the trip to Minneapolis for the 52nd Annual International Convention of the Christian Churches. The Pennsylvania Lines are announced as the Official Route from Indiana points. Excursion tickets for the event will be sold via Pennsylvania Lines October 8th, 9th, 11th and 13th, good returning until October 19th with privilege to extend to October 31st.

Plans have been shaped to have the Indiana contingent make daylight trips to Chicago over the Pennsylvania Lines, Wednesday, October 9th, going through together on the Convention Special with the prominent officers and Executive Board, for which the following convenient train service has been selected: Leave Ft. Wayne, 10:15 a. m.; Columbia City, 10:50 a. m.; Warsaw, 11:31 a. m.; Plymouth, 12:07, p. m.; Valparaiso 1:15 p. m.

Delegates and friends are urged to see that their tickets read over the Pennsylvania Lines via Chicago. Information about fares and other details may be secured by communicating with Ticket Agents of the Pennsylvania Lines.—Oct. 18.

Every Tuesday to Buffalo.

From Sept. 24 to Oct. 29th, the Nickel Plate Road will sell round trip tickets to Buffalo at one cent per mile, going Tuesdays; returning on any train up to midnight of the following Sunday. Inquire of nearest ticket agent of the Nickel Plate Road or C. A. Asterlin, T. P. A., Ft. Wayne, Ind. —Oct 29

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, as any one loses a letter is all the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 9, 1901. NUMBER 38.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

It Must be Settled Right.

However the battle ended,
Though proudly the victor comes
With fluttering flags and prancing nags
And echoing roll of drums,
Still truth proclaims this motto
In letters of living light—
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

Though the heel of the strong oppressor
May grind the weak in the dust,
And the voices of fame with one accord
May call him great and just,
Let those who applaud take warning
And keep this motto in sight—
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

Let those who have failed take courage,
Though the enemy seemed to have won,
Though his ranks are strong, if he be in the wrong
The battle is not yet done.
For sure as the morning follows
The darkest hour of the night,
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

What is the Blessing? No 3.

Is Jesus coming as a blessing or a curse to the nations? In the days of Noah, God came in terrible judgment, and smote every living thing except those within the ark. When the flood was passed away, Noah offered a sacrifice (Gen. viii. 21) "and the Lord smelled a sweet savor; and the Lord said in his heart, I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake, * * * neither will I again smite any more every living thing as I have done."

Now I ask you to compare the above declaration with the teachings of Second Adventists. They affirm that God is going to send Jesus Christ to "again" "smite every living thing," except those who have taken refuge in the ark (Christ), with a greater curse, even with a terrific deluge of fire, which will completely destroy "every living thing," which will not only simply "curse the ground," but reduce it to ashes. Is not such teaching an impeachment of Jehovah's veracity (when he says "neither will I again smite any more every living thing as I have done,") to affirm that he will do even worse than he did before.

God's purpose in sending Jesus will not be to destroy and curse, but to bless and restore, and to usher in the times of refreshing so gloriously foretold by the mouth of his holy prophets. See Acts iii. 19, 20, 21: "Repent ye therefore and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing (2 Sam. xxiii. 3-5) shall come from the presence of the Lord; and he shall send Jesus Christ, which was before preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution (refreshing) of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." The coming of Jesus don't mean a deluge of fire, but the glorious ushering in of times of "refreshing" and "restitution." These times he says have been foretold by "all his holy prophets since the world began." At the first advent of Jesus, Zacharias prophesied, and referred to the things spoken of by the holy prophets which were to be accomplished through Jesus, the horn of salvation raised up in the house of David. See Luke i. 67-79: "And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people, And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David; As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began: That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us; to perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant; The oath which he sware to our father Abraham. That he would grant unto us, that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life. And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways. To give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins, through the tender mercy of our God; whereby the dayspring from on high hath visited us. To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace."

To my mind the above quotation is laden with good things. In a concentrated form it is the gospel in its fullness. In verses 68 and 69, Zacharias sees the redemption and blessing of Israel in the "horn of salvation" (Jesus) raised up in the "house of his servant David," which things he says (ver. 70) were "spoke by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began." With verse 71, he commences to enumerate a list of those things which will eventually culminate in the "restitution of all things," (Acts iii. 3 5) declared by the "holy prophets," at which time he will also "make the horn of David to bud," and his enemies will I clothe with shame: (Psa. cxxxii. 16-18) but upon himself shall his crown flourish." How comes it that he has to deal with enemies, even when his crown shall flourish upon himself, if they were all burned up with the earth, at his second advent? These prophets aforetime declared (ver. 71) "that we should be saved from our enemies." It is a part of the covenant with Abraham (Gen. xxii. 17) that his seed (the Christ) shall possess the gate of his enemies." Now as long as the enemy shall possess the gate, the blessing of Abraham can never visit the nations. But when he "shall have dominion also (Psa. lxxii. 8, 9) from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth, * * * his enemies shall lick the dust." At this time (Luke i. 71) we shall "be saved from our enemies," through the "Horn of David," or the "Seed of Abraham." We must remember this truth, that our enemies possess the gate now, and will continue to do so, until the crown shall flourish upon the head of the "Horn of David," then, and not until then, will his own and our enemis "lick dust."

Not only is the subjugation of our enemies centered in the covenant with Abraham and his seed, but every other gospel blessing must also flow from the same source. The prophecy of Zacharias given when he was "filled with the Holy Ghost," at once directed attention to the performance of the things promised in the holy covenant. See Luke i. 54, 55, 72, 73, 74, 75: "He hath holpen his servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy. As he spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed, for ever. That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all them that hate us. To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant. The oath which he sware to our father Abraham. That he would grant us, that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear."

The special blessings promised to those who are "of the faith of Abraham" (Rom. iv. 6), and those who "walk in the steps of the faith of our father Abraham" (Rom. iv. 12), together with the general blessings (Acts iii. 25; Gal. iii. 8) promised to all nations cannot come, until Abraham and his seed shall enter into the possession of the promised inheritance, which as yet has not been given them (Acts vii. 5) but although long deferred they (the heirs) staggered not in their faith at adverse circumstances (Rom. iv. 20, 21; Heb. xi. 17, 18, 19), and even when death stared them in the face, and not a single promise then fulfilled, their faith did not flinch one iota (Heb. xi. 13, 39, 40), but these faithful heirs although they dwelt in the covenant land, they did so as dwelling in a strange or foreign land (Heb. xi. 8, 9), they also did so, without doubting God's promise, but took refuge in the hope inspired in their heart (Heb. vi. 18, 19) by God's oath-confirmed covenant.

Now, if the teaching of our Adventist friends is true, God's oath and covenant will be a complete failure. For example see Gen. xiii. 14-18: God said to Abraham "lift up now thine eyes from the place where thou art, northward and southward, and eastward, and westward: (what for?) for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed (Christ) forever." What land? Why just the land that his eyes beheld, as he viewed the landscape over from the four points of the compass. Now up to Abraham's death, Stephen said that "he gave him none inheritance in it, (Acts vii. 5) no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child." Now, the gospel nullifying teaching of Adventists is this, God is going to send Jesus (the seed of Abraham to whom the everlasting possession of the land was promised along with Abraham) with instructions to burn up the land, (just as soon as Abraham and all the heirs are raised from the dead) and blot it out of existence, and reduce it to ashes. And again God says to Abraham (Gen. xiii. 17): "Arise, walk through the land, in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee." What land? Why the very soil his feet pressed, as he traveled it in its length and breadth. Will he ever possess it? Yes, just as sure as God's oath and covenant stands true. But according to Adventist teaching it will be destroyed before either Abraham or his seed can inherit one foot of it, and he will use Abraham's seed (his joint heir) to blot out of existence the covenant land promised to himself for an everlasting possession.

Again, Jacob journeyed from Beersheba, toward Haran, and when night overtook him he lay down upon the ground to sleep. Then God appeared to him and said, (Gen. xxviii. 13): "I am the Lord God of Abraham, thy father, and the God of Isaac; the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed; * * * and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." According to Adventism, the "land whereon thou liest," will be consumed by raging billows of fire, which would defeat the oath and covenant of God to Jacob, to give him what he had promised, and render null and void God's plan to bless all families (nations) of the earth," after the covenant heirs should enter into the possession of the land which God's oath had secured to him for an everlasting possession, because not only the land but all nations (except the firstfruits) will share the fate of the covenant land, and be burned up. All this would not only discredit God's oath and covenant, but contradict his express declaration (Gen. viii. 21): "I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake * * * neither will I again smite any more every living thing as I have done." Such teaching would make our God a covenant breaking God.

Now, dear reader, how do you regard such doctrine? I regard it as dangerous, God-dishonoring, and shameful gospel-nullifying teaching, which ought to be resisted at every turn, by every one who has a spark of loyalty to God left in their being.

Speaking of faithful Abraham (Rom. iv. 20, 21), Paul said: "He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God; and being fully persuaded that what he had promised, he was able to perform."

Right here I will add my testimony, and that is, that I am not only "fully persuaded" that he is able to make good his oath and covenant, but I am as sure as I am of my own personal existence, that there is not the least possibility that the smallest detail of the things he has covenanted to perform will fail of accomplishment. I am determined to the fullest extent to believe God's Word, though it makes all gospel nullifiers liars. His plan to bless all nations will surely come to pass in his own good time, and that will be when the times of refreshing (not destruction) shall come from the presence of the Lord.

What is your testimony? Have you any? Have you the faith of Abraham? Are you walking in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham? Are you an heir? If you claim to be, what made you one? These are the most momentous questions you could possibly consider. The "firstfruits" will soon be gathered in, and if you are a "stranger to the covenants of promise," (Eph. ii. 12) you cannot be gathered in with the firstfruits. Be wise and make a sure thing of it.

What One Man Can Do?

Is it not wonderful the amount of evil as well as good one man can do? One man can set the city on fire or the woods according to his taste for diversion, or if he is a clever writer and owns a newspaper he can set on fire the vicious, the lawless element and egg them on to murder kings, presidents and prominent men throughout the world. After the deviltry is over, the Mosts and the Goldmans are locked up as the instigators of lawlessness and murder, while the newspapers that published the treasonable utterances go on unmolested. Some day we may know more about the lesson of McKinley's death. Are we as a nation honoring the creature more than the Creator? Mr. McKinley was a good man, but will his goodness make up for our short comings as a nation? Our own public men are largely responsible for the acts of the depraved and vicious. The frequency of assassination should teach us among other things to look to God, the everliving God, and not so much to man—ever dying man. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth," etc. The life of the king is just as uncertain as that of the tramp standing at the door pleading for a morsel of bread.

Brother Underwood:

I wish to say to the Illinois brethren that I have concluded to have a photograph of the Oregon church building and the Illinois Conference building taken for my own satisfaction, and it occurs to me that perhaps there are others who would like to have one. The photographs are to be of good size and well finished and will cost 30 cents, covering postage and all. This is not a money-making scheme. It is done with the thought that many would like to have a photograph of the place of annual meeting. Send no order later than October 15. Very truly,

S. J. LINDSAY.

Important to Remember.

The man who lives to please himself will find that he has a hard master.

This life will mean more when we realize that it is the pathway to the next.

The world is too small to afford a place of safety to the man who disobeys God.

The more faith men have in God the more faith they will have in one another.

To persuade one soul to lead a better life is to leave the world better than you found it.

It is not hard to find people who willing to give up some sins, but the tug comes when they are asked to give up all sin.

If there were any chance for salvation after death, the devil would'nt work so hard to get men to put off their praying until the last minute.

Missing by Waiting.

Waiting to be of service is the sure way of missing the service altogether. There is no waiting one's chance in the life of true service. Opportunities throng the path of every-day routine. Every one is susceptible of greater joy. Every one has a burden, often to be lightened by an understanding look, a tactful word, a sense of companionship. But we wait, and offer none of these, because we are not quick to see, and we want to do something notable and striking when we do serve. Meanwhile, a whole brood of opportunities are born and die. Let us be—not wait to be—of service.

Selected.

The Importance of True Doctrinal Teaching.

No man can have true peace with God and deny the fundamental doctrines of the Word of God. What is God's record upon this very subject? It is this, in short: Eternal life is in his Son, and is not due until the age to come, and then only to him who is in his Son. 1 John v. 10, 11; Luke xviii. 20. Eternal life is not conversion. Converted men may apostatize and be lost. Such reasoning as that would unfix man in eternity. But suppose we overlook this slip in logic. When, where and how, in the interminable future, does the wicked man get eternal life without Christ? Rome saw a difficulty here which Protestantism had overlooked. She has her purgatory and her handy priest who, for pay, will "Pray your friends out," provided the last man to die is the praying priest; otherwise some poor soul may have to stay there forever.

What has Protestantism to offer since the destruction of the hell of torment? Some of them talk wisely about the gnawing conscience, but the harder a conscience gets, the less the effect that gnawing has upon it, and, unless the gnawer could gnaw it all away, what harm or what good could the eternal gnawing do? It seems to me the eternal conscience has all the advantages over the eternal gnawer. I would suggest the theology of an ancient "Hardshell": "Ye shall gnaw at a file, and flee into the mountains of Hepsidam, where the lion roareth and the whangdoodle mourneth for her first-born." This has in it the idea of some punishment; the other has none, and it is no farther removed from Bible truth than the former. God says the wages of sin is death. Rom. vi. 23; Jas. i. 15.

"I am the bread of life." "As the living Father hath sent me, and I live because of the Father, so he that eateth me shall live because of me." "The words that I have spoken unto you, are spirit, and are life." John vi. 48, 51, 61. These are the words of Christ to living men for men's salvation, and they come from his sympathetic, loving heart, freighted with the perfume of the spirit and love of the Father. Who is this Jesus? Is he not the joy of heaven, the pleasure of Deity, the only name given under heaven among men whereby we must be saved, a perfect character? So the Christian professes to believe.

The belief in the inherent immortality of man is a robber. It robs the Christ of the glory which is his as the Life giver. It robs God of the glory of this most precious gift to the fitted through faith in Christ. It makes God a liar, and Christ an imposter: for neither Christ, nor God, nor men are higher than their words. A bridge is no stronger than its weakest point. The character of both God and Christ stand or fall by their words, and it seems worse than nonsense to eulogize the life of Christ, and at the same time reject the doctrines of his words. You cannot climb up to heaven by pulling Christ down. "All that came before me are thieves and robbers." No one gets to God but through Christ, and to belittle the doctrinal teachings of the Word is to belittle Christ and the work of Christ, and is a poor way, to say the least, of impressing God with either our sincerity or honesty; and we had better endure the sneers and jeers of men now, than have God and Christ say to us in the judgment, "Depart: I never knew you."

Preaching doctrine is the only way of preaching the power of God. God puts his eternal truth into words, and by the tongues of angels, by inspired men, and by his Son, Jesus Christ, proclaims what salvation is, and the way of salvation, to lost, ignorant man. Man hears, and either rejects, or believes and obeys, thus proving himself worthy of either death or life. I can say, with Phillip Brooks: "Preach doctrine; preach all you know; know all you can, and then preach that." A watch without a spring to make it run is not worth a fig. God puts his truth into a man, and the spirit or life of that truth is the spring that makes him run in the ways of God. Without it he runs in the ways of the world, the flesh and the devil.

The more worthless a government becomes, the more "red tape" it takes to get to the throne. The same is true in religion. The more the authority of man has to do with it, the more complicated and worthless it becomes, and the more red tape is used to reach the throne of God, until to-day there is much that is unnecessary, incomprehensible, and therefore nonsensical. Christ is the way to God. He is the truth, the life; and the man that is "in Christ" has reached the throne of God in him. "Ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." There is harmony here, and safety, and peace, and joy unspeakable.

The doctrines of the Bible one and all lead to God, because they are the product of God. The doctrines of the devil all lead to him, because words, like water, rise no higher than the fountain which produces them. There must be perfect harmony between God and the words of God.

Man is neither an originator of truth nor falsehood. He draws from the originals. Christ said, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the age," provided always, that the servant kept within the bounds of the commission. Matt. xxviii. 18-20. As long as God exists and the Christ lives, God's words will stand, because both are individually responsible for its fulfilment. Not a jot or tittle will fail, be that doctrine or what not; and when the eternal truths of God inhabit a man, God inhabits him also, for God is in his Word. And whom God and Christ inhabits, truth inhabits; and truth convinces, and the Spirit of truth will infuse that same Spirit into him, and thus lead him into the plans and purposes of God. The attempt to capture heaven with the artillery of Plato will end insignal defeat. Neither will part of Plato and part of Christ accomplish it; for the Christ is all and in all to the believer.

By preaching doctrine we do not mean antagonism for the mere sake of it; but the preaching of God and Christ and truth. Keep them at the top all the time. Never separate God from his truth, nor connect him with the devil's lies; but, for the sake of truth, remove, if possible, every vestige of falsehood, that the beauty of truth may find a lodgement in the hearts of the hearers.

The nominal church is honey-combed with infidelity. There are noble souls within it, trying to stem the tide and make headway upstream, but they are absolutely helpless where they are, for the floating masses will only help to bear them out to sea. It is like the fearful onslaught of a flood of waters. The good man is turned down, and the sentimentalist and the clown are installed in his place, and the play goes on. The diction of the masses of the Sunday sermons is taken from the secular papers, which are as infidel as the devil desires them to be, for they will quote the sayings and ravings of infidelity by the column, the fumes of which are as poisonous to morals as the breath of asps to human flesh; for they are never infidel to the life of morality, but decry the truth that makes men moral. Many of the men who fill modern pulpits are entirely too large in their own eyes, and in the eyes of the world that supports them, to be governed by the diction of God's simple truth. They are elephants on the hands of spiritually-minded Christians, which will neither pull the artillery of God nor wield the sword of truth, but use their capacious trunks to cut and carve, to beat and bruise, the truth of God, simply because this makes them the idol of their hearers. Few preach to save men and glorify God. The majority seem to preach for applause and self-gratification. "If the blind lead the blind" do they not both go into the ditch? God pity and save; for that is indeed a sad and terrible end of man, made in the image of God, with power and opportunity to become immortal like the angels.—R. F. Peake, in Messiah's Advocate.

A Serious Loss.

We have met with quite a serious loss. Some weeks ago we sent out several hundred letters to persons who were owing us various sums of money. Who will help us find these letters that have been no doubt laid away and forgotten? If you did not get one, and you have not sent your renewal, don't wait for the letter to come, but send now and save us the expense of writing to you. It is a task we dislike very much anyway, and we will be rejoiced if no occasion existed for doing so. Brethren, this is a serious matter indeed. We can not meet our obligations unless you do yours. Think of this carefully and calmly, and act as your conscience and Christianity dictate. If each will do this we will have several hundreds of dollars within a weeks time. Will you help to make good our loss?

A COVETOUS man never has enough, although he has what is sufficient for nature.

THOSE who are of a detracting spirit will misconstrue the most innocent words that can be put together.

SAID a Grecian, "to prevent being evil spoken ill of, it is only in my power that it be done deservedly."

ZEALOUS men are ever displaying to you the strength of their belief, while judicious men are showing the grounds of it."

"THE Laws of Nature, is an expression often used in utter forgetfulness, that it is but another term for the Laws of God."

THOLUCK said:—"I am bound to confess that the further my studies have extended, the more clearly have I seen that the religion of the Old Testament and the gospel constitute one Revelation; and the higher has been my consequent estimate of the loftiness and depth of the Jewish economy."

"WHEN misfortunes happen to such as dissent from us in religious matters, we call them judgments; when to those of our own sect we call them trials,—when to persons neither way distinguished, we are content to call them judgments; while to those of our own sect we call them trials; when to persons neither way distinguished we call them distinguished, we are content to impute them to the settled course of things."

WE do not believe that God expects work of a man which he is not able to do, because he is not a hard Master. He never reaps where he has not sown, nor gathers where he has not strawed. He simply requires us to use the talent he has given us,—to do the work for which we are, or may be, fitted. So we must not be discouraged by a sense of inability to meet his call. We must have faith in God, and go forward in the path of duty, and then we will gain strength for our work. It is known by experience that our Father in heaven can make a small store of learning go a great way toward feeding those who are starving for want of the bread of life. The small barley loaves broken at his bidding, can satisfy the wants of thousands."

An Address.

"I am in the midst of them."

As the weeks come and go we have evidence that few more will be added to the number of witnesses for God and Christ and truth. More and more difficult is it to interest people in the story of Redemption revealed in the Scriptures of truth. And we take it to mean that we have arrived at the time when the Lord will soon rise up and shut to the door. This condition of things does not warrant us to suspend efforts to win souls by any means. We must occupy till he comes. His coming ends the period assigned to the selection of kings and priests to God who will live and reign with Christ, for one thousand years, till the earth be filled with

GOD'S GLORY;

and till that time the Spirit and the Bride have to say come—and whosoever will, may come, but they cannot come without willing to do it. It is left to them to come or not as they may determine after invited. As in the time of Christ, so now, they will not come to him that they might have life, except here and there one. But while this is the case, there is a vast amount of work to be done by the Household of Faith. The answer to the question of Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?" is, "YES;" decidedly so. If any one questions this let him study again with this object in view,—and listen to the many commands to follow him,—take him as our perfect example though it lead us to death as it did him. Run over the words of the Lord as spoken by the Apostle Paul and see how this matter stands. If you do it faithfully I think some great surprises await you. And we one and all need to realize, I believe, as never before,—that each is his brother's keeper. He bids us follow him as he followed Christ; so that his acts as recorded are our example. He was a pattern to them which should hereafter believe, and this means that he was

THE LIFE OF CHRIST

A PATTERN FOR US.

He tells us he "endured all things for the elect's sake,"—he commands us to not seek our own but that of others. Again he says be pleased all men, not seeking his own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved,—he commands the exhorting of one another daily and so much the more as ye see the day approaching," showing clearly our responsibility one for the other; but in no way does his example teach us in this direction more than in prayers. He made mention of the Roman brethren always in his prayers, although I do not think he had ever seen them at that time. And he tells those at Ephesus that he ceased not to give for them,—mentioning them specially in his prayers. And to the Thessalonians we give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers. And while writing to the Colossians to continue in prayer and watchfulness and thankfulness on their own account, he says:—"Withal praying also for us, that God would open to us a door of utterance to speak the mystery of Christ, for which also I am in bonds." And when we consider that the brotherhood is compared to a human body with many organs and parts united under the direction of one Head, and that each part is essential to a complete and harmonious working as a whole a powerful lesson is before us. "If the foot should say because I am not the hand, I am not of the Body,—is it not therefore of the body? And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it not therefore of the body? If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing,

THANKS TO GOD

WHERE WERE THE SMELLING?

But now hath God set the members of every one of them in the body as it hath pleased him. And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee; nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you. Nay, much more, those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary." No one will question the aptness of this reference to natural things, to illustrate those of the Spirit. Every one can see the unreasonableness and foolishness of a person who would not take care of one of his own members when weak or diseased. Every one knows that the diseased condition of the last joint of one of his little toes will make him so that he is literally unfit for anything. And as for a person who would deliberately injure his sight or his hearing because it is possible to walk if blind and deaf, I think you will agree that he is a candidate for a lunatic asylum. And now, remembering that it is the Spirit of God that employs these figures or calls us to consider these comparisons,—what will that Spirit think of one in the body of Christ who thinks he is not his

SICK ALL OVER

BROTHER'S KEEPER?

Do you think such an one really and truly belongs to, and is a part of the body? If he were, how could he be indifferent to the welfare,—that is, I mean, the spiritual health of the other members of it? In the nature of things, he must be concerned about them. In the natural body, all the nerves of sensation center in the head,—if the connection between any member of our bodies were severed from the head we would be insensible to any pain in that limb, even though it was being consumed. In like manner the spiritual center of the body of Christ is the Head—he is the Head of his body,—the church. Yes, he is the Head. If we as individual members of it are in constant communication with the head, then if one member suffers all suffer. It makes the

WHOLE CHURCH SICK

from the great Head of it down to the smallest living member; but of course in the proportion to the vital connection of each to the head. Those who are enrapport with the Head will suffer with the Head in the afflictions of the Body whether Spiritual or temporal. The saddest consideration in this connection is the fact that those

NOT IN SPIRITUAL HEALTH

do not realize that their connection with the great Head is almost severed, if not quite so. Their moral and spiritual perception is blunted. Sin does not seem half as sinful as it used to. The commandments of Jesus are disobeyed it is admitted, but they do not regard it as sin, exactly, and so get used to it; it becomes habitual,—and still they consider themselves part of

THE BODY OF CHRIST!

but if they were in touch with the Master they would realize how he and all who are striving to live godly suffer when they observe a spiritual distemper affecting members of the body. My object in these remarks was, to get all to see first their duty to God, and then their duty to one another,—being certain that there is enough work in the House of God to keep us busy, til the Master appears. Even if we are not able to call others out of darkness light, we may, and can, surely assist some who have been called out, to walk more strictly in obedience to that marvelous light. The great God who made us knows exactly what sort of creatures we are, to begin with; and after having reached us with the voice of love and mercy and led us into the narrow way of life he knew what, better than anything else, was calculated to make us stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free. He knew we were socially organized. He knew what a powerful influence mind has upon mind either for evil or for good. And so he has caused his children to be brought together in family circles, where there shall be the mild peaceful family government to preserve order,—and where, as bound for a far off country,—they cheer and comfort one another on the way, by rehearsing the many glorious covenanted blessings in store for all who struggle on the rough and thorny way, till they arrive at home. In this way they keep themselves in the unity of the faith and hope,—keep them from straying out of the fold of the good Shepherd, and from the path of the wicked, and the way of evil doers; keep them in the love of God, and in the patient waiting for Jesus. This assembling together for mutual edification and comfort has not been left to our option, beloved,—it is not left to our convenience or taste, or the mood we may happen to be in. It is it is a positive command to those who have voluntarily placed themselves under law to Christ. This is one of the statutes he has enacted for the observance of his household. He EXPECTS the members of his household to observe it (1) because it is enacted for their good. (2) because it is his prerogative after receiving their submission. (3) This statute implies that he took it for granted

INTO GOD'S MARVELOUS

[illegible]

A MANDATE FROM HEAVEN;

THAT WE MEANT IT

when we gave ourselves to him, and took his name upon us, and pledged loyalty to him, and accepted him as our rightful owner, having bought us with his most precious blood. (4) because he alone knew what we would really need in the great struggle with the world and the flesh for the enduring life and the better country. (5) It was a practical test of our obedience and love, and an appreciation of what he has done and suffered for us, and of the exalted office he now fills in which he serves us day and night without ceasing, that we may surmount all obstacles and at last obtain

SEATS UPON HIS THRONE.

But it is time to read one of his mandates in reference to assembling with those of like precious faith. In Hebrews x. we have some beautiful lessons,—which are really mandatory,—but they are given in a delicate and winning way; as the quotation following will prove. "Having therefore brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way which he hath consecrated for us through the veil, that is to say, through his flesh, and having an high priest over the house of God, let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water,

LET US HOLD FAST

the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised; and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works; NOT FORSAKING the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is,—but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Then, he gives us the reason why he gives us these rules as follows:—"For if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation which shall devour the adversaries." Then he illustrates the truth by reference to the fact "that he that despiseth Moses law died without mercy under two or three witnesses. Of how much sorer punishment suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified and hath done despite unto the spirit of favor." If these awful words of the Spirit do not arouse us to a realizing sense of the awful importance of heeding this word of warning not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together,—we are in a hopeless condition. The outside world is all against God and truth and righteousness; every influence is for evil. The Spirit knew we would need to draw aside, and shut ourselves in with God and the godly as often as we could, and for a little while breathe different atmosphere,—and have our faith and hope and love by words of comfort and exhortation from others. God foresaw all this and provided for just the assistence we would need. And this means of assisting us will need to be intensified as we see the day of the Lord approaching. As every soul in this family circle claim to see the day approaching,—let each one here and now ask,—have I been doubling my diligence in proportion to the evidence that the day approaches? Or, do any of us act as if we knew what was necessary better than the Spirit,—and choose our own course of conduct? I am certain none of us would claim in words that we knew better than God our Father,—but if we turn down his instructions and guide ourselves, that is just what it amounts to. And I want to remind you what the end will be.

AN UNHOLY THING

FANNED INTO FLAMES

WE WILL NOT HOLD FAST

without wavering; and not considering one another, and inciting each other's love and good works,—and not exhort one another more and more. This is clear evidence that our consciences are being seared,—that we are not expecting anything when it comes, and therefore do not desire it to come—and that the final RESULT of not heeding this injunction not to forsake the assembling together is willful sin, for which there is no more sacrifice,—but a fiery indignation which shall devour them. Every child of God should memorize Mal. iii. 16, 17. 'Then they that feared the Lord and the Lord hearkened and heard, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels, and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him." We see divine evidence that such shall be saved,—they shall be gathered with Jehovah's jewels. Does this have the intended effect upon us all? If not, why not? If not, I can only offer one or two more inducements,—it was the night of the betrayal in that upper room at Jerusalem. After giving thanks for the Bread he brake it and said this is my body which is given for you.

SPAKE OFTEN ONE TO ANOTHER

"THIS DO IN REMEMBRANCE OF ME."

He knew they loved him; he knew what sore trials awaited them, and he knew that nothing would brace and steady them like the remembrance of his amazing sacrifice on their account; and therefore he said "This do in remembrance of me." He was planning for their benefit. He wanted them to hold their confidence steadfastly unto the end, that they might share the honor and glory of the age to come with him. And at this, the last meal he was to eat with them, the last meeting he was to have with them in the mortal state,—and while the horrors of an agonizing death on the cross in a few hours must have been ever present with him,—yet his greatest concern was that was to carry on his work after he had laid it down. Blessed Jesus; how could they forget him? How? How do we forget him? He did all this for us as well as for them. We owe him as much love as they did. And yet what trifles are allowed to keep us away sometimes! I solemnly say to you if we do not mend our way and quicken our pace we will be ashamed before him when he comes. If we do not care to suffer a little inconvenience and loss in order to do this in remembrance of him now,—he will not own us when he comes. We are allowed to do as we please,—so that what we do is a perfect index to our spirit of love and obedience. Just one other loving inducement, and I am done. The blessed Lord is so anxious for us to retain our love for him by means of this hallowed ordinance that he says to us, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." If there be not inducement enough in this to bring us around the Lord's table we are in a deplorable condition. I will say for myself, It is inducement enough for me. As long as there are two or three who want to meet him,— back to Gethsemane and Calvary and the empty tomb. If all the rest were enemies and ungodly,—it would not vitiate these emblems for me; I would still come and look right through them to the Lamb that was slain. If ever such a disobedient brother be present, by the grace of God I can commune with the Father and the Son and the faithful, not with the ungodly one. We want to meet Jesus and remember him, and examine ourselves and not others, and the Lord will bless and strengthen us.

THE LITTLE BAND

THESE EMBLEMS WILL POINT ME

The Source of Christian Liberality.

"See that ye abound in this grace also."

The following article from the Christian Intelligencer, is worthy a prayerful reading:

"The source of a liberal benevolence is, trust in God. The reason why many people give so little for charitable objects is not to be traced to selfishness or to avaricelousness. It is to be traced to an anxious care to provide against the future. These people find that when their necessary expenses are deducted from their earnings, the surplus is very small indeed; when they consider then that sickness may overtake them; that as their children grow up they will call for increased expenditures; that they themselves are creeping on toward old age; when they consider such things as these, their forebodings lead them eagerly to treasure up the surplus of each year. A possible day of need takes with them the precedence over every actual case of bodily or spiritual destitution.

We have nothing to say against a wise provision for the future. The Scriptures commend such provision in the most emphatic language. But we have something to say against that provision for the future which interferes with present duty. If any one owed a neighbor a hundred dollars, would it be right for him to evade the payment of this sum on the plea that he must save all his earnings to secure himself from anxiety with reference to the years to come? And yet on this plea men continually refuse to pay the debt that they owe to the Lord. They treasure up everything for their own future wants, and the wants of the Lord's poor and unenlightened they suffer to go unsatisfied.

Now what is necessary to open the fountain of benevolence in such persons as those whom we have now described. Undoubtedly the thing necessary is, trust in God. If our blessed Savior taught anything, he taught, that when we do our present duty, we are not to worry about the supply of our future wants. We are to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and then we are confidently to rely upon our heavenly Father for all needed good. It seems to us then that as soon as a man feels that God will take care of his future, he will stop trying to take care of himself by robbing God of a liberal portion of his goods. If some rich friend should require a portion of your narrow income, you might refuse with the reply that you needed it all for the future. But if this rich friend should secure your future, should give you reliable pledges that a just liberality on your part now would not be detrimental to the supply of your wants in the days to come, would you not be foolish longer to deny his request? And when God calls men to be liberal in using their means for his glory, he excites that liberality by the most explicit promises to take care of them. He knows their proneness to be anxious about the future, and so he assures them that that future will know no lack because of what they lovingly give to him; yea, more, that that future will reap more advantage from a liberal loan made to the Lord than from one made to any earthly friend. "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thy increase; so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine." "Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days." "The liberal soul shall be made fat, and he that watereth shall be watered also himself." "But this, I say, he which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly, and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully."

As a first source of a liberal benevolence then, we inculcate trust in God. Trust in him both with reference to his particular providential care over our future, and with reference to the fulfillment of his special promises to them "that abound in this grace also."

"It is Not Natural."

"I don't like so much talk about religion," said a rude stranger in a city boarding-house, to a lady opposite, who had been answering some questions with regard to a sermon to which she had been listening. "I don't like it. It's something that nobody likes. It's opposed to everything pleasant in the world. It ties a man up, hand and foot. It takes away his liberty; and it isn't natural."

"Oh, no!" answered the lady, "it isn't natural. We have the best authority for saying so. 'The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned.' True religion is rowing upstream; it is sailing against wind and tide." A pause for a few moments followed; then the stranger began again.

"People who think and speak so much about religion are queer, any how. I wish they could only know how people speak and think about them; nobody likes them, for they are so peculiar."

"Allow me to interrupt you again," said the lady; "but I am so impressed with the manner in which your language accords with Bible language, that I shall have to introduce another quotation from that blessed book. 'Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a peculiar people.'"

"Does the Bible say they are peculiar people, then? That's odd! That book, somehow, has got a dose for everybody. Yet, ma'am, you must allow that the commands that book lays upon us poor sinners are hard. It's thou shalt not, and thou shalt not, all the time. Why, its precepts and views of things are not only systematic tyranny, but they are narrow, very narrow."

"Yes," replied the lady, "they are narrow, for the Bible says they are. 'Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way that leads to life!' We have to struggle hard to keep in this narrow way, if we once get in it. It is too narrow for pride, worldliness and sloth. It is too narrow for the service of two masters. It is too narrow for covetousness, envy, and all other evil passions. Hatred can find no place for so much as the sole of his foot in that narrow way. Good deeds, kind words, faith, hope and charity, occupy all the ground, and will continue to hold it to the end."

The stranger listened, surprised and annoyed and at last arose and left the room, apparently a more thoughtful, if not a better man.

Lower Fares to Buffalo.

An opportunity to visit the Pan-American Exposition at unusual low fare is offered by the special Coach excursions to Buffalo over the Pennsylvania Lines Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays of each week during October. Tickets on sale those days are based on a rate of one-half the regular one way fare, which makes this the cheapest rate offered any one during the Pan-American Exposition season. Particulars about fares and time of trains may be obtained by consulting Passenger and Ticket Agents of the Pennsylvania Lines, Plymouth, Ind., J. E. Hanes, Agt.—oct 26

Poetry.

Do Your Best.

"I shall pass through this world but once.
Any good thing, therefore that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any human being, let me show it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."

Sometimes we only pass, then part,
In sunshine times or re.
We hasten on with luck or heart,
And never meet again;
We look into each other's face,
Or hurried grasp the hand,
And do not longer wait, because
We do not understand.

We have the eternal words unsaid,
We gaze with vacant stare,
When 'tis, perhaps, an hour which calls
For sympathy or prayer.
We tread life's dusty road in haste,
And selfish seek our good,
Unconscious of the needs which plead
From out a weaker mood.

Thus through neglect we lose from life
What life was meant to hold—
The ministry of helpfulness—
And grow inert and cold;
We need, but pass with empty hand
Hearts which appeal in vain;
We part, and leave our good angel even
And never meet again.

To mark the calls for tenderness
Which sound within the days;
To prove our sympathy and love
In little helpful ways;
Ah, this will gild life's eventide
With memories that are blest;
For they alone are restful there
Who did for all their best.

Repentance.

NEW TESTAMENT LESSONS.

Bro. Underwood says, "Write something on the old lines." It is a good idea. The old things are always new. We never tire of them. Some one, for whom we write, has never heard them, or if he has, has never heeded. They must be told again. It takes "line upon line, precept upon precept." An aged Scotch minister once preached several Sundays in succession on repentance. His congregation thought him very short of memory, and told him so. "Have you repented yet?" Was the quick and pertinent question, sent back in reply. The incident tells the story in a nut shell. God wants man to repent, and he wants us to keep preaching repentance until they do. Dark deeds, wicked deeds are done in the world. Men reproach their Maker for the calamities and sicknesses that come upon them. They assoil his name with frightful oaths; they defraud him of that which is rightfully his; they trample without compunction upon his laws; they refuse to enter his service, or to take the one he has proffered to be their Savior. And all this is sin. It must be turned away from. "Repentance is to leave the things we loved before, and show that we in earnest grieve, by doing so no more." To forsake our sins by doing that which is lawful and right, with an eye single to the glory of God, that is repentance.

There must be sorrow, but sorrow is not repentance; it only leads to repentance, and repentance to seeking for pardon, and for a place in the happy family of God. To continue in sin is to be a rebel against God and lose eternal life, for has he not "commanded men everywhere to repent" and "appointed a day in the which he will judge the world by that man whom he hath ordained, whereof he hath given assurance unto all men in that he hath raised him from the dead." There is no excuse for scepticism. The mighty power of God has been manifested, the path of life set before our eyes in a Redeemer who has broken the bonds of death, who lives forevermore, and who has therefore the power to rescue us from the darkness and silence of the grave. Our sins may be washed away in his precious blood, strength be given from on high to enable us to overcome, indignation and wrath be turned away, an Advocate secured to plead for us with the Father. Salvation is not an idle tale that has no foundation in truth, it is a glorious fact, as true and real as that we live. O that my readers would lay hold upon it. Your thoughts accuse you, and then excuse you that you may put off repentance and keep away from God and all the while he is saying, "Come unto me and live." "Glory, honor and peace to every man that worketh good." Though you, like the men upon whom the tower of Siloam fell, be not sinners above all men, yet, unless you repent you shall "all likewise perish." You are "without excuse" if you "glorify not God as God, and are not thankful," but continue in sin, and his judgment against you is, that you are "worthy of death."

The Beloved Brotherhood:

Brother Underwood's request to pay the subscriptions due for the Restitution, must be heeded or he will break down under the load, and the paper will stop. That will never do.

For twelve years I was president of the "Christian Publishing Association." When the Association was first organized we employed an Editor, a Business Agent, and paid a stipulated price per week for setting the type and printing the paper. This was continued for some years; but the officers of the association had trouble to make the subscriptions meet the expenses. After much discussion and consultation with leading members of the church as well as stockholders of the association, the Board of Directors came to the conclusion that they must make a contract with some one to take the receipts of the paper and publish it and pay all expenses of every kind. A contract of that character was entered into with Brother Underwood, and since that time he has published the paper, paying all expenses and receiving the amount of the subscriptions and nothing more. I personally know that when the subscriptions are all paid the amount is barely sufficient to get out the paper, and by practising the most rigid economy in expenditures. Brother Underwood is a poor man and he cant publish the paper unless the subscriptions are promptly paid. If he is forced to lay it down I think I am safe in saying there is not another man among all the brotherhood who would be willing to publish the paper for the receipts.

My dearly beloved, what are we going to do? Must the Restitution die because we do not each send in our $1.50 once in each year. God forbid. Can we get along without the dear old paper? It will be like losing one of the members of the family.

I have not consulted with Brother Underwood. He does not know that I am writing.

Your humble brother in the truth, awaiting the coming of the Master.

R. S. Dutcomns.

Sister Woodward:

Seeing your kind letter in The Restitution of Sept. 18, and having read so many encouraging letters in previous numbers written by you and Brother Woodward, I feel as though I have been acquainted with you both as true fellow workers in the Master's vineyard. Your travels and labors of love in holding forth the word of life to a sinful world, remind me so much of the tours I used to take with my husband during the days of his pilgrimage in defense of the truth. O, what pleasure it is to be engaged in good work, and especially when it is crowned with success, and what encouragement for the servants of the Lord. They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever. Yes, instead of becoming weary with our light afflictions, which only work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

Let us be of good courage and wait on the Lord, and he will renew our strength.

You speak of the enjoyable visit of a good brother and sister. We, as a little band of the one faith, would be glad if Brother and Sister Woodward would lift up the light of their countenance upon us in this part of the habitable. We were blessed with a visit from Brother and Sister B. F. Boyer of Seven Fountains, on last Sunday. We surely appreciate his coming, and all the more because he has been sick nigh unto death, for a long time, but we are thankful to say that through the mercies of God he is again restored to health, and able to do battle for the truth. There are very few laborers in word and doctrine in this state.

I see in the last paper notice of the death of another Brother, who labored long, and bore the burden in the heat of the day. Yes, the ripe sheaves are falling one by one, as the days are going by.

I see Brother W. H. Wilson has suggested that some testify to the truth, for the encouragement of those who have not entered into covenant relation. I like the suggestion. If we are no more foreigners nor strangers, but fellow citizens of the household of faith, then it should be a pleasure to us to be ever ready to give a reason for the hope that is in us with meekness and fear. Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due time we shall reap if we faint not.

Such is my anxiety to commune with the children of God, that I wait for the weekly visits of The Restitution. It brings choice treasures to those who are searching for the light. I hope it will continue to do so until the Master comes to gather up his precious jewels and crown them with life eternal.

Now my Sister, I have submitted this in love. May the choicest blessings of our heavenly Father rest upon you both, is the prayer of a Sister, who is waiting for the coming Kingdom of God.

S. F. Morgan.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

After reading the earnest requests of brethren W. H. Wilson and Underwood for us to write short articles for our dear Restitution, though I have been silent for some time, I concluded to write at once, and when I tell you why I have not written for so long, you will excuse me I know. For near three years I have been quite unwell, and my eyes have been so I could not read or write but little.

I was seven months in California. Though my health was bad, yet I preached sixteen discourses, and my love for the spread of the truth has been as strong as ever, and as stated by Bro. Wilson, we now need strong and pointed articles on practical subjects, and let love be manifested in every word and line, for we know God is love, as John says. It would be well for us all to read the 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians, and learn what Paul says about charity, (or love.) Think of it dear ones. "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not love, I am nothing." Read the entire chapter. John in his epistles dwells so much on love. He says if we love not our brother whom we have seen, how can we love God whom we have not seen." Let us hear John again. "My little children let us not love in word neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth." I tell you, dear ones, those expressions let on the search-light. Oh how those words make us look within our hearts (minds.) We all must stand before our Judge ere long. Then, as John says that we may have boldness in the day of judgment. We may deceive mortals in this life, but we cannot deceive our Father in heaven, as Paul says, "Be not deceived, God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Eph. vi. 6-8.

If any of us have become cold and indifferent, Paul would say unto us, "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." This language was addressed to the Ephesian Church and not to the world, and if the church in the days of the apostle was called upon to awake from their sleep, dear brothers and sisters, may we not have become drowsy or asleep? Our time is growing short, and now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.

Dear brothers and sisters, let us hear from many or all of you. This short letter is from your brother who began proclaiming the gospel of Christ in 1864, and now I am almost worn out in the service, and I have but little of this world's goods; but I am rich in faith, and I believe an heir of the kingdom.

J. S. Hatch.

Editor Restitution:

I see so many of the brothers and sisters giving their experience in your paper. I thought I would try in my weak way to give a few ideas of the way I have been taught or have been preached to by the preachers from as far back as 1842, while in the State of New York, at Adams Bason, 12 miles west of the city of Rochester, I attended a Free-will Baptist meeting and I liked the preaching of the Elder very well and thought I would unite with the church together with a number of others, and we all went down to the river and were baptized in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost by Elder Bignal and went back to the school house to be taken into the church as members of the Free-will Baptist church. On being seated on a front bench the Elder commenced to question them on their belief of the Bible, and he commenced by asking me if I believed Jesus Christ was the self-existent God. I told him, no sir, I do not. What, said he, don't believe Jesus Christ is the self-existent God, acting as though he was surprised at me. I told him I believed Jesus was the Son of God, the Savior of the world, and he replied, we cannot have you in our church if you do not believe Jesus Christ is the self-existent God. I immediately stepped to one side and told him I did not wish to belong to a church that compelled a person to believe contrary to what the Bible expressly stated, and that was that Christ was the Son of God, the Savior of the world. Since then I have traveled in various parts of Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska trying to make plain the gospel of the kingdom just as Christ and his Apostles gave it to us.

Obituary.

Mrs. Dora Fey died at her home in Woodstock township, Schuyler Co., Ill., Aug. 27, 1901. Mrs. Fey has been suffering for several months, the cause of her death being consumption. Miss Dora Griffith was born Oct. 30, 1874, near the home where she died, aged 26 years and 10 months. When a small child she went to Iowa with her parents. After staying there three years, they moved back to Schuyler, where she stayed until the time of her death. She was married to Charles Fey, Nov. 10, 1892; four children were born to this union, three of which are living. Little Freddie died about a month ago. Mrs. Fey united with the Church of God at Ripley in 1894, and has lived a devoted Christian life to the time of her death. Her family and friends mourn her loss, but they sorrow not as others who have no hope. She fully believed that very soon the Lord will come and gather his jewels and give the reward of immortality and eternal life and establish the kingdom of God. She leaves besides a kind and indulgent husband and three children, a father, mother, one sister and three brothers. May it be our happy lot to meet in the kingdom of God. May the rest of the family look forward to a happy re-union in the future is my prayer. Separations must come in the present world.

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is still,
A place is vacant in our home,
That never can be filled.

A Sister,
Lydia Griffith.

Anna E Haines was born near Bunker Hill, Ind. Oct. 6, 1856, and died in Los Angeles, Cal. Sept. 30, 1901, of cancer of the liver. She was daughter of Isaac H. and Rachel Haines, and the most of her life was spent in the vacinity of Argos, Ind. She united with the Church of God in Feb. 1877. Her first husband was Samuel D. Taber, oldest son of Cyrus and Rachel Taber, to whom she was married Oct. 17, 1877. A number of children were born of this marriage, all of whom died when young. Her husband dying left her a widow, and Oct. 3, 1883 she was married to John H. Taber, a younger brother of her first husband. They lived at Mentone, Ind. and at Argos until several years ago they moved to California where she died as above stated.

The body was brought by the bereaved husband and his mother, now Mrs. Jonas Miller, to Plymouth, Ind., where the funeral services were held by Brother J. L. Wince at the Church of God, on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 5, followed by interment in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Besides her husband are several sisters and brothers left to mourn her death. The very large attendance at the funeral attest the esteem in which our dead sister was held.

She was ever of a bright and happy disposition, and as was said by those near her at death "she bore her last sickness without a murmur or complaint, wanting to live to help those around her, but died in full assurance of faith in the coming Kingdom."

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints. I have undertaked to record the death of a beloved daughter, although I feel incompetent to the task. Altie Cason, daughter of G. M. and V. A. Russell, was born Oct. 6, 1860, in Dallas County, Ark., and in Jan. 1861 her father moved to Hot Springs County, where she was raised and lived until her death, which occurred on July 21, 1901. She had a slow fever, but had got the fever broken, leaving her very weak, when she had a hemorrhage and died. Had she lived until Oct. 6, she would have been 41 years old. She was married to J. Y. Cason, Feb. 9, 1883. She and her husband both belonged to the Church of God at Mount Pleasant, Hot Springs County, in the neighborhood where she was raised, beloved by all who knew her. She was an affectionate loving daughter and sister, a devoted wife and loving mother. She leaves an aged mother, 71 years old, a stricken husband, two brothers and five children to mourn her loss, which can never be filled, for she was the only daughter and her two brothers never knew any bounds to their love, she being the oldest of the three. Her husband can never replace her, she was a devoted and loving wife and mother, never thinking of her own pleasure, but sacrificing every wish for them. O what a loss, but their loss is her gain, for she was a devout Christian in precept and example, working in the Lord's vineyard. She embraced the faith before her marriage and was a shining light in the church, always defending the cause whenever an opportunity presented itself, rejoicing in the hope of a resurrection life at the coming of the Lord. O husband, brothers and children emulate her example and be ye also ready when the time comes to meet the darling wife, sister and mother, where there will be no more heartaches caused by the enemy of all the living. May we all strive to be as well prepared as our darling was, is the prayer of her aged mother.

V. A. Russell.

Selections.

Extremely Wicked.

There is a popular notion that extreme wickedness consists in blaspheming God's name, recklessly disregarding his laws and committing various high crimes. We commonly say of such sinners that they are extremely wicked. Could one be more wicked than to be guilty of such deeds? Yes, I am certain that there is a greater extreme of wickedness than such as I have referred to. It consists in one's appearing before men as a person of eminent piety, as one whose spirituality is of the very highest type, who constantly professes to be entirely free from the commission of sin, and yet who makes a practice of indulging in various kinds of trickery, who deals unfairly by those who trust in his honesty, or supposed honesty, and who takes advantage of those whom he has in his power.

Such a person trades on his religious profession. He makes merchandise of sacred things. In the name of Christ he does things which are a reproach to Christ's name. He uses his profession of superior spirituality to win the confidence of Christian people, and then, when he gets a sly chance to secure from them more than belongs to him, he quickly lays hold of it. Such a person is far more wicked than the worst outlaw in the land. His wickedness is vastly greater than that of the open and rabid blasphemer, an unblushing thief, or a low-toned rake. These wicked people do not profess to be good. They put on no cloak of piety. They are base metal and do not pretend to be pure gold.

It is he who claims to be the purest and most valuable gold, but who is in fact the poorest kind of pewter, that is extremely and awfully wicked.—C. H. Wetherbe.

Fourteen Mistakes.

1. To set up our own standard of right and wrong and judge people accordingly.

2. To measure the enjoyment of others by our own.

3. To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.

4. To look for judgment and experience in youth.

5. To endeavor to mold all dispositions alike.

6. To look for perfection in our own actions.

7. To worry ourselves and others with what cannot be remedied.

8. To refuse to yield in immaterial matters.

9. To refuse to alleviate, so far as lies in our power, all that which needs alleviation.

10. To refuse to make allowance for the infirmities of others.

11. To consider everything impossible that we cannot perform.

12. To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

13. To expect to be able to understand everything.

14. To live for time alone, when any moment may launch us into eternity.

Religious life should have no ups and downs. There may be fluctuations in bodily comfort as weariness and sickness come and go. There may be changes in temporal circumstances as wealth and fortune come and go; but faith is fixed on the promises of God, which never change, and on the person of Christ, who is the same yesterday, today and forever.

A further reduction in fares to Buffalo for the Pan-American Exposition has just been made via Pennsylvania Lines. Six-day Coach Excursion tickets are now on sale Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at exceptional low rates, besides excursion tickets obtainable daily. Investigate, if you contemplate taking in the Pan-American. Only a few more days in the which to do it. Closes Oct. 31st. Ask Ticket Agent J. E. Hanes, Plymouth, Ind., about low fares.—1 t.

When?

While it is true that we are living in an age of skepticism and infidelity, such as the world has never before seen, yet I find that the great majority of those whom I approach who are without Christ, believe in God and a hereafter. I furthermore am persuaded that a large per cent of those who believe in God purpose sometime to take the necessary steps to insure them eternal life, but I ask—When? Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision; people hesitate, procrastinate, and delay, yet all the while firmly believe that they will be saved, but—When?

Procrastination is the thief of time; yea, rather, would rob us of eternity. If Satan can only get us to put the matter off from day to day, and from week to week, until he succeeds in getting us to put it off just one day too long, he has accomplished his great purpose. He cares not how interested we may be, or how high and holy our purposes are, just so long as he can persuade us (on any pretext) to put it off just a little longer. There are thousands that less than a year ago thought that they would attend to this matter long ere this, who today are no nearer Christ than ever, but still firmly believe that soon the way will seem clear and they will move; but—When?

The Bible says: "Now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of salvation." "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve." "And who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord?" "How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him." Now, if perchance, the one who reads these lines should have been one of the procrastinating class, and is still saying, "some day," let me once more ask you to become definite and tell me—When?—Bert J. Glazier.

Progress depends upon what we are, rather than upon what we may encounter. One man is stopped by a sapling lying across the road; another, passing that way, picks up the hindrance, and converts it into a help in crossing the brook just ahead. We are too apt to think that our progress in a given case will depend solely upon the obstacles we may run against. It is more likely to depend upon what runs against the obstacles. —Sunday School Times.

California Brethren.

I expect to go to Oleander, Fresno Co., Cal., some time in November, and will make my home there for a time. Any brethren desiring meetings in their vicinity please address me at Scholls, Ore., until Dec. 1. We should be faithful and work while we may for the Master is soon coming.

Yours awaiting his coming.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Closes October 31st.

The Pan-American Exposition is nearing a close. Only a few days remain in which to enjoy it. After October 31st it will be a thing of the past. Go now and profit in pleasure and knowledge of the wonderful achievements of the Americas and their possibilities. The trip may be made at very low rates via Pennsylvania Lines. The lowest fares yet offered are in effect over those lines each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Coach excursion tickets sold on those dates are good returning six days including day of sale, ample time for getting acquainted with the Pan-American Exposition and inspecting the grandeur of Niagara Falls. Excursion tickets may be obtained any day over the Pennsylvania Lines, but those sold Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays are especially important to persons wishing to make the trip at the lowest fare. Find out about them by applying to local agents of the Pennsylvania Lines Plymouth, Ind., Ticket Agent, J. E. Hanes, Oct. 26.

Papers for the Poor.

This office receives many calls for papers from those who are not able to pay for them. It is sometimes from one part of the land, and again from another. They are not all in one locality. We know there are some who contend that there is no one so poor but he can at some time during the year pay the price of the paper. We are not here to argue that matter. It is enough for us to be told by an aged brother or sister who has perhaps taken the RESTITUTION for years, that income is cut off, not able to labor, dependent on charity of others, perhaps of unbelieving children. Cannot get out to meetings any more, all they have is the old Bible and the paper. Perhaps sickness of self, wife or children, makes it impossible to be out and earn money. Every cent that can be had will not suffice to pay doctor's bills, groceries, rent, fuel, clothing. In very many cases it is impossible to "make even" each year, let alone paying for any papers or books. Yet such are usually the ones who get the most out of our paper. They have time to read every word. Even the long articles are not skipped by these readers.

We have a fund called "Our Helping Fund" to draw on to supply these cases. Not a cent of this money is used for any other purpose. An account is kept separately from all else. We will say that at this time the fund is largely overdrawn, and has been for over a year.

Brethren, you who have a few dollars over actual need, and you who sometimes make a sacrifice, do you esteem this a worthy cause? This supplying the aged and infirm, the sick and distressed, the poor and needy—is it worth while considering? What answer do you give? It is not yours any more than mine, nor mine than yours. It seems to us that it is our duty to supply these calls. What do you think?

Announcement.

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Michigan, will convene [D. V.] at Watson, Allegan Co., Michigan, Friday evening, Oct. 18th, 1901, and continue over the following Sunday.

Though few in number at this place [Watson] we hope and feel assured that we will have the hearty co-operation of all interested, and look forward to an interesting and profitable meeting.

Let none remain away through fear of being a burden to those that entertain the conference, as arrangements will be made to accommodate all that come, and all who come will receive a hearty welcome.

People coming from the north or south will change cars at Montieth for Fisk Station, where some one will be ready to convey them to the different homes.

Those coming from the north will tell the conductor to telegraph the conductor on the Cincinnatti and Northern Railroad, to hold the train for passengers to Fisk Station.

There will be one or more good speakers to preach the Word.

Let us remember the words of Paul, Heb. x. 25.

EMMA JACKMAN, Sec'y.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.
